

Anno 1778.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY

Gift of Lester S. Morse, Jr.
in honor of
Thomas T. Lyons

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED IN THE
SUPREME COURT
OF THE
UNITED STATES

222, 223, 224, 225, U. S.

BOOK 56,
LAWYERS' EDITION,
CITED "LAW. ED."

COMPLETE WITH HEAD LINES, HEAD NOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOT NOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES.

BY THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.

1926.

Copyright 1911 by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.

R
348.73
Un35
V. 222-225

JUSTICES
OF THE
SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN,¹

HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,

HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,

HON. WILLIAM R. DAY,

HON. HORACE H. LURTON,

HON. CHARLES EVANS HUGHES,

HON. WILLIS VAN DEVANTER,

HON. JOSEPH RUCKER LAMAR,

HON. MAHLON PITNEY.²

ATTORNEY GENERAL,

HON. GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.

SOLICITOR GENERAL,

HON. FREDERICK W. LEHMANN.

CLERK,

JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, Esq.

REPORTER,

HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,

JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, Esq.

¹ Died, October 14, 1911.

² Commission ordered recorded, March 18, 1912.

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

From January 9, 1911, to March 18, 1912.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 53 L. ed., Appendix III., p. 906.

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS. 1902-1903.	COMMIS- SIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	FIRST. ME., N. H., MASS., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE CHARLES E. HUGHES, New York.	President TAFT.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1910. (May 2.)	1910. (Oct. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE HORACE H. LURTON, Tennessee.	President TAFT.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PA., DEL.	1909. (Dec. 20.)	1910. (Jan. 3.)
CHIEF JUSTICE EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President TAFT.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1910. (Dec. 12.)	1910. (Dec. 19.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH R. LAMAR, Georgia.	President TAFT.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1910. (Dec. 17.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN,† Kentucky.	President HAYES.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President ROOSEVELT.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIS VAN DEVANTER, Wyoming.	President TAFT.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO., KAN., ARK., NEB., COLO., N. D., S. D., UTAH, WYO., OKLAHOMA, NEW MEX.*	1910. (Dec. 16.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH MCKENNA, California.	President MCKINLEY.	NINTH. CAL., OR., NEV., MONT., WASH., IDAHO, ALASKA,* ARIZONA* HAWAII*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

†Died, October 14, 1911.

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

March 18, 1912.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT
OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.For Order of Court Making Allotment, see infra, Appendix XI., p. 1308.

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS. 1902-1903.	COMMI- SIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	FIRST. ME., N. H., MASS., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE CHARLES E. HUGHES, New York.	President TAFT.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1910. (May 2.)	1910. (Oct. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE MAHLON PITNEY, New Jersey.	President TAFT.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PA., DEL.	1912. (Mar. 13.)	1912. (Mar. 18.)
CHIEF JUSTICE EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President TAFT.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1910. (Dec. 12.)	1910. (Dec. 19.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH R. LAMAR, Georgia.	President TAFT.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1910. (Dec. 17.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President ROOSEVELT.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE HORACE H. LURTON, Tennessee.	President TAFT.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1909. (Dec. 20.)	1910. (Jan. 3.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIS VAN DEVANTER, Wyoming.	President TAFT.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO., KAN., ARK., NEB., COLO., N. D., S. D., UTAH, WYO., OKLAHOMA, NEW MEX.	1910. (Dec. 16.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH McKENNA, California.	President McKINLEY.	NINTH. CAL., OR., NEV., MONT., WASH., IDAHO, ALASKA,* ARIZONA, HAWAII.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 222, 223, 224, 225.

A.

Abbott, New Mexico ex rel. Meece v. (Mem.)	637	American Sulphite Pulp Co., Degrasse Paper Co. v. (Mem.)	1268
Abby Dodge, The, v. United States (223 U. S. 166)	390	American Trust Co. v. Metropolitan S. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 727)	632
A. B. Dick Co., Henry v.	645	Ammons, Blanchard v. (Mem.)	634
Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. (222 U. S. 300)	208	Anderson v. Bordentown (Mem.) (223 U. S. 714)	626
Actieselskabet Jason v. Arbuckle. See THE JASON.		Messinger v.	1152
Adler v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 733)	634	v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. (225 U. S. 187)	1047
Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore (Mem.) (223 U. S. 716)	627	v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 708)	1267
v. Outlaw (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269	v. United Realty Co. (222 U. S. 164)	144
v. Trembley (223 U. S. 185)	398	Andrews v. Partridge (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696)	1261
Alexander, Kentucky ex rel., Southern P. Co. v.	96	v. Partridge (Mem.) (225 U. S. 699)	1263
Allardt, United States ex rel., v. Long, (Mem.) (223 U. S. 740)	637	Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso., Model Bottling Machinery Co. v. (Mem.)	634
Alsop v. Conway (Mem.) (223 U. S. 720)	629	Aran v. Zurrinach (222 U. S. 395)	246
Altman v. United States. See B. ALTMAN & Co. v. UNITED STATES.		Arbuckle, Actieselskabet Jason v.	969
Alton Water Co., Brown v.	221	Archer v. Greenville Sand & Gravel Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 715)	1269
Aluminum Co. v. Ramsey (222 U. S. 251)	185	Arkansas, Bowman v. (Mem.)	1270
American Druggist Syndicate, United States v. (Mem.)	635	Byles v. (Mem.)	1270
American R. Co. v. Birch (224 U. S. 547)	879	v. Tennessee (Mem.)	1271
v. Central San Christobal (Mem.) (223 U. S. 739)	637	Armsterdam v. Puente (Mem.) (225 U. S. 717)	1270
American Security & T. Co. v. District of Columbia (224 U. S. 491)	856	Ashley v. Samuel C. Tatum Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 707)	1266
Mayer v.	206	Ashurst, Duffield v. (Mem.)	1262
Washington Home for Incurables v.	854	Atcherly, Lewers & Cooke v.	202
American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743)	639	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor (223 U. S. 280)	436
		Tiedt v. (Mem.)	1264
		v. United States (225 U. S. 640)	1236
		Atkinson, Washington ex rel., Northern P. R. Co. v.	237
		Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Peninsular & O. S. S. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265

CASES REPORTED.

Atlantic Transport Co. v. Imbrovek (Mem.) (225 U. S. 700) 1263	Benson, Curtin v. 102
. Maryland (Mem.) (225 U. S. 700) 1263	Berryhill v. Shulthis (225 U. S. 561) 1205
v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 724) 631	Berryman v. Whitman College (222 U. S. 334) 225
Attorney General, Colorado ex rel., Cassidy v. (Mem.) 622	Beutler v. Grand Trunk Junction R. Co. (224 U. S. 85) 679
Automobile Club, David Lupton's Sons Co. v. 1177	Bigelow v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) 1264
	v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & S. Co. (225 U. S. 111) .. 1009
	Birch, American R. Co. v. 879
B.	Blanchard v. Ammons (Mem.) (223 U. S. 731) 634
Babcock, Northern P. R. Co. v. 327	Blinn v. Nelson (222 U. S. 1) 65
Backus, Low Wah Suey v. 1165	Bliss v. Washoe Copper Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 733) 635
Bacon v. Buffalo Cold Storage Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701) 1264	Bliss-Cook Oak Co., Rider v. (Mem.) 622
Bagnell, Bryan v. (Mem.) 622	Bryan v. (Mem.) 621
Baird v. Howison (Mem.) (223 U. S. 712) 625	Board of Agriculture, Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. 240
Balfour, The Good Hope v. (Mem.) .. 1269	Board of Chosen Freeholders v. Provid- ent Life & T. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 745) 639
Ball, German Bank v. (Mem.) 1267	Bolognesi v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 726) 632
Baltimore v. Miller (Mem.) (225 U. S. 703) 1265	Bonham, Sharpe v. 747
Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Gawinske (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713) 1268	Bordentown, Anderson v. (Mem.) .. 626
Interstate Commerce Commis- sion v. 1107	Bornn Hat Co. v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713) .. 626
Robinson v. 288	Boucher, Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 1271
United States v. 1100	Bowman v. Arkansas (Mem.) (225 U. S. 716) 1270
Vermillion v. 854	Bradbury, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.) 624
Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co., United States v. 68	Bray, United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. 1055
B. Altman & Co. v. United States (224 U. S. 583) 894	Brinkmeier v. Missouri P. R. Co. (224 U. S. 268) 758
Bank, European American, Watson v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718) .. 628	Brion v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 723) 630
First Nat., McCarthy v. (223 U. S. 493) 523	Crown v. Alton Water Co. (222 U. S. 325) 221
First Nat., Wingert v. (223 U. S. 670) 605	v. Elliott (225 U. S. 392) .. 1136
State Nat., v. Richardson (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696) .. 1262	v. Selfridge (224 U. S. 189) 727
Troy, v. G. A. Whitehead & Co. (222 U. S. 39) 81	v. Texas (Mem.) (223 U. S. 745) 639
Banker Bros. Co. v. Pennsylvania (222 U. S. 210) 168	Bryan v. Bagnell (Mem.) (223 U. S. 706) 622
Bank Law Pub. Co. v. Lawyers Co-op. Pub. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 738) 636	v. Bliss-Cook Oak Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 706) 621
Barnes, United States v. 291	v. Ker (222 U. S. 107) 114
Baruch, United States v. 399	v. Layman (Mem.) (223 U. S. 706) 621
Bates, Commercial State Bank & T. Co. v. (Mem.) 1270	Buffalo Cold Storage Co., Bacon v. (Mem.) 1264
Becker v. Humphrey (Mem.) (223 U. S. 731) 634	Buist, Gonzales v. 693
Beecham v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 708) 623	Burlington County v. Provident Life & T. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 745) 639
Beekman Lumber Co., Acme Harvester Co. v. 208	Burlington Lumber Co., Southern R. Co. v. 1001
Belt R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743) 638	Burr, McConnel v. (Mem.) 640
Bennett v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 706) 1266

CASES REPORTED.

Byles v. Arkansas (Mem.) (225 U. S. 717)	1270	Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Owens (Mem.) (225 U. S. 716)	1270
C.		Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King (222 U. S. 222)	173
Calder, Pullman Co. v.	637	Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Bradbury (Mem.) (223 U. S. 711)	624
California, Finley v.	75	E. E. Taenzer & Co. v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	640
Murphy v.	1229	Choate v. Trapp (224 U. S. 665) ..	941
Oppenheimer v. (Mem.)	1271	Choemon Ki Kuchi v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 703) ..	1265
Cameron v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 729)	633	Chomel v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 723)	630
Campbell v. United States (224 U. S. 99)	684	Cieneguita Copper Co. v. Farish (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743) ..	638
Carlton v. Rushing (Mem.) (223 U. S. 736)	636	Cincinnati v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (223 U. S. 390)	481
Carpenter, Lawton v. (Mem.)	1267	Citizens Sav. & T. Co. v. Foerstner (Mem.) (225 U. S. 717) ..	1270
Carter v. Wright (Mem.) (223 U. S. 739)	637	Citroen, United States v.	486
Caspar, Lewin v. (Mem.)	636	City Bank & T. Co. v. Williams (Mem.) (223 U. S. 727) ..	632
Cassidy v. Colorado ex rel., Attorney General (Mem.) (223 U. S. 707)	622	Clairmont v. United States (225 U. S. 551)	1201
Castle, Missouri P. R. Co. v.	875	Clason v. Matko (223 U. S. 646)	588
Cauble, Texas & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1270	Coalgate Co. v. Hurst (Mem.) (225 U. S. 697)	1262
Cedar Rapids, Cedar Rapids Gas Light Co. v.	594	Codman v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) ..	1264
Cedar Rapids Gas Light Co. v. Cedar Rapids (223 U. S. 655) ..	594	Collier, Johnson v.	306
Cella, Ex parte (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713)	626	v. Smaltz (Mem.) (223 U. S. 710)	624
v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 728)	633	Collins v. Texas (223 U. S. 288)	439
Central Altagracia, Valdes v.	980	Colorado, Walt v. (Mem.)	640
v. Valdes (225 U. S. 58)	980	Colorado ex rel. Attorney General, Cassidy v. (Mem.)	622
Central Park, N. & E. R. R. Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 712) ..	1268	Colorado Anthracite Co., United States v.	1063
Central R. Co. of N. J. v. Philadelphia & R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631	Colt v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 729)	633
Central San Christobal, American R. Co. v. (Mem.)	637	Colts Patent Fire Arms Mfg. Co. v. New York Sporting Goods Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 726)	632
Central Trust Co., New York v. (Mem.)	629	Commercial State Bank & T. Co. v. Bates (Mem.) (225 U. S. 715)	1270
C. H. Albers Commission Co., Kansas City S. R. Co. v.	556	Conant v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) ..	1264
Chambers, Waskey v.	885	Congress Constr. Co., United States v.	163
Chaplin v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 705)	1266	Consaul v. Cummings (222 U. S. 262)	192
Chase v. Phillips (Mem.) (223 U. S. 715)	627	Consumers' Co. v. Hatch (224 U. S. 148)	703
v. Wetzlar (225 U. S. 79)	990	Converse v. Hamilton (224 U. S. 243) ..	749
Chaumet, de Bearn v.	1261	v. McCauley (224 U. S. 243) ..	749
Chelsea Fibre Mills, The Good Hope, v. (Mem.)	1269	Conway, Alsop v. (Mem.)	629
Chemgas v. Tynan (Mem.) (223 U. S. 744)	639	Cotto-Waxo Chemical Co., Perolin Co. v. (Mem.)	632
Cherokee Nation v. Whitmire (223 U. S. 108)	370	Couden, Ker & Co. v.	432
Chicago v. Sturges (222 U. S. 313) ..	215	Creswill v. Grand Lodge K. of P. (225 U. S. 246)	1074
Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby (225 U. S. 155)	1033	Crosby, Cuba R. Co. v.	274
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hamilton (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743) ..	638

CASES REPORTED.

Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club v. Louisiana (224 U. S. 632)	924	Diaz v. United States (222 U. S. 574)	321
Crow, Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v.	516	v. United States (223 U. S. 442)	500
Crozier v. Fried. Krupp Aktiengesell- schaft (224 U. S. 290)	771	Diffenbaugh, Interstate Commerce Commission v.	83
Crucible Steel Co., Holt v.	756	Dimaguila v. International Banking Corp. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 749)	641
Cuba R. Co. v. Crosby (222 U. S. 473)	274	District of Columbia, American Secur- ity & T. Co. v.	856
Cuebas y Arredondo, Cuebas y Arre- dondo v.	476	New York Continental Jewell Filtration Co. v.	426
v. Cuebas y Arredondo (223 U. S. 376)	476	Doe, Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co. v.	473
v. Cuebas y Padilla. See CUE- BAS Y ARREDONDO v. CUE- BAS Y ARREDONDO.		Doherty, J. W. Calnan Co. v.	702
Cudahy Packing Co. v. Denton (Mem.) (223 U. S. 734) ..	635	Donald & Taylor, Salmen Brick & Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1265
Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co., Louisville v.	1151	Dufaur v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 732)	634
Louisville v.	934	Duffield v. Ashurst (Mem.) (225 U. S. 697)	1262
Cummings, Consaul v.	192	Duvall, Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v.	1171
Curtin v. Benson (222 U. S. 78)	102

D.

Dally v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269
Darius Cole Transp. Co. v. White Star Line (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265
David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Auto- mobile Club (225 U. S. 489)	1177
Davids, Thaddeus Davids Co. v. (Mem.)	635
Davis, Smith v. (Mem.)	631
de Bearn v. Chaumet (Mem.) (225 U. S. 695)	1261
v. de Bearn (Mem.) (225 U. S. 695)	1261
de Bearn v. (Mem.)	1261
Degrass Paper Co. v. American Sul- phite Pulp Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 712)	1268
Delaware & H. Co., Flannelly v.	1221
Deming Invest. Co. v. United States (224 U. S. 471)	847
Dennis, Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v.	860
de Noble v. Gallardo y Seary (223 U. S. 65)	353
Denoon v. Tax Title Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 739)	637
Denton, Cudahy Packing Co. v. (Mem.)	635
Denver v. Denver Union Water Co. (225 U. S. 707)	1266
v. New York Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 707)	1266
Denver Union Water Co., Denver v. (Mem.)	1266
Derden, Staley v. (Mem.)	1267

E.

Eagle White Lead Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (225 U. S. 302)	1099
Eastern Cherokees v. United States (225 U. S. 572)	1212
Eckstein, United States v.	125
Edsell, Tang Tun v.	606
E. E. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	640
Electric Storage Battery Co., Gould Storage Battery Co. v. (Mem.)	634
Elkins Electric R. Co. v. Western Maryland R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631
Ellicott, United States v.	535
Elliot, Herriman v. (Mem.)	636
Elliott, Brown v.	1136
Moore v.	1136
Enders v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 719)	629
English v. Richardson (224 U. S. 680)	949
Enriquez v. Enriquez (222 U. S. 123)	122
Enriquez v.	122
v. Enriquez (222 U. S. 127) ..	124
Enriquez v.	124
Epstein v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 731)	634
European American Bank, Watson v. (Mem.)	628
Evans v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702)	1264
Everett v. Judson (Mem.) (225 U. S. 700)	1263
Excelsior Supply Co. v. Weed Chain Tire Grip Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 727)	632

CASES REPORTED.

Ex parte Cella (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713)	626	Gallardo y Seary, de Noble v.	353
Glasgow (Mem.) (223 U. S. 709)	623	Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Crow (223 U. S. 481)	516
Radin (Mem.) (223 U. S. 715)	627	v. Wallace (223 U. S. 481) ..	516
Webb (225 U. S. 663)	1248	Gandia v. Pettingill (222 U. S. 452) ..	267
Webb (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696)	1261	Garbish, United States v.	190
		Garromone v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 722)	630
		Gaskill, Washington Water Power Co. v. (Mem.)	640
		G. A. Whitehead & Co., Troy Bank v.	81
		Gawinske, Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1268
		General Chemical Co., Merchants & M. Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1265
		General Electric Co., United States use of, Title Guaranty & S. Co. v.	248
		United States use of, Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. (Mem.)	629
		George Frost Co., Samstag v. (Mem.) ..	1268
		George N. Pierce Co. v. Wells-Fargo & Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 717)	628
		Georgia, Loeb v. (Mem.)	1270
		McNaughton v. (Mem.)	639
		Gerbracht v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 730)	633
		German Bank v. Ball (Mem.) (225 U. S. 709)	1267
		Gibbs v. International Banking Corp. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 715) ..	1269
		Western U. Teleg. Co. v. (Mem.)	638
		Gilchrist, Peters v.	278
		Gildersleeve, Merchants & M. Transp. Co. v. (Mem.)	1265
		Gill, Graham v.	586
		Gilland v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 709)	623
		Glasgow, Ex parte (Mem.) (223 U. S. 709)	623
		v. Moyer (225 U. S. 420)	1147
		Gleason v. Wood (224 U. S. 679)	947
		Glickstein v. United States (222 U. S. 139)	128
		Goat v. United States (224 U. S. 458)	841
		Goldman, Sullivan v. (Mem.)	1261
		Sullivan v. (Mem.)	1264
		Gonzales v. Buist (224 U. S. 126) ..	693
		Good Hope, The, v. Balfour (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269
		v. Chelsea Fibre Mills (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269
		v. Winter (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269
		Goodman v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 699)	1263
		Goodrich Transit Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v.	729
		Goodwin, Sherman v. (Mem.)	624
			11
F.
Fairbanks v. United States (223 U. S. 215)	409
Fairchild, Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v.	863
Farish, Cieneguita Copper Co. v. (Mem.)	638
Farmers' Loan & T. Co., Central Park, N. & E. R. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1268
Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co., J. A. Scriven Co. v. (Mem.) ..	636
Ferris v. Frohman (223 U. S. 424) ..	492
F. H. Peavey & Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v.	83
Union P. R. Co. v.	83
Fidelity Storage Corp., Trussed Concrete Steel Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1270
Fidelity Trust Co., United States v.	137
Finley v. California (222 U. S. 28) ..	75
First Nat. Bank, McCarthy v.	523
Wingert v.	605
Fisher, Gritts v.	928
United States ex rel. Jones v. (Mem.)	1267
United States ex rel. Lowe v.	364
United States ex rel. Ness v.	610
United States ex rel. Turner v.	165
Fitz Gerald v. Thompson (222 U. S. 555)	314
Flannelly v. Delaware & H. Co. (225 U. S. 597)	1221
Fleitmann, J. M. Stone Cotton Mills v. (Mem.)	631
Foerstner, Citizens Sav. & T. Co. v. (Mem.)	1270
Fred W. Wolf Co. v. Mount Vernon Refrigerating Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 711)	1268
Frick, Lewis v. (Mem.)	1263
Fricke, Munsuri v.	121
Fried. Krupp Aktiengesellschaft, Crozier v.	771
v. Midvale Steel Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 728)	633
Frohman, Ferris v.	492
F. W. Cook Brewing Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v.	355
G.
Gaar, Scoot & Co. v. Shannon (223 U. S. 468)	510

CASES REPORTED.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. (Mem.)	628
Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. (Mem.)	631
Gordon, Indian Protective Asso. v. (Mem.)	1262
Gould Storage Battery Co. v. Electric Storage Battery Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 730)	634
Graff, Vogt v.	249
Graham v. Gill (223 U. S. 643) v. West Virginia (224 U. S. 616)	917
Grand Canyon R. Co., Treat v.	265
Grand Lodge K. of P., Creswell v.	1074
Grand Trunk Junction R. Co., Beutler v.	679
Granfield, Primeau v. (Mem.)	1267
Grants Pass Land & Water Co. v. Los Angeles (Mem.) (223 U. S. 735)	635
Gray, Walter Baker & Co. v. (Mem.)	634
Great Northern R. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v. Tolliver v. (Mem.)	624
Greenville Sand & Gravel Co., Archer v. (Mem.)	1269
Grigsby v. Russell (222 U. S. 149)	133
Gring v. Ives (222 U. S. 365)	235
Gritts v. Fisher (224 U. S. 640)	928
Gromer v. Standard Dredging Co. (224 U. S. 362)	801
Groom v. Mortimer Land Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 700)	1264
Guarantee Title & T. Co. v. Title Guaranty & S. Co. (224 U. S. 152)	706
Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dennis (224 U. S. 503)	860
Gunter v. Hinson (Mem.) (223 U. S. 735)	635
Gustafson, Hanson v. (Mem.)	1270

H.

Hadley v. Huidekoper (Mem.) (223 U. S. 735)	635
Missouri ex rel., Republic Oil Co. v.	760
Missouri ex rel., Standard Oil Co. v.	760
Hagadorn v. Street Grading District No. 60 (Mem.) (223 U. S. 721)	630
Hamilton, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	638
Converse v.	749
v. John A. Roebling's Sons Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 738)	637
v. Loeb (Mem.) (223 U. S. 720)	629
Hammer, Waskey v.	359
Hammond, Kyle v.	1260
Kyle v. (Mem.)	627

Hance v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 710)	1268
Hanson v. Gustafson (Mem.) (225 U. S. 718)	1270
Harmon, Richardson v.	110
Harper Bros., Kalem Co. v.	92
Harris, Reitler v. v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 706)	1266
Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. (224 U. S. 217)	728
Hatch, Consumers' Co. v.	703
Hawkins, Wilson-Moline Buggy Co. (Mem.)	625
Haw Moy v. North (Mem.) (223 U. S. 717)	628
Hebard, Hopkins v. (Mem.)	1266
Heckman v. United States (224 U. S. 413)	820
Heerman, Payne v. (Mem.)	641
Heide v. Panoulis (Mem.) (223 U. S. 722)	630
Heike v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 730)	633
Helm v. Zarecor (222 U. S. 32)	77
Helms, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1267
Henderson v. Mayer (225 U. S. 631) v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718)	628
Hendricks v. United States (223 U. S. 178)	394
Henry v. A. B. Dick Co. (224 U. S. 1)	645
Herndon-Carter Co. v. James N. Norris, Son & Co. (224 U. S. 496)	857
Herr, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1265
Herrera v. United States (222 U. S. 558)	316
Herriman v. Elliot (Mem.) (223 U. S. 737)	636
Heskin, Soliah v.	294
Hestonville, M. & F. Pass. R. Co., McDuffee v. (Mem.)	629
Hillman v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 699)	1263
Hirm v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 720)	629
Hinson, Gunter v. (Mem.)	635
Hirsh v. Taylor (Mem.) (225 U. S. 698)	1263
Hodge, McKnight v. (Mem.)	640
Holt v. Crucible Steel Co. (224 U. S. 262)	756
James A. McClurg & Sons v. (Mem.)	1264
Kuhn v. (Mem.)	1264
National Equipment Co. v. (Mem.)	1264
Powell's v. (Mem.)	1264

Hoo Choy v. North (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718)	628
Hooker v. Knapp (225 U. S. 302) ..	1099
Hopkins v. Hebard (Mem.) (225 U. S. 705)	1266
Horons v. Tynan (Mem.) (223 U. S. 744)	639
Howell, Texas & P. R. Co. v.	892
Howison, Baird v. (Mem.)	625
Huidekoper, Hadley v. (Mem.)	635
Humboldt S. S. Co., United States ex rel., Interstate Commerce Commission v.	849
Humphrey, Becker v. (Mem.)	634
Hurst, Coalgate Co. v. (Mem.)	1262
Huse v. United States (222 U. S. 496)	285
Hussey v. United States (222 U. S. 88)	106
Hyde v. United States (225 U. S. 347)	1114
Hygienic Fleeced Underwear Co. v. Phoenix Knitting Works (Mem.) (225 U. S. 709)	1267
I.
Ibex Min. Co., Van Sice v. (Mem.)	625
Illinois C. R. Co., R. J. Darnell v. ..	1072
v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 734)	635
Imbrokek, Atlantic Transport Co. v. (Mem.)	1263
Indiana, Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	626
Indiana ex rel. Miller, Lehman v. (Mem.)	637
Indian Protective Asso. v. Gordon (Mem.) (225 U. S. 698) ..	1262
Ins. Co., Aetna L., v. Moore (Mem.) (223 U. S. 716)	627
Aetna L., v. Outlaw (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269
Aetna L., v. Tremblay (223 U. S. 185)	398
Atlantic Mut., v. Peninsular & O. S. S. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265
Mutual Ben. L. v. Morgan (Mem.) (223 U. S. 735)	635
Northwestern Mut. L., v. McCue (223 U. S. 234) ..	419
Prudential, v. Moore (Mem.) (223 U. S. 717)	628
International Banking Corp., Dimaquila v. (Mem.)	641
Gibbs v. (Mem.)	1269
Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (225 U. S. 326)	1107
v. Dittenbaugh (222 U. S. 42)	83
Eagle White Lead Co. v.	1099
v. F. H. Peavey & Co. (222 U. S. 42)	83

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. (224 U. S. 194)	729
v. Great Northern R. Co. (222 U. S. 541)	308
v. Northern P. R. Co. (222 U. S. 541)	308
Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v.	324
v. Union P. R. Co. (222 U. S. 541)	308
v. United States ex rel. Humboldt S. S. Co. (224 U. S. 474)	849
Ireland v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269
Ireton v. Pennsylvania Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 728)	633
Ives, Gring v.	235

J.

Jacob v. Roberts (223 U. S. 261) ..	429
Jacobs v. Pritchard (223 U. S. 200)	405
James v. Stone & Co. (Mem.)	1271
James A. McClurg & Sons v. Holt (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701) ..	1264
James N. Norris, Son & Co., Herndon-Carter Co. v.	857
Jamieson, United States v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 744)	633
J. A. Scriven Co. v. Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 738)	636
v. Morris (Mem.) 223 U. S. 742)	638
v. Premium Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 747)	640
v. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 708)	622
Jason, The (225 U. S. 32)	969
J. B. Williams Co., Williams Soap Co. v. (Mem.)	1268
J. C. Turner Cypress Lumber Co. v. Pfann (Mem.) (225 U. S. 706)	1266
Johannessen v. United States (225 U. S. 227)	1066
John A. Roebling's Sons Co., Hamilton v. (Mem.)	637
John M. Stone Cotton Mills v. Fleitmann (Mem.) (223 U. S. 723)	631
Johnson v. Collier (222 U. S. 538)	306
v. United States (225 U. S. 405)	1142
v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 703)	1265
v. Washington Loan & T. Co. (224 U. S. 224)	741
Johnson Educator Food Co. v. Sylvanus Smith & Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718)	628
Johnston, Ligon v. (Mem.)	628

Jones, Lenman v.	89	Lawler, Loewe v. (Mem.)	633
Savage v.	1182	Lawton v. Carpenter (Mem.) (225 U. S. 710)	1267
United States ex rel., v. Fisher (Mem.) (225 U. S. 708) ..	1267	Lawyers Co-op. Pub. Co., Banks Law Pub. Co. v. (Mem.)	636
Jordan v. Massachusetts (225 U. S. 167)	1038	Layman, Bryan v. (Mem.)	621
v. Pacific Coast Co. (225 U. S. 187)	1047	Moser v. (Mem.)	622
v. Pacific Coast Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 708)	1267	Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade, Re (222 U. S. 578)	323
Judson, Everett v. (Mem.)	1263	Leary v. United States (224 U. S. 567)	889
J. W. Calnan Co. v. Doherty (224 U. S. 145)	702	Leesnitzer v. Taylor (Mem.) (223 U. S. 747)	640
K.
Kalem Co. v. Harper Bros. (222 U. S. 55)	92	Lehman v. Indiana ex rel. Miller (Mem.) (223 U. S. 739) ..	637
Kansas City S. R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. (223 U. S. 573)	556	Lenman v. Jones (222 U. S. 51)	89
Kansas Natural Gas Co., Haskell v. 738		Lessenden, Missouri P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1262
Katz v. Long (Mem.) (223 U. S. 741)	638	Lewellen Bros., St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1264
Kaw Valley Drainage Dist., Metropolitan Water Co. v.	533	Lewers & Cooke v. Atcherly (222 U. S. 285)	202
Keeney v. New York (222 U. S. 525) 299		Lewin v. Casper (Mem.) (223 U. S. 736)	636
Kentucky ex rel. Alexander, Southern P. Co. v.	96	Lewis v. Frick (Mem.) (225 U. S. 699)	1263
Ker, Bryan v.	114	Ligon v. Johnston (Mem.) (223 U. S. 741)	638
Ker & Co. v. Couden (223 U. S. 268) 432		Lillis v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 726)	632
Kessler & Co., Sexton v.	995	Lincoln, Lincoln Gas & Electric Light Co. v.	466
Kiernan v. Portland (223 U. S. 151) 386		Lincoln Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Lincoln (223 U. S. 349) ..	466
Kindred v. Union P. R. Co. (225 U. S. 582)	1216	Loeb v. Georgia (Mem.) (225 U. S. 717)	1270
King, Chicago Junction R. Co. v.	173	Hamilton v. (Mem.)	629
Miller v.	528	Loewe v. Lawler (Mem.) (223 U. S. 729)	633
Kinney, United States ex rel., v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. (222 U. S. 283)	200	Long, Katz v. (Mem.)	638
Kirby, Chicago & A. R. Co. v.	1033	United States ex rel. Allardt v. (Mem.)	637
Kirkendall, Quong Wing v.	350	Lorenzo, Porto Rico Sugar Co. v.	277
Knapp, Hooker v.	1099	Los Angeles, Grants Pass Land & Water Co. v. (Mem.)	635
Knickerbocker Trust Co., Bigelow v. (Mem.)	1264	Louisiana, Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club v.	924
Codman v. (Mem.)	1264	Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. (224 U. S. 649) 934
Conant v. (Mem.)	1264	v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. (225 U. S. 430)	1151
Evans v. (Mem.)	1264	Louisville & N. R. Co., Cincinnati v. v. F. W. Cook Brewing Co. (223 U. S. 70)	355
Parsons v. (Mem.)	1264	v. Helms (Mem.) (225 U. S. 709)	1267
Weld v. (Mem.)	1264	Railroad Commission v.	1087
Kopp v. Waters (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	640	Loving, Re (224 U. S. 183)	725
Kuhn v. Holt (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701)	1264	Lowe, United States ex rel., v. Fisher (223 U. S. 95)	364
Kyle v. Hammond (Mem.) (223 U. S. 716)	627	Low Wah Suey v. Backus (225 U. S. 460)	1165
v. Hammond (225 U. S. 692) 1260		Lyall, McCaughey v.	883
L.
Ladd, Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	640
Latimer v. United States (223 U. S. 501)	526

Lynch, Wylie Permanent Camping Co. v. (Mem.)	1266	Merchants & M. Transp. Co. v. Robinson Baxter-Dissosway Towing & Transp. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265
M.		v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 711)	1268
McBride, Moneyweight Scale Co. v. (Mem.)	641	Merchants' Stock & Grain Co., Re (223 U. S. 639)	584
McCarthy v. First Nat. Bank (223 U. S. 493)	523	Messenger v. Anderson. See MESSINGER v. ANDERSON.
McCaughey v. Lyall (224 U. S. 558)	883	Messinger v. Anderson (225 U. S. 436)	1152
McCauley, Converse v.	749	Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co. v. Doe (223 U. S. 365)	473
McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269	Metropolitan S. S. Co., American Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	632
McComber v. Nicholson (Mem.) (223 U. S. 740)	637	Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. (223 U. S. 519)	533
McConnel v. Burr (Mem.) (223 U. S. 747)	640	Meurer v. Sturgiss (Mem.) (223 U. S. 729)	633
McCrum-Howell Co. v. Pope Automatic Merchandising Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 730)	633	Meyer v. Wells, Fargo, & Co. (223 U. S. 298)	445
McCue, Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v.	419	Meyers v. Samuels (Mem.) (223 U. S. 715)	627
McDaniel, Seymour v. (Mem.)	1264	Midvale Steel Co., Fried. Krupp Aktiengesellschaft v. (Mem.)	633
McDougal, Shulthis v.	1205	Miller, Baltimore v. (Mem.)	1265
McDuffee v. Hestonville, M. & F. Pass. R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 719)	629	v. First Nat. Bank. See MILLER v. KING.
McKnight v. Hodge (Mem.) (223 U. S. 748)	640	Indiana ex rel., Lehman v. (Mem.)	637
McMullen, United States v.	269	v. King (223 U. S. 505)	528
McNaughton v. Georgia (Mem.) (223 U. S. 744)	639	United States v.	568
Maki v. Union Pacific Coal Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 728)	632	Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. v. Ladd (Mem.) (223 U. S. 747)	640
Marrin v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 719)	629	Minnesota, United States Exp. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. (Mem.)	636
Marshall Engine Co., New Marshall Engine Co. v.	513	Minehill & S. H. R. Co., McCoach v. (Mem.)	1269
Martell, Mutual Loan Co. v.	175	Missouri ex rel. Hadley, Republic Oil Co. v.	760
Martin v. West (222 U. S. 191)	159	Hadley, Standard Oil Co. v.	760
Marx & Rawolle v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 709)	1267	Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe (222 U. S. 185)	155
Maryland, Atlantic Transport Co. v. (Mem.)	1263	v. Olathe (222 U. S. 187)	156
v. West Virginia (225 U. S. 1)	955	v. Olathe (222 U. S. 191)	159
Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., Union P. R. Co. v.	180	Missouri P. R. Co., Brinkmeier v.	758
Massachusetts, Jordan v.	1038	v. Castle (224 U. S. 541)	875
Matko, Clason v.	588	v. Lessenden (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696)	1262
Matthiessen, Thomas v. (Mem.)	634	Mitchell, Stewart v. (Mem.)	639
Mayer v. American Security & T. Co. (222 U. S. 295)	206	Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 733)	635
Henderson v.	1233	Model Bottling Machinery Co. v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 732)	634
Meece, New Mexico ex rel., v. Abbott (Mem.) (223 U. S. 740)	637	Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (223 U. S. 1)	327
Mercantile Trust Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 710)	624	Moneyweight Scale Co. v. McBride (Mem.) (223 U. S. 749)	641
Merchants & M. Transp. Co. v. General Chemical Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265	Moore, Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	627
v. Gildersleeve (Mem.) (225 U. S. 704)	1265

Moore v. Elliott (225 U. S. 392)	1136	New York Trust Co., Denver v. (Mem.)	1266
v. New Jersey (Mem.) (223 U. S. 709)	623	Nichols, Title Guaranty & S. Co. v....	795
Prudential Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	628	Nicholson, McComber v. (Mem.)	637
Morello v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269	Nielsen v. Steinfeld (224 U. S. 534)	872
Morgan, Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	635	Nord Deutscher Lloyd, United States v.	531
United States v.	198	Norfolk & S. Turnpike Co. v. Virginia (225 U. S. 264)	1082
Morris, J. A. Scriven Co. v. (Mem.) ..	638	North, Haw Moy v. (Mem.)	628
Morrow, Warner Valley Stock Co. v. (Mem.)	636	Hoo Choy v. (Mem.)	628
Mortimer Land Co., Groom v. (Mem.)	1264	Yeung How v. (Mem.)	621
Moser v. Layman (Mem.) (223 U. S. 707)	622	Northern P. R. Cd. v. Babcock (223 U. S. 1)	327
Mount Vernon Refrigerating Co., Fred W. Wolf Co. v. (Mem.)...	1268	Interstate Commerce Commission v.	308
Moyer, Glasgow v.	1147	v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	640
Mullen v. United States (224 U. S. 448)	834	v. Washington ex rel., Atkinson (222 U. S. 370)	237
Munday, United States v.	149	Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. McCue (223 U. S. 234)	419
Munsuri v. Fricker (222 U. S. 121) ..	121	O.
Tefft, W. & Co. v.	118	Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Watkins (Mem.) (223 U. S. 723)	631
Murphy v. California (225 U. S. 623)	1229	O'Connor, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.	436
Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Morgan (Mem.) (223 U. S. 735) ..	635	Olathe, Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v.	155
Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell (222 U. S. 225)	175	Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v.	156
N.		Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v.	159
National Bank v. National Herkimer County Bank (225 U. S. 178)	1042	Old Dominion Copper Min. & S. Co., Bigelow v.	1009
National Equipment Co. v. Holt (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701) ..	1264	Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (222 U. S. 582)	324
National Herkimer County Bank, National Bank v.	1042	Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong (223 U. S. 543)	544
Nelson, Blinn v.	65	Oppenheimer v. California (Mem.) (225 U. S. 718)	1271
Ness, United States ex rel., v. Fisher (223 U. S. 683)	610	Order of St. Benedict v. Steinhäuser (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714) ..	1269
Nestle & Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co., Walter Baker & Co. v. (Mem.)	632	Oregon, Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v.	377
New Jersey, Moore v. (Mem.)	623	Oregon R. & Nav. Co., Washington ex rel. v. Fairchild (224 U. S. 510)	863
New Marshall Engine Co. v. Marshall Engine Co. (223 U. S. 473) ..	513	Oregon Short Line R. Co., Stalker v...	1027
New Mexico ex rel. Meece v. Abbott (Mem.) (223 U. S. 740) ..	637	Outlaw, Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	1269
New York v. Central Trust Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 721) ..	629	Owens, Chicago, G. W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1270
Keeney v.	299	P.
v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 722)	630	Pacific Coast Co., Jordan v. (Mem.) ..	1267
New York Continental Jewell Filtration Co. v. District of Columbia (223 U. S. 253)...	426	Jordan v.	1047
New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., Mondou v.	327	Pacific Coast S. S. Co., Anderson v. (Mem.)	1267
v. Walsh (223 U. S. 1)	327	Anderson v.	1047
Walsh v.	327	Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon (223 U. S. 118) ..	377
New York Sporting Goods Co., Colts Patent Fire Arms Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.)	632	Panoulis, Heide v. (Mem.)	630
		Parsons v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) ..	1264

Partridge, Andrews v. (Mem.)	1263
Andrews v. (Mem.)	1261
Payne v. Heerman (Mem.) (223 U. S. 748)	641
Peninsular & O. S. S. Co., Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	1265
Pennsylvania, Banker Bros. Co. v.	168
Pennsylvania Co., Ireton v. (Mem.)	633
Pennsylvania R. Co., Henderson v. (Mem.)	628
Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. (Mem.)	635
Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. Susswein (Mem.) (223 U. S. 722)	630
People's Coal Co., Second Pool Coal Co. v. (Mem.)	632
Perolin Co. v. Cotto-Waxo Chemical Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 726)	632
Peters v. Broward. See PETERS v. GILCHRIST.
v. Gilchrist (222 U. S. 483)	278
Pettingill, Gandia v.	267
Pfann, J. C. Turner Cypress Lumber Co. v. (Mem.)	1266
Philadelphia & R. Co., Central R. Co. of N. J. v. (Mem.)	631
Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Schuberth (224 U. S. 603)	911
Philadelphia Co. v. Dickinson. See PHILADELPHIA CO. v. STIMSON.
v. Stimson (223 U. S. 605)	570
Phillips, Chase v. (Mem.)	627
Phœnix Knitting Works, Hygienic Fleeced Underwear Co. v. (Mem.)	1267
Pi v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 737)	636
Pickford v. Talbott (225 U. S. 651)	1240
Pierce v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 732)	634
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Indiana (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713)	626
Plummer v. United States (224 U. S. 137)	697
Plyler, United States v.	70
Pomona v. Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. (224 U. S. 330)	788
Pope Automatic Merchandising Co., McCrum-Howell Co. v. (Mem.)	633
Portland, Kiernan v.	386
Porto Rico Sugar Co. v. Lorenzo (222 U. S. 481)	277
Powell, Texarkana Gas & Electric Co. v. Powell (Mem.)	1265
Powell's v. Holt (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701)	1264
Powers v. United States (223 U. S. 303)	448
World's Fair Min. Co. v.	717

Premium Mfg. Co., J. A. Scriven Co. v. (Mem.)	640
Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Simplex Railway Appliance Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 721)	630
Prichard, Jacobs v.	405
Primeau v. Granfield (Mem.) (225 U. S. 708)	1267
Proctor & Gamble Co. v. United States (225 U. S. 282)	1091
Provident Life & T. Co., Board of Chosen Freeholders v. (Mem.)	639
Burlington County v. (Mem.)	639
Prudential Ins. Co. v. Moore (Mem.) (223 U. S. 717)	628
Puente, Amsterdam v. (Mem.)	1270
Pullman Co. v. Calder (Mem.) (223 U. S. 740)	637

Q.

Quaintance v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 711)	1268
Quincy, O. & K. C. R. Co. v. Shohoney (Mem.) (223 U. S. 705)	621
Quong Wing v. Kirkendall (223 U. S. 59)	350

R.

Radin, Ex parte (Mem.) (223 U. S. 715)	627
Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (225 U. S. 272)	1087
v. Worthington (225 U. S. 101)	1004
Railroad Co., American, v. Birch (224 U. S. 547)	879
American, v. Central San Christobal (Mem.) (223 U. S. 739)	637
Baltimore & O. v. Gawinske (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1268
Baltimore & O., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (225 U. S. 326)	1107
Baltimore & O., Robinson v. (222 U. S. 506)	288
Baltimore & O., United States v. (225 U. S. 306)	1100
Baltimore & O., Vermillion v. (224 U. S. 486)	854
Baltimore & O. S. W., United States v. (222 U. S. 8)	68
Central of N. J., v. Philadelphia & R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631
Central Park, N. & E. R., v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 712)	1268
Chicago & A., v. Kirby (225 U. S. 155)	1033
Chicago G. W., v. Owens (Mem.) (225 U. S. 716)	1270

Railroad Co., Cuba, v. Crosby (222 U. S. 473)	274	Railway Co., Chicago, R. I. & P., v. Bradbury (Mem.) (223 U. S. 711)	624
Illinois C., R. J. Darnell v. (225 U. S. 243)	1072	Chicago, R. I. & P., E. E. Taenzer & Co. v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	640
Illinois C., v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 734) ..	635	Elkins Electric, v. Western Maryland R. Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631
Louisville & N., Cincinnati v. (223 U. S. 390)	481	Galveston, H. & S. A., v. Crow (223 U. S. 481)	516
Louisville & N., v. Helms (Mem.) (225 U. S. 709) ..	1267	Galveston, H. & S. A., v. Wallace (223 U. S. 481)	516
Louisville & N., Railroad Commission v. (225 U. S. 272) ..	1087	Grand Canyon, Treat v. (222 U. S. 448)	265
Mason City & Ft. D., Union P. R. Co. v. (222 U. S. 237) ..	180	Grand Trunk Junction, Beutler v. (224 U. S. 85)	679
Minehill & S. H., McCoach v. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714) ..	1269	Great Northern, Interstate Commerce Commission v. (222 U. S. 541)	308
New York, N. H. & H., Mondou v. (223 U. S. 1)	327	Great Northern, Tolliver v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 711) ..	624
New York, N. H. & H., Walsh v. (223 U. S. 1)	327	Gulf, C. & S. F., v. Dennis (224 U. S. 503)	860
New York, N. H. & H., v. Walsh (223 U. S. 1)	327	Hestonville, M. & F. Pass., McDuffee v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 719)	629
Oregon Short Line, Stalker v. (225 U. S. 142)	1027	Kansas City S., v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. (223 U. S. 573)	556
Pennsylvania, Henderson v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718) ..	628	Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M., v. Ladd (Mem.) (223 U. S. 747)	640
Pennsylvania, Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 733)	635	Missouri & K. I., v. Olathe (222 U. S. 191)	159
Philadelphia, B. & W., v. Schubert (224 U. S. 603)	911	Missouri & K. I., v. Olathe (222 U. S. 187)	156
Quincy, O. & K. C., v. Shohoney (Mem.) (223 U. S. 705) ..	621	Missouri & K. I., v. Olathe (222 U. S. 185)	155
St. Louis & S. F., v. Herr (Mem.) (225 U. S. 705) ..	1265	Missouri P., Brinkmeier v. (224 U. S. 268)	758
Southern P., v. United States (223 U. S. 565)	553	Missouri P., v. Castle (224 U. S. 541)	875
Southern P., United States v. (223 U. S. 565)	553	Missouri P., v. Lessenden (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696) ..	1262
Southern P., v. United States (223 U. S. 560) ..	551	Northern P., v. Babcock (223 U. S. 1)	327
Union P., v. F. H. Peavey & Co. (222 U. S. 42)	83	Northern P., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (222 U. S. 541)	308
Union P., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (222 U. S. 541)	308	Northern P., v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746) ..	640
Union P., Kindred v. (225 U. S. 582)	1216	Northern P., v. Washington ex rel. Atkinson (222 U. S. 370)	237
Union P., v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. (222 U. S. 237) ..	180	Omaha & C. B. Street, v. Interstate Commerce Commission (222 U. S. 582)	324
Union P., v. Updike Grain Co. (222 U. S. 215)	171	Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L., v. Indiana (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713)	626
Railway Co., Atchison, T. & S. F., v. O'Connor (223 U. S. 280) ..	436	St. Louis, I. M. & S., v. Watson (Mem.) (223 U. S. 745)	639
Atchison, T. & S. F., Tiedt v. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) ..	1264
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. United States (225 U. S. 640) ..	1236
Belt, v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743)	638
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Hamilton (Mem.) (223 U. S. 743) ..	638
Chicago Junction, v. King (222 U. S. 222)	173

Railway Co., St. Louis, I. M. & S., v. Wynne (224 U. S. 354) ..	799	Ripley, United States v.	131
St. Louis S. W., v. Lewellen Bros. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701)	1264	v. United States (222 U. S. 144)	131
Seaboard Air Line v. Duvall (225 U. S. 477)	1171	United States v.	614
Southern, v. Burlington Lumber Co. (225 U. S. 99)	1001	v. United States (223 U. S. 695)	614
Southern, Reid v. (222 U. S. 424)	257	R. J. Darnell v. Illinois C. R. Co. (225 U. S. 243)	1072
Southern, v. Reid (222 U. S. 444)	263	Roberts, Jacob v.	429
Southern, v. United States (222 U. S. 20)	72	Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (222 U. S. 506)	288
Texas & P., v. Cauble (Mem.) (225 U. S. 716)	1270	Robinson Baxter-Dissosway Towing & Transp. Co., Merchants & M. Transp. Co. v. (Mem.)	1265
Texas & P., v. Howell (224 U. S. 577)	892	Rocca v. Thompson (223 U. S. 317)	453
Texas & P., Mercantile Trust Co. v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 710)	624	Rock Island Plow Co. v. Reardon (222 U. S. 354)	231
Vicksburg, S. & P., v. Rogers (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269	Rogers, Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1269
Washington, A. & Mt. V., v. Real Estate Trust Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 724)	631	Roselle v. Virginia (Mem.) (223 U. S. 716)	627
Western Maryland, Elkins Electric R. Co. v. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631	Rosenkrans v. Rhode Island (Mem.) (225 U. S. 698)	1263
Wisconsin C., v. Boucher (Mem.)	1271	Roukous v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 710)	1267
Ramsey, Aluminum Co. v.	185	Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 717)	628
Randolph, Sandoval v.	142	v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 724)	631
Re Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade, (222 U. S. 578)	323	Rushing, Carlton v. (Mem.)	636
Loving (224 U. S. 183)	725	Grigsby v.	133
Merchants' Stock & Grain Co. (223 U. S. 639)	584	S.
Real Estate Trust Co., Washington, A. & Mt. V. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	631	St. Augustine v. Thompson (Mem.) (225 U. S. 706)	1266
Reardon, Rock Island Plow Co. v.	231	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Herr (Mem.) (225 U. S. 705)	1265
Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture (222 U. S. 380) ...	240	St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Watson (Mem.) (223 U. S. 745)	639
Regenhardt, Tilles v. (Mem.)	636	v. Wynne (224 U. S. 354)	799
Reid, Southern R. Co. v.	257	St. Louis National Stockyards, United States v. (Mem.)	636
Southern R. Co. v.	263	St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Lewellen Bros. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701)	1264
Reitler v. Harris (223 U. S. 437)	497	Saldana, San Juan v. (Mem.)	638
Republic Oil Co. v. Missouri ex rel. Hadley (224 U. S. 270) ...	760	Salmen Brick & Lumber Co. v. Donald & Taylor (Mem.) (225 U. S. 705)	1265
Requena, San Juan Light & Transit Co. v.	680	Samstag v. George Frost Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 711)	1268
Rhode Island, Rosenkrans v. (Mem.)	1263	Samuel C. Tatum Co., Ashley v. (Mem.)	1266
Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., J. A. Seriven Co. v. (Mem.)	622	Samuels, Meyers v. (Mem.)	627
Richardson, English v.	949	Sandoval v. Randolph (222 U. S. 161)	142
v. Harmon (222 U. S. 96) ...	110	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v.	415
State Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) ...	1262	San Francisco, United Railroads v. (Mem.)	1268
Richmond, Western U. Teleg. Co. v. ...	710	San Juan v. Saldana (Mem.) (223 U. S. 741)	638
Rider v. Bliss-Cook Oak Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 706)	622
Rimmerman v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 721)	630

San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena (224 U. S. 89) ...	680
Savage v. Jones (225 U. S. 501)	1182
Schaben, Thayer v. (Mem.)	626
Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & Water Co. (224 U. S. 107)	686
Schubert, Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v.	911
Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall (225 U. S. 477)	1171
Sears, Swanson v.	721
Seattle, Shepard v. (Mem.)	641
Second Employers' Liability Cases. See MONDOU v. NEW YORK, N. H. & H. R. Co.
Second Pool Coal Co. v. People's Coal Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 727)	632
Selfridge, Brown v.	727
Sexton v. Kessler & Co. (225 U. S. 90)	995
Seymour v. McDaniel (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702)	1264
Shannon, Gaar, Scott & Co. v.	510
Sharpe v. Bonham (224 U. S. 241) ..	747
Shepard v. Seattle (Mem.) (223 U. S. 749)	641
Sherman v. Goodwin (Mem.) (223 U. S. 711)	624
Shohoney, Quincy, O. & K. C. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	621
Shulthis, Berryhill v.	1205
v. McDougal (225 U. S. 561)	1205
Simplex Railway Appliance Co., Pressed Steel Car Co. v. (Mem.)	630
Slipper, Yungbluth v. (Mem.)	630
Smaltz, Collier v. (Mem.)	624
Smith v. Davis (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631
Societe Anonyme des Anciens Etablissements Cail v. United States (224 U. S. 309)	778
United States v.	778
Soliah v. Heskin (222 U. S. 522) ..	294
Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky ex rel. Alexander (222 U. S. 63)	96
Southern P. R. Co. v. United States (223 U. S. 560)	551
United States v.	553
v. United States (223 U. S. 565)	553
Southern R. Co. v. Burlington Lumber Co. (225 U. S. 99) ..	1001
v. Reid (222 U. S. 444)	263
v. Reid (222 U. S. 424)	257
v. United States (222 U. S. 20)	72
Staley v. Derden (Mem.) (225 U. S. 708)	1267
Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. (225 U. S. 142)	1027
Standard Dredging Co., Gromer v. ..	801
Standard Oil Co. v. Missouri ex rel. Hadley (224 U. S. 270)	760
Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright (225 U. S. 540)	1197
State Nat. Bank v. Richardson (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696) ..	1262
Steinfeld, Nielsen v.	872
Zeckendorf v.	1156
v. Zeckendorf (225 U. S. 445)	1156
Steinhauser, Order of St. Benedict v. (Mem.)	1269
Stever, United States v.	145
Stewart v. Mitchell (Mem.) (223 U. S. 746)	639
Stimson, Philadelphia Co. v.	570
Stone, & Co. James v. (Mem.)	1271
Street Grading District No. 60, Hagadorn v. (Mem.)	630
Struckman v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 712)	625
Sturges, Chicago v.	215
Sturgiss, Meurer v. (Mem.)	633
Sullivan v. Goldman (Mem.) (225 U. S. 695)	1261
v. Goldman (Mem.) (225 U. S. 701)	1264
Sully v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269
Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co., Pomona v.	788
Susswein, Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. (Mem.)	630
Swanson v. Sears (224 U. S. 180) ..	721
Sylvanus Smith & Co., Johnson Educator Food Co. v. (Mem.)	628
T.
Tabor, Vaughan v. (Mem.)	638
Talbott, Pickford v.	1240
Tang Tun v. Edsell (223 U. S. 673)	606
Tax Title Co., Denoon v. (Mem.)	637
Taylor, Hirsh v. (Mem.)	1263
Leesnitzer v. (Mem.)	640
Thomas v.	673
Tefft, W. & Co. v. Munsuri (222 U. S. 114)	118
Tennessee, Arkansas v. (Mem.)	1271
Terminal R. Asso., United States v.	810
Texarkana Gas & Electric Co. v. Powell (Mem.) (225 U. S. 703)	1265
Texas, Brown v. (Mem.)	639
Collins v.	439
Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cauble (Mem.) (225 U. S. 716)	1270
v. Howell (224 U. S. 577)	892
Mercantile Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	624
Thaddeus Davids Co. v. Davids (Mem.) (223 U. S. 733)	635
Thayer v. Schaben (Mem.) (223 U. S. 714)	626
The Good Hope v. Balfour (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1269
v. Chelsea Fibre Mills (Mem.) (225 U. S. 713)	1266

CASES REPORTED.

The Good Hope v. Winter (Mem.)
(225 U. S. 713)	1269
The Jason (225 U. S. 32)	969
The San Pedro. See METROPOLITAN REDWOOD LUMBER Co. v.
DOE.
Thomas v. Taylor (224 U. S. 73) ..	673
v. Matthiessen (Mem.) (223
U. S. 731)	634
Thompson, Fitz Gerald v.	314
Rocca v.	453
St. Augustine v. (Mem.)	1266
Tiedt v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co.
(Mem.) (225 U. S. 702)	1264
Tilles v. Regenhardt (Mem.) (223 U.
S. 736)	636
Title Guaranty & S. Co., Guarantee
Title & T. Co. v.	706
v. Nichols (224 U. S. 346) ..	795
v. United States use of General
Electric Co. (Mem.) (223
U. S. 720)	629
v. United States use of General
Electric Co. (222 U. S.
401)	248
Tolliver v. Great Northern R. Co.
(Mem.) (223 U. S. 711)	624
Trapp, Choate v.	941
Treat v. Grand Canyon R. Co. (222
U. S. 448)	265
Tremblay, Ætna L. Ins. Co. v.	398
Troy Bank v. G. A. Whitehead & Co.
(222 U. S. 39)	81
Trussed Concrete Steel Co. v. Fidelity
Storage Corp. (Mem.)
(225 U. S. 716)	1270
Turner, United States ex rel. v. Fisher (222 U. S. 204)	165
Twenty-Five Packages Panama Hats,
United States v. (Mem.)	1266
Twin Falls Land & Water Co., Schod-
de v.	686
Tynan, Chemgas v. (Mem.)	639
Horons v. (Mem.)	639

U.

Union Pacific Coal Co., Maki v.
(Mem.)	632
Union P. R. Co. v. F. H. Peavey &
Co. (222 U. S. 42)	83
Interstate Commerce Commission v.	308
Kindred v.	1216
v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co.
(222 U. S. 237)	180
v. Updike Grain Co. (222 U.
S. 215)	171
United Railroads v. San Francisco
(Mem.) (225 U. S. 710)	1268
United Realty Co., Sandoval v.	144
United States, Adler v. (Mem.)	634
v. American Druggist Syndicate (Mem.) (223 U. S.
734)	635

United States, American Sugar Ref.
Co. v. (Mem.)	639
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.	1236
Atlantic Transport Co. v.
(Mem.)	631
v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (225
U. S. 306)	1100
v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R.
Co. (222 U. S. 8)	68
B. Altman & Co. v.	894
v. Barnes (222 U. S. 513) ..	291
v. Baruch (223 U. S. 191) ..	399
Beecham v. (Mem.)	623
Belt R. Co. v. (Mem.)	638
Bennett v. (Mem.)	1266
Bolognesi v. (Mem.)	632
Bornn Hat Co. v. (Mem.) ..	626
Brinn v.	630
Cameron v. (Mem.)	633
Campbell v.	684
Cella v. (Mem.)	633
Chaplin v. (Mem.)	1266
Choemon Ki Kuchi v. (Mem.) ..	1265
Chomel v. (Mem.)	630
v. Citroen (223 U. S. 407) ..	486
Clairmont v.	1201
v. Colorado Anthracite Co.
(225 U. S. 219)	1063
Colt v. (Mem.)	633
v. Congress Constr. Co. (222
U. S. 199)	163
Dally v. (Mem.)	1269
Deming Invest. Co. v.	847
Diaz v.	500
Diaz v.	321
Dufaur v. (Mem.)	634
Eastern Cherokees v.	1212
v. Eckstein (222 U. S. 130) ..	125
v. Ellicott (223 U. S. 524) ..	535
Enders v. (Mem.)	629
Epstein v. (Mem.)	634
Fairbanks v.	409
v. Fidelity Trust Co. (222 U.
S. 158)	137
v. Garbish (222 U. S. 257) ..	190
Garramone v. (Mem.)	630
Gerbracht v. (Mem.)	633
Gilland v. (Mem.)	623
Glickstein v.	128
Goat v.	841
Goodman v. (Mem.)	1263
Hance v. (Mem.)	1268
Harris v. (Mem.)	1266
Heckman v.	820
Heike v. (Mem.)	633
Hendricks v.	394
Herrera v.	316
Hillman v. (Mem.)	1263
Hinn v. (Mem.)	629
Huse v.	285
Hussey v.	106
Hyde v.	1114
Illinois C. R. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	635
Ireland v. (Mem.)	1269

CASES REPORTED.

United States v. Jamieson (Mem.)
(223 U. S. 744)	639
Johannessen v.	1066
Johnson v.	1142
Johnson v. (Mem.)	1265
Latimer v.	526
Leary v.	889
Lillis v. (Mem.)	632
v. McMullen (222 U. S. 460) ..	269
Marrin v. (Mem.)	629
Marx & Rawolle v. (Mem.) ..	1267
Merchants & M. Transp. Co.
v. (Mem.)	1268
v. Miller (223 U. S. 599)	568
Morello v. (Mem.)	1269
v. Morgan (222 U. S. 274) ..	198
Mullen v.	834
v. Munday (222 U. S. 175) ..	149
New York v. (Mem.)	630
v. Nord Deutscher Lloyd (223
U. S. 512)	531
Northern P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Pi v. (Mem.)	640
Pi v. (Mem.)	636
Pierce v. (Mem.)	634
Plummer v.	697
v. Plyler (222 U. S. 15)	70
Powers v.	448
Procter & Gamble Co. v.	1091
Quaintance v. (Mem.)	1268
Rimmerman v. (Mem.)	630
v. Ripley (223 U. S. 695)	614
v. Ripley (222 U. S. 144)	131
Ripley v.	614
Ripley v.	131
Roukous v. (Mem.)	1267
v. St. Louis National Stockyards (Mem.) (223 U. S.
737)	636
Societe Anonyme des Anciens
Etablissements Cail v. ..	778
v. Societe Anonyme des Anciens Etablissements Cail (224
U. S. 309)	778
v. Southern P. R. Co. (223
U. S. 565)	553
Southern P. R. Co. v.	551
Southern P. R. Co. v.	553
Southern R. Co. v.	72
v. Stever (222 U. S. 167)	145
Struckman v. (Mem.)	625
Sully v. (Mem.)	1269
v. Terminal R. Asso. (224 U.
S. 383)	810
The Abby Dodge v.	390
v. Twenty-Five Packages of Panama Hats (Mem.) (225
U. S. 707)	1266
Warner-Jenkinson Co. v.
(Mem.)	631
Warren v.	409
Wells v. (Mem.)	1269
v. White Star Line (224 U. S.
194)	729

United States v. Wong You (223 U. S.
67)	354
Wood v.	696
United States ex rel. Ness v. Ballinger. See UNITED STATES
EX REL NESS v. FISHER.
Jones v. Fisher (Mem.) (225
U. S. 708)	1267
Lowe v. Fisher (223 U. S. 95)	364
Ness v. Fisher (223 U. S. 683)	610
Turner v. Fisher (222 U. S.
204)	165
Humboldt S. S. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v.	849
Allardt v. Long (Mem.) (223
U. S. 740)	637
Kinney v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. (222 U. S.
283)	200
United States use of General Electric Co., Title Guaranty & S.
Co. v.	248
General Electric Co., Title
Guaranty & S. Co. v.
(Mem.)	629
United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota
(223 U. S. 335)	459
United States Fidelity & G. Co. v.
Bray (225 U. S. 205) ..	1055
v. Sandoval (223 U. S. 227)	415
United States ex rel. Kinney v.	200
Updike Grain Co., Union P. R. Co. v.	171

V.

Valdes v. Central Altagracia (223
U. S. 58)	980
Central Altagracia v.	980
Van Sice v. Ibex Min. Co. (Mem.)
(223 U. S. 712)	625
Vaughan v. Tabor (Mem.) (223 U.
S. 742)	638
Vermillion v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.
(224 U. S. 486)	854
Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Rogers
(Mem.) (225 U. S. 713) ..	1269
Virginia, Norfolk & S. Turnpike Co.
v.	1082
Roselle v. (Mem.)	627
v. West Virginia (222 U. S.
17)	71
Vogt v. Graff (222 U. S. 404)	249

W.

Wagner Electric & Mfg. Co., Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v.	1222
Wallace, Galveston, H. & S. A. R.
Co. v.	516
Walsh, New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.
v.	327
v. New York, N. H. & H. R.
Co. (223 U. S. 1)	327
Williams v.	253

Walt v. Colorado (Mem.) (223 U. S. 748)	640	Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Wagner Electric & Mfg. Co. (225 U. S. 604)	1222
Walter Baker & Co. v. Gray (Mem.) (223 U. S. 732)	634	West Virginia, Graham v.	917
v. Nestle & Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 726)	632	Maryland v.	955
Warner-Jenkinson Co. v. United States (Mem.) (223 U. S. 725)	631	Virginia v.	71
Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Morrow (Mem.) (223 U. S. 737)	636	Wetzlar, Chase v.	990
Warren v. United States (223 U. S. 215)	409	White Star Line, Darius Cole Transp. Co. v. (Mem.)	1265
Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild (224 U. S. 510)	863	United States v.	729
Atkinson, Northern P. R. Co. v.	237	Whitman College, Berryman v.	225
Washington, A. & Mt. V. R. Co. v. Real Estate Trust Co. (Mem.) (223 U. S. 724) ..	631	Whitmire, Cherokee Nation v.	370
Washington Home for Incurables v. American Security & T. Co. (224 U. S. 486)	854	Wilfong, Ontario Land Co. v.	544
Washington Loan & T. Co., Johnson v.	741	Williams, City Bank & T. Co. v. (Mem.)	632
Washington Water Power Co. v. Gas-kill (Mem.) (223 U. S. 748)	640	v. Walsh (222 U. S. 415) ..	253
Washoe Copper Co., Bliss v. (Mem.)	635	Williams Soap Co. v. J. B. Williams Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 712)	1268
Waskey v. Chambers (224 U. S. 564) ..	885	Wilson-Moline Buggy Co. v. Hawkins (Mem.) (223 U. S. 713) ..	625
v. Hammer (223 U. S. 85) ..	359	Wingert v. First Nat. Bank (223 U. S. 670)	605
Waters, Kopp v. (Mem.)	640	Winter, The Good Hope v. (Mem.) ..	1269
Watkins, Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. (Mem.)	631	Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Boucher (Mem.)	1271
Watson v. European American Bank (Mem.) (223 U. S. 718) ..	628	Wong You, United States v.	354
St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	639	Wood, Gleason v.	947
Webb, Ex parte (225 U. S. 663)	1248	v. United States (224 U. S. 132)	696
Ex parte (Mem.) (225 U. S. 696)	1261	World's Fair Min. Co. v. Powers (224 U. S. 173)	717
Weed Chain Tire Grip Co., Excelsior Supply Co. v. (Mem.) ..	632	Worthington, Railroad Commission v. ..	1004
Weld v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (Mem.) (225 U. S. 702) ..	1264	Wright, Carter v. (Mem.)	637
Wells v. United States (Mem.) (225 U. S. 714)	1269	Standard Stock Food Co. v. ..	1197
Wells-Fargo & Co., George N. Pierce Co. v. (Mem.)	628	Wylie Permanent Camping Co. v. Lynch (Mem.) (225 U. S. 707)	1266
Meyer v.	445	Wynne, St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. ..	799
West, Martin v.	159
Western Maryland R. Co., Elkins Electric R. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	631
Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Gibbs (Mem.) (223 U. S. 741) ..	638
v. Minnesota (Mem.) (223 U. S. 738)	636
v. Richmond (224 U. S. 160) ..	710

Y.

Yeung How v. North (Mem.) (223 U. S. 705)	621
Yungbluth v. Slipper (Mem.) (223 U. S. 722)	630

Z.

Zarecor, Helm v.	77
Zeckendorf, Steinfeld v.	1156
v. Steinfeld (225 U. S. 445) ..	1156
Zurrinach, Aran v.	246

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

“

Vol. 222.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 222,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 222 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 222 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Blinn v. Nelson	65	82-83	Curtin v. Benson	104
5-6	" "	67	83-86	" "	105
6-7	" "	68	86-87	" "	106
8, 11	United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	68	88	Hussey v. United States	106
11-13	" "	69	88-89	" "	107
13-16	" "	70	89-92	" "	108
15-17	United States v. Plyler	70	92-94	" "	109
17-19	Virginia v. West Virginia	71	94-95	" "	110
19-20	" "	72	96	Richardson v. Harmon	110
20	Southern R. Co. v. United States	72	99-100	" "	111
23-24	" "	73	100-102	" "	112
24-27	" "	74	102-105	" "	113
27	" "	75	105-107	" "	114
28	Finley v. California	75	107	Bryan v. Ker	114
30-31	" "	77	110-111	" "	116
32	Helm v. Zarecor	77	111-113	" "	117
32-35	" "	79	113-114	" "	118
35-37	" "	80	114-115	Tefft, W. & Co. v. Munsuri	118
37-38	" "	81	115-118	" "	119
39	Troy Bank v. G. A. White- head & Co.	81	118-120	" "	120
39-41	" "	82	120-121	" "	121
41	" "	83	121-122	Munsuri v. Fricker	121
42	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. Diffenbaugh	83	122-123	" "	122
43-45	" "	86	123	Enriquez v. Enriquez	122
45-47	" "	87	124-126	" "	123
47-50	" "	88	126-127	" "	124
50	" "	89	127-128	Enriquez v. Enriquez	124
51	Lenman v. Jones	89	128-130	" "	125
51-53	" "	91	130	United States v. Eckstein	125
53-54	" "	92	133-134	" "	126
55	Kalem Co. v. Harper Brothers	92	134-136	" "	127
60-62	" "	95	136-138	" "	128
62-63	" "	96	139	Glickstein v. United States	128
63	Southern P. Co. v. Ken- tucky ex rel. Alexander	96	140-141	" "	129
66-67	" "	97	141-143	" "	130
67-69	" "	98	143-144	" "	131
69-71	" "	99	144-146	Ripley v. United States	131
71-74	" "	100	146-148	" "	132
74-77	" "	101	148	" "	133
77	" "	102	149	Grigsby v. Russell	133
78	Curtin v. Benson	102	154-155	" "	136
			155-157	" "	137
			158	United States v. Fidelity Trust Co.	137
			158-160	" "	141
			160	" "	142
			161	Sandoval v. Randolph	142

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 222 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
161-163	Sandoval v. Randolph	143	270-272	Consaul v. Cummings	197
163-164	" "	144	272-274	" "	198
164-165	Anderson v. United Realty Co.	144	274-275	United States v. Morgan	198
165-167	" "	145	275	" "	199
167	United States v. Stever	145	278-280	" "	199
169-170	" "	146	280-282	" "	200
170-173	" "	147	283	United States ex rel. Kinney v. United States Fidelity & G. Co.	200
173-175	" "	148	283-284	" "	201
175	United States v. Munday	149	284	" "	202
176-179	" "	152	285	Lewers & Cooke v. Atcherly	202
179-181	" "	153	292	" "	204
181-182	" "	154	292-295	" "	205
182-185	" "	155	295	" "	206
185	Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe	155	295	Mayer v. American Security & T. Co.	206
185-186	" "	156	298-300	" "	207
187	Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe	156	300	Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co.	208
187-188	" "	157	301-302	" "	211
188-190	" "	158	302-305	" "	212
190	" "	159	305-308	" "	213
191	Missouri & K. I. R. Co. v. Olathe	159	308-310	" "	214
191	Martin v. West	159	310-312	" "	215
195-196	" "	161	313	Chicago v. Sturges	215
196-198	" "	162	321-323	" "	220
198	" "	163	323-324	" "	221
199-200	United States v. Congress Constr. Co.	163	325	Brown v. Alton Water Co.	221
200-202	" "	164	325-328	" "	222
202-204	" "	165	328-331	" "	223
204	United States ex rel. Turner v. Fisher	165	331-333	" "	224
205	" "	166	333-334	" "	225
208-209	" "	166	334	Berryman v. Whitman College	225
210	Banker Bros. Co. v. Pennsylvania	168	342-344	" "	227
212-214	" "	168	344-346	" "	228
214	" "	168	346-349	" "	229
215-216	Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co.	170	349-351	" "	230
216-219	" "	171	351-353	" "	231
219-221	" "	171	354	Rock Island Plow Co. v. Reardon	231
222	Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King	171	354-356	" "	232
222-224	" "	172	356-357	" "	233
224-225	" "	173	362-363	" "	234
225	Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell	173	364	" "	235
231-233	" "	173	365	Gring v. Ives	235
233-235	" "	174	365	" "	236
235-236	" "	175	368-369	" "	237
237-238	Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co.	175	369-370	" "	237
238-241	" "	177	370	Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington ex rel. Atkinson	237
241-243	" "	178	375-376	" "	238
243-246	" "	179	376-378	" "	239
246-249	" "	180	378-380	" "	240
249-251	" "	181	380	Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agri. of North Carolina	240
251	Aluminum Co. v. Ramsey	182	381-384	" "	241
254	" "	183	384-385	" "	242
254-256	" "	185	389-393	" "	244
257-258	United States v. Garbish	188	393-394	" "	245
258-260	" "	189	394-395	" "	246
260-261	" "	190	395, 397	Aran v. Zurrinach	246
262	Consaul v. Cummings	191	397-400	" "	247
263-264	" "	192	400	" "	248
264-265	" "	192	401-402	Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. United States use of General Electric Co.	248
266-270	" "	193	402-403	" "	249

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 222 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 222 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
404	Vogt v. Graff	249	506	Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	288
408-409	" "	250		" "	289
409-412	" "	251	507-509	" "	290
412-414	" "	252	509-512	" "	291
414-415	" "	253	512	" "	291
415	Williams v. Walsh	253	513	United States v. Barnes	292
418-419	" "	254	516-518	" "	293
419-422	" "	255	518-520	" "	294
422-424	" "	256	520-522	" "	294
424	Southern R. Co. v. Reid	257	522	Soliah v. Heskin	294
431-433	" "	258	523-524	" "	299
433-435	" "	259	525	Keeney v. New York	299
435-438	" "	260	526-527	" "	300
438-440	" "	261	527	" "	301
440-443	" "	262	533-534	" "	304
443-444	" "	263	534-537	" "	305
444-446	Southern R. Co. v. Reid	263	537	" "	306
446-448	" "	264	538-539	Johnson v. Collier	306
448	Treat v. Grand Canyon R. Co.	265	539-540	" "	307
450-452	" "	266	540	" "	308
452	Gandia v. Pettingill	267	541-542	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. Union P. R. Co.	308
456-459	" "	268		" "	309
459	" "	269	542-545	" "	310
460	United States v. McMullen	269	545-546	" "	311
467	" "	271	546-548	" "	312
467-470	" "	272	548-550	" "	313
470-472	" "	273	551-553	" "	314
472	" "	274	553-555	" "	314
473	Cuba R. Co. v. Crosby	274	555	Fitz Gerald v. Thompson	315
477-478	" "	275	556-557	" "	316
478-480	" "	276	558	Herrera v. United States	317
481-482	Porto Rico Sugar Co. v. Lorenzo	277	563-564	" "	318
482	" "	278	564-567	" "	319
483	Peters v. Gilchrist	278	567-570	" "	320
487-490	" "	282	570-572	" "	321
490-492	" "	283	572-574	" "	321
492-495	" "	284	574	Diaz v. United States	322
495	" "	285	575-577	" "	323
496	Huse v. United States	285	577-578	" "	323
499-502	" "	286	578-581	Re Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade	323
502-504	" "	287	582-583	Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Com- merce Commission	324
504-505	" "	288

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

1]*GEORGE R. BLINN, Receiver of the Property of Mabel Allen, Otherwise Known as Mabel E. Allen, an Absentee, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE ELLA NELSON, Robert J. Fisher, Emma E. Thomas, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-7.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice — distribution of absentee's estate.

1. Sufficient notice and other safeguards to satisfy the constitutional guaranty of due process of law are afforded by the provisions

NOTE.—Validity of statutes providing for administration of estate of absentee.

Since the decision in Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 Ann. Cas. 1121, the power of the state to confer jurisdiction on its courts to administer the estates of absentees, irrespective of the fact of death, by a special and appropriate proceeding distinct from the general law for the settlement of the estates of decedents, can no longer be doubted.

The question remains, however, whether the particular statute affords the requisite notice and other safeguards to satisfy constitutional guaranties.

The absence of a provision for adequate notice is fatal. Lavin v. Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 18 Blatchf. 1, 1 Fed. 675; Clapp v. Houg, 12 N. D. 600, 65 L.R.A. 757, 102 Am. St. Rep. 589, 98 N. W. 710; Selden v. Kennedy (Grandy v. Kennedy) 104 Va. 826, 4 L.R.A. (N.S.) 944, 113 Am. St. Rep. 1076, 52 S. E. 635, 7 Ann. Cas. 879.

The lack of such a provision cannot be cured by regarding the proceedings as in the nature of one in rem. Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Lavin v. Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 18 Blatchf. 1, 1 Fed. 675.

56 L. ed.

of Mass. Rev. Laws, chap. 144, for the distribution of the estate of an absentee, where there is reasonably careful provision for notice by publication before the appointment of a receiver, and the whole proceeding begins with a seizure by the sheriff of the property mentioned in the original petition. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 452, 457, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — limitation of actions — estate of absentee.

2. The time for distributing the estate of an absentee, and for barring actions relative to the property, prescribed by Mass. Rev. Laws, chap. 144, is not so arbitrary and

Notice by publication is, however, sufficient. Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 Ann. Cas. 1121; BLINN v. NELSON; Adams v. Adams, 211 Mass. 198, 97 N. E. 982.

Fixing the period of a person's absence from his last domicile within the state, which will be sufficient, under Pa. Laws, 1885, p. 155, to authorize the administration of his property by the special proceeding provided by that statute, at seven or more years, is not so unreasonable as to render the statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 Ann. Cas. 1121.

This decision was followed in New York L. Ins. Co. v. Chittenden, 134 Iowa, 613, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 233, 120 Am. St. Rep. 444, 112 N. W. 96, 13 Ann. Cas. 408.

Fourteen years of absence and inattention to property is a sufficient time to warrant a finding of abandonment, so as not arbitrarily to extinguish the property rights of an absent beneficiary in a trust under a statute providing for the distribution of his estate after such absence to his heirs as new trustees, and barring all actions by the absentee to recover the fund after six years unreasonable as to be wanting in due process of law, because the rights of the absentee are absolutely barred after one year from the appointment of a receiver, in the event that such appointment was not made within thirteen years from the date of the disappearance of the absentee, otherwise, after fourteen years from such disappearance. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 686-688, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 5.]

Argued April 10, 1911. Decided October 23, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Probate Court for the County of Suffolk, in that state, for the distribution of the estate of an absentee. Affirmed.

See same case below, 197 Mass. 279, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 651, 125 Am. St. Rep. 364, 83 N. E. 889, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 147.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George R. Blinn submitted the cause pro se:

The consideration of what constitutes a reasonable or unreasonable length of time for a statute of limitations to operate depends upon the circumstances of the class of cases which it affects. The time which is reasonable for one class of cases may be unreasonable for another class of cases, and all classes of cases may be affected in times of a public emergency.

from the filing of a bond by such heirs, conditioned for repayment upon his reappearance. Adams v. Adams, 211 Mass. 198, 97 N. E. 982.

The safeguards for the protection of the property of an absentee in case of his return, afforded by Pa. Laws 1885, p. 155, providing a special proceeding for the administration of the estates of absentees, satisfy the requirement of the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, where that statute authorizes the revocation of the administration at any time on proof that the absentee is in fact alive, and in such event permits him to recover the shares of his estate received by the distributees, and provides that until the latter shall give security for refunding their shares with interest in case the supposed decedent shall be alive, no distribution shall be made, and that in case of inability to give such security the money shall be invested under the control of the court, and the interest only paid to the distributees. Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 Ann. Cas. 1121.

The decision in Carr v. Brown, 20 R. I. 215, 38 L.R.A. 294, 78 Am. St. Rep. 855, 38 Atl. 9, that a statute authorizing adminis-

American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 55 L. ed. 82, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200.

All statutes of limitations must proceed on the idea that the party has full opportunity afforded him to try his rights in court. A statute could not bar the existing rights of claimants without affording this opportunity; if it should attempt to do so, it would not be a statute of limitations, but an unlawful attempt to extinguish rights arbitrarily, whatever might be the purport of its provisions.

Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 46 L. ed. 804, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 207, 4 L. ed. 529, 551; Re Brown, 135 U. S. 701, 707, 34 L. ed. 316, 318, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

Mr. Amos L. Taylor argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hollis R. Bailey, filed a brief for defendants in error:

Every safeguard has been thrown about the property, and it is under the wise direction and control of the court, with all the safeguards that exist in the case of any receivership proceedings.

Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1121, affirming 206 Pa. 469, 98 Am. St. Rep. 790, 56 Atl. 16; Nelson v. Blinn, 197 Mass. 279, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 651, 125 Am. St. Rep. 364, 83 N. E. 889; Atty. Gen. v. Provident Inst. for Savings, 201 Mass. 23, 86 N. E. 912.

It is within the power of a state to enact reasonable statutes of limitations and establish a time after which no action can be brought upon the estate of a person who has left home and not been heard from for seven years is unconstitutional, although it provides for the publication for three months of a notice of intention to apply for letters of administration or prove the last will and testament of such person, was made before Cunnius v. Reading School Dist., supra, and the Rhode Island court would probably now view the question differently.

After the decision in Savings Bank v. Weeks, 103 Md. 601, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 690, 64 Atl. 295, that the legislature could not confer upon the courts jurisdiction to make a conclusive determination without inquiry as to the fact that a person who has been absent for more than seven years is dead, and proceed to distribute his property, the Maryland legislature changed the law and enacted a measure in the same words as the Pennsylvania statute upheld in Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. supra. This new act was upheld in Savings Bank v. Weeks, 110 Md. 78, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 221, 72 Atl. 475.

Such a statute may be made retroactive without affecting its validity. Adams v. Adams, 211 Mass. 198, 97 N. E. 982; Savings Bank v. Weeks, supra.

be brought. This power is legislative, and not judicial.

American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 70, 55 L. ed. 82, 98, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 156, 55 L. ed. 155, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Missouri v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 496, 520, 50 L. ed. 572, 578, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 48 L. ed. 1067, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. 201 U. S. 359, 50 L. ed. 788, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473, affirming 98 Me. 268, 99 Am. St. Rep. 397, 56 Atl. 908; Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 137, 150, 22 L. ed. 331, 337; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 38 L. ed. 861, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 327, 10 L. ed. 177, 184; Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 34 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38, affirming 145 N. Y. 451, 40 N. E. 400; Saranac Land & Timber Co. v. Comptroller (Saranac Land & Timber Co. v. Roberts) 177 U. S. 318, 44 L. ed. 786, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. ed. 365; Jackson ex dem. Hart v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 7 L. ed. 679; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. ed. 737; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. ed. 190; Nelson v. Blinn, 197 Mass. 279, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 651, 125 Am. St. Rep. 364, 83 N. E. 889, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 147; Atty. Gen. v. Provident Inst. for Savings, 201 Mass. 23, 86 N. E. 912.

The fact that there may be a distribution after one year after the appointment of a receiver is not unreasonable, especially when taken in connection with the absence of the party for over fourteen years; nor is it unreasonable to provide that the time shall be reckoned from the date of the disappearance, rather than from the date of the right of the absentee to possession of any property in question. That has always been the rule in case of presumption of death after seven years' absence, and important rights are determined by it.

Loring v. Steineman, 1 Met. 204; George v. Clark, 186 Mass. 426, 71 N. E. 809; Butrick v. Tilton, 155 Mass. 461, 29 N. E. 1088; Marden v. Boston, 155 Mass. 359, 29 N. E. 588; Re Stockbridge, 145 Mass. 517, 14 N. E. 928; Bowditch v. Jordan, 131 Mass. 321; Kelly v. Drew, 12 Allen, 107, 90 Am. Dec. 138; King v. Fowler, 11 Pick. 302, 22 Am. Dec. 370.

All proceedings under the statute in question amount to due process of law.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 537, 28 L. ed. 232, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992; Ameri-
56 L. ed.

can Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 66, 55 L. ed. 82, 97, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140, 55 L. ed. 137, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1121; Nelson v. Blinn, 197 Mass. 279, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 651, 125 Am. St. Rep. 364, 83 N. E. 889, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 147.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition by the next of kin of an absentee for the distribution of her property in the hands of the receiver; the appointment of the receiver, the taking of the property into his hands, and the present petition all being under Massachusetts Revised Laws, chap. 144, and amendments to the same. The general scheme of the law is that, in case of a person disappearing from Massachusetts to parts unknown, leaving no known agent in the state, but having an interest in property there, anyone who would be entitled to administration may apply to the probate court for the appointment of a receiver. After due notice, a warrant to the sheriff to take possession of the property, and his return, a receiver may be appointed of the property scheduled in the sheriff's return, and the court is to find and record the date of the disappearance. By § 10, if the absentee does not appear and claim the property *within fourteen years after[6 the recorded date, his title is barred; and by § 11, if, after the fourteen years, the property has not been accounted for or paid over, it is to be distributed to those who would have taken it on the day fourteen years after the said date. By § 12, if the receiver is not appointed within thirteen years after said date, the time for distribution and for barring actions relative to the property shall be one year after the date of the appointment, instead of the fourteen years provided in §§ 11, 12.

On July 20, 1905, the plaintiff in error was appointed receiver of the property, of Mabel E. Allen, and the date of the disappearance of the latter was found and recorded as "within or prior to the year 1892." The present petition was filed on March 18, 1907. The property in question was an interest of the absentee under the residuary clause of the will of Jonathan Merry, allowed and proved on December 8, 1828. Long after the estate was settled, an administrator de bonis non was appointed in 1885, and in or about 1899 collected on account of French spoliation claims a sum in which Mabel Allen's share was $1,633 and $22. This, with accumulations from interest, is the fund in controversy. The probate court made a decree of distribution, which was affirmed by the supreme judicial court of the commonwealth. 197 Mass. 279, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 651, 125 Am. St. Rep. 364, 83 N. E. 889, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 147. The receiver, having duly set up that the above-mentioned §§ 10, 11, and 12 were contrary to the 14th Amendment, brought the case to this court.

The plaintiff in error does not deny that the provisions for the appointment of a receiver are valid. Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1121. But he argues that the attempt to bar the absentee's title and to distribute his property is void for want of sufficient notice and other safeguards, and because the time within which distribution may be made is arbitrary and unreasonable. There is reasonably careful provision for notice by publication before the appointment, and 7]the whole proceeding begins *with a seizure by the sheriff of the property mentioned in the original petition. American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 67, 55 L. ed. 82, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 175 Mass. 71, 75, 51 L.R.A. 433, 55 N. E. 812. So the question, put in the way most favorable for the plaintiff in error, is whether a statute of limitations that possibly may allow little more than one year is too short when the property is held in the quasi adverse hand of the receiver for that time (what the court would do and how it would interpret the statute if other property fell in after the receiver was appointed is not material in this case). We cannot doubt as to the answer. If the legislature thinks that a year is long enough to allow a party to recover his property from a third hand, and establishes that time in cases where he has not been heard of for fourteen years, and presumably is dead, it acts within its constitutional discretion. Now and then an extraordinary case may turn up, but constitutional law, like other mortal contrivances, has to take some chances, and in the great majority of instances, no doubt, justice will be done. See American Land Co. v. Zeiss, supra. Shorter time than one year has been upheld. Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140, 156, 55 L. ed. 137, 155, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. ed. 365. See Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. 201 U. S. 359, 369, 50 L. ed. 788, 791, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473.

Decree affirmed.

*UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err., [8
v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO SOUTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 8-15.)

Animals — importation from quarantined district — liability of connecting carrier.

A carrier does not transport, nor deliver or receive live stock for transportation, from a quarantined portion of a state, into another state, in violation of the prohibition of the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1264, chap. 1496, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1185), § 2, where, being a connecting carrier, it receives the live stock from the preceding carrier, at a point in a state other than the quarantined state, for delivery to a point in the same state. [For other cases, see Animals, 6-8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 464.]

Argued October 19, 1911. Decided October 30, 1911.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review a judgment quashing an indictment against a carrier for transporting or delivering, or receiving live stock for transportation, from a quarantined portion of one state, into another state. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George Hoadly argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. W. Goldsmith, Edward Colston, and Judson Harmon, filed a brief for defendant in error.

*Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the [11 opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, called herein defendant, was indicted for violations of the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1264, chap. 1496, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1185), entitled, "An Act to Enable the Secretary of Agriculture to Establish and Maintain Quarantine Districts, to Permit and Regulate the Movement of Cattle and Other Live Stock Therefrom, and for Other Purposes."

Defendant entered a plea of not guilty,

NOTE.—On the validity and construction of statutory regulations as to infected animals—see note to Grimes v. Eddy, 26 L.R.A. 638.

As to constitutionality of state legislation regulating the importation of infected animals—see note to Reid v. Colorado, 47 L. ed. U. S. 108.

but subsequently the court quashed the indictment, following the ruling in certain other cases, and this writ of error was sued out to determine the validity of the ruling.

The efficient words of the statute are in § 2 (presently to be given), and prohibit receiving stock for transportation or to transport it from a quarantined state into any other state or territory. A summary of the indictment is as follows:

The Secretary of Agriculture, in pursuance of the act of Congress, having determined the fact that a contagious and communicable disease, known as scabies, existed among the sheep in the state of Kentucky, as required by said act, promulgated an order and regulation establishing a quarantine in Kentucky, and gave public notice thereof, as required by the statute. And the indictment charges that he gave notice of the quarantine and of the rules and regulations established by him by sending printed copies of the same to defendant, and that the receipt of notice was acknowledged by the general manager.

There were three separate shipments (each of which is made a count in the indictment), of sheep from Kentucky, upon different dates, and the cars containing the sheep were delivered to the Cincinnati, New Orleans, & Texas Pacific Railway Company, and transported by it over its line of railroad to a point within the city of Cincinnati, *state of Ohio, and were delivered at such point to defendant, and by it conveyed over its line of railroad to the Union Stock Yards in Cincinnati, "being a place," as the indictment avers, "en route to the destination" of the shipments.

The cars in which the shipments were made did not have upon their sides, or at all, placards bearing the words "Dipped scabby sheep," or the words, "Exposed sheep for slaughter," as provided in the orders and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, nor did the waybills, conductors' manifests, memoranda, and bills of lading have written or stamped upon their face those words, as was also required by such orders and regulations.

Section 1 of the act of Congress authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to quarantine any state or territory, or any portion of any state or territory, when he shall determine the fact that there exists therein live stock affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, and of such quarantine he is directed to publish notice.

Section 2 forbids railroad companies and others engaged in transportation to "receive for transportation or transport . . . from the quarantined portion of any state or territory or the District of Columbia, into any other state or territory or the District of Columbia, any cattle or other live stock." The statute also forbids the delivery for transportation, or the driving on foot or transporting by private conveyance, of such stock "from a quarantined state or territory or the District of Columbia," or from any portion of either, "into any other state or territory or the District of Columbia." And these words are repeated in other sections as descriptive of the transportation to which the statute applies.

An offender against the statute is declared (§ 6) to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable by a fine or imprisonment, or by both.

The question in the case is, What did Congress intend *by the words we have[13 italicized? Did the defendant receive the sheep for transportation from Kentucky, the quarantined state, for delivery in a state, by receiving them in Ohio for delivery in Ohio?

The government urges an answer in the affirmative, and contends that not only an initial carrier, but a connecting carrier, though it receive the stock in a state other than the quarantined state (in the case at bar, Ohio), transports, within the meaning of the statute, stock "from" one state "into" another. The argument is that necessarily such connecting carrier is instrumental in the transportation of the stock from the place of shipment to its ultimate destination, and therefore within the reason and purpose of the law.

The contention is untenable. To receive a thing in Ohio is not receiving it in Kentucky, nor is transporting it in Ohio transporting it from Kentucky into Ohio. To sustain the indictment, therefore, we must disregard the plain and only direct signification of the words of the statute. Such extreme liberty with the words of a penal statute may not be taken. We are not unmindful that our function is to seek the intention of the lawmaker, and that illustrations may be found where the literal meaning of words has been extended beyond their absolute sense. But the general rule is that penal statutes must be strictly construed. It is a familiar rule and need not be illustrated. The words of the statute, certainly when they have a sensible meaning and a definite and unmistakable signification, as the words of the statute under review have, mark its extent. We do not mean to say that ambiguity in words may not be resolved by the clear purpose of the statute.

If, however, there be no ambiguity, the words of the statute are the measure of its meaning. If there be ambiguity for a character of the statute determines for a strict or liberal construction. A criminal statute 14] is strictly "construed. Courts are not inclined to make "constructive crimes." We therefore might have to decide against the indictment, even if there were more ambiguity in the statute under review than we find in it. It manifests care and a studied purpose to define the extent of the quarantine and of what shall constitute violations of it. Within its limits there shall be no delivery of stock for transportation beyond them "into any other state or territory" by public for private conveyance or by driving. There is no obscurity whatever. A sensible, definite meaning is expressed. There must be a delivery for or a receiving for transportation "from the quarantined portion of any state or territory . . . into any other state or territory. . . ." That reception and that transportation are the elements of the crime and must exist to constitute it. None of these elements are charged against the defendant. It did not receive the sheep for transportation in Kentucky, or transport them "from" Kentucky "into" Ohio. It received them in Ohio and transported them in Ohio; and the statute, thus construed, adapts the remedy to the mischief. In other words, if the breaking of quarantine is prevented, the purpose of the statute is fulfilled without subjecting to criminal accusation and penalties distant carriers, who, it may be, are ignorant of the existence of the quarantine; and ignorant they may be, for the statute (§ 1) requires the Secretary of Agriculture to give notice of the establishment of quarantine only to the "transportation companies doing business in or through" the quarantined state. It would be strange indeed if the statute intends to confound unwilful with wilful acts by uniting in criminality and penalties the companies to which no notice of quarantine is required to be given with those to which notice is required.

We do not, of course, mean to say that the movement of sheep in Ohio did not tend to spread the contagion, but it is certain there could have been no movement of 15]*them in Ohio if they had not been transported "from" Kentucky "into" Ohio.

In United States v. El Paso & N. E. R. Co. 178 Fed. 846, and in United States v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 181 Fed. 882, the same construction was given to the statute that we have given it. Also by the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit in St. Louis. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. United States, 188 Fed. 191. In United States v. Southern R. Co. (C. C. D. S. C.) 187 Fed. 209, a contrary ruling was made, and a connecting carrier which received stock outside of the limits of the quarantined state was held to be liable.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CONRAD A. PLYLER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 15-17.)

Forgery — of civil service vouchers — financial or property loss.

An actual financial or property loss need not be charged or proved in order to make out a case under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5418, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3666, of forging vouchers required upon examination by the Civil Service Commission of the United States, certifying to the character, physical capacity, etc., of the applicant, and presenting the same to the commission.

[Matters as to forgery, see Forgery, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 440.]

Argued October 19, 1911. Decided October 30, 1911.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of North Carolina to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for forging certain vouchers required by the Civil Service Commission, and for presenting the same to the commission. Reversed.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the case and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Holmes:

This is an indictment for forging vouchers required upon examination by the Civil Service Commission of the United States, certifying to the character, physical capacity, etc., of the applicant, the defendant, and for presenting the same to the commission. The district court held that the acts were not frauds against the United States, within the contemplation of Rev. Stat. § 5418, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3666, and discharged *the defendant.[17 The government excepted and brought the case to this court. It now must be regarded as established that "it is not essential to charge or prove an actual financial or property loss to make a case under the statute." The section covers this case. Haas v. Henkel, 216 U. S. 462, 480, 54 L. ed. 569, 577, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1112; Curley v. United States, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1; United States v. Bunting, 82 Fed. 883.

Judgment reversed.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA
v.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 17-20.)

Supreme Court — original jurisdiction — suit between states — motion for final decree.

The disposition of the authorities of the state of West Virginia to await the next regular session of the legislature, convening more than one year hence, before considering the matters left open by the Federal Supreme Court when determining the amount which such state should pay as its equitable share of the public debt of the original state of Virginia, which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state, does not furnish sufficient reason for granting a motion on behalf of the state of Virginia, that the court proceed to settle and determine all the questions left open by its decision.

[Original jurisdiction of Supreme Court, see Supreme Court of the United States, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 3, Original.]

Motion submitted October 10, 1911. Decided October 30, 1911.

MOTION on behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia that the court proceed to determine all questions left open by its decision when determining the amount which the state of West Virginia should pay as its equitable share of the public debt of the state of Virginia, which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state. Overruled without prejudice.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Samuel W. Williams, Attorney General of Virginia, for the motion.

Mr. William G. Conley, Attorney General of West Virginia, opposed.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a motion on behalf of the commonwealth of Virginia that the court proceed to determine all questions left open by the decision of March 6, 1911. 220 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 353, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330. The grounds of the motion are these: On April 20, 1911, the Virginia Debt Commission wrote to the governor of West Virginia, referring to the suggestion of a conference between the parties in the decision, and requested that he would take steps that would lead to such a conference at an early date. At that time the governor of West Virginia had called an extra session of the legislature upon another matter. The Constitution forbade the legislature, when so convened, entering upon any business except that stated in the call, but as there were twenty-six days between the call and the session that followed it, there was time for the governor to issue a further proclamation on the subject of the debt. The governor, in his message to the legislature, referred to the matter, and put, as questions to be considered, whether the appointment of the Virginia Debt Commission was enough to require West Virginia now "to take the initiative," and whether a commission should be appointed to meet the Virginia Commission. He also stated that if, without formal action of three fifths of the body under the Constitution, a majority should express to him the opinion that the legislature ought to be called into extraordinary session to consider the matter, he should deem it sufficient reason for a call. But it seems that he did not use his power of his own motion, or receive such an expression as induced him to use it, and the legislature does not meet in regular session until January, 1913. The commonwealth of Virginia concludes from these facts that there is no likelihood of a conference with any satisfactory results.

The attorney general of West Virginia answered that the members of the legislature convened in May, 1911, were elected before this cause had been argued, and under conditions that left them uncertain as to the wishes of their constituents; that the governor was of opinion that he could not constitutionally amend his proclamation so as to embody consideration of the debt, and that there is no one in West Virginia except the legislature that has power to deal with the matter. He then suggested a doubt whether the Virginia Debt Commission was empowered to deal with the case in its present phase, in view of the provision in the resolution creating it, that it should not negotiate except upon the basis that Virginia is bound only for the two thirds of the debt that she had provided for, and concluded that this court ought not to act before the West Virginia legislature, at its next regular session, can consider the case in the spirit anticipated by the opinion of the court.

With regard to the doubt implied by the governor of West Virginia whether it now is incumbent upon that state to take the initiative, and that suggested by its attorney general, whether the Virginia Debt Commission has the necessary power, we are of opinion that neither of them furnishes a just ground for delay. The conference suggested by the court is a conference in the cause. The body that directed the institution of the suit has taken the proper step on behalf of the plaintiff, and it is for the defendant to say whether it will leave the court to enter a decree irrespective of its assent, or will try to reach a result that the court will accept. The conference is not for an independent compromise out of court, but an attempt to settle a decree. The provision as to negotiations, in the Virginia resolution preceding the statute authorizing this suit, refers, we presume, to a settlement out of court, and has nothing to do with the conduct of the cause. If the parties in charge of the suit consent, this court is not likely to inquire very curiously into questions of power, if, on its part, it is satisfied that they have consented to a proper decree.

A question like the present should be disposed of without undue delay. But a state cannot be expected to move with the celerity of a private business man; it is 20]enough if *it proceeds, in the language of the English chancery, with all deliberate speed. Assuming, as we do, that the attorney general is correct in saying that only the legislature of the defendant state can act, we are of opinion that the time has not come for granting the present motion. If the authorities of West Virginia see fit to await the regular session of the legislature, that fact is not sufficient to prove that when the voice of the state is heard, it will proclaim unwillingness to make a rational effort for peace.

Motion overruled without prejudice.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff.
in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 20-27.)

Master and servant — safety-appliance act — application to car used in intrastate traffic.

1. Cars used in moving intrastate traffic on a railway which is a highway of interstate commerce are comprehended by the provisions of the safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3,174), as amended by the act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1,143), declaring, inter alia, that its provisions and requirements shall "apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, and in the territories and the District of Columbia, and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith."

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Crowin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, 36-40, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — power of Congress — safety appliances.

2. Congress had the power, under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, to require, as it did in the safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893, as amended by the act of March 2, 1903, that all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railway engaged in interstate commerce, shall be equipped with certain designated safety appliances, regardless of whether such vehicles are used in moving intrastate or interstate traffic.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 26-36, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 28.]

Argued and submitted March 9 and 10, 1911. Decided October 30, 1911.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Alabama to review a judgment in favor of the government in an action to recover penalties from a railway company for violations of the safety-appliance act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 164 Fed. 347.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry E. Colton, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Congress has power even to construct roads to be used in interstate commerce, and to grant charters authorizing the construction of highways for that purpose.

California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 529, 38 L. ed. 808, 810, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891.

This court has never hesitated to declare the power of the United States to remove obstructions of every character from every avenue of commerce that may directly or indirectly interfere with interstate traffic.

Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 13

How. 518, 14 L. ed. 249; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 565, 39 L. ed. 1093, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The United States may even prevent interference with a stream not navigable, but which is tributary to a navigable stream, in order to preserve the navigability of the stream to which it is tributary.

United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 690, 699, 43 L. ed. 1136, 1140, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

In order to facilitate and hasten the transportation of interstate commerce, the several states are not permitted to enact any law or adopt any regulation which will materially interfere with or impede interstate transportation.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 153, 41 L. ed. 107, 111, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Congress may enact laws regulating the qualifications of those actually engaged in the carrying of interstate commerce, although such persons may at times, in the pursuit of their vocation, be solely engaged in handling intrastate commerce.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 479, 480, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 513, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

State statutes relating to commerce have been held to be valid where they do not adversely affect, but aid, interstate commerce, or where they have no relationship thereto; but when such statutes have substantially affected interstate or foreign commerce adversely, they have been universally held to be invalid.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 698, 26 L. ed. 238, 240; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

Congress may pass laws remotely affecting interstate commerce.

United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 77, 78, 9 L. ed. 1004, 1006, 1007; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 194, 195, 6 L. ed. 23, 69, 70; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illi- 56 L. ed.

nois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 474, 54 L. ed. 280, 289, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 495, 52 L. ed. 297, 307, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

This act has been sustained by the lower Federal courts.

Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 93 C. C. A. 393, 168 Fed. 9; United States v. International & G. N. R. Co. 98 C. C. A. 392, 174 Fed. 638.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a civil action to recover penalties for the violation in specified instances of the safety-appliance acts of Congress. 27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174, 32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1143. The government prevailed in the district court, and the defendant sued out this direct writ of error.

Briefly stated, the case is this: The defendant, while operating a railroad which was "a part of a through highway" over which traffic was continually being moved from one state to another, hauled over a part of its railroad, during the month of February, 1907, five cars, the couplers upon which were defective and inoperative. Two of the cars were used at the time in moving interstate traffic, and the other three in moving intrastate traffic; but it *does not appear that the use of the[24 three was in connection with any car or cars used in interstate commerce. The defendant particularly objected to the assessment of any penalty for the hauling of the three cars, and insisted, first, that such a hauling in intrastate commerce although upon a railroad over which traffic was continually being moved from one state to another, was not within the prohibition of the safety appliance acts of Congress; and, second, that, if it was, those acts should be pronounced invalid, as being in excess of the power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution. But the objection was overruled (164 Fed. 347), and error is assigned upon that ruling.

The original act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), imposed upon every common carrier "engaged in interstate commerce by railroad" the duty of equipping all trains, locomotives, and cars used on its line of railroad in moving interstate traffic, with designated appliances calculated to promote the safety of that traffic and of the employees engaged in its movement; and the 2d section of that act made it unlawful for "any such common carrier" to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line of railroad any car "used in moving interstate traffic," not equipped with automatic couplers capable of being coupled and uncoupled without the necessity of a man going between the ends of the cars. The act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1143), amended the earlier one and enlarged its scope by declaring, inter alia, that its provisions and requirements should "apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, and in the territories and the District of Columbia, and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith." Both acts contained some minor exceptions, but they have no bearing here.

The real controversy is over the true significance of the words "on any railroad engaged" in the first clause of the amendatory provision. But for them the true test of the application of that clause to a locomotive, car, or similar vehicle would be, as it was under the original act, the use of the vehicle in moving interstate traffic. On the other hand, when they are given their natural signification, as presumptively they should be, the scope of the clause is such that the true test of its application is the use of the vehicle on a railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce, and not its use in moving interstate traffic. And so certain is this that we think there would be no contention to the contrary were it not for the presence in the amendatory provision of the third clause,—and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith." In this there is a suggestion that what precedes does not cover the entire field; but at most it is only a suggestion, and gives no warrant for disregarding the plain words, "on any railroad engaged" in the first clause. True, if they were rejected, the two clauses, in the instance of a train composed of many cars, some moving interstate traffic and others moving intrastate traffic, would, by their concurrent operation, bring the entire train within the statute. But it is not necessary to reject them to accomplish this result, for the first clause, with those words in it, does even more; that is to say, it embraces every train on a railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce, without regard to the class of traffic which the cars are moving. The two clauses are in no wise antagonistic, but, at most, only redundant; and we perceive no reason for believing that Congress intended that less than full effect should be given to the more comprehensive one, but, on the contrary, good reason for believing otherwise. As between the two opposing views, one rejecting the words "on any railroad engaged" in the first clause, and the other treating the third clause as redundant, the latter is to be preferred, first, because it is *in accord with the manifest purpose, shown throughout the amendatory act, to enlarge the scope of the earlier one and to make it more effective, and, second, because the words which it would be necessary to reject to give effect to the other view were not originally in the amendatory act, but were inserted in it by way of amendment while it was in process of adoption (Cong. Rec. 57th Cong., 1st Sess., vol. 35, pt. 7, p. 7300; Id. 2d Sess., vol. 36, pt. 3, p. 2268), thus making it certain that without them the act would not express the will of Congress.

For these reasons it must be held that the original act, as enlarged by the amendatory one, is intended to embrace all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce.

We come, then, to the question whether these acts are within the power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution, considering that they are not confined to vehicles used in moving interstate traffic, but embrace vehicles used in moving intrastate traffic. The answer to this question depends upon another, which is, Is there a real or substantial relation or connection between what is required by these acts in respect of vehicles used in moving intrastate traffic, and the object which the acts obviously are designed to attain; namely, the safety of interstate commerce and of those who are employed in its movement? Or, stating it in another way, Is there such a close or direct relation or connection between the two classes of traffic, when moving over the same railroad, as to make it certain that the safety of the interstate traffic and of those who are employed in its movement will be promoted in a real or substantial sense by applying the requirements of these acts to vehicles used in moving the traffic which is intrastate as well as to those used in moving that which is interstate? If the answer to this question, as doubly stated, be in the affirmative, then the principal question must be answered in the same way. And this is *so, not because Congress possesses any power to regulate intrastate commerce as such, but because its power to regulate interstate commerce is plenary, and competently may be exerted to secure the safety of the persons and property transported therein and of those who are employed in such transportation, no matter what may be the source of the dangers which threaten it. That is to say, it is no objection to such an exertion of this power that the dangers intended to be avoided arise, in whole or in part, out of matters connected with intrastate commerce.

Speaking only of railroads which are highways of both interstate and intrastate commerce, these things are of common knowledge: Both classes of traffic are at times carried in the same car, and when this is not the case, the cars in which they are carried are frequently commingled in the same train and in the switching and other movements at terminals. Cars are seldom set apart for exclusive use in moving either class of traffic, but generally are used interchangeably in moving both; and the situation is much the same with trainmen, switchmen, and like employees, for they usually, if not necessarily, have to do with both classes of traffic. Besides, the several trains on the same railroad are not independent in point of movement and safety, but are interdependent; for whatever brings delay or disaster to one, or results in disabling one of its operatives, is calculated to impede the progress and imperil the safety of other trains. And so the absence of appropriate safety appliances from any part of any train is a menace not only to that train, but to others.

These practical considerations make it plain, as we think, that the questions before stated must be answered in the affirmative.

Affirmed.

28] *JAMES W. FINLEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 28-31.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification of prisoners committing assaults.

Singling out convicts serving life sentences in a state prison as proper subjects for the imposition of the death penalty, as is done by Cal. Pen. Code, § 246, in case they shall, with malice aforethought, commit an assault upon the person of another with a deadly weapon or instrument, or by any means of force likely to produce great bodily injury, does not deny such life prisoners the equal protection of the laws. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 397-401, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 15.]

Argued and submitted October 26, 1911.
Decided November 6, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Sacramento County, in that state, imposing the death penalty upon a life convict committing a murderous assault. Affirmed.

See same case below, 153 Cal. 59, 94 Pac. 248.

Mr. H. G. W. Dinkelspiel submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. G. C. Ringolsky was on his brief:

While the law with reference to classification within the constitutional meaning is well settled, the application thereof gives rise to question.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356. 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co. 159 Fed. 994.

It is necessary to ascertain the reason and purpose of the statute, to determine its validity.

a. The rapid and beneficent advance of penal reform necessitates the conclusion that no trivial reason prompted or should be held to have prompted the statute.

Boies, Science of Penology, 119.

b. The legislature did not base the statute upon the ground that life termers are more dangerous than other prisoners.

People v. Finley, 153 Cal. 59, 94 Pac. 248, contra.

1. The term of imprisonment is determined by influences other than personal character.

Drahms, The Criminal, 364; Re Mallon, 16 Idaho, 737, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1123, 102 Pac. 374.

2. Life termers are not desperate because of the loss of all hope of freedom, since the parol law of California supplies ample relief.

3. Permanent loss of civil rights, as com-

Validity of statute classifying prisoners committing crimes for purpose of fixing punishment.

A statute providing that "any convict sentenced to imprisonment for life, who commits murder in the first degree, while such sentence remains in force against him, must, pared with a temporary loss thereof, does not make the life term more dangerous than his fellow convict.

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. P. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

56 L. ed.

c. A law predicated on length of term is unconstitutional.

Re Mallon, 16 Idaho, 737, 22 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1123, 102 Pac. 374; State v. Lewin, 53 Kan. 679, 37 Pac. 168.

d. The only possible reason for the enactment of the statute is a seeming lack of adequate punishment for life termers.

The classification necessary to support a statute must be based upon real differences in the situation, condition, and tendencies of things.

Ho Ah Kow v. Nunan, 5 Sawy. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 6,546; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Board of Education v. Alliance Assur. Co. 159 Fed. 994; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; State v. Miksicek, 225 Mo. 561, 135 Am. St. Rep. 597, 125 S. W. 506; State v. Mitchell, 97 Me. 73, 94 Am. St. Rep. 481, 53 Atl. 887; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 783; State v. Thomas, 138 Mo. 95, 39 S. W. 481; Murray v. Ramsey County, 81 Minn. 359, 51 L.R.A. 828, 83 Am. St. Rep. 379, 84 N. W. 103; Nichols v. Walter, 37 Minn. 264, 33 N. W. 800; People ex rel. McPike v. Van De Carr, 91 App.

Div. 20, 86 N. Y. Supp. 644; Jones v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 231 Ill. 308, 121 Am. St. Rep. 313, 83 N. E. 215; State v. Wright, 53 Or. 344, 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 349, 100 Pac. 296; State ex rel. Richards v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 435; Re Van Horne, 74 N. J. Eq. 600, 70 Atl. 986; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 52 L.R.A. 283, 80 Am. St. Rep. 176, 58 N. E. 1007; Allardt v. People, 197 Ill. 501, 64 N. E. 533; Phipps v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 133 Wis. 153, 113 N. W. 456; Johnson v. Milwaukee, 88 Wis. 383, 60 N. W. 270; Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 33 L.R.A. 589, 36 S. W. 697; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285.

a. The statute does not meet constitutional tests. There is no inherent difference between the life term and the middle-aged long term.

Report State Board Prison Directors, 1909-10, 69, and 185, 70, and 184.

b. Owing to the condition of the California law, certain prisoners are, with reference to immunity from punishment, in the same position as life termers.

Ex parte Morton, 132 Cal. 346, 64 Pac. 469.

c. The statute should be viewed from a broad position. It is unequal, special, discriminatory, and unconstitutional.

Messrs. C. C. Calhoun and James N. Sharp also submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Samuel T. Bush was on their brief.

on conviction, suffer death," was sustained in Williams v. State, 130 Ala. 31, 30 So. 336, as against the objection that it was class legislation. The court said: "The punishment imposed by the statute is the only one that could be effectually inflicted. Any less degree of punishment would amount to no punishment at all. This is sufficient to maintain and justify the classifications made by the statute. It is clear that the statute applies alike to all convicts, while under sentence to imprisonment for life, who commit murder in the first degree, whether the imprisonment is the result of a conviction for murder in the first degree or any other offense punished by imprisonment for life."

In two cases legislation classifying the punishment for an escape with reference to the original term has been declared unconstitutional.

The first of these cases is State v. Lewin, 53 Kan. 679, 37 Pac. 168, where the court had under consideration the constitutionality of a statute which, instead of measuring the punishment for an escape by the offense actually committed, required the court to obliterate the time served under the original sentence, and to reimpose the sentence given for the prior crime. The court said that under this enactment two men attempting or effecting an escape from the penitentiary on the same day in concert, under precisely the same circumstances and with exactly equal guilt, might receive wholly different punishment; and declared that the statute was open to the objection that it was not an impartial administration of justice, and did not afford the equal protection of the laws.

For the same reason, viz., that the character or nature of the offense committed is not the basis upon which the extent of the punishment is fixed, the court, in Re Mallon, 16 Idaho, 737, 22 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1123, 102 Pac. 374, held invalid as class legislation a statute which fixes the punishment for an escape by a state prisoner at a term "equal in length to the term he was serving at the time of such escape, said second term of imprisonment to commence from the time he would otherwise have been discharged from such prison."

On the general subject of enhancing the penalty for crimes when committed by habitual criminals or prior offenders, see notes to Re Miller, 34 L.R.A. 398; Com. v. McDermott, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 431; and McDonald v. Massachusetts, 45 L. ed. U. S. 542.

Mr. E. B. Power argued the cause, and, with Mr. U. S. Webb, Attorney General of California, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is for the state court to determine whether or not its statutes are valid under the state Constitution, and whether a person has received equal protection of the laws of the state in a regular administration of the criminal law.

Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 336, 36 L. ed. 457, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

The Constitution of the United States merely requires that all persons subjected to such legislation shall be treated alike, under like circumstances and conditions, both in the privileges conferred and in the liabilities imposed.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 71, 30 L. ed. 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Pace v. Alabama, 106 U. S. 585, 27 L. ed. 207, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 613, 79 Pac. 283.

Memorandum opinion, by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice McKenna:

Section 246 of the Penal Code of the state of California provides as follows: "Every person undergoing a life sentence in a state prison of this state, who, with malice aforethought, commits an assault upon the person of another with a deadly weapon or instrument, or by any means or force likely to produce great bodily injury, is punishable with death."

[31] *Plaintiff in error was indicted under this section, tried, found guilty, and the death penalty imposed. To the judgment of the supreme court of the state, affirming the sentence against him, he prosecutes this writ of error, and urges as ground thereof that § 246 is repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States in that it denies to him the equal protection of the laws, because it provides an exceptional punishment for life prisoners.

The supreme court sustained the law on the ground that there was a proper basis for classification between convicts serving life sentences in the state prison, as defendant was when he committed the crime for which he was indicted and found guilty, and convicts serving lesser terms.

It is elementary that the contention is to be tested by considering whether there is a basis for the classification made by the statute. Applying that test, we see no error in the ruling. As said by Mr. Justice Henshaw, delivering the opinion of the court, "The classification of the statute in question is not arbitrary, but is based upon valid reasons and distinctions." And pointing out the distinction between life prisoners and other convicts, he said that "the 'life termers,' as has been said, while within the prison walls, constitute a class by themselves,—a class recognized as such by penologists the world over. Their situation is legally different. Their civic death is perpetual." [153 Cal. 62, 94 Pac. 248.] Manifestly there could be no extension of the term of imprisonment as a punishment for crimes they might commit, and whatever other punishment should be imposed was for the legislature to determine. The power of classification which the lawmaking power possesses has been illustrated by many cases which need not be cited. They demonstrate that the legislature of California did not transcend its power in the enactment of § 246.

Judgment affirmed.

*T. O. HELM et al., Appts., [32
v.

J. H. ZARECOR et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 32-38.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — collusion — omitted parties.

1. If the parties before a Federal circuit court are properly aligned as plaintiffs and defendants, the suit may not be dismissed, under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 511), § 5, for collusion because necessary parties are omitted, either as plaintiff or defendant, whose presence would defeat the jurisdiction of the court. [For other cases, see Courts, 688-690, 761-769, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — sufficiency of plea to jurisdiction — collusive joinder.

2. A plea to the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, based upon the ground that the complainants had collusively made parties complainants and defendants for the purpose of showing the requisite diversity of citizenship, is insufficient in law if it does not specify what parties are alleged collusively to have been made.

NOTE.—As to conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and state courts—see notes to Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356, and J. I. Case Plow Works v. Finks, 26 C. C. A. 50.

As to diverse citizenship as ground for Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 249; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 298; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; McDonald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287; and Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

[For other cases, see Courts, 680-690; Pleading, 634-648, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — conflicting jurisdiction — suits with different objects.

3. The pendency in a state court of a suit in the nature of quo warranto, seeking a determination as to the persons who were the true and lawful members of the Board of Publication of the Cumberland Church after the alleged union with the Presbyterian Church, is not a bar to a suit in the Federal courts to enforce the alleged rights of the members of the united Church to control the said Board, and to have the benefit of the Board's property in its denominational work, regardless of the personnel of the Board.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1564, 1565, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — alignment of parties.

4. Neither the attitude of the alleged members of the Board of Publication of the Cumberland Church, incorporated merely as a convenient agency for the publishing work of such church, who believed the alleged union with the Presbyterian Church to have been consummated, nor the fact that it does not appear that such members have surrendered possession, requires that, when testing the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship, such corporation be aligned on the side of complainants in a suit to enforce the alleged rights of the members of the united Church to use and control the corporate agency and to have the benefit of the corporate property in its denominational work, as against defendants who repudiate the alleged union, and insist that the religious association which they represent is still the original Cumberland Church, continuing with all its separate powers unimpaired.

[For other cases, see Courts, 721-769, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 395.]

Submitted October 9, 1911. Decided November 6, 1911.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Tennessee to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit to enforce the alleged rights of members of the Presbyterian Church to use and control the Board of Publication of the Cumberland Church, and to have the benefit of the Board's property in its denominational work. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John M. Gaut and Alexander Pope Humphrey submitted the cause for appellants:

Where the complainants sue in a representative capacity as belonging to a class, members of that class who are not named as parties on the record are not parties to the suit.

Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 64, 29 L. ed. 330, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1163; Smith v. Swormstedt, 16 How. 288, 14 L. ed. 943; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Wire Drawers' & Die Makers' Unions, Nos. 1 & 3, 90 Fed. 606; McIntosh v. Pittsburg, 112 Fed. 707; Watson v. National Life & T. Co. 88 C. C. A. 380, 162 Fed. 11; San Francisco Gas & Electric Co. v. San Francisco, 164 Fed. 886; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L. ed. 666; United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 480, 37 L. ed. 529, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

There was no legal propriety in aligning the corporate defendant with the individual complainants.

Delaware & H. Co. v. Albany & S. R. Co. 213 U. S. 435, 53 L. ed. 862, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Venner v. Great Northern R. Co. 209 U. S. 25, 52 L. ed. 666, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 49 L. ed. 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355.

Mr. W. C. Caldwell submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. Frank Slemons and W. B. Lamb were on the brief:

Failure on the part of complainants to pray for relief against the corporation is significant, and of itself shows that the corporation should be treated as a complainant in the case.

Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 29, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

Where the jurisdiction of the United States court is dependent alone upon diversity of citizenship, the parties should be arranged with reference to the real controversy presented by the pleadings, and not according to the arbitrary arrangement of the pleader.

First Nat. Bank v. Radford Trust Co. 26 C. C. A. 1, 47 U. S. App. 692, 80 Fed. 573; Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Venner v. Great Northern R. Co. 209 U. S. 25, 52 L. ed. 666, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Stewart v. Mitchell, 172 Fed. 907; Stevens v. Smartt, 172 Fed. 466.

It is allowable, when necessary, under the practice in courts of equity, for a few of a large class of persons with a common interest to plead, and for a few of a like opposing class to be impleaded. But the rule is one of necessity, and the privilege of the pleader must be exercised fairly, and not collusively.

Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 107, et seq.; Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 238 et seq.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question presented by this appeal is with respect to the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

The bill, as amended, was brought by certain ministers, ruling elders, and laymen of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, citizens of states other 33]than *Tennessee, suing for themselves and for all the members of said Church, against individuals, citizens of Tennessee, described as representing not only their own interests, but also those of all the members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and "The Board of Publication of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church," a Tennessee corporation.

The controversy disclosed by the bill arose from the proceedings, taken in 1906, to effect the union of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, both voluntary religious associations, and relates to the property and management of the defendant corporation. The Board of Publication had been incorporated in 1860, under the direction of the General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, for the purpose of conducting its publishing work, and had acquired valuable property consisting of a publishing house and its equipment in Nashville, Tennessee. The original members of the corporation were the committee of publication of the Church, and their successors under the charter were appointed by the General Assembly, to which was committed its regulation and control.

The bill alleged that the two Churches had been legally united, and that, as a result, the property in question was held by the corporation in trust "for the entire reunited denomination;" and, further, that "the Board and its officers and managers were advised and believed, and still believe," that the union was valid, that "thereby the Board of Publication became a corporation and institution of the reunited Church," and that the managers of the corporation "could do nothing else than recognize the General Assembly of the united Church by reporting to it and otherwise recognizing its authority." It was also alleged that a minority of the members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and 34]of its ministers, who *were opposed to the consolidation, repudiated it and effected a separate organization under the former name, and that thereupon a body assuming to be the General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church declared the offices of all the members of the Board of Publication vacant, and proceeded to elect 56 L. ed.

persons of their own organization to fill the supposed vacancies. These persons had made demand for the possession of the corporate property, claiming to be the rightful members of the corporation, and that its property was held in trust for the religious association by whose General Assembly they had been elected. It was stated that this claim cast a cloud upon the equitable title to the property. After reviewing at length the history of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, the action of the representatives of the two Churches which culminated in the alleged consolidation, and the subsequent antagonistic proceedings, the bill prayed for decree that the property in question is held in trust by the corporation for the benefit of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, or the members thereof, and that the members of the Board elected by the reunited Church are the true and lawful members of said Board; that the defendants be enjoined from interfering with the control and management of the corporation by those members, or with the corporate property, and that, if mistaken with respect to the relief prayed for as to the persons who constitute the Board and have the right of management, the court should decree that "whoever may be the members of the Board, and whoever may be entitled to such management, they shall manage the corporation and administer the trust for the use and benefit of said reunited Church."

The defendants filed two pleas to the jurisdiction. In the first plea it was alleged that the complainants had collusively made and omitted both complainants and defendants for the purpose of showing the requisite diversity *of citizenship. The[35 second plea set up the pendency of a suit in the chancery court of Davidson county, Tennessee, in the nature of a quo warranto proceeding, brought on the relation of J. H. Zarecor and other individual defendants herein, to oust those named as defendants in that suit from membership in the Board of Publication, and from the control and management of its property, and to install the relators in their stead. These pleas the court below overruled. As to the ground of the first plea, that certain persons had been omitted as parties, the court held that § 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137 (18 Stat. at L. 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 511), relates solely to the collusive making of the actual parties plaintiff, or the collusive joinder of the actual parties defendant, and that if the parties before the court are properly aligned as plaintiffs and defendants, it is not a ground of dismissal, in so far as the jurisdictional question is concerned, that necessary parties are omitted, either as plaintiffs or defendants, whose presence would defeat the jurisdiction of the court. While the omission of indispensable parties, if any, said the court, would be a ground for dismissal on the merits if they were not joined, or, if joined, and on proper alignment their citizenship was such as to defeat the Federal jurisdiction, a plea to the jurisdiction would then lie, their omission in the meantime could not defeat the jurisdiction of the court in a controversy between the parties who were before the court. And so far as the first plea was based upon the ground that the complainants had collusively made parties plaintiffs and defendants for the purpose of showing a diversity of citizenship, the plea was held to be insufficient in law, in that it did not specify what parties are alleged to have been collusively made. The second plea was overruled because it did not reach the whole case made by the bill, as the bill did not merely ask a determination as to the persons who were the true and lawful members of the corporation, which was the only [36]*matter involved in the quo warranto proceeding in the state court, but sought a decree declaring the trust upon which the property of the corporation is held, and the uses and purposes for which it is to be administered, whoever might be found to be the true and lawful members of the corporation. We need add nothing to what was said by the court below upon these points.

But the court of its own motion dismissed the bill for want of jurisdiction, for the reason that the defendant corporation, the Board of Publication, was not antagonistic to the complainants, and should be aligned upon the same side of the controversy with the complainants; and that therefore, upon such alignment, some of the defendants and one of the complainants being citizens of the same state, the circuit court had no jurisdiction. In this we think the court erred.

It was, undoubtedly, the duty of the court in determining whether there was the requisite diversity of citizenship, to arrange the parties with respect to the actual controversy, looking beyond the formal arrangement made by the bill. Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9. What, then, is the controversy?

The suit cannot properly be said to be brought to enforce a right inhering in the Board of Publication, or by the complainants as members of that corporation. And the question whether the Board may be assigned a place on the other side of the controversy is not to be answered by applying the rule which governs suits by shareholders on behalf of a corporation, or by beneficiaries in the right of a trustee. Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 461, 26 L. ed. 827, 832; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 587, 49 L. ed. 606, 609, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289, 299, 25 L. ed. 932, 936. The complainants sue for themselves and on behalf of all members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, *and the ob- [37]ject of their suit is to enforce the right of the members of that Church as it was constituted after the alleged union. The Board of Publication was incorporated merely as a convenient agency for the publishing work of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The charter clearly discloses its character. The representative assembly of the Church was to fill the vacancies in its membership and control its conduct. It was an incorporated committee of publication, which lost none of its essential qualities as an agent of denominational service when it became an artificial person, clothed with power to hold property in a corporate capacity. The language of the charter is that "said Board shall be subject to the regulation and control of the General Assembly of said Church under its past and future actions on the subject; the number of the Board may be increased or diminished and all vacancies filled as the said authority has or may direct; the General Assembly of the Church shall also have power to locate the Board and change the same at pleasure; and also at any time to alter the name of said corporation or dissolve the same, but not so as to prejudice the rights of others." The contention of the complaints is that, after the union, the Cumberland Presbyterian Church continued in the united Church, and that the General Assembly of the latter succeeded to the authority formerly possessed by the General Assembly of the separate denomination. The defendants are sued as the representatives of the religious association which insists that it is still the original Cumberland Presbyterian Church, continuing with all its separate powers unimpaired.

It is thus evident that the controversy transcends the rivalries of those claiming membership in the Board and the assertion of rights inhering in that corporation itself. It embraces the fundamental question of the rights of these religious associations, said to be represented by the respective parties, to use and control the corporate agency, and *to have the benefit in their denominational work of the corporate property. Viewed in this aspect, the relation of the corporation to the controversy is not to be determined by the attitude of alleged members of the Board, who believed the union to have been consummated, nor by the fact that it does not appear that they have surrendered possession. These do not suffice to identify the interest of the corporation with that of the complainants. And the individual defendants actually joined it with themselves in filing the pleas to the jurisdiction, and in this way, it may be assumed, they sought to emphasize the contention that the Board was under the exclusive direction of the separate association to which they adhered, and should be employed solely for its benefit.

To align the corporation itself with the complainants is virtually to decide the merits in their favor. The Board is simply a title holder (Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 720, 20 L. ed. 666, 672),—an instrumentality, the mastery of which is in dispute. But, as it is the holder of the legal title, the complainants seek a decree defining, in the light of the proceedings alleged in the bill, the equitable obligations arising from the nature and purpose of the corporate organization.

We are therefore of opinion that the corporation was properly made a party defendant, and that the court erred in dismissing the bill for want of jurisdiction.

Decree reversed.

39]*TROY BANK OF TROY, INDIANA, and John Beidenkopf, Appts.,
v.

G. A. WHITEHEAD & COMPANY (Incorporated).

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 39-41.)

Federal courts — amount in dispute — aggregation to make amount.

A suit by the assignees, respectively, of two promissory notes given for the unpaid portion of the purchase price of real property, to enforce the vendor's lien, which, under the local law, passed to the assignees as a common security for the payment of both notes, without any priority of right in either assignee, involves the amount essential to sustain the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, under the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), § 1, if the interests of such assignees collectively equal the jurisdictional amount. [For other cases, see Courts, 908-911, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of Federal courts as affected by the amount in dispute—see notes to Rich v. Bray, 2 L.R.A. 225; Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 75; Tennent-Stribling Shoe Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 459; and O. J. Lewis Mercantile Co. v. Klepner, 100 C. C. A. 288.

56 L. ed.

[No. 566.]

Submitted October 9, 1911. Decided November 6, 1911.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree dismissing, for lack of the jurisdictional amount, a suit to enforce a vendor's lien. Reversed.

See same case below, 184 Fed. 932.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George W. Jolly submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. B. F. Huffman was on the brief:

The equitable lien is a separate and distinct right, and may be enforced in equity when the legal remedy may be lost.

Belknap v. Gleason, 27 Am. Dec. 721 and note, 11 Conn. 160; Bizzell v. Nix, 60 Ala. 281, 31 Am. Rep. 38.

The courts of the United States enforce grantors' and vendors' liens if in harmony with the jurisprudence of the state in which the action is brought.

Fisher v. Shropshire, 147 U. S. 133, 139, 37 L. ed. 109, 113, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Slide & S. Gold Mines v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 509, 516, 38 L. ed. 802, 805, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

It is now and has been the law of Kentucky from the foundation of the state, that a vendor of land has an equitable lien on the land for the unpaid purchase money, and that the vendee becomes a trustee for his vendor therefor.

Voorhies v. Instone, 3 Bibb, 354.

In Kentucky the vendor's lien has never been considered as personal to the vendor, and has always been held to be assignable; and the assignee of the debt may enforce the lien in his own name.

Ripperdon v. Cozine, 8 B. Mon. 466; Burrus v. Roulhac, 2 Bush, 39; Duncan v. Louisville, 13 Bush, 378, 26 Am. Rep. 201; Bradley v. Curtis, 79 Ky. 327.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court is sustainable upon several grounds: first, because the complainants seek to enforce a lien in excess of the jurisdictional value or amount, in which they have a common, undivided interest, their right being derived from a common source, created by the same contract; they claim under the same title, created at the same time, by the same instrument; and, secondly, they are the sole beneficiaries under a trust created in their favor for a sum above the jurisdictional limit, growing out of the same transaction, and created by the same instrument.

Shields v. Thomas, 18 How. 253, 15 L. ed. 368; Rodd v. Heartt, 17 Wall. 354, 21 L. ed. 627; New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 51, 52, 36 L. ed. 66, 68, 69, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112, 25 L. ed. 782; The Mamie (Parcher v. Cuddy) 105 U. S. 773, 26 L. ed. 937; Freeman v. Dawson, 110 U. S. 264, 28 L. ed. 141, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Estes v. Gunter, 121 U. S. 183, 30 L. ed. 884, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Texas R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 361, 41 L. ed. 191, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Overby v. Gordon, 177 U. S. 214, 44 L. ed. 741, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; McDaniel v. Traylor, 196 U. S. 415, 49 L. ed. 533, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Morgan v. Adams, 211 U. S. 627, 53 L. ed. 362, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

Mr. Ben D. Ringo submitted the cause for appellee:

The case at bar is properly to be assigned to that class of cases wherein the claims of complainants are separate and distinct in their nature, and they cannot be joined to give jurisdiction, although the state statute under which the right of action arises might allow a joinder of the causes.

Rich v. Bray, 2 L.R.A. 225, 37 Fed. 273; Seaver v. Bigelow, 5 Wall. 208, 18 L. ed. 595; Hawley v. Fairbanks (Hawley v. United States) 108 U. S. 543, 27 L. ed. 820, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846; Schwed v. Smith, 106 U. S. 188, 27 L. ed. 156, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Gibson v. Schufeldt, 122 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 1083, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1066; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Waterman, 106 U. S. 265, 27 L. ed. 115, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Clay v. Field, 138 U. S. 464, 34 L. ed. 1044, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 206, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Hassall v. Wilcox, 115 U. S. 598, 29 L. ed. 504, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Eaton v. Hoge, 72 C. C. A. 74, 141 Fed. 64, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 489; Holt v. Bergevin, 60 Fed. 1; Stemmler v. McNeill, 102 Fed. 660; Putney v. Whitmire, 66 Fed. 385; Hagge v. Kansas City S. R. Co. 104 Fed. 391; Busey v. Smith, 67 Fed. 13; Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 72, 33 U. S. App. 438, 72 Fed. 209.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit in equity wherein the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked on the ground of diverse citizenship, and the sole question now presented for dethe matter in dispute exceeded $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs, as required by the act of August 13, 1888, chap. 866, § 1, 25 Stat. at L. 433, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508. The facts are these:

Upon a sale of land situated in the western district of Kentucky, the vendor lawfully reserved a vendor's lien for the unpaid portion of the purchase price, for which he took two promissory notes of $1,200 each, payable in one and two years. Shortly thereafter the notes were assigned to the present appellants, one to each; and by the law of Kentucky the vendor's lien passed to the assignees, as a common security for the payment of both notes, without any priority of right in either assignee. After the maturity of the notes, both remaining wholly unpaid, the assignees jointly brought this suit to enforce the vendor's lien. They and their assignor were citizens of Indiana, and the defendant, who acquired the land with notice of the lien, was a citizen of Kentucky.

By a demurrer to the bill the defendant challenged the jurisdiction of the circuit court, upon the ground that the matter in dispute was not of the requisite jurisdictional value; and the court, being of opinion that such value was not to be measured by the extent to which the plaintiffs collectively were seeking to enforce the lien as a common security, but by the extent to which each was interested in its enforcement, sustained the demurrer and dismissed the bill for want of jurisdiction. 184 Fed. 932. The plaintiffs then appealed directly to this court, and the circuit court appropriately certified the question of jurisdiction. Act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 5, 26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488.

When two or more plaintiffs, having separate and distinct demands, unite for convenience and economy in a single suit, it is essential that the demand of each be of the requisite jurisdictional amount; but when several plaintiffs unite to enforce a single title or right, in which they have a common and undivided interest, it is enough if their interests collectively equal the jurisdictional amount. Shields v. Thomas, 17 How. 3, 15 L. ed. 93; Rodd v. Heartt, 17 Wall. 354, 21 L. ed. 627; Davies v. Corbin, 112 U. S. 36, 40, 28 L. ed. 627, 629, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 1083, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1066; New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 373, 37 L. ed. 206, 208, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 647, 39 L. ed. 289, 296, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams,

180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

The present suit is of the latter class. Its controlling object—that which makes it cognizable in equity—is the enforcement of the vendor's lien, which is a single thing or entity in which the plaintiffs have a common and undivided interest, and which neither can enforce in the absence of the other. Thus, while their claims under the notes were separate and distinct, their claim under the vendor's lien was single and undivided, and the lien was sought to be enforced as a common security for the payment of both notes.

It follows that the Circuit Court erred in holding that it was without jurisdiction; and its decree is accordingly reversed, with directions to overrule the demurrer to the bill, and to take such further proceedings in the case as may be appropriate.

42]*INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,

v.

HARRY J. DIFFENBAUGH, Edmund D. Bigelow, and Charles W. Lonsdale, as Officers and Members of the Board of Trade of Kansas City, et al. (No. 285.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,

v.

F. H. PEAVEY & COMPANY, Omaha Elevator Company, and Midland Elevator Company. (No. 286.)

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

F. H. PEAVEY & COMPANY, Omaha Elevator Company, and Midland Elevator Company. (No. 287.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 42-50.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — restricting allowances to shipper.

1. The Interstate Commerce Commission cannot make the allowance by a carrier to the owner of an elevator of the cost of the elevation in transit of grain in which he has an interest, conditional upon his failure to use the opportunity afforded during the process of elevation to treat, weigh, inspect, or mix the grain, since such allowance cannot be deemed an undue preference or discrimination forbidden by the act to regulate commerce, in view of the provisions of the amendatory act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149), recognizing that services in transportation, rendered by an owner of the property transported, are to be paid for by the carrier. [For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission; Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — restricting allowances to shipper.

2. Confining the allowance by a carrier to the owner of an elevator for elevating grain in transit in which he has an interest, to such grain as shall be reshipped within ten days, is within the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission; Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 285, 286, and 287.]

Argued October 13 and 18, 1911. Decided November 13, 1911.

A PPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of orders by the Interstate Commerce Commission, forbidding the allowance by a carrier to the owner of an elevator for elevating grain in transit in which he has an interest, unless such grain is reshipped within ten days, and unless the elevator owner refrains from using the opportunity presented to treat the grain during the process of elevation. Modified, and, as modified, affirmed.

See same case below, 176 Fed. 409.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. P. J. Farrell also argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The contention of the appellees is equivalent to saying that certain provisions of the law may be seized upon and used, regardless of other provisions of the same law, to justify inequalities in the treatment accorded by carriers to shippers, while this court, in speaking of the interstate commerce law as a whole, has repeatedly said that it was enacted for the purpose of preventing such inequalities.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 277, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 690, 37 L. ed. 896, 902, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 197, 40 L. ed. 935, 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 219, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 506, 42 L. ed. 243, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 260, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 172, 42 L. ed. 414, 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 439, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 477, 54 L. ed. 280, 290, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 253, 55 L. ed. 448, 457, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

No circumstance or condition which does not pertain directly to the carriage of the traffic,—not even competition between different carriers,—can be shown for the purpose of proving that the different shipments are not transported by the carriers under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, because § 2 of the act to regulate commerce, as construed by this court, applies only to the matter of the carriage, and does not include competition between rival routes.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 260, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 166, 167, 42 L. ed. 414, 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 253, 55 L. ed. 448, 457, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Messrs. F. C. Dillard and Henry W. Clark, filed a brief for the United Pacific Railroad Company.

Messrs. Frank Hagerman and John Barton Payne argued the cause, and, with Mr. M. B. Koon, filed a brief for appellees:

Without legislation the power existed for the railroad company to pay for the service rendered by the elevator operator.

Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. 26 Iowa, 200; People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 5 L.R.A. 559, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670, 143 U. S. 517, 534, 544, 36 L. ed. 247, 252, 255, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

Millions are invested in these various properties and arrangements, and Congress was aware of the fact when it amended the law. Granted that it has the constitutional power to do so, would that body intend or propose to destroy such valuable property rights without some kind of express language to that effect?

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 211, 40 L. ed. 940, 944, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 21 C. C. A. 103, 43 U. S. App. 308, 74 Fed. 823.

A discrimination is forbidden by the interstate commerce act. That which is expressly allowed thereby cannot be an undue or illegal discrimination. Such only are forbidden.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 264, 276, 277, 36 L. ed. 699, 700, 703, 704, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 37.

The essence of all the decisions is that the positions of the respective persons between whom difference in treatment is made by the carriers must be compared with each other; there must be found to exist substantial identity of situation (or, as to these cases, of service and benefit to the carrier), accompanied by irregularity and partiality of treatment by the carrier, which results in undue advantage to one, or undue disadvantage to another, in order to constitute unjust discrimination.

Traffic Bureau, Merchants' Exch. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 326; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 283, 36 L. ed. 706, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844.

Many of the differences herein relied upon as making "substantially different circumstances and conditions" have been discussed by the courts and held sufficient to bring the discrimination outside the statute.

Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 118 Fed. 169, 61 C. C. A. 405, 125 Fed. 445; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. State, 73 Ark. 373, 84 S. W. 502; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Hug-gins, 64 Ark. 432, 43 S. W. 145.

The elevator payments were condemned on the ground that they are not "open to all." Can it be seriously argued, then, because the nonelevator operator has not seen fit to invest a dollar in the facility which the carrier demands, these payments are not open to him?

Evershed v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 134; Nicholson v. Great Western R. Co. 1 Nev. & Macn. 121.

Competition which is real and substantial, and exercises a potential influence at a certain point, brings into play the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions provided by the statute; and the consequent right to deal differently with localities is not destroyed by the mere fact that incidentally a preference or discrimination results.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Clyde S. S. Co. 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. ed. 729, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 21 C. C. A. 103, 43 U. S. App. 308, 74 Fed. 803; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 141 Fed. 1003.

Elevator services are necessary to the carriers.

People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 5 L.R.A. 559, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670, 143 U. S. 517, 533, 36 L. ed. 247, 251, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

Messrs. Frank Hagerman and John Barton Payne also filed a separate brief for appellees:

A common carrier engaged in commerce among the several states is bound to perform the full transportation service, and may engage another, whether shipper or not, to perform for it what it otherwise would be obliged to perform, and make compensation therefor, limited only by the rule that only a reasonable compensation may be paid for the services; and the Interstate Commerce Commission has no power to prohibit payment for such services.

Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Re Allowances to Elevators, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 309, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 86; Re Party Rate Tickets, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 110; Atchison v. Missouri P. R. 56 L. ed.

Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 114; Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 206; American Nat. Live Stock Asso. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 36; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 99; Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 173; Re Unlawful Rates, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 135; Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 213; Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. 84 Miss. 339, 66 L.R.A. 453, 37 So. 134; Cowan v. Bond, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 542, 39 Fed. 54; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 50; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 276, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Denaby Main Colliery Co. v. Mansfield, S. & L. R. Co. L. R. 11 App. Cas. 97; 6 Nev. & Macn. 133, 55 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 181, 54 L. T. N. S. 1, 50 J. P. 340; Pidcock v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. 9 Nev. & Macn. 45; Tennant v. C. R. Co. 10 Nev. & Macn. 194; Hutchinson, Carr. § 538.

Messrs. Robert Dunlap and Gardiner Lathrop filed a brief for the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railway Company:

It is obligatory upon the shipper to remove his goods when the carriage has terminated, or whenever he terminates the same by taking possession of his goods, and he is obliged to be diligent in removing his goods and relieving the cars of the carriers, especially as to carload shipments.

2 Rorer, Railroads, pp. 1286, 1290; Alabama & T. River R. Co. v. Kidd, 35 Ala. 218.

Railway companies are not required to make personal delivery of freight at the warehouse or place of business of consignees.

2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 701.

With reference to bulk freight in carload lots, such as grain, it is well settled that delivery thereof is usually made by placing the car at such a convenient place upon the tracks of the railway company as will permit the shipper to unload the same. The duty of loading and unloading such freight is upon the shipper, as it is merely the duty, in the first instance, to place the same in the custody of the carrier for transportation, and at the terminus to come and take such freight away.

Schumacher v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 207 Ill. 212, 69 N. E. 825; Gregg v. Illinois C. R. Co. 147 Ill. 550, 37 Am. St. Rep. 238, 35 N. E. 543; Vaughn v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 27 R. I. 235, 61 Atl. 695; 2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 711; 4 Elliott, Railroads, 2d ed. § 1521, pp. 247, 248; 2 Rorer, Railroads, pp. 1233, 1282.

When the car of grain is set at the elevator or at such point on the tracks of the railway company that it may be conveniently unloaded, the transportation is ended, a delivery has been effected, and it is the duty of the shipper to unload or take away such freight. The statute is not to be construed as repealing the common law.

State v. Shapiro, 29 R. I. 133, 69 Atl. 340; Langlois v. Dunn Worsted Mills, 25 R. I. 645, 57 Atl. 910.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are appeals from injunctions issued upon bills brought by the appellees against the enforcement of two orders made by the Interstate Commerce Commission. 176 Fed. 409. The stages by which the Commission came to its present conclusion, against its earlier view, will be found reported in 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 309, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 85, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 315. See 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 510, 551. In the circuit court these cases were tried upon the same evidence and they raise the same question; but as the Peavey suit presents that question in its initial and simplest form, we will state the facts of that case first.

The Union Pacific Railroad, after passing through a grain country, has its eastern termini at Omaha and Kansas City, on the Missouri river. Much the greater part, nine tenths, more or less, of the grain gathered and carried by the road, passes beyond the termini, especially to points farther east. During the season the Union Pacific needs all its cars to collect the grain, and therefore wants to get them back as quickly as possible from the end of its line. Furthermore, the shipments eastward are made more profitably in heavier loads than can be collected from the local stations. For these reasons the Union Pacific sought to prevent its own cars being carried beyond the termini, over connecting lines, and to have the grain shifted to other cars. To make the change it is commercially necessary to pass the grain through an elevator, where also it is weighed,—another necessary step in the transportation. See 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 318. An additional consideration is that Omaha and Kansas City are great grain markets, where 44]there are sales largely in excess *of local needs, and this also requires the grain to pass through elevators at these points. If the Union Pacific could not use these instruments of transfer, it could not compete with other roads that have through lines from the grain fields across the Missouri river to the East. See 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 327.

Acting on these motives, the railroad company, in 1899, made a contract in good faith with Peavey, under which he built an elevator at Council Bluffs, on the other side of the river from Omaha. He was to receive not exceeding 1½ cents per hundred pounds for the first ten years, and 1 cent for the next ten, for grain transferred through his elevator. Later another elevator was brought into the arrangement, now with Peavey & Company, a corporation. Peavey & Company, is a large dealer in grain, and receives the same allowance for its own grain that it receives for that of others. It is important to remark that in no case is any additional charge made to the shipper for the elevator service. In 1904 the Interstate Commerce Commission investigated the matter and upheld the contract, including the allowance for Peavey & Company's own grain. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 309.

The Commission also made a report to Congress, and after further investigation, notwithstanding the fact that the incidental advantages to grain owners from such allowances had been made apparent, Congress passed the act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, 34 Stat. at L. 584, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149. By this it was provided in § 1, amending the earlier statute, that "the term 'transportation' shall include . . . all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof, and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration, or icing, storage, and handling of property transported; and it shall be the duty of every carrier subject to the provisions of this act to *provide[45 and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor, and to establish through routes," etc. By § 2 the carrier was required to state separately in its schedules all terminal charges and all privileges of facilities granted or allowed, and by § 4, "If the owner of property transported under this act directly or indirectly renders any service connected with such transportation, or furnishes any instrumentality used therein, the charge and allowance therefor shall be no more than is just and reasonable, and the Commission may, after hearing on a complaint, determine what is a reasonable charge as the maximum to be paid by the carrier or carriers for the service so rendered, or for the use of the instrumentality so furnished." Thus, Congress clearly recognized that services such as those rendered by Peavey & Company, were services in transportation, and were to be paid for notwithstanding the possibility that some advantage might be gained as a result. Meantime other elevators had sprung up, and in 1906 the Union Pacific extended the allowance made to Peavey & Company, to all elevators in Omaha, Council Bluffs, and Kansas City.

But the Interstate Commerce Commission had begun to change its view upon further reflection. In 1907, upon rehearing, it cut down the allowance to Peavey & Company, to $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent, estimating that to be the actual cost, and being of opinion that to allow any profit would be in effect to permit a rebate. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 85. The order made required the railroad company to desist from paying more than $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent per hundred pounds, for service rendered in the transfer or elevation of grain at Council Bluffs or Kansas City, to anyone interested in the buying, selling, or shipment of grain at those places, especially naming the appellees. This is one of the orders complained of. The chief object of complaint, however, is an order made in the following year, on June 29, 1908. In that the Commission took the last 46] step, and ordered the Union Pacific to desist from paying any allowance to Peavey & Company, on grain in which they have any interest that is not reshipped from their elevators within ten days, or that has been mixed, treated, weighed, or inspected in any of their elevators at the above-named points. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 315.

The ground on which the payment to owners of grain finally was held to be a rebate had been considered from the beginning, and, as we have said, had been brought to the mind of Congress. It is that when the owners of the elevators own the grain put into them, they have the opportunity to perform other services to the grain in the way of treatment, or cleaning, clipping, and mixing the grain, which, although not included under the term "elevation," or paid for by the railroad, it is an advantage to them to be able to perform at the same time. This advantage is thought to create an undue preference and unjust discrimination. Of course, the opportunities for fraud are adverted to, but the ground of the decision is that even an honest payment of the bare cost of elevating grain in transit gives an undue advantage if the elevator owner also owns the grain. As was pointed out by the court below, the final order is confined to grain that has been treated, weighed, inspected, or mixed.

We agree with the court below that this 56 L. ed.

decision is erroneous in its conception of the grounds on which, under the statute, an advantage may be pronounced undue, and in its assumption that Congress has left the matter open by merely permissive words. The principle as to advantages is recognized in Penn Ref. Co. v. Western New York & P. R. Co. 208 U. S. 208, 221, 52 L. ed. 456, 462, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268. The law does not attempt to equalize fortune, opportunities, or abilities. On the contrary, the act of Congress in terms contemplates that if the carrier receives services from an owner of property transported, or uses instrumentalities furnished by the latter, he shall pay for them. That is *taken for granted in § 15; the only re-47 striction being that he shall pay no more than is reasonable, and the only permissive element being that the Commission may determine the maximum in case there is complaint (or now, upon its own motion. Act of June 18, 1910, chap. 309, § 12, 36 Stat. at L. 539, 553). As the carrier is required to furnish this part of the transportation upon request, he could not be required to do it at his own expense, and there is nothing to prevent his hiring the instrumentality instead of owning it. In this case there is no complaint that the rate out of which the allowance is made is unreasonable, and it is admitted that $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent barely would pay the cost of the service rendered, without any reasonable profit to Peavey & Company, for the work. See Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

In the Diffenbaugh Case the order of the Commission bore the same date, June 29, 1908, as that against Peavey & Company, and the Union Pacific. It was directed against the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad Company and other competitors of the Union Pacific, and forbade their paying any sum as compensation for service rendered in the elevation of grain at Kansas City, Missouri, and other Missouri river points upon their lines. Competition, which was an element in the motives of the Union Pacific, led these other roads to make a similar arrangement. Probably, being through lines, they would not object to the Commission's order if that to the Union Pacific could be sustained. The opinion of Mr. Commissioner Prouty in this case takes somewhat different ground from that on which the orders in the Peavey Case are based. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 317. See 15 Inters. Com. Rep. 90, 93. See also H. Gund & Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 364. Especially it throws doubt upon the allowance being properly a transfer allowance at this present day. As the contract with Peavey & Company, purports to be only for grain transferred, it is not necessary to consider 48]*whether elevation could be allowed for as practically necessary under modern conditions, even if the grain did not go on. For the purpose of this case, so much of the order as meets the above-mentioned doubt by confining payments to grain reshipped within ten days seems proper enough, and not open to review on the matter of fact. But when the grain has been treated, the prohibition of an allowance is universal, and therefore the question that we have answered is raised by the record; the question, that is, of the power of the Commission to prohibit such allowances to grain owners in general terms. In this order it was stated expressly that the purpose of the Commission was to prohibit and stop the payment of the elevator allowances everywhere. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 510, 551.

The Union Pacific made the allowances in question to elevators at its termini; it had no motive to make them anywhere else. The competitors of the Union Pacific concerned in the Diffenbaugh Case were compelled by competition to make the same allowance at Missouri river points, but they also make it nowhere else. The Traffic Bureau, Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, complained to the Commission that the result was a discrimination against St. Louis of $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent per 100 pounds. But the principle of the decision is that the allowance to elevators upon their own grain is to be stopped everywhere unless they are prevented from using the opportunity for treating their grain. Therefore this question of preference between cities does not need to be discussed. But, as remarked below, the Union Pacific could not be complained of on this ground (176 Fed. 424), and it would be impossible to deny the same right to competing roads, merely because, as the result of the conditions, one city would gain and another lose. (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209).

Although the order cutting down the allowance to *Peavey & Company to the estimated cost may have been influenced by erroneous views touching the powers of the Commission and the elements proper for consideration (see Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678), we are of opinion that no sufficient reason appears for disturbing that. The Commission has decided what compensation is reasonable, and we infer that Peavey & Company would be content under the circumstances to render the service for $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent per hundred pounds rather than give it up.

The jurisdiction in the Diffenbaugh Case was doubted, although the Commission did not press the point, as it wishes a final decision. We are content to leave that matter on the statement of the court below. 176 Fed. 416, 417. The plaintiffs are affected by the order, and it is just that they should have a chance to be heard, although not parties before the Commission.

The result is that the decree of the Circuit Court must be affirmed in its main point, but that the Commission's order of 1907, diminishing the allowance to $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent, and so much of the Peavey order of 1908 as confines allowances to grain reshipped within ten days, should be allowed to stand.

Decree of Circuit Court modified and affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the opinion of the court.

The Commission did not hold that elevation may not properly be furnished by a railroad, or be allowed for to a shipper, but held that "such elevation must be charged for at what it is reasonably worth," and without discrimination. And I understand elevation to mean "the transfer of the grain from the car of the inbound carrier, through an elevator, to the car of the outhound carrier," within a *giv-[50 en period. "In such elevation," Mr. Commissioner Harlan said, and his language I adopt, "there is nothing either preferential or discriminatory, whether done in an elevator operated by the carrier, or in an elevator operated for it by the owner;" but "any allowance by the carrier to the owner of an elevator on grain belonging to him that has been weighed, inspected, cleaned, mixed, or otherwise treated in the process of elevation, is unlawful. As a facility for the convenience of the carrier, free elevation is unobjectionable; but when the owner is permitted to and does use the elevation as a transit privilege for himself, by means of which to secure commercial advantages on his own grain, the result is an unlawful preference and discrimination."

The conclusion is not a misconstruction of the statute. Transportation simply is the business of the railroad company. Weighing, inspecting, cleaning, and mixing, that is, raising the quality of the grain to suit the demand of the market, is the business of the grain dealer or others, and the two businesses are not to be confounded, and it was not, I think, the purpose of the statute to confound them. The statute makes the term "transportation" include "all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage;" and it is only when the owner of property renders services "connected with such transportation, or furnishes any instrumentality used therein," that he may be compensated by the railroad. What goes beyond that transcends the statute, and becomes, as the Commission held, a discrimination.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Hughes concurs in this dissent.

51] *ISOBEL H. LENMAN, Appt.,

v.

THOMAS R. JONES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 51-54.)

Specific performance — defense — ignorance of purchaser's identity.

1. Specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property will not be refused, in the absence of fraud, because the vendor was not informed as to the identity of the person for whom the purchase was made, where she knew that the person named in the contract as the vendee was not the real purchaser, and suffered no loss thereby.

[For other cases, see Specific Performance, IV., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Specific performance — defense — mistake.

2. The belief of the vendor when signing a contract for the sale of real property, that it merely gave an option, is no defense to a suit for specific performance.

[For other cases, see Specific Performance, IV. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — variance — assignment or purchase.

3. An allegation in a suit for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property, that the vendee sold all her rights under the contract to complainant, is supported by a contract by which the vendee agreed to sell the land to complainant, and by a deed to him, purporting to be from both vendor and vendee, but signed only by the latter, reciting the transactions on which it is founded.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XIII. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — objection not raised below — parties.

4. An objection that the vendee in a contract for the sale of real property is not made a party to a suit for specific performance by a person to whom she afterwards contracted to sell the land is not available to defeat the suit,—especially when first raised on appeal, since such vendee had no

NOTE.—Specific performance as affected by vendor's ignorance of race or character of purchaser—see note to Cole v. Hunter Tract Improv. Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 125.

As to what is sufficient memorandum under statute of frauds—see note to Barry v. Coombe, 7 L. ed. U. S. 295.

56 L. ed.

real interest in the suit, and the vendor was put in no danger by the decree.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j. 10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — statute of frauds — sufficiency of writing.

5. Formal absurdities in a written contract for the sale of land do not make the contract insufficient under the statute of frauds, where it leaves no doubt as to who was the purchaser, who the seller, what the land, or what the terms.

[For other cases, see Contracts, I. e, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 19.]

Argued October 27, 1911. Decided November 13, 1911.

A PPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 7.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A court of equity will not as a matter of course decree specific performance of a contract in writing for the sale of real estate. If not satisfied that the plaintiff is morally as well as legally entitled to relief, it will remit him to a court of law.

Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 565, 19 L. ed. 503; Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224-236, 36 L. ed. 414-419, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Equity will often refuse to decree specific performance of a contract at the suit of one party where it would also refuse to rescind it at the suit of another.

Clark v. Reeder, 158 U. S. 505-531, 39 L. ed. 1070-1079, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849; Story, Eq. Jur. § 769.

A misrepresentation as to the party who is buying or selling is fatal, without regard to the respective characters of the real and the pretended party.

New York Brokerage Co. v. Wharton, 143 Iowa, 66, 119 N. W. 969; Ellsworth v. Randall, 78 Iowa, 141, 16 Am. St. Rep. 425, 42 N. W. 629; Rodliff v. Dallinger, 141 Mass. 1, 55 Am. Rep. 439, 4 N. E. 805; Fox v. Tabel, 66 Conn. 397, 34 Atl. 101.

Even where a plaintiff in a suit in equity has acted in good faith, he cannot claim in one capacity in his bill, and recover in another capacity on the evidence.

Crocket v. Lee, 7 Wheat. 522, 527, 5 L. ed. 513, 514; Sheehy v. Mandeville, 7 Cranch, 208, 216, 3 L. ed. 317, 320; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. ed. 388; Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 56, 14 L. ed. 592, 598; Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Washington) 10 Wall. 299, 303, 19 L. ed. 894, 895; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. ed. 566; Wilson v. Haley Live Stock Co. 153 U. S. 39, 47, 38 L. ed. 627, 631, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 536, 54 L. ed. 868, 872, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

The objection of want of parties may be made here for the first time, and may be made by the court if the parties do not make it.

Coiron v. Millaudon, 19 How. 113, 15 L. ed. 575; Hoe v. Wilson, 9 Wall. 501, 19 L. ed. 762; Slacum v. Pomery, 6 Cranch, 221, 3 L. ed. 205; Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Washington) 10 Wall. 299, 303, 19 L. ed. 894, 895; Cragin v. Lovell, 109 U. S. 194, 200, 27 L. ed. 903, 905, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Barth v. Clise, 12 Wall. 400, 403, 20 L. ed. 393, 394.

In such a case as this the immediate vendee or vendees must be made party to a bill for specific performance by the last vendee against the original vendor.

McCarthy v. Couch, 37 Minn. 124, 33 N. W. 777; Simms v. Lide, 94 Ga. 553, 21 S. E. 220; Lord v. Underdunk, 1 Sandf. Ch. 48; Ward v. Ledbetter, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 496; Hoover v. Donally, 3 Hen. & M. 316; Vanmeeter v. Williams, 1 J. J. Marsh. 561.

In order to obtain a specific performance in equity, the note in writing must be sufficient to maintain an action at law.

Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. 640, 650, 7 L. ed. 295, 300.

Parol evidence is inadmissible when the transaction is one covered by the statute of frauds.

Mead v. White (Mead v. Winslow) 53 Wash. 638, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1197, 132 Am. St. Rep. 1092, 102 Pac. 753; Osborn v. Phelps, 19 Conn. 70, 48 Am. Dec. 133; Lipscomb v. Watrous, 3 App. D. C. 6.

It is true that, as a general rule, where two courts below have decided questions of fact in the same way, this court will adopt their conclusion. But that rule has many exceptions.

Beyer v. LeFevre, 186 U. S. 119, 46 L. ed. 1082, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; Darlington v. Turner, 202 U. S. 220, 50 L. ed. 1003, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and Hugh H. Obeare argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

It is only where the claim of the complainant under a legal, valid contract is met by some valid, opposing equity that the court's discretion is called into existence.

Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. § 1404; King v.

Hamilton, 4 Pet. 328, 7 L. ed. 875; Godwin v. Collins, 4 Houst. (Del.) 28; Popplein v. Foley, 61 Md. 381; Union P. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 163 U. S. 564, 600, 41 L. ed. 265, 278, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173.

Specific performance is granted under the principles of equitable conversion.

Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 368, 372, 1161, 1406.

The courts of equity act in favor of all persons claiming by assignment under the parties, independent of that privity of contract generally indispensable at law.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 368; Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 557, 571, 19 L. ed. 501, 505; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 125, 126; Meyer v. Mitchell, 75 Ala. 480; Worthington v. Lee, 61 Md. 535; Bissell v. Heyward, 96 U. S. 580-586, 24 L. ed. 678-680; Ewins v. Gordon, 49 N. H. 463; Hunt v. Hayt, 10 Colo. 282, 15 Pac. 410; Houé v. Dexter, 9 Mich. 246; Robinson v. Perry, 21 Ga. 183, 68 Am. Dec. 455; Fuller v. Bradley, 160 Ill. 55, 43 N. E. 732; Melton v. Smith, 65 Mo. 320; Pomeroy v. Fullerton, 113 Mo. 458, 21 S. W. 19; Randolph v. Wheeler, 182 Mo. 155, 81 S. W. 419; Harriman v. Tynedale, 184 Mass. 539, 69 N. E. 353; Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 783, 1040, 1056, 1057a; Currier v. Howard, 14 Gray, 513; Griffith v. Stewart, 31 App. D. C. 29, affirmed in 217 U. S. 323, 54 L. ed. 782, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528, 19 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 639.

It would be practically destructive of this branch of equity jurisdiction in all cases if the law were that one of the parties could defeat it simply by claiming that he thought the agreement, though a perfect and a complete instrument, binding upon both parties, was merely an option.

No variance is deemed to be material unless it be of a character to mislead the opposing party in maintaining his action of defense on the merits.

Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 476, 41 L. ed. 233, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Nash v. Towne, 5 Wall. 689, 18 L. ed. 527; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Cumberland, 176 U. S. 238, 44 L. ed. 451, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Campbell v. Bowles, 30 Gratt. 656; Burt v. C. Gotzian & Co. 43 C. C. A. 59, 102 Fed. 944.

A conveyance by the original vendee to A is, in legal effect, and for every purpose, an assignment of the contract between himself and his own vendor.

Buchannon v. Upshaw, 1 How. 56, 11 L. ed. 46; Stratton v. California Land & Timber Co. 86 Cal. 353, 24 Pac. 1065; Meyer v. Mitchell, 75 Ala. 480; Worthington v. Lee, 61 Md. 535; Currier v. Howard, 14 Gray, 513; Hunt v. Hayt, 10 Colo. 282, 15 Pac. 410; Robinson v. Perry, 21 Ga. 183, 68 Am. Dec. 455; Randolph v. Wheeler, 182

Mo. 155, 81 S. W. 419; Harriman v. Tynedale, 184 Mass. 539, 69 N. E. 353.

An assignment of errors cannot be availed of to import questions into a case which the record does not show were raised and passed on by the court below.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 575, 40 L. ed. 540, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 131, 132, 49 L. ed. 415, 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200.

The vendee is not a necessary party to a suit by the assignee against the vendor for specific performance.

Miller v. Whittier, 32 Me. 203; Betton v. Williams, 4 Fla. 11.

And the converse, that, in an action by the vendee against the assignee or grantee of the vendor, the vendor himself is not a necessary party, has been held in Noonan v. Orton, 4 Wis. 336; Topeka Water Supply Co. v. Root, 56 Kan. 187, 42 Pac. 715; Van Dyke v. Cole, 81 Vt. 379, 70 Atl. 593, 1103.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, 52]affirming a decree of the supreme *court for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land. 33 App. D. C. 7. The appellant was the owner of the land by inheritance, subject to the dower of her mother, who has died pending this cause. After some previous offers, Early & Lampton, real estate brokers in Washington, understanding that the defendant would take $200,000, prepared a document which the defendant, after some consultation with others, signed. So far as material it is as follows:

Office of Early & Lampton,
Real Estate and Loan Brokers,
615 14th Street, N. W.

Washington, D. C., May 2d, 1905.

Received of Fannie E. Wilhoite a deposit of one hundred ($100) dollars, to be applied to part payment of purchase of sublots 4, 5, 6, and 7, square 222, known as the Lenman Building, sold her for two hundred thousand dollars net on following terms [with details as to payment, title, time, etc.].

Early & Lampton,
Agents for Fannie E. Wilhoite.

Confirmed, ratified, and approved:

Isobel H. Lenman (Owner).

Fannie E. Wilhoite.

Fannie E. Wilhoite (Purchaser).

Per E. & L.

figurehead used by the brokers, and to have played merely a formal part.

The next day Mrs. Wilhoite signed an instrument in similar form, acknowledging the receipt of $500 from the appellee, part payment for the same land, sold to him for $213,250, cash, the purchaser to make full settlement within five days from date. The terms varied from those in the first paper, by which $150,000, payable in three years, was to be secured by deed of trust. But there is no trouble on that score, as the appellee simply is trying to hold the appellant to her own terms. Mrs. Wilhoite subsequently executed a deed to the appellee, although it never was acknowledged or recorded. Demand and tender have been made, but the appellant has refused and refuses to perform, and the appellee brought this bill.

*We will deal with the grounds for [53 the refusal in the order in which they were presented. In the first place it was said that the conduct of the appellee and those under whom he claims precludes him from equitable relief. This needs no discussion. Even if it were true, as suggested, but not found or proved, that when the bargain with the defendant was made, the appellee, Jones, was behind the brokers, and a trust company of which he was president was behind him, and that the defendant was not informed of the facts, she could not complain. It is apparent from her own testimony that she knew that Mrs. Wilhoite was only a figurehead, and the most that can be contended is that she thought that another person, not the appellee, most probably was the real man. It does not matter that she did. She suffered no loss, and, moreover, Mr. Jones and his company were under no obligation to disclose their interest, in the absence of fraud, which there is not the slightest ground to suggest. It also is urged that the defendant, when she signed the instrument, thought that it merely gave an option. This is an immaterial afterthought. If she did not know what she was doing, she had only herself to thank, but no even one-sided mistake is proved.

Some slight support for the preceding objection is sought also in the second ground upon which it is argued that the court erred. The bill alleges that Mrs. Wilhoite sold to the plaintiff, the appellee, all her rights under her contract with the appellant, and it now is urged that Jones was not an assignee, but a subpurchaser, and cannot recover on the allegations of the bill as they stand. There is a suggestion, as little warranted as those that we have mentioned, that the form of the bill also manifests bad faith. But the argument is mainly on the technical point that the proofs fail to sustain the allegations. We do not see the failure. When Mrs. Wilhoite contracted to sell the land, she contracted to transfer all the rights she got 54]* by her contract with the owners of the land. As she, in popular legal language, became the equitable owner by her contract, she made the appellee the equitable owner by her contract with him,—that is, she gave him the right to insist in her place that the legal owner should give up the legal estate upon fulfilment of the conditions agreed. The deed from Mrs. Wilhoite, although purporting to be made by Miss Lenman and her, reciting the transactions on which it is founded, would be sufficient to satisfy the allegations of the bill in the strictest sense. True, it purports to convey the land, but thereby it conveys all of Mrs. Wilhoite's rights in and to the land. It was executed by Mrs. Wilhoite in aid of the enforcement of Miss Lenman's agreement, and therefore is not to be read as conditional upon the signature of Miss Lenman. See Buchannon v. Upshaw, 1 How. 56, 11 L. ed. 46.

Mrs. Wilhoite seems to have been a
56 L. ed.

The foregoing considerations afford an answer to the third objection, that Mrs. Wilhoite is not made a party to the suit, in view of the fact that it was not taken in the pleadings, or, so far as appears, before the argument in the court of appeals. Mrs. Wilhoite has no real interest, and it is clear that the appellant is put in no danger by the decree. The point is urged as an afterthought, and no end of justice would be served by allowing it to prevail.

Finally it is said that the instrument sued upon does not satisfy the statute of frauds. D. C. Code, § 1117 [31 Stat. at L. 1367, chap. 854]. This is a desperate contention, like the rest. There are certain formal absurdities in the document, but it leaves no doubt in the mind of either lawyer or layman as to who was purchaser, who seller, what the land, or what the terms. Upon the whole case, without further discussion, we are of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to prevail.

Decree affirmed.

55] *KALEM COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

HARPER BROTHERS. Marc Klaw, Abraham Erlanger, and Henry L. Wallace.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 55-63.)

Copyright — dramatization — moving pictures.

1. The public exhibition of moving pictures of the incidents of a copyrighted book constitutes an infringement of the exclusive right given to the author by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4952, as amended by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1106, chap. 565, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406), to dramatize his work.

Copyright — contributory infringement — moving picture films.

2. The makers of moving picture films of the incidents of a copyrighted book, who sell the same with a view to their use for dramatic reproduction, infringe the exclusive right given to the author by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4952, as amended by the act of March 3, 1891, to dramatize his work.

Copyright — power of Congress — moving pictures.

3. Construing the exclusive right given to authors by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4952, as amended by the act of March 3, 1891, to dramatize their works, as extending to the public exhibition of moving pictures of the incidents of a copyrighted work, does not render the statute invalid, as exceeding the power given to Congress by U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, to secure to authors for a limited time the exclusive right to their writings.

[No. 26.]

Argued October 31 and November 1, 1911.

Decided November 13, 1911.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, enjoining the infringement of the copyright in a book by the public exhibition of moving pictures of its incidents. Affirmed.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 429, 169 Fed. 61.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John W. Griggs and Drury W. Cooper argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Copyright does not monopolize the intellectual conception, but only the form of expression adopted by the author.

Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 86, 43 L. ed. 904, 906, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 209 U. S. 1, 16, 17, 52 L. ed. 655, 661, 662, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 628; Stowe v. Thomas, 2 Wall. Jr. 547, Fed. Cas. No. 13,514; Baker v. Selden, 101 U. S. 99, 25 L. ed. 841; Johnson v. Donaldson, 18 Blatchf. 287, 3 Fed. 22; Perris v. Hexamer, 99 U. S. 674, 676, 25 L. ed. 308, 309; Bohbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 347, 52 L. ed. 1086, 1092, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2331; Parton v. Prang, 3 Cliff. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 10,784; Bennett v. Carr, 37 C. C. A. 453, 96 Fed. 213.

A moving-picture film, whether made by a modern rapid-fire camera or by the ancient and laborious process of taking, or drawing, and collating pictures of objects in successive positions, is a picture.

Edison v. Lubin, 58 C. C. A. 604, 122 Fed. 240; American Mutoscope & Biograph Co. v. Edison Mfg. Co. 137 Fed. 262; United States v. Berst, 175 Fed. 121.

The courts have had occasion to investigate the history of this art, and have found that old and new ways of producing the pictures did not show different results in the respect stated.

Edison v. American Mutoscope Co. 52 C. C. A. 546, 114 Fed. 926.

A corollary of the general rule that excludes our pictures from the charge of infringement is, that a person may utilize the ideas portrayed in a copyrighted publication, provided he bestows upon his own writings such skill and labor as to produce an original result.

Folsom v. Marsh, 2 Story, 115, Fed. Cas. No. 4,901; Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Asso. 209 U. S. 20, 52 L. ed. 663, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 501; Morris v. Wright, L. R. 5 Ch. 279, 22 L. T. N. S. 78, 18 Week. Rep. 327; West Pub. Co. v. Lawyers' Co-op. Pub. Co. 25 L.R.A. 441, 64 Fed. 360, 35 L.R.A. 400, 25 C. C. A. 648, 51 U. S. App. 216, 79 Fed. 756; Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law-book Co. 130 Fed. 639, 85 C. C. A. 677, 157 Fed. 1003.

Our contention that the copyright on the book is not infringed by the making and publication of pictures of the characters, actions, and scenes described, seems to find full support in the decisions upon the relation borne by phonograph records and perforated records for automatic musical instruments to copyrighted musical compositions.

Kennedy v. McTammany, 33 Fed. 584; White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 77 C. C. A. 368, 147 Fed. 226, 209 U. S. 1, 52 L. ed. 655, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 628; Boosey v. Wright [1900] 1 Ch. 122, 69 L. J. Ch. N. S. 66, 48 Week. Rep. 228, 81 L. T. N. S. 571, 16 Times L. R. 82; Stern v. Rosey, 17 App. D. C. 562.

These pictures constitute in the highest, most artistic sense, "the personal reaction of an individual upon nature" (Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co. 188 U. S. 250, 47 L. ed. 462, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298).

They do not fulfil the definition of a copy—"that which will provide a substitute for the whole or a substantial part of the original book" (Macgillivray, Copyright, p. 97).

That it was not intended by the Congress that a photograph could be an infringement upon a copyrighted book or drama is clear from the care exercised in framing the statute to distinguish the former from both of the latter. Now, since the plain line of demarcation has been thus preserved by the lawmakers, it is open to the courts to divert or overstep it by holding the picture, however used, to be a book, or a drama, simply because both are forms of writing, or because the picture is exhibited in a place of dramatic entertainment? The question carries its own answer.
56 L. ed.

Littleton v. Oliver Ditson Co. 62 Fed. 597, 15 C. C. A. 61, 33 U. S. App. 114, 67 Fed. 905; Wood v. Abbott, 5 Blatchf. 325, Fed. Cas. No. 17,938; Stowe v. Thomas, 2 Wall. Jr. 547, Fed. Cas. No. 13,514; Hills & Co. v. Austrich, 120 Fed. 862.

The exhibition of the pictures arranged upon a film which is, during all the time of its use, a part of a machine, is not an infringement of the book copyright.

White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 77 C. C. A. 368, 147 Fed. 227, 209 U. S. 1, 52 L. ed. 655, 659, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 628; Stern v. Rosey, 17 App. D. C. 562.

Such exhibition of the pictures is not a public "performance" or representation in violation of the dramatic copyright act.

Drone, Copyright, pp. 587-589; Russell v. Smith, 12 Q. B. 236, 17 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 225, 12 Jur. 723; Brackett, Theatrical Law, p. 54; Lee v. Simpson, 3 C. B. 871, 4 Dowl. & L. 666, 16 L. J. C. P. N. S. 105, 11 Jur. 127; Day v. Simpson, 18 C. B. N. S. 680, 34 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 149, 11 Jur. N. S. 487, 12 L. T. N. S. 386, 13 Week. Rep. 748.

Similarities in the plots and scenic similarities are only material upon the question of the way the copy is taken; and, in the absence of copying the dialogue, those elements do not constitute infringement.

Scholz v. Amasis, Law Times, May 19, 1909; Tate v. Fullbrook [1908] 1 K. B. 821, 77 L. J. K. B. N. S. 577, 98 L. T. N. S. 106, 24 Times L. R. 347, 52 Sol. Jo. 279; Chatterton v. Cave. L. R. 3 App. Cas. 483, 47 L. J. C. P. N. S. 545, 38 L. T. N. S. 397, 26 Week. Rep. 498; Hanfstaengl v. Baines [1895] A. C. 20.

The defendant's film of pictures is not a "dramatic composition," and its exhibition has none of the attributes of the drama, save that it is a spectacle that attracts patronage at an admission fee. But that is true of a circus, of an exhibition of legerdemain, of a dance in costume, accompanied by a series of poses, or of a purely mechanical arrangement simulating a river, into which a person falls from a bridge. All of these cases the courts have distinguished from dramatic performances.

Harris v. Com. 81 Va. 240, 59 Am. Rep. 666; Jacko v. State, 22 Ala. 73; Fuller v. Bemis, 50 Fed. 926; Carte v. Duff, 23 Blatchf. 347, 25 Fed. 183; Serrana v. Jefferson, 33 Fed. 347.

Were the question less clear than it is, upon the facts, we would rely with confidence upon the repeated decisions of this court, that the copyright statutes are to be construed strictly, and not stretched by resort to equitable considerations.

Banks v. Manchester, 128 U. S. 244, 32 L. ed. 425, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 268, 44 L. ed. 156, 158, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Higgins v. Keuffel, 140 U. S. 428, 35 L. ed. 470, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 33 L. ed. 76, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 26, 32 L. ed. 837, 842, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409.

In any event, defendant is not an infringer, direct or contributory.

Russell v. Briant, 8 C. B. 848, 19 L. J. C. P. N. S. 33, 14 Jur. 201; Harper v. Shoppell, 23 Blatchf. 431, 26 Fed. 519; Canda v. Michigan Malleable Iron Co. 61 C. C. A. 194, 124 Fed. 486.

If the statute be construed to prohibit the making or the exhibition in theaters of the pictures, it is unconstitutional.

Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53, 58, 28 L. ed. 349, 351, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 94, 25 L. ed. 550, 551; Higgins v. Keuffel, 140 U. S. 428, 431, 35 L. ed. 470, 471, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 86, 43 L. ed. 904, 906, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 676, 681, 8 L. ed. 1086, 1088; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 188, 6 L. ed. 23, 68; American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 291, 52 L. ed. 214, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595.

If an act of Congress admits of two interpretations, one of which brings it within and the other presses it beyond the constitutional authority of Congress, it will become our duty to adopt the former construction, because the presumption never ought to be indulged that Congress meant to exercise or usurp any unconstitutional authority unless that conclusion is forced upon the court by language altogether unambiguous.

United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 75, 9 L. ed. 1004, 1005; Grenada County v. Brogden, 112 U. S. 261, 28 L. ed. 704, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 235, 30 L. ed. 173, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038.

Mr. David Gerber argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees Klaw and Erlanger:

Appellant is a contributing infringer.

Harper v. Shoppell, 28 Fed. 613.

A public representation of a substantial part of complainants' copyrighted book is a violation of their exclusive right to dramatize the novel, and of their sole liberty of publicly performing or representing it, or causing it to be performed or used by others.

Daly v. Palmer, 6 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 3,552; Daly v. Webster, 4 C. C. A. 10, 1 U. S. App. 573, 56 Fed. 483; Drone, Copyright, pp. 588, 590-596, 627-629, 634; Lee v. Simpson, 3 C. B. 881, 4 Dowl. & L. 666, 16 L. J. C. P. N. S. 105, 11 Jur. 127; Turner v. Robinson, 10 Ir. Ch. Rep. 121, 510; 2 Morgan, Literature, ¶ 294, p. 287, ¶ 313, p. 334, p. 680, § 459; Brackett, Theatrical Law, §§ 50-55, 99, 100; Wandell, Theater, pp. 448, 503; Macgillivray, Copyright, pp. 276, 277; American Mutoscope & Biograph Co. v. Edison Mfg. Co. 137 Fed. 262; Bracken v. Rosenthal, 151 Fed. 136.

It is somewhat late in the day to contend that the statute is unconstitutional because a stage representation of a dramatic composition is not a copy of the "writing" of the author.

Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53, 28 L. ed. 349, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279.

Unless the copyright statute is broad enough to cover any adaptation which contains the plot or theme of the story, it is wholly ineffective.

Dam v. Kirk La Shelle Co. — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 99 C. C. A. 392, 175 Fed. 902, 20 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1173.

The statute must be read in the light of the intention of Congress to protect this intangible right as a reward of the inventive genius that has produced the work.

American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284-299, 52 L. ed. 208-217, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595.

Mr. John Larkin argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee Harper & Brothers:

Circumlocution and method did not save the defendant in Turner v. Robinson, 10 Ir. Ch. Rep. 121, 510.

The following are the leading authorities supporting the complainants' claim to the protection of the court:

Daly v. Palmer, 6 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 3,552; Daly v. Webster, 4 C. C. A. 10, 1 U. S. App. 573, 56 Fed. 483.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree restraining an alleged infringement of the copyright upon the late General Lew Wallace's book "Ben Hur." 94 C. C. A. 429, 169 Fed. 61. The case was heard on the pleadings and an agreed statement of facts, and the only issue is whether those facts constitute an infringement of the copyright upon the book. So far as they need to be stated here they are as follows: The appellant and defendant, the Kalem company, is engaged in the production of moving-picture films, the operation and effect of which are too well known to require description. By means of them anything of general interest, from a coronation to a prize fight, is presented to the public with almost the illusion of reality,—latterly even color being more or less reproduced. The defendant employed a man to read Ben Hur and to write out such a description or scenario of certain portions that it could be followed in action; these portions giving enough of the story to be identified with ease. It then caused the described action to be performed, and took negatives for moving pictures of the scenes, from which it produced films suitable for exhibition. These films it expected and intended to sell 61] for *use as moving pictures in the way in which such pictures commonly are used. It advertised them under the title "Ben Hur." "Scenery and Supers by Pain's Fireworks Company, Costumes from Metropolitan Opera House. Chariot Race by 3d Battery, Brooklyn. Positively the Most Superb Moving Picture Spectacle Ever Produced in America, in Sixteen Magnificent Scenes," etc., with taking titles, culminating in "Ben Hur Victor." It sold the films and public exhibitions from them took place.

The subdivision of the question that has the most general importance is whether the public exhibition of these moving pictures infringed any rights under the copyright law. By Rev. Stat. § 4952, as amended by the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 565, 26 Stat. at L. 1106, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406, authors have the exclusive right to dramatize any of their works. So, if the exhibition was or was founded on a dramatizing of Ben Hur, this copyright was infringed. We are of opinion that Ben Hur was dramatized by what was done. Whether we consider the purpose of this clause of the statute, or the etymological history and present usages of language, drama may be achieved by action as well as by speech. Action can tell a story, display all the most vivid relations between men, and depict every kind of human emotion, without the aid of a word. It would be impossible to deny the title of drama to pantomime as played by masters of the art. Daly v. Palmer, 6 Blatchf. 256, 264, Fed. Cas. No. 3,552. But if a pantomime of Ben Hur, would be a dramatizing of Ben Hur, it would be none the less so that it was exhibited to the audience by reflection from a glass, and not by direct vision of the figures,—as sometimes has been done in order to produce ghostly or inexplicable effects. The essence of the matter in the case last supposed is not the mechanism employed, but that we see the event or story lived. The moving pictures are only less vivid than reflections from a mirror. With the former as with the latter our visual impression—what we see—is caused by the real pantomime *of real men[62 through the medium of natural forces, although the machinery is different and more complex. How it would be if the illusion of motion were produced from paintings instead of from photographs of the real thing may be left open until the question shall arise.

It is said that pictures of scenes in a novel may be made and exhibited without infringing the copyright, and that they may be copyrighted themselves. Indeed, it was conceded by the circuit court of appeals that these films could be copyrighted, and, we may assume, could be exhibited as photographs. Whether this concession is correct or not, in view of the fact that they are photographs of an unlawful dramatization of the novel, we need not decide. We will assume that it is. But it does not follow that the use of them in motion does not infringe the author's rights. The most innocent objects, such as the mirror in the other case that we have supposed, may be used for unlawful purposes. And if, as we have tried to show, moving pictures may be used for dramatizing a novel, when the photographs are used in that way, they are used to infringe a right which the statute reserves.

But again, it is said that the defendant did not produce the representations, but merely sold the films to jobbers, and on that ground ought not to be held. In some cases where an ordinary article of commerce is sold nice questions may arise as to the point at which the seller becomes an accomplice in a subsequent illegal use by the buyer. It has been held that mere indifferent supposition or knowledge on the part of the seller that the buyer of spirituous liquor in contemplating such unlawful use is not enough to connect him with the possible unlawful consequences (Graves v. Johnson, 179 Mass. 53, 88 Am. St. Rep. 355, 60 N. E. 383), but that if the sale was made with a view to the illegal resale, the price could not be recovered (Graves v. Johnson, 156 Mass. 211, 15 L.R.A. 834, 32 Am. St. Rep. 446, 30 N. E. 818). But no such niceties are involved here. The defendant not only expected but invoked by 63]advertisement *the use of its films for dramatic reproduction of the story. That was the most conspicuous purpose for which they could be used, and the one for which especially they were made. If the defendant did not contribute to the infringement, it is impossible to do so except by taking part in the final act. It is liable on principles recognized in every part of the law. Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730, 732; Harper v. Shoppell, 28 Fed. 613. Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 152 U. S. 425, 433, 38 L. ed. 500, 503, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

It is argued that the law, construed as we have construed it, goes beyond the power conferred upon Congress by the Constitution, to secure to authors for a limited time the exclusive right to their writings. Art. 1, § 8, cl. 8. It is suggested that to extend the copyright to a case like this is to extend it to the ideas, as distinguished from the words in which those ideas are clothed. But there is no attempt to make a monopoly of the ideas expressed. The law confines itself to a particular, cognate, and well-known form of reproduction. If to that extent a grant of monopoly is thought a proper way to secure the right to the writings, this court cannot say that Congress was wrong.

Decree affirmed.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY ON RELATION OF GEORGE H. ALEXAN-DER et al., Revenue Agent.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 63-77.)

Taxation — of vessels — situs.

1. The right to select the name of the place of enrolment, the place where the vessel was built, or the place where the owner resides, as the place to be marked upon the stern as the home port, given the owner by U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4141, 4178, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2808, 2830, as amended by the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 252, chap. 467), does not confer the arbitrary right upon the owner to select a place for the taxation of his vessel.

NOTE.—As to the situs of vessels for taxation purposes—see notes to Johnson v. De Bary-Baya Merchants Line, 37 L.R.A. 518, and North American Dredging Co. v. Taylor, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 105.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 335-337, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — taxation of vessel — situs.

2. Making the domicile of the corporate owner of ocean-going steamships the situs for taxation, where such vessels have acquired no actual situs elsewhere, is not inconsistent with the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 533-540, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxation — of vessel — situs.

3. The inability of vessels, by reason of draught, or the depth of water, to go to the situs of the domicile of the owner, does not prevent their taxation at that domicile, where they have gained no actual situs elsewhere.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 335-337, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxation — of ocean-going steamships — situs.

4. Ocean-going steamships owned by a Kentucky corporation, and plying between the ports of New York and New Orleans, New York and Galveston, and New Orleans and Havana, are taxable in Kentucky, the domicile of the owner, although the vessels are enrolled at the port of New York, and carry the words "New York" on their sterns, these facts not being sufficient to give the vessels an actual situs in New York.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 335-337, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 247.]

Argued October 11 and 12, 1911. Decided
November 13, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Jefferson Circuit Court, reversing a judgment of the Jefferson County Court, assessing for taxation ocean-going steamships owned by a Kentucky corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 134 Ky. 417, 120 S. W. 311, 20 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 965.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There can be no doubt that steamships, like other personal property, are subject to state taxation, and that such taxation is not a burden on interstate commerce.

Wheeling, P. & C. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. ed. 412; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100.

As to real estate, it was never doubted that the taxing laws of a state could have no extraterritorial force. It has now come to be settled law that the same is true as to personal property.

Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 342, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 195, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493.

The problem to be solved in each case is this: Is there a situs of the ships in the state which is attempting to tax them?

Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; Wheeling, P. & C. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. ed. 412; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100; Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205.

The actual situs of property determines where a tax thereon should be imposed, upon the theory that protection is the ground and reason for taxation.

Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493.

There is no case decided by this court which holds that a ship in the coastwise trade can be taxed by an inland state within whose jurisdiction it is a physical impossibility for it ever to come. Further than that, in its later decisions this court has favored the rule of reason and common sense, viz., that ships should not be taxed in the artificial situs of the domicile of the owner, but in their actual situs,—where they received the protection of the taxing power.

Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; Wheeling, P. & C. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. ed. 412; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100; Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205.

Mr. Matt J. Holt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph Selligman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is true as to tangible property that the Supreme Court of the United States has said that it cannot be taxed by this state if permanently located in and in use in another state (Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493). But no court has ever said that this or any other state cannot tax the intangible property of its citizens.

It is true intangible property in use in another state, as money loaned and re-loaned, may be taxed by that state, although the owner may reside elsewhere (Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 51 L. ed. 1106, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 732; Com. v. Dun, 126 Ky. 108, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 920, 102 S. W. 859); but there is no decision that the state cannot tax its own citizen on his intangible property, even though the loans are in other states, or the investment is secured by property in another state.

If the owner of personal property within a state resides in another state, which taxes him for that property as part of his general estate, attached to his person, this action of the latter state does not in the least affect the right of the state in which the property is situated to tax it also.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 524, 29 L. ed. 717, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

Ocean-going steamships are taxable at the owner's domicile.

Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 421, 424, 50 L. ed. 1086, 1088, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205, reversing 117 Ky. 161, 77 S. W. 686; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100; North American Dredging Co. v. Taylor, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 105, note.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The question arising upon this writ of error is, whether certain steamships owned by the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation of the state of Kentucky, are taxable in Kentucky as property having a taxable situs there.

The Southern Pacific Company is a corporation organized under a special act of the general assembly of Kentucky of March 17, 1884. Acts of 1883-84, p. 725. Very wide and diverse powers are thereby conferred, among them being the right to own, lease, maintain, and operate railroads, telegraphs, and steamships, though prohibited from owning, leasing, or operating "any railroad within the state of Kentucky." By an act of March 21, 1888, the act of March 17, 1884, was amended by adding thereto the following: "Except subject to and in conformity with the provisions of the laws of the state of Kentucky applicable to railroads, and acquiring no special rights that may be possessed by any railroads in the state, except the general and ordinary rights of common carriers as possessed by railroads generally." The company is required to keep its principal office in the state, with power to open other offices at places outside of the state, as its business may make convenient.

By virtue of the authority conferred, the company has acquired and is operating a line of railway from New Orleans and Galveston to San Francisco and Portland, to say nothing of connecting lines in the same region, either owned, leased, or controlled through stock domination. It also owns and operates a line of twenty steamships between the ports of New York and New Orleans, New York and Galveston, and New Orleans and Havana, Cuba. Auxiliary to these ships it also owns barges, tugs, and ferryboats, which operate exclusively in the harbors of the ports mentioned. These tugs, barges, etc., were held to have acquired a permanent situs in such ports, under the ruling in Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100, and in this the state of Kentucky acquiesced, leaving open only the question of the taxable situs of the ocean-going steamships.

All of these ships are enrolled at the port of New York, and carry on their sterns the words "New York," as required by the statute. Two of them sail between New Orleans and Havana, five between New York and New Orleans exclusively, and thirteen interchangeably between New York and New Orleans, and New York and Galveston, Texas. The enrolment at New York, and the marking of the name of that port upon the stern of these vessels, is only of importance upon the question of an actual situs at New York. The owner has no power to give his vessel a taxable situs by the arbitrary selection of a home port which is neither his domicile nor the domicile of actual situs. St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; 68]Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia*, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100; Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205.

Sections 4141 and 4178, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2808, 98 2830), as amended by the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 252, chap. 467), give to an owner the right to mark upon the stern of his vessel either the name of the place of enrolment, the place where the vessel was built, or the place where the owner resides.

As the place of enrolment is not of itself determinative of the place of taxation, it is obvious that the right to select a place to be marked upon the stern as a place of hail, or home port, does not confer the arbitrary right upon the owner of selecting a place for the taxation of his vessel. To give to the statute this construction, said this court in Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, cited above, "would be simply to hold that its purpose was to endow the owner with the faculty of arbitrarily selecting a place for the taxation of his vessel, in defiance of the law of domicile, and in disregard of the principle of actual situs."

Since, therefore, an artificial situs for purposes of taxation is not acquired by enrolment nor by the marking of a name upon the stern, the taxable situs must be that of the domicile of the owner, since that is the situs assigned to tangibles where an actual situs has not been acquired elsewhere. The ancient maxim which assigns to tangibles, as well as intangibles, the situs of the owner for purposes of taxation, has its foundation in the protection which the owner receives from the government of his residence; and the exception to the principle is based upon the theory that if the owner, by his own act, gives to such property a permanent location elsewhere, the situs of the domicile must yield to the actual situs and resulting dominion of another government. Thus, in St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 430, 20 L. ed. 192, 194, this court, after referring to the taxing power of a state as extending to all persons and property within its territorial jurisdiction, said:

*"In the eye of the law, personal property, for most purposes, has no locality. . . . In a qualified sense it accompanies the owner wherever he goes, and he may deal with it and dispose of it according to the law of his domicile. If he die intestate, that law, wherever the property may be situate, governs its disposal, and fixes the rights and shares of the several distributees. But this doctrine is not allowed to stand in the way of the taxing power in the locality where the property has its actual situs, and the requisite legislative jurisdiction exists. Such property is undoubtedly liable to taxation there in all respects as if the proprietor were a resident of the same locality. The personal property of a resident at the place of his residence is liable to taxation, although he has no intention to become domiciled there. Whether the personal property of a resident of one state, situate in another, can be taxed in the former, is a question which, in this case, we are not called upon to decide."

The question thus reserved was decided adversely to the state of domicile in Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493.

The persistence with which this court has declared and enforced the rule of taxability at the domicile of the owner of vessel property, when it did not appear that the vessels had an actual situs elsewhere, is illustrated by the cases of Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100, and the case of Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205.

In Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. it appeared that the ships of the company were the property of a New York corporation, and that they were registered at the port of New York, where the capital represented by them was assessed for taxation. They were regularly and continuously employed on the Pacific coast, and were refitted 70]*and repaired from time to time at Benicia, in the state of California. Concerning these ships, which the state of California sought to tax, upon the theory that they had an actual situs in that state, this court said:

"These ships are engaged in the transportation of passengers, merchandise, etc., between the city of New York and San Francisco, by the way of Panama, and between San Francisco and different ports in the territory of Oregon. They are thus engaged in the business and commerce of the country, upon the highway of nations, touching at such ports and places as these great interests demand, and which hold out to the owners sufficient inducements by the profits realized or expected to be realized. And so far as respects the ports and harbors within the United States, they are entered and cargoes discharged or laden on board, independently of any control over them, except as it respects such municipal and sanitary regulations of the local authorities as are not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the general government, to which belongs the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and between the states.

"Now, it is quite apparent that if the state of California possessed the authority to impose the tax in question, any other state in the Union, into the ports of which the vessels entered in the prosecution of their trade and business, might also impose a like tax. It may be that the course of trade or other circumstances might not occasion as great a delay in other ports on the Pacific as at the port of San Francisco. But this is a matter accidental, depending upon the amount of business to be transacted at the particular port, the nature of it, necessary repairs, etc., which in no respect can effect the question as to the situs of the property, in view of the right of taxation by the state.

"Besides, whether the vessel, leaving her home port for trade and commerce, visits, in the course of her voyage *or business, [71 several ports, or confines her operations in the carrying trade to one, are questions that will depend upon the profitable returns of the business, and will furnish no more evidence that she has become a part of the personal property within the state, and liable to taxation at one port than at the others. She is within the jurisdiction of all or any one of them temporarily, and for a purpose wholly excluding the idea of permanently abiding in the state, or changing her home port."

In St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co., cited above, the steamboats in question were owned by an Illinois corporation, which had its principal office within that State. They were enrolled at the port of St. Louis, where the principal officers of the company resided, and where an office was maintained, in which the corporate meetings were held, and where the corporate seal was kept. That they were enrolled at St. Louis, the court said, "throws no light upon the subject of our inquiry. . . . The solution of the question, where her home port is, when it arises, depends wholly upon the locality of her owner's residence, and not upon the place of her enrolment." The steamers were taxed in Illinois, and were held not subject to taxation in St. Louis. Upon this subject the court said:

"The owner was, in the eye of the law, a citizen of that state, and from the inherent law of its nature could not emigrate or become a citizen elsewhere. As the boats were laid up on the Illinois shore when not in use, and the pilots and engineers who ran them lived there, that locality, under the circumstances, must be taken to be their home port. They did not so abide within the city as to become incorporated with and form a part of its personal property. Hence they were beyond the jurisdiction of the authorities by which the taxes were assessed, and the validity of the taxes cannot be maintained."

In Morgan v. Parham, the vessel was owned and registered in New York, but entered as a coaster at Mobile, "where her master resided, and where there was an office and agent under the control of a superior agent residing at New Orleans, who employed and paid the other officers and men of the ships. There was also a wharf at Mobile, controlled and occupied by the vessels of the line. The vessels were engaged in commerce between Mobile and New Orleans, and have been so continuously for several years. The court held that the state of Alabama had no jurisdiction over the vessels for the purpose of taxation, for the reason that they had not become incorporated into the personal property of that estate, but were there temporarily only, and that they were engaged in lawful commerce between the states, and their situs at the home port of New York, where they belonged, and where their owners were liable to be taxed for their value.

The case of Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia affords an instance of where the domicile of the owner as a taxing situs was held to have been lost and a new taxing situs acquired by reason of a permanent location within another jurisdiction. But in that case the judgment was rested upon the fact that the vessels had for years been continuously and exclusively engaged in the navigation of the Virginia waters, which state had thereby acquired jurisdiction for imposing a tax as upon property which had become incorporated into the tangible property within her territory.

Coming, now, to the last utterance of this court, the case of Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, we find a complete authority for upholding the assessability of these steamers by the state of Kentucky. The boats there in question were engaged in interstate commerce between the ports of Kentucky, Illinois, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Arkansas. They were owned by an Illinois corporation which has its principal office at Chicago, where taxes had been paid under the laws of the state, both to the state and to the city. Brookfield, in the extreme south-⁷³ern part of the state, and upon the Ohio river, was a port of call, and an office was probably maintained there, it being a place where cargoes were often discharged. The general manager of the transportation department of the company resided in Kentucky, and the boats of the fleet were enrolled at Paducah in that state, and bore upon their sterns the name "Paducah," as the home port or port of hail under the statute. Paducah was the place where the boats received their supplies and repairs, where seamen were hired and laid up when not in use, though it seems that Paducah was not a point where cargo was either received or discharged. Upon this state of facts it was held that the boats of the company had neither such artificial situs through enrolment or the marking upon their sterns, nor such actual situs by reason of the temporary stoppage at Paducah and other ports of the state, as to draw to it jurisdiction for purposes of taxation. The result of the previous decisions was there summed up, the court saying:—

"The general rule has long been settled as to vessels plying between the ports of different states, engaged in the coastwise trade, that the domicile of the owner is the situs of a vessel for the purpose of taxation, wholly irrespective of the place of enrolment, subject, however, to the exception that where a vessel engaged in interstate commerce has acquired an actual situs in a state other than the place of the domicile of the owner, it may there be taxed because within the jurisdiction of the taxing authority."

It has been urged that the case of Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 195, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493, lays down the principle that jurisdiction to impose taxes upon tangible property is, under the 14th Amendment, wholly dependent upon the actual situs of the property taxed, and that the fiction which gives movables the situs of the owner for purposes of taxation is inconsistent with that due process of law⁷⁴ guaranteed under that Amendment. The question for decision in that case, as stated in the forepart of the opinion, was, "whether a corporation organized under the law of Kentucky is subject to taxation upon its property permanently located in other states, and employed there in the prosecution of its business." The property in question was railroad cars, a kind of movables obviously capable of acquiring a permanent location other than that of the owner. The judgment of the court was that the taxation of such property so permanently located elsewhere by the law of the domicile of the owner would be a denial of due process of law, and beyond the power of the state. The principle was not a new one, and was declared to rest upon repeated judgments of this court, the cases of Northern C. R. Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262, 19 L. ed. 88; Dela-ware L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep.

463, being cited as precedents. That judgment did not deny to the state of the domicile of the owner power to tax tangibles which had not acquired an actual situs elsewhere.

The case presented no such question, and the opinion does not refer to the numerous cases holding that the taxable situs of ships engaged in foreign or interstate commerce was that of the owner unless an actual situs had been elsewhere acquired. That no such consequence was attached to the judgment or opinion is evidenced from the opinion in Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, announced at the same term and concurred in by Mr. Justice Brown, who wrote the opinion in the Transit Company Case, in which case it was distinctly affirmed that vessels were subject to taxation only at the domicile of the owner, unless they had acquired an actual situs in another jurisdiction.

To lay down a principle that vessel property has no situs for purposes of taxation other than that of actual permanent location would introduce elements of uncertainty [75]ty *concerning the situs of such property not presented by other kinds of movable property.

It is one thing to find that a movable, such as a railway car, a stock of merchandise, or a herd of cattle, has become a part of the permanent mass of property in a particular state, and quite another to attribute to a sea-going ship an actual situs at any particular port into which it goes for supplies or repairs, or for the purpose of taking on or discharging cargo or passengers. A ship is not intended to stay in port, but to navigate the seas. Its stay in port is a mere incident of its voyage, and to determine that it has acquired an actual situs in one port rather than another would involve such grave uncertainty as to result often in an entire escape from taxation. This court, in Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254, said upon this subject: "Whether the vessel, leaving her home port for trade and commerce, visits, in the course of her voyage or business, several ports, or confines her operations in the carrying trade to one, are questions that will depend upon the profitable returns of the business, and will furnish no more evidence that she has become a part of the personal property within the state, and liable to taxation at one port than at the others. She is within the jurisdiction of all or any one of them temporarily, and for a purpose wholly excluding the idea of permanently abiding in the state, or changing her home port."

In People ex rel. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Tax & A. Comrs. 58 N. Y. 242, 246, the New York court said, concerning the necessity of determining the taxable situs of such ships by some more certain standard than by the ports they make and the time they remain, that, "being in port is only a necessary incident in their proper employment. They are not built to be in port, but upon the sea. To determine their situs, for purposes of taxation by their longer or shorter stay in a particular port, or by their more or less frequent resort to it, would introduce *perpetual uncertainty [76]ty; it would, practically, subject them to taxation in every port, or exempt them in all."

The difficulties attendant upon the taxation of intangible property elsewhere than at the domicile of the owner have largely preserved the domicile of the owner as the proper situs for purposes of taxation.

The legality of a tax is not to be measured by the benefit received by the taxpayer, although equality of burdens be the general standard sought to be attained. Protection and taxation are not necessarily correlative obligations, nor precise equality of burden attainable, however desirable. The taxing power is one which may be interfered with upon grounds of unjustness only when there has been such flagrant abuse as may be remedied by some affirmative principle of constitutional law.

Take the case in hand. The Southern Pacific Company is a corporation having much extraordinary power. It only exists and exercises this power by virtue of the law of Kentucky. By the law of its being it resides in Kentucky, and there maintains its general office, and there holds its corporate meetings. To say that the protection which the corporation receives from the state of its origin and domicile affords no basis for imposing taxes upon tangibles which have not acquired an actual situs under some other jurisdiction is not supportable upon grounds of either abstract justice or concrete law. What is the protection accorded these vessels at any of the ports to which they temporarily go for purpose of business? What protection do they receive from the state or city of New York other than that accorded to every other ship which visits that port, foreign or domestic, for repairs, supplies, or other business? Referring to a like claim of protection, this court, in Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 599, 15 L. ed. 254, 255, said: "And so far as respects the ports and harbors within the United States, they are entered and cargoes discharged or laden on board, independently of *any [77] control over them, except as it respects such municipal and sanitary regulations of the local authorities as are not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the general government, to which belongs the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and between the states."

It has also been urged that the situs of the domicile of the owner of a ship cannot be the situs for purposes of taxation when it appears that the ship cannot go to that situs, and it is here said that the ships of the Southern Pacific Company cannot visit any port in the state of Kentucky. The fact is not shown, nor is it conceded. The state has a port on the Mississippi, a great stream up which national ships of war have at times gone as high or higher than the southern boundary of the state of Kentucky. But the test proposed is not one for which there is any authority, and would but introduce another grave element of uncertainty, dependent upon the draught of the ships and the depth of the water. Such a test might exclude from taxation ships, such great ships as the Olympic or the Lusitania, while smaller craft might meet the proposed standard.

The facts which have been relied upon to show an actual situs of these ships in the port of New York have been already sufficiently stated. They fall short of the facts relied upon for a like purpose in Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co.; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. and Morgan v. Parham, already cited, where the judgments were that they were insufficient to create a taxable situs other than that of the owner. The facts shown by no means bring the case under the authority of Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, where it was held that the ships had acquired an actual situs.

We find no reason for disturbing the judgment of the Court of Appeals of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and it is therefore affirmed.

78] *J. B. CURTIN, Appt.,
v.
H. C. BENSON et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 78-87.)

Yosemite valley — use of lands in private ownership — executive regulations.

The Secretary of the Interior cannot make the exercise by an owner and lessee of lands within the Yosemite National Park, of his right to pasture his cattle upon such lands, and to use the toll roads leading thereto, conditional upon his compliance with certain rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary for the government of the park, as to marking and defining the boundaries, or obtaining the written permission of the superintendent.

Submitted April 11, 1910. Ordered for oral argument October 21, 1910. Argued October 25, 1911. Decided November 20, 1911.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review a decree dismissing a suit to enjoin the superintendent of the Yosemite National Park from interfering with the right of an owner and lessee of lands within such park to pasture his cattle upon his land, and to use the toll roads leading thereto. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 158 Fed. 383.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Marshall B. Woodworth submitted the cause for appellant on original submission. Mr. John B. Curtin, in propria persona, was on the brief:

The United States is but an ordinary proprietor of the lands owned by it within the confines of the Yosemite National Park.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525-527, 29 L. ed. 264, 265, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Palmer v. Barrett, 162 U. S. 399, 40 L. ed. 1015, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; Sharon v. Hill, 11 Sawy. 130, 24 Fed. 726; Re Ladd, 74 Fed. 35; State ex rel. Jones v. Mack, 23 Nev. 363, 62 Am. St. Rep. 813, 47 Pac. 764; United States v. Meagher, 37 Fed. 878; Crook v. Old Point Comfort Hotel Co. 54 Fed. 608; Re Kelly, 71 Fed. 549; United States v. Partello, 48 Fed. 677; Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 330, 36 L. ed. 994, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

If the state of California had ceded its political jurisdiction over all lands within the confines of the Yosemite National Park to the United States, it would have no right to collect taxes thereon.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 29 L. ed. 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005.

The cession of political sovereignty and jurisdiction is an act of paramount and most solemn character, and, it is submitted, can only be exercised by a state through some affirmative statutory enactment.

People v. Godfrey, 17 Johns. 225, 9 Am. Dec. 203; Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 29 L. ed. 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005.

There is no legal obligation resting on the private owners of lands within the Yosemite National Park to fence their lands.

Bileu v. Paisley, 18 Or. 47, 4 L.R.A. 840, 21 Pac. 934.

Upon what theory of law can the Department of the Interior, or its officer, the superintendent of the park, enforce a rule compelling persons traveling public highways within the confines of the park, to obtain written permission to use such public highways in driving their stock to and from their patented lands within the confines of the park?

New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 182, 41 L. ed. 678, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Blood v. McCarty, 112 Cal. 564, 44 Pac. 1025; People ex rel. El Dorado County v. Davidson, 79 Cal. 166, 21 Pac. 538; Kellet v. Ida Clayton & G. W. Wagon R. Co. 99 Cal. 213, 33 Pac. 885.

With the exception of the powers surrendered by the Constitution of the United States, the people of the several states are absolutely and unconditionally sovereign within their respective territories.

Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 428, 14 L. ed. 997, 1002; The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 124, 20 L. ed. 122, 125; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 326, 4 L. ed. 97, 102; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 402-405, 4 L. ed. 579, 600, 601; Spooner v. McConnell, 1 McLean, 337, Fed. Cas. No. 13,245; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 730, 9 L. ed. 1262; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; 2 Tucker, Const. p. 690.

The "police power"—by which is meant the internal administration of the states—was reserved to the states in the 2d Article of Confederation and in the 10th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 19 L. ed. 593; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 115; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 625, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1092; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Knoxville Iron Co. v. 56 L. ed.

Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 48 L. ed. 148, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg, 204 U. S. 359, 51 L. ed. 520, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

The 13th, 14th, or 15th Amendments to the Constitution do not impair the supremacy of the police power reserved to the states.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 6, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

Until the state of California cedes political jurisdiction over the Yosemite National Park to the United States, every foot of territory therein and every person therein is subject to the laws of the state of California, and to none other. Until then the rights of the United States in and to the park lands are simply those of an "ordinary proprietor."

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995.

It never was the intention of the framers of the Constitution that the Federal government should engage in the business of establishing pleasure parks in the different states. Such enterprises fall within what Mr. Chief Justice Marshall called that "immense mass of legislation" which can be most advantageously exercised by the states, and over which the national authorities cannot assume supervision or control.

Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 503, 24 L. ed. 1115, 1116.

The creation and maintenance of pleasure parks fall within the police power, and such power is reserved to the states; and, therefore, the Federal government cannot claim that there is any implied power of legislation to justify its rules here under consideration, because the power to establish and maintain parks was never granted to it by the states, and parks are not instruments of government, and we think it well settled that the Federal government cannot exercise within the limits of a state any power or authority which is not incident to some power delegated to the Federal government.

Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 L. ed. 192; Van Brocklin v. Anderson (Van Brocklin v. Tennessee) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Shoemaker v. United States, 147

U. S. 282, 37 L. ed. 170, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361.

But even for the sake of argument, if it were conceded that the Federal government had authority to make regulations affecting the use of private property in the Yosemite National Park, such regulations must, of necessity, fall within the police power and be police regulations, and, unless it appear from the face of the rules that their enactment was for the protection of "the health, safety, or comfort of the public," they cannot be said to be valid or any police regulations, and the rules here under consideration would fall as not being police regulations.

Hume v. Laurel Hill Cemetery, 142 Fed. 552.

Mr. William C. Prentiss argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant on oral argument:

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The United States has all the rights that inhere in sovereignty, consistent with the Constitution, for its preservation and protection and the furtherance of its ends.

Jourdan v. Barrett, 4 How. 169, 184, 11 L. ed. 924, 930; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 99, 20 L. ed. 534, 536; United States v. Cleveland & C. Cattle Co. 33 Fed. 330; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 582, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1101, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 395, 25 L. ed. 717, 725; Re Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Camfield v. United States, 167 U. S. 518, 525, 526, 42 L. ed. 260, 262, 263, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 864; Light v. United States, 220 U. S. 523, 537, 55 L. ed. 570, 574, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat, 422, 4 L. ed. 605; United States v. Gettysburg Electric R. Co. 160 U. S. 668, 40 L. ed. 576, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the superior court of Tuolumne county, state of California, against the appellee Benson, and others, who were soldiers under Benson, to enjoin them from driving appellant's stock from his lands, or by any means interfering with them, and from preventing appellant driving his stock to his lands over certain toll roads. The case was removed to the United States circuit court for the northern district of California, where, after hearing, final judgment was rendered dismissing the bill of complaint.

The facts as agreed to, and established by evidence supplementing the agreement, are as follows: Appellant is the owner of certain lands within the Yosemite National Park (the park was regularly and legally established, act October 1, 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 650, chap. 1263, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 572; Joint Res. June 11, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 831, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 584), and lessee of other lands therein. Leading to the lands there are certain toll roads, which were established many years prior to the creation of the park.

Appellee Benson is a captain in the United States Army and superintendent of the park, and, as such, it was and is his duty to enforce the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior for the government of the park, and for this purpose he has a body of troops under his command.

*The Secretary established and pro-[83 mulgated the following rules:

"9. Owners of patented lands within the park limits are entitled to the full use and enjoyment thereof; such lands, however, shall have the metes and bounds thereof so marked and defined as that they may be readily distinguished from the park lands. Stock may be taken over the park lands to patented lands with the written permission and under the supervision of the superintendent.

"10. The herding or grazing of loose stock or cattle of any kind on the government lands in the park, as well as the driving of such stock or cattle over the same, is strictly forbidden, except in such cases where authority therefor is granted by the superintendent."

Appellant claims the right, without complying with these rules, to drive his cattle over the toll roads and to graze them on his lands. On one occasion appellant placed cattle on his lands, and appellee Benson immediately removed them, and refused to allow them to be grazed thereon until appellant complied with the rules; and, prior to the commencement of the suit, refused to allow appellant to drive his cattle over the toll roads to his lands, or to use the lands until he complied with the rules.

The testimony gave some particularity to the facts as agreed to. It appeared that appellant has within the park a few hundred acres, and, it may be inferred, 23,000 acres in the vicinity. He asserted that he had not complied with the regulations, and did not intend to do so until required. And it was admitted that the largest part of the land was unfenced.

The following from the report of the superintendent of the park to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1901 was put in evidence: "After due consideration, based upon the best evidence I have been 84] able to obtain, I can *see no objection to property owners and those holding leased land within the park limits grazing cattle near their own premises, under the supervision of the park authorities."

Testimony was introduced on the part of appellees (their counsel expressing a doubt of its admissibility) "to show that the regulation is a reasonable one, and the reason for it, and what effect will be produced if the regulation is not carried out." To the offer counsel for appellant replied that he denied the power of the Secretary. "It is simply a question of his power," he said, and stated that if defeated on that point, he could show that the rules were not reasonable under the circumstances. The court, saying that it understood, heard the evidence, which was to the following effect: Appellee Benson had been superintendent of the park since April 10, 1905, and on duty there for several years prior to that time. Numerous people claimed land in the park as their ranges, and a number of them had the places surrounded by fences, "sometimes inclosing, instead of 160 acres which they had, as high as several thousand acres of land." They drove their cattle to the so-called ranges and immediately let them loose, and they strayed throughout the entire reservation. "Senator Curtin's cattle have been in that condition for a great many year." This he (Benson) knew of his personal knowledge, because he was present at the time and had a correspondence with Mr. Curtin as far back as 1895, 1896, and 1897. He further testified that he was detailed on special duty to ascertain private land claims in the park, the object being to ascertain who owned land "and somewhere about where it lay;" that he did some surveying and found that a great many people—"Mr. Curtin, for instance"—had fenced more land than they were entitled to, had paid no attention to their own lines, had tracts of land inclosed upon which their cattle did not stay for more than three or four 85]*days, "but proceeded out to the rest of the park; so a regulation was ordered that they point out their metes and bounds, for this reason; though we might know absolutely where they were," they would claim the cattle to be on their lands. If the metes and bounds were fixed by an "agreed understanding" it could be definitely known whether they were within or without the claim. He further testified that the whole place had been overrun with cattle, and that the object of the regulations was "to keep people to the use of their own lands and keep the government land from being interfered with." He did not attempt to prevent Curtin from using his land, provided he complied with the regulations, but he did remove cattle from Curtin's land, on the ground that he had not complied with the regulations.

He testified further that he permitted Curtin to pasture his cattle on his land after he (Curtin) had it surveyed, but refused Curtin permission to fence according to the survey, the correctness of the survey being disputed.

It is objected by the government that appellant is not entitled to the relief he prays because he does not come into court with clean hands. It is urged as a ground of the charge that the testimony exhibits his purpose to be to use his lands as a basis, and the toll roads as a means, to make wholesale trespasses upon the park lands. If the fact were established it might be hard to resist its effect, but it is not established. The evidence cited in support of it, and of which we have given the substance, refers to a period anterior to the time when this controversy arose. Indeed, anterior to the time when the regulations were established by the Secretary of the Interior, which was April 22, 1905; and the object of the testimony was to account for the regulations, and not to show the special and immediate justification of Benson's orders. We cannot now extend the evidence beyond the special and limited purpose of its introduction. We do *not think the case, as[86 it was submitted to the circuit court, showed the ulterior purpose on the part of appellant to be a wilful trespass upon the lands of the park, but to be an honest assertion of rights.

On the merits of the case we may concede, arguendo, as contended by the appellees and disputed by appellant, that the United States may exercise over the park not only rights of a proprietor, but the powers of a sovereign. There are limitations, however, upon both. Neither can be exercised to destroy essential uses of private property. The right of appellant to pasture his cattle upon his land, and the right of access to it, are of the very essence of his proprietorship. May conditions be put upon their exercise such as appellees put upon them? In answering the question we shall assume, for the time being, that Benson has interpreted correctly the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior. His (Benson's) order is not, it will be observed, a regulation of the use of the land, as an order to fence the lands might be, but is an absolute prohibition of use. It is not a prevention of a misuse or illegal use, but the prevention of a legal and essential use,—an attribute of its ownership,—one which goes to make up its essence and value. To take it away is practically to take his property away; and to do that is beyond the power even of sovereignty, except by proper proceedings to that end.

A law requiring an owner in appellant's situation to fence his land might be within such power, though of that we are not required to express an opinion. A law making the trespass of his cattle on other lands a criminal offense might be within such power. Such laws might be considered as strictly regulations of the use of property,—of so using it that no injury could result to others. They would have the effect of making the owner of land herd his cattle on his own land, and of making him responsible for a neglect of it.

We have assumed so far that Benson has 87]exercised a *power in accordance with the rules prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior. This, however, may be questioned. The orders of Benson are not that Curtin mark and define his lands, but that he do so "by an agreed understanding" with him (Benson), so that there could be no subsequent controversy about their boundaries. But this gives to Benson power to force a concession to his "understanding," and to require Curtin to submit to a limitation of the area of his land or a limitation of its uses. It is no answer to say that the power would not be arbitrarily or unreasonably exercised. It must be judged by what can be done under it, not by what may be done under it.

It may be doubted, too, if the rules prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior warranted Benson's order in regard to the toll roads. The rules did not deal with the toll roads at all. They do deal with "park lands," and authorize stock to be taken over them by the "written permission and under the supervision of the superintendent." But even if it be held to apply to the toll roads, it is manifestly but a regulation of the transit of the stock merely, and not a use of the roads as a condition of the performance of something else.

We, however, rest our decision on the ground of the want of power of the Secretary or the superintendent to limit the uses to which lands in the park, held in private ownership, may be put.

Decree reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

*MARY N. HUSSEY, Administrator of [88 the Estate of Hannah S. Crane, Deceased; Mary Ives Crocker and Kate May Dillon Winship, Devisees of Kate D. McLaughlin, Deceased; and Richard H. Glassford, Executor of James T. Boyd, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 88-95.)

Judgment — against public officer — conclusiveness.

1. A judgment of ejectment against an officer of the United States in possession of the property, rendered in an action in which the district attorney of the United States, by direction of the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury, appeared on behalf of the United States and conducted the defense, does not estop the United States in a subsequent action from contesting the title to the property.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 832-840, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Claims — jurisdiction of court of claims.

2. The jurisdiction of the court of claims, under the act of February 25, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 815, chap. 800), of a claim for the value of real property in the possession of the United States, is not confined to a determination of the existence of title in the claimants' grantor when the United States took possession, but extends to the question whether such grantor ratified a prior deed from her husband's executor, under which the United States claims, where the statute confers jurisdiction to hear the claim, and, if the court finds from the evidence on file and to be "presented on either side" that the claimants "acquired a valid title to said real property, as claimed," to award them the market value at the time possession was taken, and in addition states that any defense may be pleaded by the United States as defendants.

[For other cases, see Claims, I. d, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — by ratification — laches.

3. A widow, who, being the devisee under her husband's will, received the purchase price of an estate in real property which was conveyed by his executor in the mistaken belief that it was subject to testamentary devise, and rested ten years without asserting her claim to the property after a decision of the highest court of the state to the effect that a moiety of such property was in law her community property, must be deemed to have ratified the sale, so as to preclude her grantees from asserting title as against the United States, claiming under the executor's deed. [For other cases, see Estoppel, III. b, 6, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 32.]

NOTE.—On estoppel by laches or acquiescence—see note to Michigan ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 38 L. ed. U. S. 478.

Argued November 2, 1911. Decided November 20, 1911.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition for an award of the value of a widow's share of community property in the possession of the United States, claiming under a deed from the husband's executor. Affirmed.

See same case below, 44 Ct. Cl. 324.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

If there is any subject upon which the judgments or the courts of the several states are conclusive, it is that of title to real property.

Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 495, 44 L. ed. 555, 559, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 44 L. ed. 1029, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873.

It is hardly to be supposed that, with all the facts before it, Congress referred the case to the court of claims in order to enable that court to review the reasoning of the supreme court of California. The more reasonable construction of its action is that the case was referred to the court of claims for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonable value of the property,—a question which the former findings had left indefinite,—and of awarding it to the claimants, if they were found to have succeeded to the title of James L. King, which had been sustained by the supreme court of California.

Roberts v. United States, 92 U. S. 41, 49, 23 L. ed. 646, 648; Dahlgren v. United States, 16 Ct. Cl. 30; Ayers v. United States, 44 Ct. Cl. 124; United States ex rel. Parish v. MacVeagh, 214 U. S. 124, 53 L. ed. 936, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556.

There can be no estoppel against Mrs. Ward or her grantees, arising out of anything done in this case.

Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 326, 23 L. ed. 927; Crary v. Dye, 208 U. S. 515, 521, 52 L. ed. 595, 600, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Dotson v. Merritt, 141 Ky. 155, 132 S. W. 181.

Mr. Frederick DeCourcy Faust argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson, filed a brief for appellee:

The United States cannot be made a defendant to any suit concerning its property, and no judgment in any suit against an individual who has possession or control of such property as its agent can bind or conclude the government.

Carr v. United States, 98 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 209; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 56 L. ed.

217, 27 L. ed. 180, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Scranton v. Wheeler, 6 C. C. A. 585, 16 U. S. App. 152, 57 Fed. 807.

Not only is appellants' principal complaint against the adverse action of the court below flatly opposed to the settled doctrine of this court as announced in Carr v. United States and United States v. Lee, supra, but it is also in direct conflict with the explicit language of the jurisdictional act under which this suit was brought.

The rule of property established by state decisions was not invalid.

Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 495, 496, 44 L. ed. 559, 560, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 44 L. ed. 1029, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873.

If the facts found in this case do not constitute a ratification of an act done by one without authority to act in the first instance, it is difficult to perceive how the doctrine of ratification can be sustained.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 189; Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252, 63 Am. Dec. 125; Lafitte v. Godchaux, 35 La. Ann. 1161; Alexander v. Jones, 64 Iowa, 207, 19 N. W. 913.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants brought this suit in the court of claims for the sum of $40,000, [89 that amount being, it is alleged, the value of their one sixth of certain real estate in the city of San Francisco at the time possession was taken of the property by the United States.

Jurisdiction of the suit was given by the act of Congress approved February 25, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 815, chap. 800), which is as follows:

"That jurisdiction be, and the same is hereby, conferred on the court of claims to hear the claim of Hannah S. Crane and others for the value of certain real property in the city of San Francisco, in the state of California, in which they claim an undivided one-sixth interest, upon the evidence already filed in said court and such additional legal evidence as may be hereafter presented on either side; and if said court shall find that said parties acquired a valid title to said real property, as claimed, said court shall award the said parties the market value of the undivided one sixth of said property at the time possession was taken of it by the United States . . . and any defense, set-off, or counter-claim may be pleaded by the United States as defendants, as in cases within the general jurisdiction of the court, and either party shall have the same right of appeal as in such cases."

There had been a reference of the claim by a committee of Congress under an act of Congress called the "Bowman act" [22 Stat. at L. 485, chap. 116, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 748], in which the court made findings substantially as in the present case, and these findings were certified to Congress, which subsequently passed the act to which we have referred.

The facts, summarized, are: that Congress provided (in 1852 [10 Stat. at L. 11 chap. 54]) for the establishment of a branch mint in the state of California, and for that purpose authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to make a contract for the erection of a building and procuring the necessary machinery at a sum not exceeding $300,000. The Secretary of the Treasury, in execution of the statute, entered into [90]* a contract for the erection and equipment of the mint, on April 15, 1853, with Joseph R. Curtis, for the sum of $239,900. The title to the property was to be satisfactory to the Attorney General of the United States. A supplemental contract was subsequently made for the purchase of an adjoining lot. The contracts were performed by Curtis, and on May 2, 1854, he executed a deed conveying both lots to the United States, which deed and the title were approved by the Attorney General, and all of the sums due under the contracts were paid to Curtis.

On April 15, 1853, the time of the making of the first contract, the property was owned in fee simple by and was in the possession of Curtis, Perry, & Ward, a firm composed of Joseph R. Curtis, Philo H. Perry, and Samuel H. Ward. The latter died while on a voyage to the Sandwich Islands. This was not known, and Curtis made the contract for the benefit of the firm.

Ward left a will appointing his partners his executors. The will was probated, but Perry alone qualified as executor. The value of the whole lot named in the contract of April 15, 1853, was appraised at $40,000, and after its appraisement Perry conveyed all of Ward's interest in it to Curtis for the sum of $13,333.33, payment for which he received. The sale was made by Perry as executor under the authority given him by the will.

By the terms of Ward's will, nine tenths of his estate was devised to his wife, Emily H. S. Ward, and her proportion of the sum so received for Ward's interest was paid to her and accepted by her with full knowledge of the sale by Perry as executor, but in ignorance of the extent of her estate in the land in dispute, as shown by the decision of the supreme court of the state of California. King v. Lagrange, 50 Cal. 328. See also 61 Cal. 221.

She, with her colegatees under the will, brought suit on the 18th of March, 1854, in the district court of the United States for the northern district of California *against Curtis and Perry. The bill al-[91 leged the partnership between Ward, Curtis, and Perry, the ownership by such partners of the lot, the building thereon, and of the machinery, tools, and fixtures in the building then used for assaying purposes; that the contract and its execution by Curtis were for the benefit of the partnership. It also alleged the appraisement of the lot and tools and fixtures, respectively, at $40,000 and $15,150, and the sale of the same by Perry, as executor, to Curtis; that the sale was private, without authority therefor from the probate court, and was made for the joint benefit of Perry and Curtis "as copartners in interest in the contract for the sale of the premises known as the 'United States Assay Office,' and the conversion of the same into a branch mint," and was made to deprive the legatees under the will of their just and legal right to participate in the profits of the sale to the United States; that the sum paid by Curtis to Perry was greatly under the value of the property, in view of the profits arising from the sale to the United States, and that by virtue of the sale Curtis and Perry dealt with the partnership property for their individual gain and advantage, and that they conspired to defraud the complainants of their just share of the purchase money. The object of the bill, therefore, was to obtain for Mrs. Ward and her colegatees the full benefit, jointly with Curtis and Perry, of the contract with the United States.

Notice of the filing of the bill was given to the Secretary of the Treasury by sending him a copy of it; but, prior to its receipt, the United States had paid Curtis the sum of $100,000, and balance due was paid at subsequent dates.

The bill was dismissed by complainants' counsel in June, 1854.

In 1855, Perry's acts as executor, which included the disposition of all of the real estate here involved, were approved and he was discharged as executor, Mrs. Ward *and the other legatees under the will [92 joining in the petition therefor.

In 1865, Mrs. Ward conveyed all of her interest in the land to one James L. King, and he, in 1867, brought an action in ejectment therefor against Robert B. Swain, the then superintendent of the mint, which action was subsequently continued against his successor, O. H. Lagrange, they being only in possession as such officers, claiming no title in themselves. The United States district attorney appeared, by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General, on behalf of the United States, and conducted the defense.

The case went twice to the supreme court of the state, that court ultimately deciding that the property was the community property of Ward and Mrs. Ward, and that one half thereof vested in her, upon his death, as the survivor of the community, and was not subject to his testamentary disposition, and that it was not established that Ward had attempted to dispose of more than his one half of the community property, or that Mrs. Ward knowingly performed any act indicating, or which could be construed to be, a waiver of her rights under the will, and a ratification of the sale of her share of the community property.

The controversy in the case turns on the effect to be given to the decisions of the supreme court of California in connection with the jurisdictional act.

The court of claims did not question the decisions in so far as they declare that the property was community property, and that one half thereof vested in Mrs. Ward upon Ward's death, and was not subject to his testamentary disposal. The court, however, disagreed with the supreme court of California as to ratification of the sale by Mrs. Ward.

Such conclusion, appellants contend, is precluded on two grounds: (1) the judgment of the supreme court of California 93]*became a rule of property and conclusive of the validity of the title; (2) the jurisdictional act confines the inquiry of the court to the existence of the title, and that being in appellants, they were entitled to a judgment for the market value of the property at the time possession was taken of it by the United States.

(1) This ground is not tenable. Carr v. United States, 98 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 209, is a parallel case. There, as here, a judgment in an action against officers of the United States in possession of property, in which action the district attorney of the United States, by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, appeared and defended, was urged in a subsequent action to estop the United States from contesting the title to the property. It was held that the judgment did not constitute an estoppel. To the same effect is United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 217, 27 L. ed. 171, 180, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

(2) The act of Congress gives jurisdiction to the court of claims to hear the claim, and if it find from the evidence on file and to be "presented on either side" that the claimants "acquired a valid title to said real property, as claimed," it "shall 56 L. ed.

award the said parties the market value of the undivided one sixth of said property at the time possession was taken of it by the United States." It will be observed, therefore, that jurisdiction was conferred not to ascertain if Mrs. Ward had title at the time the United States took possession, but whether the claimants acquired a valid title, and whether they did or did not necessarily depends upon the effect of Mrs. Ward's conduct. And, besides, the act is careful to say that "any defense . . . may be pleaded by the United States, as defendants."

The defense urged by the United States is the ratification by Mrs. Ward of Perry's conveyance to Curtis. And this defense was sustained by the court of claims, and properly so, we think.

The decision of Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252, 63 Am. Dec. 125, which *defined[94 her interest in the community property, was rendered in the summer of 1855. The exact date is not given, but it was at the July term of the court of that year. Knowledge of it must be attributed to her. There is certainly nothing in the record to show a want of knowledge of it, and the circumstances called for action on her part if she had intended to disavow the sale. About contemporaneously with the decision she received upon the settlement of Perry's accounts as executor of her husband's estate, to which she consented through her trustee, the sum of $37,914.58, and the further sum of $18,893.54, partly in cash and partly in securities. And the findings of fact also show, as we have seen, that at the time of the execution of the deed by Perry to Curtis she received as her nine tenths of her husband's interest in the real estate conveyed (the other one tenth going to a legatee under the will) the sum of $13,333.33. Nevertheless she did absolutely nothing to assert a claim to the property for ten years, double the limitation of time within which actions for the recovery of real property in the state of California may be barred; and then all that she did was to convey the property, through her attorney in fact, to one James L. King for the consideration of $100. King let two years more elapse before bringing suit. He recovered judgment, as has been stated, but made no effort to enforce it. He conveyed the property to Charles McLaughlin in 1879, $5 being the consideration expressed. He had previously conveyed a one-third interest in the property to William W. Crane, Jr., and James T. Boyd for a nominal consideration.

We think that the time which Mrs. Ward allowed to elapse, under the circumstances shown by the record, precludes her grantees from asserting title to the property against the United States. She had actual knowledge of all that transpired. It is true that at one time she charged Perry and Curtis with fraud to deprive her and her 95]legatees "under her husband's will of their "rights to participate in the profits of the sale to the United States" of the real property and some other property. In this suit she did not attack Perry's power to convey the property because of her title to it under her community rights. She and the other complainants alleged only a purpose to defraud them "of their just proportion of the purchase money arising from the sale of the property." Notice of the suit, it is true, was given to the Secretary of the Treasury, but the suit was subsequently dismissed—for what reason it does not appear. It may be that there was a complete and satisfactory adjustment between the parties. And this may reasonably be, if not conclusively, inferred from the proceedings resulting in the settlement of Perry's accounts and his discharge from his trust as executor. Indeed, in the receipt given Perry by the legatees under the will other than Mrs. Ward, the suit was referred to and authorized to be dismissed, and he, as executor and individually with Curtis, was released "from all claims, debts, dues, or demands due . . . by reason of the contract or under said will, or any other matter or thing." The date of this receipt was July, 1855. This and the other transactions were, we repeat, contemporaneous with the decision in Beard v. Knox, and Mrs. Ward, then knowing her interest in the property, was charged to consider whether she would assert it or retain what she had received from Perry as executor. And Perry and the United States were entitled to a timely disavowal, if disavowal she intended to make. He then might have been able to defend against it, and the United States, against the consequence of the disavowal, could have sought indemnity against Perry and Curtis. She must be deemed to have ratified the sale.

Judgment affirmed.

96]*WESLEY C. RICHARDSON et al.,
Appts.,
v.

JUDSON HARMON, Receiver of the Toledo Terminal & Railway Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 96-107.)

Shipping — limitation of liability — nonmaritime torts.

The limitation of a shipowner's liability for maritime torts not the result of his own fault, provided by U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4283-4285, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944, was extended to nonmaritime torts by the provisions of the act of June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 57, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2945), § 18, limiting the individual liability of a shipowner for "any or all debts and liabilities," except wages and liabilities incurred prior to such enactment, to his share in the vessel, and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same to the value of the vessel and freight pending.

110

[For other cases, see Shipping, V. c. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 10.]

Argued April 25 and 26, 1911. Decided
November 20, 1911.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, proceedings to limit the liability of a shipowner for a nonmaritime tort. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank S. Masten and Harvey D. Goulder argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The general maritime law gave limitation of liability to owners of vessel property to the end that merchants might be encouraged to invest in maritime commerce.

The Rebecca, 1 Ware, 187, Fed. Cas. No. 11,619; Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. 104-116, 20 L. ed. 585-589; The Scotland (National Steam Nav. Co. v. Dyer) 105 U. S. 24-28, 26 L. ed. 1001-1003; The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt) 21 Wall. 558-576, 22 L. ed. 654-662; Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 578, 27 L. ed. 1038, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617.

Almost since a merchant marine has existed in civilized nations, the ship herself has been treated as a sentient thing, liable for her own wrong in whosoever hands she may be, liable for her own contractual obligations and, under the general maritime law, the liability ended with the loss or surrender of the ship and freight.

Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 438, 46 L. ed. 270, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

This court has referred to the Congress-

NOTE.—On the limitation of shipowner's liability—see notes to Lawton v. Comer, 7 L.R.A. 55, and The Longfellow, 45 C. C. A. 387.

As to the lack of knowledge or privity on the part of shipowners as condition of limitation of liability—see notes to Great Lakes Towing Co. v. Mills Transp. Co. 22 L.R.A. (N.S.) 769.

sional records to ascertain the legislative intent where the meaning is in controversy.

Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409-427, 50 L. ed. 1082-1089, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459-472, 40 L. ed. 771-776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

A district court, sitting in admiralty, will exercise jurisdiction (ancillary) over claims on which a direct proceeding in the admiralty would be entirely outside of the question.

Schuchardt v. Babbidge, 19 How. 239-241, 15 L. ed. 625, 626; Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399, 15 L. ed. 95; The J. E. Runbell, 148 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 345, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Duryee v. Elkins, 1 Abb. Adm. 529, Fed. Cas. No. 4,197; The C. C. Trowbridge, 11 Biss. 154, 14 Fed. 874; Davis v. Child, 2 Ware, 78, Fed. Cas. No. 3,628; The H. E. Willard, 52 Fed. 388; The Hamilton (Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Gilmore) 207 U. S. 398-406, 52 L. ed. 264-270, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133.

The judicial power of the Federal government as to maritime causes is very broad.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557-563, 19 L. ed. 999-1001; The Plymouth (Hough v. Western Transp. Co.) 3 Wall. 20-36, 18 L. ed. 125-129; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Cleveland S. S. Co. 208 U. S. 316, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1215; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393-401, 15 L. ed. 961-964; The Blackheat (United States v. Evans) 195 U. S. 361-365, 49 L. ed. 236, 237, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46; New England Mut. M. Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 11 Wall. 1-31, 20 L. ed. 90-99; De Lovio v. Boit, 2 Gall. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 3,776; Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 589, 27 L. ed. 1042, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 392, 12 L. ed. 486.

The purpose of a proceeding for limitation is not to adjudicate fault or liability as in a direct proceeding. The very object of proceedings for limited liability is to inquire and determine whether the parties ought to be sued at all in any other tribunal after giving up, or submitting to pay the value of, all their interest in the ship and freight.

Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill, 109 U. S. 595, 27 L. ed. 1044, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617.

Mr. George L. Canfield argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank H. Canfield, filed a brief for appellee:

The injury done by the "Crete" to the railway bridge was not a maritime tort, but a trespass to realty, of which there is no jurisdiction in the American admiralty. 56 L. ed.

The Troy, 208 U. S. 321, 52 L. ed. 512, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Cleveland, S. S. Co. 208 U. S. 316, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1215; Phoenix Constr. Co. v. The Poughkeepsie, 212 U. S. 558, 53 L. ed. 651, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

The consensus of judicial opinion is against the effect which appellants ascribe to the later law.

Great Lakes Towing Co. v. Mill Transp. Co. 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 769, 83 C. C. A. 607, 155 Fed. 11, 207 U. S. 596, 52 L. ed. 357, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Force v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 35 Fed. 778; Miller v. O'Brien, 35 Fed. 783; The Amos D. Carver, 35 Fed. 669; McPhail v. Williams, 41 Fed. 61; Douse v. Sargent, 48 Fed. 695; Whitcomb v. Emerson, 50 Fed. 128; The Republic, 9 C. C. A. 386, 20 U. S. App. 561, 61 Fed. 113; The Annie Faxon, 21 C. C. A. 366, 44 U. S. App. 591, 75 Fed. 318; Gilchrist v. Chicago Ins. Co. 44 C. C. A. 43, 104 Fed. 573; The Puritan, 94 Fed. 365; Rudolf v. Brown, 137 Fed. 106.

The defeat of the amendment which sought to insert the words "without his personal consent of privity" is significant. These words are only applicable to liabilities ex delicto, and seemed incongruous in a law designed for liabilities ex contractu.

Re Sinclair, 8 Am. L. Reg. 206, Fed. Cas. No. 12,895.

The law of limited liability of shipowners is confined to the subject-matter of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and does not extend to liabilities beyond.

Goodrich Transp. Co. v. Gagnon, 36 Fed. 123.

The act of Congress which limits the liability of shipowners was passed in amendment of the maritime law of the country, and the power to make such amendments is co-extensive with that law.

Re Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 12, 35 L. ed. 631, 633, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The steam barge "Crete," while proceeding up the Maumee river from Lake Erie, collided with the abutment *of a rail-[100 way drawbridge, resulting in great damage to both barge and bridge. For the damage sustained by the bridge an action was brought against two of the owners of the barge in a common-law court of the state at Toledo, Ohio. Thereupon the owners of the barge, three in number, filed their petition and libel in the district court of the United States at Cleveland, Ohio, where two of them resided and where the "Crete" was lying, for a limitation of liability under §§ 4283-4285, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), and § 18 of the act of June 26, 1884 [23 Stat. at L. 57, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2945].

This petition duly averred that the said collision was without fault upon the part of the "Crete;" but, if there was any, it was without the privity or knowledge of the owners, or either of them. It stated that the damages claimed in the pending action at law were $35,000, and that they apprehended other actions of like kind, and if liable as claimed, the aggregate would greatly exceed the value of the interests of the owners in the vessel and her freight. Therefore, the petition sought the benefit of the limited-liability act of Congress and the right to defend against any liability, as provided by general law and admiralty rule 56 of the Supreme Court.

Under this petition an appraisal was made of the value of the "Crete" on the termination of her voyage, and the value of each separate one-third interest of each owner in the vessel and her pending freight was appraised at $4,171.50, for which value bond was made to stand in the room and place of the boat and her freight. Motion issued in usual form, requiring everyone claiming any loss or damage "by reason of the premises," to appear and make proof of their respective claims.

The appellees were also enjoined from proceeding with the action pending in the said common-law court, and they, together with all the world, were admonished to bring no other or further actions, and to file their claims against the "Crete," or her owners, in the court below, that they 101] might share in the distribution of the appraised value of the said vessel and her pending freight.

The appellee, Judson Harmon, as receiver of the Toledo Terminal & Railway Company, owner of the bridge damaged by the collision mentioned, appeared and excepted to the jurisdiction of the court. This exception was sustained and the injunction dissolved, the court holding that the cause of action asserted in the common-law court of Ohio by said receiver against the owners of the colliding barge was for a non-maritime tort, not cognizable in a court of admiralty, and that the limited-liability act of Congress did not extend to any such right of action.

Prior to the 18th section of the act of June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. pp. 53, 57, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2804, 2945), it had been the settled law that the district court, sitting as a court of admiralty, had no jurisdiction to try an action for damages against a shipowner, arising from a fire on land, communicated by the ship, or from a collision between the ship and a structure on land, such as a bridge or pier. The tort in both cases would have been a nonmaritime tort, and, as such, not within the cognizance of an admiralty court. The Plymouth (Hough v. Western Transp. Co.) 3 Wall. 20, 18 L. ed. 125; The Troy (Duluth & S. Bridge Co. v. The Troy) 208 U. S. 321, 52 L. ed. 512, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

Inasmuch as the owner's liability was not limited by the statutes providing for a limited liability, the pendency of a petition to obtain the benefits of the limitation did not operate to draw into such a proceeding action for a liability which could in no wise be affected by it. Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 30 L. ed. 274, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. Such was the law, and so it still is unless changed by the 18th section of the act of June 26, 1884. That section is found in a chapter, the title of which is, "An Act to Remove Certain Burdens on the American Merchant Marine, and Encourage the American Foreign Carrying Trade, and for Other Purposes." The 18th section reads as follows:

"That the individual liability of a shipowner shall be limited to the proportion of any or all debts and liabilities *that[102 his individual share of the vessel bears to the whole; and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same shall not exceed the value of such vessels and freight pending: Provided, That this provision shall not affect the liability of any owner, incurred previous to the passage of this act, nor prevent any claimant from joining all the owners in one action; nor shall the same apply to wages due to persons employed by said shipowners."

That the provision is not as definite as desirable may be conceded. The contention, upon the one hand, is that the limitation is extended only to obligations ex contractu; while, upon the other, that every kind of liability which might fall upon an owner on account of the ship, incurred without his knowledge or privity, is given the benefit of the provision. That it was intended to limit the owner's liability in respect of debts contracted on account of the ship is plain. But if that was the only purpose, why add the significant words, "and liabilities?" The limited-liability act, as it stood, did not include the owner's individual liability for obligations ex contractu incurred without his knowledge or privity. Neither did it extend to his individual liability for nonmaritime torts by the master or crew. Was it the purpose of Congress to exclude this kind of an individual responsibility from the benefits of the limited-liability statute, while including every other class and kind of individual liability, except seamen's wages? Is no significance to be attached to the fact that the provision does not stop by adding to the former kind of claims against an owner "any and all debts," but terminates the clause by inserting, "and liabilities,"—a perfectly unnecessary statement, if it was only meant to extend the limitation to obligations ex contractu? The meager debate which occurred upon this section of the act,—an act which included many other matters concerning the shipping interests of 103] the country,—if competent *at all, throws little or no light as to the meaning which was supposed to be attached to liabilities, as distinguished from claims arising out of contract. There does appear, however, a broad general purpose to put a shipowner in the status of one whose risk on account of obligations arising from the conduct of the master and crew is confined to his proportionate interest in the ship and her freight. No purpose to repeal or qualify any of the terms of the existing liability law is declared, nor is this section declared, in words, to be an amendment of that law. But neither fact is of any marked importance. If the necessary effect be to repeal any part of the former law because of repugnance, that consequence must be declared. So, too, if it be in effect an amendment of the law as it stood, by extending that law to cases not before within it, that effect must be given to it, without any unnecessary disturbance of the qualifications or procedure under the former law.

The legislation is in pari materia with the act of 1851 [9 Stat. at L. 635, chap. 43, § 3], as carried into the Revised Statutes as §§ 4283 et seq. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2943), and must be read in connection with that law; and so read, should be given such an effect not incongruous with that law, so far as consistent with the terms of the later legislation. The former law embraced liabilities for maritime torts, but excluded both debts and liabilities for nonmaritime torts. The section under consideration includes debts, save wages of seamen and liabilities of an owner incurred prior to the passage of the law. The avowed purpose of the original act was to encourage American investments in ships. This was accomplished by confining the owner's individual liability, when not the result of his own fault, in the instances enumerated, to his share in the ship. The same public policy is declared to be the motive of the act of which this section is a part. True, a liability may arise out of a contract as well as from a tort. But a liability ex contractu is included ex vi termini, and the addition of the words "and liabilities" *would be[104 tautology unless meant to embrace liabilities not arising from "debts."

In view of the manifest policy of Congress to further encourage the shipowning industry, and the very broad terms employed in this last legislation, we can but infer that the policy of the government was to confine the risk of an owner not personally at fault to his interest in the ship. To say that Congress meant no more by extending the limitation to any and all debts and liabilities than to include obligations arising ex contractu would be to utterly ignore the fact that such a construction would leave an owner subject to a large class of obligations arising from nonmaritime torts, and leave nothing to which the words, "any and all . . . liabilities" could apply. In Butler v. Boston & S. S. S. Co. 130 U. S. 527, 549, 553, 32 L. ed. 1017, 1022, 1023, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612, the words "the liability of the owner . . . shall in no case exceed," etc., were construed as extending to any liability "for any act, matter, or loss, damage or forfeiture, done or incurred;" and as therefore providing that the "owner shall not be liable beyond his interest in the ship and freight for the acts of the master or crew, done without his privity or knowledge." Upon this interpretation of § 4283, it was held that liabilities of the owner for injuries to persons were included in the limitation, as well as injuries to goods. Referring to the 18th section of the act of 1884, which did not apply in that case, because the injury occurred before its passage, the court said it "seems to have been intended as explanatory of the intent of Congress in this class of legislation. It declares that the individual liability of a shipowner shall be limited to the proportion of any or all debts and liabilities that his individual share of the vessel bears to the whole; and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same shall not exceed the value of such vessel and freight pending. The language is somewhat vague, it is true; but it is possible that it was *intended to remove[105 all doubts of the application of the limited-liability law to all cases of loss and injury caused without the privity or knowledge of the owner. But it is unnecessary to decide this point in the present case. The pendency of the proceedings in the limited-liability cause was a sufficient answer to the libel of the appellants."

Touching the wide purpose of Congress, as indicated by the various provisions limiting the shipowner's liability, the court, in the same case, said:

"If we look at the ground of the law of limited responsibility of shipowners, we shall have no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that it covers the case of injuries to the person as well as that of injuries to goods and merchandise. That ground is, that for the encouragement of shipbuilding and the employment of ships in commerce, the owners shall not be liable beyond their interest in the ship and freight for the acts of the master or crew, done without their privity or knowledge. It extends to liability for every kind of loss, damage, and injury. This is the language of the maritime law, and it is the language of our statute, which virtually adopts that law."

Neither is it necessary to conclude that the section in question is a repealing act as to any of the qualifications of the preceding limitations found in §§ 4283 et seq., of the Revised Statutes. To so hold would be to attribute to Congress a wider purpose than we have any reason to suppose,—that of extending the benefits of §§ 4283 et seq., regardless of the owner's knowledge or privity.

That would be to throw the section out of correspondence with the existing limitations.

We therefore conclude that the section in question was intended to add to the enumerated claims of the old law "any and all debts and liabilities" not therefore included. This is the interpretation suggested in Butler v. Boston & S. S. S. Co. supra. That the section operates as such an amendment of the existing law, and not as a [106] repeal of *the qualifications found in that law, is the view adopted by three circuit courts of appeal, in the cases of The Republic, 9 C. C. A. 386, 20 U. S. App. 561, 61 Fed. 109, in the second circuit, The Annie Faxon, 21 C. C. A. 366, 44 U. S. App. 591, 75 Fed. 312, in the ninth circuit, and in Great Lakes Towing Co. v. Mill Transp. Co. 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 769, 83 C. C. A. 607, 155 Fed. 11, in the sixth circuit, as well as by a number of district courts, among them being the case of The Amos D. Carver, 35 Fed. 665, and Re Meyer, 74 Fed. 881.

Thus construed, the section harmonizes with the policy of limiting the owner's risk to his interest in the ship in respect of all claims arising out of the conduct of the master and crew, whether the liability be strictly maritime or from a tort non-maritime, but leaves him liable for his own fault, neglect, and contracts.

If thus the owner's liability for a tort permitted or incurred through the master or crew, although nonmaritime, because due to a collision between the ship and a structure upon land, be one in respect to which his liability is limited, and he applies for the benefit of such limitation to the proper district court of the United States, "all proceedings," by the express terms of § 4285, Revised Statutes, "against the owner, shall cease." The procedure in any such case is prescribed by the 54th and 55th rules in admiralty, where it is said that the court shall, "on application of the said owner or owners, make an order to restrain the further prosecution of all and any suit or suits against said owner or owners in respect of any such claim or claims." Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 578, 27 L. ed. 1038, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617; Butler v. Boston & S. S. S. Co. 130 U. S. 527, 549, 32 L. ed. 1017, 1022, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612.

The case of Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 30 L. ed. 274, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25, which was a petition for the benefits of the limited-liability act and to stay suits at common law against the owner for liability by fire carried to buildings on land, communicated from the ship, has been cited as holding that the limited-liability statute did not apply to such a claim, and that a *court of admiralty could [107] not draw to itself jurisdiction over any such claim. But that liability was incurred on September 20, 1880, a date antecedent to the act of 1884, which act expressly excluded liabilities which arose before its passage. That the decision by this court was not made until November, 1886, and that the opinion makes no reference to the act of 1884, is of no importance, since the act had no application.

The decree is reversed, and remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

GEORGE D. BRYAN, Collector of the Port of Charleston, Petitioner,

v.

ROXANA S. KER, Executrix of W. W. Ker, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 107-114.)

Marshal — executing invalid process.

A writ in the usual form of a monition and warrant of arrest in a suit in rem, issued from the office of the clerk of a Federal district court, and bearing the seal of that court, will protect the marshal in seizing and detaining a vessel in conformity to the command of the writ, although the purported signature of the deputy clerk was affixed under an attempted but ineffectual delegation of authority, and although the case stated in the libel upon which the writ issued was not cognizable as a suit in rem in admiralty, but only as a personal action for damages.

NOTE.—As to protection of ministerial officers in the execution of regular process—see note to Erskine v. Hohnbach, 20 L. ed U. S. 745.

[For other cases, see Marshal, 22-24, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 3.]

Argued October 25 and 26, 1911. Decided November 20, 1911.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of South Carolina, in favor of defendant in an action against the collector of the port of Charleston, to recover damages for the alleged unlawful detention of a vessel. Reversed and judgment of Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 90 C. C. A. 179, 163 Fed. 233.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Loring C. Christie, filed a brief for petitioner:

A marshal is not liable for his official acts if the process on which he moves is fair on its face, even though not legally valid.

Matthews v. Densmore, 109 U. S. 216, 219, 27 L. ed. 912, 913, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Marks v. Shoup, 181 U. S. 562-564, 45 L. ed. 1002-1004, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Hill v. Haynes, 54 N. Y. 153; Erskine v. Hohnbach, 14 Wall. 613, 20 L. ed. 745; Throop, Pub. Off. §§ 756-762; Mechem, Pub. Off. §§ 690, 745, 768-772; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. pp. 538-540; Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228, 26 L. ed. 723.

This protection goes so far that some cases hold that the marshal's personal knowledge of the defect—which of course he may sometimes casually acquire—does not avoid the application of the rule.

Throop, Pub. Off. § 759; Mechem, Pub. Off. § 745; 35 Cyc. 1752, 1753.

The monition was not void, but at most only voidable. It was colorable, and could have been corrected by amendment in the suit in which it was issued.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Kirk, 111 U. S. 486, 28 L. ed. 481, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Bondurant v. Watson, 103 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 447; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 537, 38 L. ed. 812, 813, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Long v. Farmers' State Bank, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 585, 77 C. C. A. 538, 147 Fed. 362; Cotter v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 35, 22 U. S. App. 372, 61 Fed. 747; Wolf v. Cook, 40 Fed. 432; Dwight v. Merritt, 56 L. ed.

18 Blatchf. 305, 4 Fed. 614; United States v. Turner, 50 Fed. 734.

Under the Federal statutes, amendments in technical matters have been allowed with the utmost freedom, the act of June 1, 1872, having been accepted as intending to prevent the obstruction of justice by artificial and technical rules, and to bring cases to decision on their real merits.

Murphy v. Stewart, 2 How. 263, 11 L. ed. 261; McDonald v. Nebraska, 41 C. C. A. 278, 101 Fed. 171; Parks v. Turner, 12 How. 39, 46, 13 L. ed. 883, 887; Walton v. Marietta Chair Co. 157 U. S. 342, 39 L. ed. 725, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 626; Tilton v. Cofield, 93 U. S. 163, 167, 23 L. ed. 858, 859.

In general, aside from the operation of the Federal statutes, it appears to be clear that such defects make the process at most voidable, and not void.

Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 681; Van Fleet, Collateral Attack, p. 332; Alderson, Judicial Writs & Process, p. 147; Sweet v. Palmer, 95 Mich. 449, 54 N. W. 951; Richardson v. Bachelder, 19 Me. 82; Nichols v. Smith, 26 N. H. 298; Redmond v. Mullenax, 113 N. C. 505, 18 S. E. 708; Donahoe v. Shed, 8 Met. 326; Billings v. Russell, 23 Pa. 189, 62 Am. Dec. 330; Wilton Mfg. Co. v. Butler, 34 Me. 431; Bogert v. Phelps, 14 Wis. 89; Griswold v. Connolly, 1 Woods, 193, Fed. Cas. No. 5,833; King v. Belcher, 30 S. C. 383, 9 S. E. 359.

Mr. J. P. Kennedy Bryan argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

If the officer had power to issue the writ there would be protection; but if the officer had no power to issue the writ, there would be no protection. Where there is a want of power, there is no protection. If there is power in the person issuing the writ to issue the writ, and there is a defect or irregularity, the writ is voidable. If there is no power, as here, where a private, unofficial person attempted to do an official act, the writ is void, and there is no protection.

Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. 80, 81, 15 L. ed. 844; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 627, 29 L. ed. 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Starr v. United States, 153 U. S. 617, 618, 38 L. ed. 842, 843, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; State v. Vaughn, Harp. L. 313; Davis v. Sanders, 40 S. C. 507, 19 S. E. 138; Confiscation Cases (United States v. Clarke) 20 Wall. 93, 111, 22 L. ed. 320, 324; Leas v. Merriman, 132 Fed. 511; Middleton Paper Co. v. Rock River Paper Co. 19 Fed. 252; Gardner v. Lane, 14 N. C. (3 Dev. L.) 53; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 177, 28 L. ed. 390, 391, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; The Resolute, 168 U. S. 437, 42 L. ed. 533, 18 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 112; Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, 124 U. S. 721, 31 L. ed. 567, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; The Berkeley, 58 Fed. 920; Erschine v. Hohnbach, 14 Wall. 616, 617, 20 L. ed. 745, 747; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 309, 35 L. ed. 1024, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Kenney, 9 Phila. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 11,088; Jacobs v. Measures, 13 Gray. 74.

The cases cited by the petitioner but confirm this principle.

Matthews v. Densmore, 109 U. S. 216, 27 L. ed. 912, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228, 26 L. ed. 723; Buck v. Colbach, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Marks v. Shoup, 181 U. S. 562, 45 L. ed. 1002, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Donahoe v. Shed, 8 Met. 326; Rex v. Danser, 6 T. R. 242; Billings v. Russell, 23 Pa. 189, 62 Am. Dec. 330; Putnam v. Man, 3 Wend. 202, 20 Am. Dec. 686; Earl v. Camp, 16 Wend. 562; Deyo v. Van Valkenburgh, 5 Hill, 242; Wilton Mfg. Co. v. Butler, 34 Me. 431; Bogert v. Phelps, 14 Wis. 89; Nichols v. Smith, 26 N. H. 298; Redmond v. Mullenax, 113 N. C. 511, 18 S. E. 708; Shepherd v. Lane 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 148; Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 677, Harris v. Harde-man, 14 How. 334, 14 L. ed. 444.

The following further authorities affirm the same principle:

Wimbish v. Wofford, 33 Tex. 109; Hernandez v. Drake, 81 Ill. 39; Greenleaf v. Mumford, 19 Abb. Pr. 476; Anderson v. Johett, 14 La. Ann. 624; Jacobs v. Measures, 13 Gray, 75; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 45, 61 Am. Dec. 381; Hickam v. Larkey, 6 Gratt. 210; Sheldon v. Van Buskirk, 2 N. Y. 475.

A process cannot be amended where the process itself is invalid, and as served is ineffectual to bring the party or the res within the jurisdiction of the court.

Brown v. Pond, 5 Fed. 31; Bell v. Austin, 13 Pick. 93; United States v. Rose, 14 Fed. 682; United States v. Riley, 88 Fed. 480; Semmes v. United States, 91 U. S. 25, 23 L. ed. 195.

On the ground that they are not original writs, and that the parties were before this court, and their rights already adjudicated, the following cases cited by petitioner are to be distinguished:

Hill v. Haynes, 54 N. Y. 153; Griswold v. Connolly, 1 Woods, 193, Fed. Cas. No. 5,833; Jett v. Shinn, 47 Ark. 377, 1 S. W. 693.

The proceeding in rem does not exist without a maritime lien, and when there is no maritime lien it cannot exist, and the court has no jurisdiction in rem of the subject-matter.

The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 11, 37 L. ed. 347, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; The Corsair

(Barton v. Brown) 145 U. S. 335, 348, 36 L. ed. 727, 731, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 731, 12 L. ed. 890, 891; Rock Island Bridge, 6 Wall. 215, 18 L. ed. 754; Vandewater v. Mills, 19 How. 82, 15 L. ed. 554; The Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. 188, 15 L. ed. 343; The Lady Franklin, 8 Wall. 325, 329, 19 L. ed. 455, 457; The Keokuk, 9 Wall. 517-519, 19 L. ed. 744, 745; The William Fletcher, 8 Ben. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 17,692.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action at law in the circuit court for the district of South Carolina, by a citizen of Pennsylvania against a citizen of South Carolina, as collector of the port of Charleston, to recover damages for the alleged unlawful detention, from November 16 to December 5, 1895, of the American steamship Laurada, of which the plaintiff was the owner.

The answer admitted that the defendant, as such collector, acting under instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, caused the vessel "to be formally detained by placing an inspector on board;" but alleged that the marshal for the District of South Carolina had seized the vessel on November 15, 1895, under a monition and warrant of arrest issued out of the district court for that district upon a libel filed in that court against the vessel, her engines, etc.; that the marshal retained the custody of the vessel, under that process, from November 15 until December 18, 1895, and that, if any damage was sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the detention of the vessel, it did not result from any act of the defendant.

Upon the trial of the issue so presented, the evidence, without any conflict, established these facts:

On November 15, 1895, the marshal, acting upon the monition and warrant of arrest soon to be mentioned, "seized the vessel at Charleston, and detained her in his custody until December 18, following, when she was surrendered to her master upon the execution of an agreement, with sureties, conformably to Rev. Stat. § 941, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 692, and the 11th admiralty rule. On November 16, while the vessel was so in the custody of the marshal, the defendant, as collector of the port, acting under directions from the Secretary of the Treasury, placed an inspector on board the vessel, and thereby assumed a qualified control over her; but the custody of the marshal was not disturbed or questioned, or intended to be, the defendant's purpose being only to make sure that the vessel would be detained, according to the directions of the Secretary of the Treasury, in the event that the custody of the marshal should be terminated. On December 6, the Secretary of the Treasury abandoned the purpose to detain the vessel, and the defendant thereupon withdrew the inspector, the marshal still retaining his custody.

The monition and warrant of arrest under which the marshal acted was issued out of the district court upon the libel presently to be described, and what was done by him was in strict conformity to the command of the writ. When the writ was issued, the clerk of the district court was fatally ill and absent from his office, and the deputy, his son, was attending him. A second son, who was not a deputy, was temporarily in charge of the clerk's office, with instructions, given by the deputy, to receive and file papers, and, if it became necessary, to sign and issue process. Acting upon these instructions, the brother signed and issued the writ in question, doing so in such manner that it purported to have been signed and issued by the deputy on behalf of the clerk. The libel upon which the writ issued purported in some respects to be one in rem, but it plainly disclosed that the libellants were not possessed of a maritime lien upon the vessel, her engines, etc., but only of a right to damages. See Vandewater v. Mills, 19 How. 82, 90, 15 L. ed. 554, 556. 112]*There was, however, no suggestion of this on the face of the writ, which was in the usual form of a monition and warrant of arrest in a suit in rem. It ran in the name of the President, was addressed to the marshal, commanded him to seize the vessel and to detain it until the further order of the court, bore teste of the judge of the district court, was sealed with the seal of the court, purported to be signed by the deputy on behalf of the clerk, and was transmitted from the clerk's office to the marshal's office in the usual way.

At the conclusion of the evidence showing these facts, the court, at the request of the defendant, directed a verdict in his favor, and entered judgment accordingly. The judgment was subsequently reversed by the circuit court of appeals (90, C. C. A. 179, 163 Fed. 233), and the case is now here on certiorari. 212 U. S. 575, 53 L. ed. 657, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684.

As it is obvious that the verdict for the defendant was rightly directed, if the seizure and detention of the vessel by the marshal were justified by the writ under which he acted, we come at once to the reasons advanced for saying that his acts were not so justified. They are: (1) that the writ was not signed or issued by the clerk or his deputy, but by one who was without lawful authority; and (2) that the case stated in the libel, upon which the writ issued, was not cognizable as a suit in rem in admiralty, but only as a personal action for damages.

Neither reason is sufficient. Both overlook considerations which operated with impelling force to justify the acts of the marshal.

True, the purported signature of the deputy was not his own, but was affixed by his brother under an attempted but ineffectual delegation of authority, and yet the writ, in the usual form, was issued from the office of the clerk, bearing the seal as evidence of its authenticity. In short, although thus irregularly issued, it came into the hands of the marshal as an apparently valid writ. Besides, this irregularity *did not render the writ void, but [113 voidable merely, for it could have been amended by substituting the true for the purported signature of the deputy. Rev. Stat. § 948, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 695; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Kirk, 111 U. S. 486, 28 L. ed. 481, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Semmes v. United States, 91 U. S. 21, 23 L. ed. 193; Cotter v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 10 C. C. A. 35, 22 U. S. App. 372, 61 Fed. 747; Long v. Farmers' State Bank, 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 585, 77 C. C. A. 538, 147 Fed. 360; Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 677.

True, also, the case stated in the libel was not cognizable as a suit in rem in admiralty, and therefore afforded no basis for the issuance of the warrant of arrest. But as this did not appear on the face of the writ, and as the court was empowered to issue such process in a proper case, it still must be said that the writ, as it was received by the marshal, was apparently a valid one.

In this situation the case falls clearly within the rule, often applied in this and other courts, which is well stated in Cooley on Torts, 3d ed., vol. 2, p. 883, as follows:

"The process that shall protect an officer must, to use the customary legal expression, be fair on its face. By this is not meant that it shall appear to be perfectly regular, and in all respects in accord with proper practice, and after the most approved form; but what is intended is, that it shall apparently be process lawfully issued, and such as the officer might lawfully serve. More precisely, that process may be said to be fair on its face which proceeds from a court, magistrate, or body having authority of law to issue process of that nature, and which is legal in form, and on its face contains nothing to notify or fairly apprise the officer that it is issued without authority. When such appears to be the process, the officer is protected in making service, and he is not concerned with any illegalities that may exist back of it."

See Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228, 237, 26 L. ed. 723, 726; Matthews v. Densmore, 109 U. S. 216, 27 L. ed. 912, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Harding v. Woodcock, 137 U. S. 43, 34 L. ed. 580, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293, 309, 35 L. ed. 1018, 1024, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; 114] *Marks v. Shoup, 181 U. S. 562, 45 L. ed. 1002, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Erskine v. Hohnbach, 14 Wall. 613, 20 L. ed. 745; Haffin v. Mason, 15 Wall. 671, 21 L. ed. 196; Bragg v. Thompson, 19 S. C. 572; Goodgion v. Gilreath, 32 S. C. 388, 11 S. E. 207; Clarke v. May, 2 Gray, 410, 61 Am. Dec. 470; People v. Rix, 6 Mich. 144; Henline v. Reese, 54 Ohio St. 599, 56 Am. St. Rep. 736, 44 N. E. 269; Savacool v. Boughton, 5 Wend. 170, 21 Am. Dec. 181.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is accordingly reversed, and that of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

Reversed.

TEFFT, WELLER, & COMPANY et al.,
Appts.,
v.
JULIAN MUNSURI.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 114-121.)

Appeal — from Porto Rico district court — bankruptcy case.

1. The disallowance of certain claims against a bankrupt's estate by the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3431), § 24a, investing that court with appellate jurisdiction of "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" from the courts of bankruptcy from which it has appellate jurisdiction in other cases, and "a like jurisdiction" from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit, since the allowance or disallowance of a claim in bankruptcy is not a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings, but is a proceeding in bankruptcy, the mode of reviewing which is confined, by § 25a, to an appeal to the appropriate circuit court of appeals or territorial supreme court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1036-1043a. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeals — to Federal Supreme Court — in bankruptcy case.

2. An order of a court of bankruptcy in

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rico courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

a proceeding in which there was a controversy between the creditors and one of the members of a bankrupt partnership as to whether he was liable as a general or limited partner cannot be regarded as rendered in a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings, for the purpose of sustaining an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 24a, where such appeal was specifically taken from the order as one disallowing the claim of the appellants of an alleged indebtedness to them from the bankrupt firm, and such was the character necessarily attributed to the order by the judge when he entered it, and which was affixed to it by the assignments of error filed at the time the appeal was taken.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 848-859, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from district court of Porto Rico — bankruptcy case.

3. The right to have an order of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, disallowing certain claims against a bankrupt's estate, reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court, must be found in the bankrupt act, which furnishes the exclusive modes of review of questions arising in steps in proceedings in bankruptcy, and no such right is given by the provisions of the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 191), § 35, for appeals to the Federal Supreme Court from final judgments of the district court of Porto Rico, "in the same manner and under the same regulations and in the same cases as from the supreme courts of the territories."

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1036-1043, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 22.]

Argued October 30 and 31, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a disallowance of certain claims against a bankrupt's estate. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Johnson argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Hawkins, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. George H. Lamar argued the cause, and, with Mr. Willis Sweet, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

We are of opinion that a motion made to dismiss this case must prevail, and we therefore state only the facts which are essential to the consideration of that subject.

In 1907, the commercial firm of "Sucesores de José Hernaiz" was adjudicated an involuntary bankrupt. Tefft, Weller, &

Company and those who are here conjointly appellants with that firm presented their claims against the firm, and they were allowed by the referee. In October, 1907, as the result of proceedings whose initiation it is unnecessary to consider, the court held that one Julian Munsuri was not a limited but a general partner of the bankrupt firm, and hence was generally liable for its debts. Munsuri subsequently moved the referee to vacate the allowance previously made of the claims which had been presented by the appellants, and to disallow said claims. This motion was based on alleged settlements of the claims which it was asserted had been made with Munsuri in 1903. The referee denied the motion because he concluded that the asserted settlements, although they had been in form made, had been procured by the fraud of Munsuri, and therefore were not binding. Munsuri, by petition for review, sought to reverse the action of the referee. The court, on February 9, 1909, passing on the 116]*petition for review, reversed the action of the referee. It was held that the settlements relied upon by Munsuri were binding. An order was made directing that the previous allowance of the claims be vacated, and that the claims be disallowed. Thereupon the courts filed its "findings of fact and conclusions of law," which were recited to have been made "in pursuance of general order in bankruptcy No. 36, p. 3." The attorney for the creditors then petitioned for the allowance of an appeal to this court from the judgment and order "whereby the referee's report denying the motion to disallow the claims of said creditors is reversed and set aside and the said claims are disallowed."

At the time the appeal was allowed (the one which is now under consideration), assignments of error were filed assailing the action of the court in disallowing the claims, and the merit of these assignments has been elaborately insisted on in the argument at bar. As appellate jurisdiction over courts of bankruptcy is expressly provided for in the bankrupt law, including the cases or classes of cases in which this court has authority to review the action of courts of bankruptcy, we must turn, at least primarily, to that act in order to test the correctness of the motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction which has been made. Now, the subject of the power to review the orders of bankruptcy courts disallowing claims in bankruptcy proceedings is in express terms provided for by the bankrupt act in § 25a as follows:

"Appeals and Writs of Error.—a. That appeals and equity cases may be taken in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, and to the supreme court of the territories, in the following cases, to wit . . . (3) From a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over. *Such[117 appeal shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered, and may be heard and determined by the appellate court in term or vacation, as the case may be." [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432].

This express provision for the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by the courts therein named over the case here presented by necessary implication must be held to exclude the right of this court to exercise appellate jurisdiction over a subject not delegated unless some other provision of the statute compels to a contrary view. But instead of tending to so do, the context of the statute adds cogency to and makes irresistible the implication arising from the provision of 25a, above quoted. This result flows from the careful provision otherwise made by the statute for the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by this court over proceedings in courts of bankruptcy, or the orders, judgments, and decrees rendered by such courts, none of which embrace the character of case here presented. Indeed, when the context of the statute is considered and the distribution of appellate jurisdiction for which it provides is taken into view, it becomes certain that to extend by remote implication, based upon conceptions of inconvenience, the reviewing power of this court to a subject like the one now in question, would destroy the symmetry of the law, and would render necessary limitations on the power of this court to review as to important subjects concerning which the power would otherwise obtain.

See 25b, paragraphs 1 and 2, defining the appellate power of this court in certain cases, and see also the right to certify questions to this court, and the authority conferred on this court to allow writs of certiorari, conferred in § 25d, as well as authority conferred by 24a, to which we shall hereafter advert. We might well leave the sufficiency of the motion to dismiss to rest upon these conclusive considerations, but we nevertheless briefly refer to the contentions pressed in argument to the contrary.

*1. The main reliance is upon § 24a,[118 which, it is virtually insisted, controls the other provisions of the statute, and therefore confers jurisdiction in this case. The text of 24a is this:

"Jurisdiction of appellate courts.—a. The Supreme Court of the United States, the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, and the supreme courts of the territories, in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms, as now or as they may be hereafter held, are hereby invested with appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases. The Supreme Court of the United States shall exercise a like jurisdiction from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States, and from the supreme court of the District of Columbia."

But the entire argument rests upon a misconception of the words "controversies in bankruptcy proceedings," as used in the section, since it disregards the authoritative construction affixed to those words. Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 234, 53 L. ed. 777, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1008; Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 300, 48 L. ed. 986, 987, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690. Those cases expressly decide that controversies in bankruptcy proceedings, as used in the section, do not include mere steps in proceedings in bankruptcy, but embrace controversies which are not of that inherent character, even although they may arise in the course of proceedings in bankruptcy. The cases referred to, moreover, by necessary implication, determine that the mere allowing or disallowing a claim in bankruptcy is a proceeding in bankruptcy, and not a controversy arising in bankruptcy, within the intendment of the section. Nor is there force in the contention that because the district court of Porto Rico is a court of bankruptcy "not within an organized circuit of the United States," therefore authority to review its action in a case like this is conferred on this court by the concluding sentence of § 24a. This is 119]true, because *the proposition really rests upon the misconstruction of the section, already pointed out. That is to say, as the sentence relied upon only confers upon this court "a like jurisdiction" to review the acts of the particular courts of bankruptcy which the sentence designates to that conferred by the immediately preceding provisions of § 24a, that is, to review controversies in bankruptcy, it follows that the sentence confers no power to review a mere step in bankruptcy, taken by a bankrupt court, even although such court be one of those referred to in the last sentence relied upon.

The fact that the result of the previous settled construction of the statute causes it to come to pass that orders in mere proceedings in bankruptcy, rendered by the court below when acting as a court in bankruptcy, may not be susceptible of being reviewed in any court unless in some case where such review is specially provided for in the bankrupt act, affords no ground for disregarding the plain text of the statute by assuming jurisdiction where none exists.

It is true, as suggested in argument, that in Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 52 L. ed. 514, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419, jurisdiction was exerted to review the action of the court below in a case which was not susceptible of being reviewed under the construction of the statute which we have here applied. But in that case there was no appearance of counsel for the appellee, and while a general suggestion was made in the argument of appellant as to the duty of the court not to exceed its jurisdiction, no argument concerning the want of jurisdiction was made. The case, therefore, in substance proceeded upon a tacit assumption of the existence of jurisdiction,—an assumption which would not be now possible, in consequence of the authoritative construction given to 24a in Coder v. Arts, supra. Under these circumstances, the mere implication as to the meaning of the statute, resulting from the jurisdiction which was in that case merely assumed to exist, is not controlling, and the Armstrong Case, *therefore, in so far as it conflicts with [120 the construction which we here give the statute, must be deemed to be qualified and limited.

But it is urged that as the proceeding below was a controversy between the creditors and Munsuri as to whether he was liable as a general partner, the matter before us is susceptible of being treated as a controversy arising in bankruptcy, and as distinct from a step in bankruptcy proceedings. But under the circumstances here disclosed, the contention is wanting in candor. We say this because the appeal was specifically taken from the order as one disallowing the claim of the appellants of an alleged indebtedness to them from the bankrupt firm, and such was the character necessarily attributed to the order by the judge when he entered it, and which was affixed to it by the assignments of error filed at the time the appeal was taken. Moreover, we think the contention is necessarily negatived, as we have said, by the ruling in Coder v. Arts. Finally, it is contended that the right to review, wholly irrespective of the provisions of the bankrupt act, the order here in question, arises under § 35 of the Foraker act (31 Stat. at L. p. 85, chap. 191), enacted nearly two years after the passage of the bankrupt law, viz.:

"Writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the supreme court of Porto Rico and the district court of the United States shall be allowed and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States in the same manner, and under the same regulations, and in the same cases, as from the supreme courts of the territories of the United States; and such writs of error and appeal shall be allowed in all cases where the Constitution of the United States, or a treaty thereof, or an act of Congress, is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied."

Waiving consideration of the question as to whether the present appeal was allowed "in the same manner, and under the same regulations, and in the same cases, as from 121]the *supreme courts of the territories of the United States," we think it evident that, as to questions of the character of those presented by this appeal, arising in steps in bankruptcy proceedings proper, the modes of review specifically provided for in the bankruptcy act are exclusive.

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

JULIAN MUNSURI, Plff. in Err.,
v.

J. H. FRICKER,† Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 121-123.)

Appeal — from Porto Rico district court — bankruptcy case.

1. An attempt to have reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court an order of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, holding a member of a bankrupt partnership to be a general partner and generally liable for the firm debts, cannot be sustained under the judiciary act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, as an appeal solely upon the question of jurisdiction, but any right to have such order reviewed must be found in the bankrupt act.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1036-1043a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — review of proceedings and orders.

2. No support can be found in the provisions of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432), § 24b, authorizing a petition to superintend and revise in matters of law the proceedings of courts of bankruptcy, for an attempt to have reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court an order of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, holding a member of a bankrupt partnership to be a general partner and generally liable for the firm debts. [For other cases, see Bankruptcy, XIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 21.]

Argued October 27 and 30, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review an order holding a member of a bankrupt partnership to be a general partner and generally liable for the firm debts. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 2 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 95.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George H. Lamar argued the cause, and, with Mr. Willis Sweet, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. William G. Johnson argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Hawkins, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This case relates to the same bankruptcy proceeding, steps in which formed the basis of the appeal in case No. 22 [222 U. S. 114, ante, 118, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67], which has just been dismissed.

*In the petition for voluntary adju-[122 dication of the alleged bankrupt firm, Julian Munsuri was averred to be a limited or special partner. Following certain proceedings before the referee and a motion by general creditors, the court below, on October 25, 1907, entered an order declaring Munsuri to be a general partner of the firm and his personal estate liable for the firm debts. It was not, however, until February 19, 1909,—nearly sixteen months after the entry of the order, and following the disallowance by the court of the claims of certain creditors which had been allowed by the referee,—that this proceeding was commenced to obtain a review of the order and judgment of October 25, 1907. The proceeding for review was begun by the filing in the court below of a document styled "Petition for a Writ of Review to the United States District Court for Porto Rico," verified and certified as such by the attorney for Missouri, which document, however, although couched in part in the phraseology of a petition, is also in form a writ of error, directed to the judge of the court below. In the bond and citation reference is made to the proceeding as the prosecution of a writ of review for the correction of the judgment or order in the petition mentioned.

†Resignation of J. H. Fricker, as trustee, and the appointment of Charles O. Lord, as his successor, suggested October 27, 1911, and the said Charles O. Lord, as trustee, substituted as the party defendant in error herein.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rico courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

Objection is made by the counsel for the trustee to the exercise of jurisdiction by this court, on the ground that the supposed writ and citation thereon and the docketing of the transcript are insufficient in law under any statute, or rule, or practice of the court, to bring within the appellate jurisdiction of this court, for its consideration or correction, any of the matters and things charged in the transcript. On the other hand, the contention is that the proceeding may be sustained as an appeal solely upon the question of jurisdiction under § 5 of the judiciary act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549], or as a petition to superintend and revise in matter of law, under § 24b of the bankruptcy act. Aside from any question as to the lapse of time between the entry 123]*of the assailed order and the commencement of this proceeding for review, the decision in Tefft, W. & Co. v. Munsuri, No. 22, of this term, just decided, is controlling, because it was there expressly held that the express provisions for review contained in the bankruptcy act were controlling, and that review under 24b by this court is not authorized by the act.

Dismissed.

RAFAEL ENRIQUEZ et al., Appts.,
v.

FRANCISCO ENRIQUEZ and Carmen de la Cavada de Enriquez, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 123-127.)

Appeal — jurisdictional amount — affidavit of value.

1. An affidavit that the value of the real property, the title to and possession of which is involved in a suit to set aside a conveyance, is in excess of the jurisdictional amount prescribed by the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 695, chap. 1369, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 226), § 10, governing appeals to the Federal Supreme Court from the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, is inadequate to sustain such an appeal from a decree which, on the appeal of the defendants alone, reversed a decree of the trial court, upholding such conveyance as against the objections of forgery and mental incapacity, and setting the same aside as to one half of the property only, on the ground that it belonged to the estate of the grantor's deceased wife, as an acquêt of the community.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 375-379, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the supreme court of the Philippine Islands—see note to Martinez v. International Bkg. Corp. 55 L. ed. U. S. 438.

122

Appeal — jurisdictional amount — pleadings and record.

2. Statements in the complaint and amended complaint in a suit to set aside a conveyance of real property, from which might be inferred the existence of the jurisdictional amount requisite, under the act of July 1, 1902, § 10, to sustain an appeal from the supreme court of the Philippine Islands to the Federal Supreme Court, are insufficient as against a motion to dismiss, where the record otherwise shows that such amount is not involved.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 449-451, 471-474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 24.]

Argued and submitted October 31, 1911.

Decided December 4, 1911.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a decree which, on the appeal of the defendants alone, reversed a decree of the Court of First Instance of the City of Manila in a suit to set aside a conveyance of real property, upholding such conveyance as against objections of forgery and mental incapacity, and setting the same aside as to one half of the real property only, on the ground that, as to such property, the deed was beyond the grantor's power of disposition. Dismissed for want of jurisdictional amount.

See same case below, 8 Philippine, 565.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick L. Sidons and William E. Richardson, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. Allison D. Gibbs submitted the cause for appellees:

The value stated in the complaint must prevail, and an affidavit is not admissible to enhance it.

Richmond v. Milwaukee, 21 How. 391, 16 L. ed. 72; Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 106 U. S. 523, 27 L. ed. 268, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

It cannot be seriously contended that the amount in controversy in this appeal exceeds that in controversy before the supreme court of the Philippines, or that the amount in controversy in the latter court exceeded the amount of the judgment against the defendants in the court of first instance, when only the defendants appealed therefrom.

See Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 941; Gordon v. Ogden, 3 Pet. 33, 7 L. ed. 592; Smith v. Honey, 3 Pet. 469, 7 L. ed. 744; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Malin, 131 U. S. 394, 33 L. ed. 204, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792; Cooke v. Woodrow, 5 Cranch, 13, 3 L. ed. 22,

222 U. S.

124] *Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Rafael Enriquez, as administrator of the estate of his father, Antonio Enriquez, and as his heir, joined by other children and a grandchild of the deceased, also suing as heirs, who were plaintiffs below and are appellants here, sued to set aside a purported conveyance of a piece of real estate in the city of Manila, made by the deceased to his daughter-in-law, Carmen, the wife of a son, Francisco, who were defendants below and are appellees here. The case, as ultimately presented to the court of first instance, involved two questions: First, whether the assailed conveyance was forged, and if real, whether Antonio had mental capacity to execute it; and, second, if the sale was real and the mental capacity obtained, was one half the property embraced by the deed beyond the dispositive power of Antonio because such half belonged to the estate of his deceased wife, as an acquêt of the community which had existed between husband and wife. The court of first instance held that the sale was real and that there was mental capacity. It, however, decided that one undivided half of the property belonged, not to Antonio, but to his wife, in virtue of her community interest, and vested on her death in her heirs. To that extent the sale was set aside and judgment was directed for 13,250 pesos as the gross value of the use of the one undivided half of the property during the time it was unlawfully retained. This sum, however, was held to be reducible by the amount of one half of the expenditures made for the whole property, including repairs, improvements, etc., and the defendant Carmen Enriquez was ordered to forthwith make a statement of such expenditures for the purpose of an appropriate reduction in the allowance made for rents and profits. The defendants alone appealed.

In disposing of the appeal the supreme court said:

125] * "The plaintiffs in this court have neither assigned as errors the rulings made against them by the lower court, nor have they discussed any such rulings in their brief. So much of the decision, therefore, as is adverse to the plaintiffs, we cannot consider, and the questions to be resolved are those presented by the appeal of the defendants." [8 Philippine, 566].

Confining itself, therefore, to the question of the existence of the community, the court decided that the court below had erred on that subject, and its judgment was accordingly reversed. The court concluded its opinion as follows:

"The judgment of the court below, which rests solely upon the proposition that at the time of the death of Doña Ciriaca Villanueva one half of this property passed to her heirs, cannot, therefore, be sustained. That judgment is reversed, without costs to either party in this court, and judgment is entered, acquitting the defendants of the complaint, with the costs of the first instance against the plaintiffs."

This appeal was prosecuted. The assignments of error are solely directed to the conclusion of the court below concerning the nonexistence of the community interest, and the grounds of complaint on this subject have been elaborately pressed at bar, both orally and in printed argument. We are of opinion, however, that we may not consider the subject, as we conclude that a motion made to dismiss the appeal on the ground of the absence of the requisite jurisdictional amount must prevail.

The act of July 1, 1902, chap. 1369, § 10, 32 Stat. at L. 695, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 226, authorizes us to review judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands "in causes in which the value in controversy exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, or in which the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other *competent witnesses, [126 is involved or brought in question; . . ."

Evidently, in consequence of these requirements of the statute, there was filed with the assignments of error in the court below an affidavit of Rafael Enriquez, stating in general terms "that the real property, the title to and possession of which is involved therein (in the action), exceeds in value the sum of $25,000 gold coin of the United States." But even if the sum thus stated were to be accepted for the purpose of testing the existence of the requisite jurisdictional amount, the affidavit would be inadequate, since its context clearly gives rise to the inference that the sum stated is not the value of the undivided one half of the property in controversy, but the value of the entire property. But even if it be conceded that the deficiency of the affidavit may be supplied by a resort to the record, we are of opinion that the record establishes that the essential jurisdictional amount does not exist. True, the complaint and amended complaint state amounts from which, if considered alone, it might be possible to conjecture that the jurisdictional amount existed. These pleadings seem, however, not to have been verified, and if they had been their effect would be neutralized by other parts of the record. In the first place, the consideration expressed for the sale made by Antonio Enriquez of the entire property was only 8,000 pesos, and while the amended complaint, in assailing the conveyance, alleged the actual value of the property to have been 20,000 pesos, the trial court, from the evidence, found that the real value of the property at the time of the sale was 14,000 pesos; that is, $7,000 currency of the United States. In the second place, that the rents and profits were greatly exaggerated in the complaint and amended complaint is shown by the fact that only 13,250 pesos was allowed by the court 127] as the value of the use of *one half of the property while wrongfully withheld, and this amount was subject to be reduced by charging against it the one half cost of administering the property, including disbursements for repairs, improvements, etc., during such period. In other words, whether we look at the affidavit alone, or whether we consider the record as a whole, we think it is demonstrated not only that there is a failure to establish that the requisite jurisdictional amount exists, but moreover it affirmatively appears that such amount is not involved.

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

RAFAEL ENRIQUEZ et al., Appts.,
v.

FRANCISCO ENRIQUEZ and Carmen de la Cavada de Enriquez, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 127-130.)

Appeal — jurisdictional amount — affidavit.

The value of the real property involved in a suit to set aside conveyances thereof as fraudulent simulations cannot be said to be shown by a preponderance of evidence to be in excess of the jurisdictional amount prescribed for appeals from the supreme court of the Philippine Islands to the Federal Supreme Court by an affidavit to that effect, where there is an opposing affidavit, and the record shows that the requisite value does not exist.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 375-379, Dig. Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 25.]

Argued and submitted October 31, 1911.
Decided December 4, 1911.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a decree which, on a second appeal, reversed a decree of the Court of First Instance of the City of Manila, setting aside certain conveyances of real property as fraudulent simulations. Dismissed for want of jurisdictional amount.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the supreme court of the Philippine Islands—see note to Martinez v. International Bkg. Corp. 55 L. ed. U. S. 438.

See same case below, 1st appeal, 3 Philippine, 746; 2d appeal, 8 Philippine, 607.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick L. Sidons and William E. Richardson, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. Allison D. Gibbs submitted the cause for appellees:

An appeal will be dismissed when it appears from the whole record that the matter in dispute is less than the jurisdictional amount.

Gray v. Blanchard, 97 U. S. 564, 24 L. ed. 1108; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 115 U. S. 611, 29 L. ed. 502, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192.

The onus probandi as to the amount in controversy, to establish the jurisdiction in a case brought before the court by writ of error, is upon the party seeking to obtain a revision of the case.

Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 941; Wilson v. Blair, 119 U. S. 387, 30 L. ed. 441, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230.

An appeal in an action for partition will be dismissed where the value of appellants' share does not reach the jurisdictional amount.

Parker v. Morrill, 106 U. S. 1, 27 L. ed. 72, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; McCarthy v. Provost, 103 U. S. 673, 26 L. ed. 337.

Affidavits as to value are not admissible where evidence has been admitted on both sides and the proofs have been transmitted.

Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The amount in controversy cannot be held to exceed the amount of the judgment of the court of first instance as to rental value of the property, from which plaintiffs did not appeal.

Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 941; Gordon v. Ogden, 3 Pet. 33, 7 L. ed. 592; Smith v. Honey, 3 Pet. 469, 7 L. ed. 744; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Malin, 131 U. S. 394, 33 L. ed. 204, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792; Cooke v. Woodrow, 5 Cranch, 13, 3 L. ed. 22.

*Mr. Chief Justice White delivered [128 the opinion of the court:

This controversy is substantially between those who were parties of record in cause No. 24, just decided. [222 U. S. 123, ante, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.] In this action the administrator and the majority of the heirs of Antonio Enriquez assailed a deed of certain property in Manila, executed by Francisco Enriquez as attorney in fact of his father, Antonio, and also a sale of the same property subsequently made to the wife of Francisco Enriquez by the person to whom he had previously conveyed it, both the deeds being assailed on the ground that they were fraudulent simulations. The prayer was that the deeds be held to be void, and for a judgment for rents and profits. The court of first instance having decreed in favor of the administrator, the defendants appealed to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, which court reversed the judgment and remanded the cause for further proceedings.

Following a second judgment in favor of the administrator, the cause was again taken to the supreme court, and that tribunal not only again reversed the judgment below, but entered one "acquitting the defendants of the complaint." This appeal was then taken, and a motion to dismiss has been made upon the ground that the requisite jurisdictional value is not involved. Contemporaneous with the allowance of the appeal there was filed in the court below an affidavit of Rafael Enriquez, in which he averred "that the real property the title to and possession of which is involved therein exceeds in value the sum of $25,000 gold coin of the United States." Thereafter the appellees filed the affidavit of A. B. Powell, chief of the real estate division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the city of Manila, whose duty it is to fix the valuation of real property in the city of Manila, to the effect that he was 129]familiar with the value of *such real property. That the assessed value in Philippine currency of the property in question (land and improvements) was as follows:

For the years 1901 and 1902, 12,236.96 pesos.

For the years 1903 to 1907, 12,582.90 pesos.

For the year 1908, 12,192.60 pesos.

He also swore "that such assessed value was and is the true value of the property during the time mentioned." If both the affidavits be accepted, it plainly results that, considering the value of the property alone, the requisite jurisdictional amount has not been established by the preponderance of evidence. But if the conflict between the two statements be resolved by resort to the record, then we think it affirmatively appears that the requisite value does not exist. At the trial the defendants introduced proof tending to show that the value of the property when originally bought by Antonio Enriquez, as well as at the time when it was conveyed to the wife of Francisco Enriquez, was materially less than the assessed value. Indeed, this proof tended to show that the building on the property was in ruins at the time of the purchase by the wife of Francisco, and was therefore practically worthless for rental purposes. This was sustained by proof that the very small sum of $750 was attributed to the building or improvements on the lot in the assessment of 1901. Despite this evidence, no proof then was offered on behalf of the plaintiffs as to the value of the property except that of one witness, who expressed the opinion that the property, at the time he testified, was worth about 16,000 pesos, or $8,000 currency of the United States. The demonstration as to the absence of the jurisdictional amount which results from these considerations is not changed by taking into view the question of rents and profits. This conclusion is inevitable, since even if the amount of rents and revenues, that is, the value of the use of the property allowed by the court of first instance, be taken into account, *and[130 allowance be made at the same ratio to the date of the judgment appealed from, such sum, when added either to the assessed value or to the value fixed by the plaintiff's own witness at the trial, would be much below $25,000. On this record "we are clear," as was found to be the case in Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 632, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, "that the jurisdictional value is not made out by a preponderance of evidence;" and the appeal is therefore dismissed.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
ALBERT ECKSTEIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 130-138.)

Duties — similitude clause — artificial horsehair.

Imitation horsehair produced from cotton waste by a chemical process, being like cotton yarn as to material and use, is dutiable under the similitude clause of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1626), § 7, at the rate levied by paragraph 302 on cotton yarn, and not under § 6, as a nonenumerated manufactured article. [For other cases, see Duties, 61, 84-88, 129, 177, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 52.]

Argued November 10, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, affirming a decision of the board of general appraisers, held that artificial horsehair was dutiable under the similitude clause of the tariff act at the rate levied on cotton yarn. Affirmed.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 192, 167 Fed. 802.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Wemple argued the cause, and, with Mr. Martin T. Baldwin, special attorney, filed a brief for petitioner:

Statutory similitude has been held to be a substantial similitude in one or more of the particulars mentioned in § 7 of the tariff act of 1897.

Arthur v. Fox, 108 U. S. 125, 128, 27 L. ed. 675, 676, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371; Stuart v. Maxwell, 16 How. 150, 162, 14 L. ed. 883, 888; Murphy v. Arnson, 96 U. S. 131, 133, 24 L. ed. 773, 774; Pickhardt v. Merritt, 132 U. S. 252, 259, 33 L. ed. 353, 356, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

Substantial similitude in material is not established.

United States v. W. N. Proctor & Co. 76 C. C. A. 96, 145 Fed. 126.

Substantial similitude in use is not established.

John A. Paterson & Co. v. United States, 92 C. C. A. 524, 166 Fed. 733; United States v. Rheims Co. 99 C. C. A. 350, 175 Fed. 778.

Mr. Wade H. Ellis argued the cause, and, with Mr. John A. Kratz, Jr., filed a brief for respondent:

The question of the similitude is one of fact.

Erhardt v. Steinhardt, 153 U. S. 177, 38 L. ed. 678, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Herrman v. Arthur (Herrman v. Miller) 127 U. S. 363, 370, 32 L. ed. 186, 189, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1090; Wills v. Russell, 100 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 607.

Similitude does not mean identity.

United States v. Roessler & H. Chemical Co. 70 C. C. A. 346, 137 Fed. 770; Greenleaf v. Goodrich, 101 U. S. 278, 283, 25 L. ed. 845, 846; Fisk v. Arthur, 103 U. S. 431, 26 L. ed. 520; Arthur v. Fox, 108 U. S. 125, 27 L. ed. 675, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371; Pickhardt v. Merritt, 132 U. S. 252, 33 L. ed. 353, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Stuart v. Maxwell, 16 How. 150, 14 L. ed. 883; Mandel v. Seeberger, 39 Fed. 760; Re Herter Bros. 4 C. C. A. 107, 20 U. S. App. 254, 53 Fed. 913; United States v. Dana, 39 C. C. A. 590, 99 Fed. 433; Hahn v. United States, 40 C. C. A. 622, 100 Fed. 635; Tiffany v. United States, 50 C. C. A. 419, 112 Fed. 672; Re Guggenheim Smelting Co. 50 C. C. A. 374, 112 Fed. 517; R. J. Waddell & Co. v. United States, 124 Fed. 301; United States v. Rich, 100 C. C. A. 278, 176 Fed. 732.

The evidence establishes that substantial similitude exists in use to cotton yarn.

Pickhardt v. Merritt, 132 U. S. 252, 258, 33 L. ed. 353, 356, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Arthur v. Fox, 108 U. S. 125, 27 L. ed. 675, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371; Stuart v. Maxwell, 16 How. 150, 14 L. ed. 883; United States v. Roessler & H. Chemical Co. 70 C. C. A. 346, 137 Fed. 770.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit concerns the correct classification, under the tariff act of July 24, 1897, chap. 11, 30 Stat. at L. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1626, of artificial or imitation horsehair, imported by the respondent into the port of New York on October 5, 1904.

Artificial or imitation horsehair is made from cotton waste by two processes, the Fremery and the Chardonnet. By the first process, referred to in the opinion of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, in Hardt von Bernuth & Co. v. United States, 76 C. C. A. 638, 146 Fed. 61, the cotton waste is dissolved in a solution of cup-ammonium, a salt of copper and ammonia, and this solution is forced through fine openings, discharging into a bath of acetic acid, forming threads of cellulose. By the second process the cotton waste, or raw cotton, is at first turned into gun cotton. This gun cotton is then mixed with alcohol and ether, and dissolved into a liquid, and this liquid is forced by pressure through pipes, at the end of which there are a number of small openings. The material is subsequently subjected to a process which it is not necessary to describe.

In the manufacture under both processes the single filaments are not allowed to solidify, although they are made *to stick[134 together, whereas in the manufacture by the like process of artificial silk, the fine filaments are grouped and twisted together and solidified. The imitation horsehair is usually died black, imported in skeins, and sometimes on spools.

Imitation horsehair is not expressly mentioned in the tariff act of 1897, probably because it was not commercially known when the act was passed.

The provisions of the act of 1897 which are required to be considered in the determination of the question to be decided, briefly, are these, viz.: Section 6. providing for duty on nonenumerated articles; § 7, the "similitude clause;" paragraph 302, the cotton yarn clause; and paragraph 385, the silk yarn clause.

The goods were classified by the collector at the port of New York as "similar" to silk yarn, and reference was made to prior decisions, viz.: G. A. 4,939, 5,081, and 5,257. Duty was collected at the rate of "30 per centum ad valorem, under paragraph 385, the silk yarn provision, as a result of applying § 7 of the 'similitude clause.' The importer protested, claiming the merchandise to be dutiable at the rate provided by paragraph 302, by similitude to cotton yarn, or at the rate of 20 per cent, under § 6, as a nonenumerated manufactured article."

Before the Board of General Appraisers testimony was seemingly directed on the part of the importers to establishing that the material was, and on the part of the government that it was not, a yarn. On June 22, 1906, the board reversed the action of the collector, and sustained the alternative claim of the importers, that the merchandise was dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article under § 6. G. A. 6,387, T. D. 27,442. It is worthy of remark, however, that, pending the hearing before the board, the Secretary of the Treasury, in Treasury Decisions 27,350, May 15, 1906, directed collectors of customs that duty should be assessed on imitation horse-135hair as a nonenumerated "manufactured article at the rate of 20 per centum ad valorem, under § 6.

By appropriate proceedings Eckstein, the respondent here, invoked the exercise of jurisdiction by the circuit court for the southern district of New York for the review of questions of law and fact involved in the decision of the Board of General Appraisers, and in that court contended that the merchandise was a yarn, and was by similitude dutiable under paragraph 302 as a cotton yarn. The court, after hearing additional testimony, decided that the merchandise was not yarn, could not by similitude be assessed as cotton yarn or yarn of any other kind, and that the board properly assessed it under § 6 as a manufactured article not otherwise provided for. 160 Fed. 287.

The circuit court of appeals reversed the judgment, and held that the merchandise should be classified under § 7 of the act as a nonenumerated article similar to cotton yarn, and the duty should be assessed under the paragraph (302) relating to cotton yarn. Referring to its previous opinion in the Bernuth Case, already referred to, wherein it was held that artificial silk, which, as we have already said, is made by similar processes, should be so classified, the court said:

"The judge of the circuit court affirmed the government's classification, distinguishing that case on the ground that artificial silk was found to be a yarn, whereas artificial horsehair, being solid, and not composed of twisted or spun filaments, is not a yarn. Admitting that this is so, still, artificial horsehair is like cotton yarn in material, each being composed almost entirely of cellulose, and like it in use, being largely used as glazed cotton is in making hat braids, shoe laces, binding braids, tapes, and imitation horsehair. We think these resemblances establish its similitude to cotton yarn, even if the texture of the two articles is different." [93 C. C. A. 193, 167 Fed. 802.]

This writ of certiorari was thereupon allowed.

*The question is simply this: Did136 the circuit court of appeals properly classify the merchandise?

The portion of § 7, the similitude clause of the act of 1897, with which we are concerned, is as follows:

"Section 7. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this act, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this act as chargeable with duty, shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; . . ."

In the brief for the government it is said: "It is well established that the requirements of the similitude clause of § 7 are satisfied if there be shown a proper similarity in any one of the four particulars,—material, quality, texture, or use"—enumerated in the section. Arthur v. Fox, 108 U. S. 125, 27 L. ed. 675, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371.

As said by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, in United States v. Roessler & H. Chemical Co. 70 C. C. A. 346, 137 Fed. 770: "It must be borne in mind that the statute does not require identity; if that were necessary, the statute would have no raison d'être."

The decisions of the Board of General Appraisers and of the circuit court were placed upon the ground that the merchandise produced by a chemical process was not structurally a yarn, such as is produced by the mechanical process of spinning. It was not, by either the board or the court, found that there was no substantial similarity to cotton yarn in material or use. We think the evidence justifies the contention of counsel for the importer that commercially the merchandise is a yarn. As we have before said, the government originally contended that it was a yarn, and it is reflex significance that in the tariff act of 1909 [36 Stat. at L. 60, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 717], special provision is made for these things in paragraph 405, as for "yarns, threads, filaments of artificial or imitation silk, or *of artificial or imitation horsehair, by whatever name known, and by whatever process made." But assuming, for argument sake, as did the circuit court of appeals, that the merchandise is not a yarn, let us consider, even if the texture of the articles, be different, whether it was correctly held that the similitude to cotton yarn was established because "artificial horsehair is like cotton yarn in material, each being composed almost entirely of cellulose, and like it in use, being largely used as glazed cotton is, in making hat braids, shoe laces, binding braids, tapes, and imitation horsehair."

As to material: Respondent does not claim similarity between the merchandise in question and cotton because cellulose is found in each; the contention is that there is similarity in material because the proportion of the ingredients—cellulose, water, etc.—is the same in the merchandise in question as the proportion of the same ingredients in cotton. Counsel say, and the contention is, we think, supported by the evidence:

"The goods are made of cotton fibers. Cotton consists of pure cellulose with a small percentage of hygroscopic water. The merchandise in suit is pure cellulose with a small percentage of hygroscopic water. It differs only from the cotton fiber in that the cell structure has been broken down. Other than this, cotton and the merchandise in suit are identical in material. No element is found in cotton which is not present in this merchandise; no element is in this merchandise which is not found in cotton; and the proportion of elements in both is approximately the same."

As to use: Paragraph 302 of the act covers cotton yarns regardless of their use. Thus, yarns have four broad, general uses, viz.: knitting, weaving, sewing, and braiding; and manifestly a given cotton yarn could not be used for all the purposes of all cotton yarns. In the group of hard twisted yarns is found cotton yarn, used in the production of hat braids, and in the same commercial group appears the merchandise in suit. One of the many varieties of cotton yarn used in making hat braids is what is known as glazed or polished cotton yarn. It is asserted and not denied that such merchandise has been uniformly classified for customs purposes as a cotton yarn, and so far from being a highly specialized and unusual commodity, it has been an important article of commerce for at least thirty years. However, while imitation horsehair is generally used in the production of hat braids, and is used interchangeably with glazed cotton yarn for such purpose, it has, in common with cotton yarns, other uses, which are referred to in the opinion of the circuit court of appeals.

Upon the whole, we are of opinion that there is a substantial statutory similitude between cotton yarns enumerated in paragraph 302 and the merchandise in question, both as to material and use. As the requirement of the statute is not that there shall be similarity in all of the four particulars enumerated in § 7, but a substantial similarity in one of those particulars may be adequate, the classification adopted by the Circuit Court of Appeals was proper, and its judgment is therefore affirmed.

*MORRIS GLICKSTEIN [139]
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 139-144.)

Witnesses — privilege — immunity.

1. Congress may compel the giving of testimony which may serve to incriminate the witness, provided immunity be accorded in all respects commensurate with the guaranty of U. S. Const., 5th Amend., against self-crimination.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — privilege — immunity — perjury.

2. The immunity which must, under U. S. Const., 5th Amend., be accorded to a witness compelled to give evidence against himself, relates only to past offenses, and need not exempt the witness from prosecution for perjury committed when so testifying.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — privilege — immunity — perjury by bankrupt.

3. The immunity clause in the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 548, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3425), § 7, subd. 9, that no testimony given by the bankrupt under the command of that section shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding, does not bar a criminal prosecution for perjury for false swearing when giving such testimony. [For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 486.]

NOTE.—As to the constitutional protection against being forced to furnish evidence to be used against one's self in a civil case—see note to Levy v. Superior Ct. 29 L.R.A. 811.

As to sufficiency of statutory immunity to satisfy the constitutional guaranty against self-crimination—see notes to Re Buskett, 14 L.R.A. 407; United States v. James, 26 L.R.A. 418; and Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 48 L. ed. U. S. 860.

Submitted October 19, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, presenting the question whether the immunity accorded to a bankrupt testifying under the command of the bankrupt act is applicable to a prosecution for perjury committed by the bankrupt when so testifying. Answered in the negative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. N. P. Bryan and John E. Hart-ridge submitted the cause for Glickstein:

When the language of a Constitution or statute is clear, plain, and without ambiguity, effect must be given to it; in such event, there is no uncertainty to be explained, there is nothing to be construed.

Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 202, 4 L. ed. 529, 550; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Yerke v. United States, 173 U. S. 439, 442, 43 L. ed. 760, 761, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 419, 421, 44 L. ed. 219, 221, 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. §§ 366, 367.

The immunity from self-crimination is applicable in a prosecution for an offense other than one connected with bankruptcy.

Burrell v. Montana, 194 U. S. 572, 48 L. ed. 1122, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

The other Federal courts which have had to deal with this question have uniformly construed the immunity afforded to be applicable to cases similar to this.

Remington, Bankr. § 1558; United States v. Simon, 146 Fed. 89; Jacobs v. United States, 88 C. C. A. 554, 161 Fed. 694; Re Marx, 102 Fed. 676; Re Logan, 102 Fed. 876; Re Gaylord, 50 C. C. A. 415, 112 Fed. 668; Re Leslie, 119 Fed. 406.

Solicitor General Lehmann submitted the cause for the United States:

The criminal proceeding intended by the statute, in which the testimony given by the bankrupt at the examination may not be offered against him, is a proceeding for a past offense, and not a proceeding for perjury committed in the examination itself.

Edelstein v. United States, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 236, 79 C. C. A. 328, 149 Fed. 636; Wechsler v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 37, 158 Fed. 579; United States v. Brod, 176 Fed. 165; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; People v. Cahill, 126 App. Div. 391, 110 N. Y. Supp. 728.

56 L. ed.

*Mr. Chief Justice White delivered [140 the opinion of the court:

Glickstein, an adjudicated bankrupt, was indicted for perjury in having falsely sworn in the bankruptcy proceeding, while under examination before a referee, as required by the 7th section, subdiv. 9, of the bankrupt act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 548, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3425]. The indictment was demurred to on the following grounds: "(a) A prosecution for perjury against a bankrupt at a meeting of his creditors will not lie; (b) The indictment was based upon testimony given by the bankrupt, affecting the administration and settlement of his estate; (c) A person cannot be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." At the trial which followed the overruling of the demurrer, the testimony of Glickstein, which was the subject of the indictment, was offered and objected to on the same grounds upon which the demurrer was based, and exceptions were taken to the admission of the testimony in evidence.

When the legality of a conviction and sentence of Glickstein was before the court below, as the result of error prosecuted by him, the court, stating the facts which we have recited, certified the following question: "Is subsec. 9 and the immunity afforded by it applicable to a prosecution for perjury committed by the bankrupt when examined under it?"

Section 7, subdiv. 9, which we are required to consider in order to solve the question, is as follows:

"The bankrupt shall . . . (9) when present at the first meeting of his creditors, and at such other times as the court shall order, submit to an examination concerning the conducting of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and, in addition, all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate; but no testimony given *by [141 him shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding."

It is difficult to determine from the contentions urged in favor of an affirmative answer, whether it is deemed the solution of the problem requires us to decide a question of constitutional right, or simply calls for an interpretation of the provision of the bankrupt act to which the question relates. To exclude irrelevant matter, and to confine our attention to the precise subject to be passed upon, we state certain propositions which are not open to controversy, because foreclosed by decisions of this court, or which, if not expressly foreclosed, are so indubitably the result of settled principles as to cause them also to be not subject to reasonable dispute.

1st. It is undoubted that the constitutional guaranty of the 5th Amendment does not deprive the lawmaking authority of the power to compel the giving of testimony, even although the testimony, when given, might serve to incriminate the one testifying, provided immunity be accorded, the immunity, of course, being required to be complete; that is to say, in all respects commensurate with the protection guaranteed by the constitutional limitation. The authorities which establish this elementary proposition are too numerous to be cited, and we therefore simply refer to a few of the leading cases on the subject: Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Burrell v. Montana, 194 U. S. 572, 578, 48 L. ed. 1122, 1123, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787; Jack v. Kansas, 199 U. S. 372, 50 L. ed. 234, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 689; Ballmann v. Fagin, 200 U. S. 186, 195, 50 L. ed. 433, 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 66, 50 L. ed. 652, 662, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; and Heike v. United States, 217 U. S. 423, 54 L. ed. 821, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539.

2d. As the authority which the proposition just stated embraces exists, and as the sanction of an oath and the imposition of a punishment for false swearing are inherently a part of the power to compel the giving of testimony, they are included in that grant of authority, and are not prohibited by the immunity as to self-incrimination. Of 142]*course, this proposition is essentially the resultant of the first, since, unless it be well founded, the first also must be wanting in foundation. This must be the result, as it cannot be conceived that there is power to compel the giving of testimony where no right exists to require that the testimony shall be given under such circumstances and safeguards as to compel it to be truthful. In other words, this is but to say that an authority which can only extend to the licensing of perjury is not a power to compel the giving of testimony. Of course, these propositions being true, it is also true that the immunity afforded by the constitutional guaranty relates to the past, and does not endow the person who testifies with a license to commit perjury. That this is not disputable is shown by the fact that it has been accepted as self-evident in providing for immunity for one compelled to testify, as shown by the reservation in Rev. Stat. § 860 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), declaring that the immunity shall not extend to "exempt any party or witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in discovering or testifying as aforesaid," and by a like provision, contained in the act of February 11, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. p. 443, chap. 83, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3173). The first of these provisions was considered in Counselman v. Hitchcock, supra, and the second in Brown v. Walker, supra, where it was expressly decided that the statute containing it complied with the constitutional guaranty.

With these propositions in hand, it follows that the precise question for decision is, Did the guaranty of immunity contained in the 9th subdivision of § 7 of the bankrupt act bar a prosecution for perjury for false swearing in giving testimony under the command of the section? In other words, the sole question is, Does the statute, in compelling the giving of testimony, confer an immunity wider than that guaranteed by the Constitution? The argument to maintain that it does is that, as the statute provides for immunity, and does not contain the *reservation found in either [143 § 860, Rev. Stat., or that embodied in the act of 1893, therefore, under the rule that the inclusion of one is the exclusion of the other, such reservation cannot be implied. Or, to state the proposition in another form, it is that as the statute in the immunity clause says, "But no testimony given by him (the witness who is compelled to be examined) shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding," and as these words are unambiguous, there is no room for limiting the language so as to cause the immunity provision not to prohibit the offer of the testimony in a criminal prosecution for perjury. But the contention assumes the question for decision, since it excludes the possibility of construction when, on the face of the statute, the meaning attributed to the immunity clause cannot be given to it without destroying the words of the statute and frustrating its obvious object and intent. This may not be denied, since the statute expressly commands the giving of testimony, and its manifest purpose is to secure truthful testimony, while the limited and exclusive meaning which the contention attributes to the immunity clause would cause the section to be a mere license to commit perjury, and hence not to command the giving of testimony in the true sense of the word.

The argument that because the section does not contain an expression of the reservation of a right to prosecute for perjury in harmony with the reservations in Rev. Stat., 860, and the act of 1893, therefore it is to be presumed that it was intended that no such right should exist, we think, simply begs the question for decision, since it is impossible in reason to conceive that Congress commanded the giving of testimony, and at the same time intended that false testimony might be given with impunity, in the absence of the most express and specific command to that effect.

Bearing in mind the subject dealt with, we think the reservation of the right to prosecute for perjury, made in the *statutes to which we have referred, was but the manifestation of abundant caution; and hence, the absence of such reservation in the statute under consideration may not be taken as indicative of an intention on the part of Congress that perjury might be committed at pleasure.

Some of the considerations which we have pointed out were accurately expounded in Edelstein v. United States, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 236, 79 C. C. A. 328, 149 Fed. 636, by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, and in Wechsler v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 37, 158 Fed. 579, by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit. And this leads us to observe that the necessary result of the conclusion now reached is to disapprove the opinions in Re Marx, 102 Fed. 676, and Re Logan, 102 Fed. 876.

It follows that the question propounded must receive a negative answer, and our order will be, question certified answered "No."

HENRY C. RIPLEY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 498.)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
HENRY C. RIPLEY. (No. 499.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 144-148.)

Appeal — from court of claims — remanding for additional findings — compliance with mandate.

Additional findings made by the court of claims do not conform to the mandate of the Federal Supreme Court, remanding the record on cross appeals from an award under a contract for a public work, for an explicit finding as to the knowledge and good faith of the government inspector whose action is alleged to have impeded greatly the progress of the work, to the claimant's injury where the statement in such findings that the inspector was knowingly acting in bad faith is qualified by other language which shows that such knowledge and bad faith are inferred solely from lapse of time, 56 L. ed.

with nothing to indicate that such an inference is a necessary conclusion. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3368a-3370, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 498 and 499.]

Decided December 4, 1911.

CROSS APPEALS from the Court of Claims to review an award under a contract for a public work. On return to a mandate directing additional findings. Cause again remanded for compliance with mandate.

See same case below, 45 Ct. Cl. 621.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William H. Robeson, Ben Carter, and F. Carter Pope for Ripley.

Attorney General Wickersham, Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson, and Mr. P. M. Ashford for the United States.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Ripley recovered the sum of alleged losses occasioned by the delay consequent on the refusal of the inspector in charge of certain jetty work, being performed under contract with the United States in Aransas Pass, Texas, to permit the placing of certain crest blocks on the foundation intended to receive them. Both the United States and Ripley appealed. At the last term, when the case was before us, it became necessary to ascertain how far the findings of fact established the good or bad faith of the inspector in refusing to permit the crest blocks to be placed in position, and even upon the hypothesis of bad faith, to determine whether Ripley had been so negligent in notifying the engineer officer who was in charge of the work of the refusal of the inspector as to bar a right to recover for loss occasioned by such refusal. Concluding that the findings of fact on these subjects were so inadequate and possibly so misleading as to render it impossible for us to decide the cause on the merits, our action was stayed, and the court below was directed to make and transmit as *speedily as possible additional findings on the subject referred to, as follows:

"First. Whether, when the claimant was laying the slope stones, and during the months of December, 1903, and January, February, March, and April, 1904, as recited in finding 7, the inspector in charge knew that large parts of the work done by the claimant had fully settled and consolidated.

"Second. Whether, in the various refusals to permit the laying of crest blocks, stated in finding 7, the inspector in charge acted in good faith.

"Third. Whether at any time the claimant notified the engineer officer in charge or the chief of engineers that the inspector in charge wrongfully refused to permit the laying of the crest blocks, and, if such notice was given, whether it was oral or written, when the notice or notices were given, and what action, if any, was taken by such superior officer."

[See 220 U. S. 491, 55 L. ed. 557, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478].

The case is now before us upon additional findings made by the court below in assumed compliance with our previous order. These findings are as follows:

"(1) When denying permission to the claimant to lay crest blocks, as stated in finding 7, the inspector in charge knew, from the time which had elapsed, that large parts of the core theretofore completed by the claimant had fully settled and consolidated, and were ready for the crest blocks to be laid thereon.

(2) The refusal of said inspector to allow crest blocks to be laid at the time requested in said finding 7, thereby unreasonably delayed the work, and was, on his part, a gross mistake. There is no other evidence of bad faith on the part of the assistant engineer in immediate charge.

(3) There is no evidence to show that any protest or notice was ever made to the engineer in charge (whose office was in Galveston), or to the Chief of Engineers (whose office was in Washington), or to any officer other than the assistant engineer in immediate charge of the work of inspection."

But when we again approach the duty of deciding the case on its merits in the light afforded by these additional findings, we are constrained to the conclusion that they fail to comply with our previous order, directing a finding as to knowledge on the part of the inspector, and an unequivocal finding as to his good or his bad faith.

A few words will suffice to indicate the reasons which compel us to this conclusion. Thus, in the first place, while paragraph 1 finds that the inspector knew, at the time he made the refusal to permit the placing of the crest blocks upon the foundations, that they had sufficiently consolidated to be able to receive the blocks, this is qualified by the statement that such knowledge on the part of the inspector was but derived from the period which had elapsed between the building of the foundations and the time when the refusal to permit the laying of the crest blocks was made. But this qualification causes the paragraph to be ambiguous as to the existence or non-existence of good faith on the part of the inspector, since there is nothing in the paragraph which directly or indirectly establishes that the mere lapse of time, in view of the nature and character of the work, the materials which had entered into it, and the situation in which it was placed, caused it to be impossible for the inspector to have been in good faith when he refused to permit the crest blocks to be laid.

And the same result arises from an accurate consideration of the second paragraph. This is true because, although that paragraph states that the refusal to permit the laying of crest blocks unreasonably delayed the work and was a gross mistake on the part of the inspector, these statements are qualified by the finding that there is no other evidence of bad faith "on the part of the assistant *engineer in immediate charge,"—a qualification which necessarily correlates the two paragraphs, and again causes the inference of gross mistake to depend upon the lapse of time referred to in the first paragraph, without any finding whatever justifying the deduction that the lapse of time, in view of the other proof in the case, excluded the possibility of the exercise of an honest judgment on the part of the inspector.

Again, while the third paragraph is clear when considered in and of itself, it nevertheless, when read in connection with the two other paragraphs, exhibits such an inaccuracy of statement as may tend to mislead, and therefore requires to be corrected. The refusal to permit the laying of the crest blocks, as shown by the original findings, was made by the inspector in immediate charge of the work, and it was as to the good or bad faith of that person to which our previous order was directed. Evidently, recognizing that fact, the first paragraph of the additional finding speaks solely with reference to the assumed knowledge of the inspector in charge, and yet the second and third paragraphs, by referring, the one to "the assistant engineer in immediate charge," and the other to "the assistant engineer in immediate charge of the work of inspection," may give rise to confusion by suggesting that these two findings, by their change of language, refer to a different person than the mere inspector in charge.

Concluding, for the reasons stated, that the additional findings do not conform to our previous order, since they do not make a direct and unequivocal finding as to the good or bad faith of the inspector, it becomes necessary that such findings be returned to the court below, to the end that our previous direction may be complied with, and an order to that effect will be therefore entered.

The case will therefore be remanded for compliance with our previous order.

149] *A. H. GRIGSBY, Petitioner,

v.

R. L. RUSSELL and Lillie Burchard, Administrators of John C. Burchard, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 149-157.)

Insurance — forfeiture for nonpayment of premium — waiver.

1. A condition in a policy of life insurance that it shall be void if premiums are not paid when due means only that it shall be voidable at the option of the company, and a breach of the condition may be waived.

[For other cases, see Insurance, VII. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — assignment of policy — insurable interest of assignee.

2. The holder of a valid policy of insurance upon his own life may, as a matter of financial necessity, make a valid assignment of the policy to a person having no insurable interest in the life of the insured, in consideration of a small sum of money and an undertaking to pay the premiums due and to become due, and the assignee takes the entire interest in the policy, as against the personal representatives of the insured.

[For other cases, see Insurance, X., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — assignment of policy — insurable interest of assignee.

3. A clause in a policy of life insurance that any claim against the company arising under any assignment of the policy shall be subject to proof of interest does not diminish the rights of an assignee with no insurable interest, as against the personal representatives of the insured, if there is no rule of law to that effect, and the company sees fit to pay.

[For other cases, see Insurance, X., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 53.]

Argued November 10 and 13, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

NOTE.—On the validity of an assignment of interest in life insurance policy to one paying premiums—see notes to Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Elison, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 935, and McRae v. Warmack, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 949.

As to insurable interest as affecting assignment of insurance policy—see notes to Rylander v. Allen, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 128; Kopetovske v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 111 C. C. A. 273; and Page v. Burnstine, 26 L. ed. U. S. 268.

56 L. ed.

(ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Middle District of Tennessee, held an assignment of a policy of life insurance to an assignee with no insurable interest valid only to the extent of the money actually given for it and the premiums subsequently paid. Reversed.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 61, 168 Fed. 577.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Montague S. Ross and John A. Pitts argued the cause, and with Mr. K. T. McConnico, filed a brief for petitioner:

The circuit court of appeals erred in holding that the sale and assignment of this policy of insurance by the insured to the petitioner, under the circumstances revealed in this record, was void.

Gordon v. Ware Nat. Bank, 67 L.R.A. 550, 65 C. C. A. 580, 132 Fed. 444; Clark v. Allen, 11 R. I. 439, 23 Am. Rep. 496; Chamberlain v. Butler, 61 Neb. 730, 54 L.R.A. 338, 87 Am. St. Rep. 478, 86 N. W. 481; Bursinger v. Bank of Watertown, 67 Wis. 76, 58 Am. Rep. 848, 30 N. W. 290; Fitzpatrick v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. 56 Conn. 116, 7 Am. St. Rep. 288, 13 Atl. 673, 17 Atl. 411; Amick v. Butler, 111 Ind. 578, 60 Am. Rep. 722, 12 N. E. 518; Davis v. Brown, 159 Ind. 644, 65 N. E. 908; Hardy v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 152 N. C. 286, 67 S. E. 767; Bacon, Ben. Soc. 2d ed. § 302; 2 Joyce, Ins. §§ 914-919; May, Ins. 1891 ed. § 398a; Vance, Ins. 1904 ed. pp. 140, 141; 25 Cyc. 709; 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1025; Crosswell v. Connecticut Indemnity Assn. 51 S. C. 103, 28 S. E. 200; Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Comins, 72 N. H. 12, 101 Am. St. Rep. 657, 55 Atl. 191; Steinback v. Diepenbrock, 158 N. Y. 24, 44 L.R.A. 417, 70 Am. St. Rep. 424, 52 N. E. 662; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 591, 29 L. ed. 997, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561, 24 L. ed. 287; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457, 24 L. ed. 251; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 501; Murphy v. Red, 64 Miss. 614, 60 Am. Rep. 68, 1 So. 761; Olmsted v. Keyes, 85 N. Y. 593; Valton v. National Loan Fund Life Assur. Soc. 20 N. Y. 32; St. John v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. 31, 64 Am. Dec. 529; Rylander v. Allen, 125 Ga. 206, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 128, 53 S. E. 1032, 5 Ann. Cas. 355; Ancient Order U. W. v. Brown, 112 Ga. 545, 37 S. E. 890; Matlock v. Bledsoe, 77 Ark. 60, 90 S. W. 849; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 138 Mass. 24, 52 Am. Rep. 250; King v. Cram, 185 Mass. 103, 69 N. E. 1049; Brown v. Greenfield Life Asso. 172 Mass. 498, 53 N. E. 129; Dixon v. National L. Ins. Co. 168 Mass. 48, 46 N. E. 430; Tateum v. Ross, 150 Mass. 440, 23 N. E. 230; Robinson v. Hurst, 78 Md. 67, 20 L.R.A. 761, 44 Am. St. Rep. 266, 26 Atl. 956; Ritter v. Smith, 70 Md. 261, 2 L.R.A. 844, 16 Atl. 890; Souder v. Home Friendly Soc. 72 Md. 511, 20 Atl. 137; Eckel v. Renner, 41 Ohio St. 232; Vivar v. Supreme Lodge, K. P. 52 N. J. L. 469, 20 Atl. 36; Trenton Mut. L. & F. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 24 N. J. L. 585; Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 75 Minn. 412, 78 N. W. 103, 671, 79 N. W. 968, 1126; Hogue v. Minnesota Packing & Provision Co. 59 Minn. 39, 60 N. W. 812; Martin v. Stubblings, 126 Ill. 387, 9 Am. St. Rep. 620, 18 N. E. 657; Bloomington Mut. Ben. Asso. v. Blue, 120 Ill. 121, 60 Am. Rep. 558, 11 N. E. 331; Moore v. Chicago Guaranty Fund Life Soc. 178 Ill. 202, 52 N. E. 882; Givens v. Veeder, 9 N. M. 256, 50 Pac. 316; Harrison v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 78 Vt. 473, 112 Am. St. Rep. 932, 63 Atl. 321; Lewis v. Edwards, — Tenn. —, 1903, December Term, Mss. Nashville; Davis v. Brown, 159 Ind. 644, 65 N. E. 908; Millner v. Bowman, 119 Ind. 448, 5 L.R.A. 95, 21 N. E. 1094; Huston v. Merrifield, 51 Ind. 24, 19 Am. Rep. 722; Wheeland v. Atwood, 192 Pa. 237, 73 Am. St. Rep. 803, 43 Atl. 946; Ulrich v. Reinoehl, 143 Pa. 238, 13 L.R.A. 433, 24 Am. St. Rep. 534, 22 Atl. 862; Grant v. Kline, 115 Pa. 618, 9 Atl. 150; Fairchild v. Northeastern Mut. Life Asso. 51 Vt. 613; Hearing's Succession, 26 La. Ann. 326; Miller v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. 110 La. 654, 34 So. 723; Stuart v. Sutcliffe, 46 La. Ann. 240, 14 So. 912; Prudential Ins. Co. v. Liersch, 122 Mich. 436, 81 N. W. 258; Sheets v. Sheets, 4 Colo. App. 450, 36 Pac. 310; Lemon v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 38 Conn. 294; Farmers' & T. Bank v. Johnson, 118 Iowa, 282, 91 N. W. 1074; Curtiss v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 90 Cal. 255, 25 Am. St. Rep. 114, 27 Pac. 211; McFarland v. Creath, 35 Mo. App. 121; Mutual Protection Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 5 Sneed, 269; Ashley v. Ashley, 3 Sim. 149; Dalby v. India & L. Life Assur. Co. 15 C. B. 365, and note, 3 C. L. R. 61, 24 L. J. C. P. N. S. 2, 18 Jur. 1024, 3 Week. Rep. 116, 13 Eng. Rul. Cas. 383; Law v. London Indisputable Life Policy Co. 1 Kay & J. 223; Vezina v. New York L. Ins. Co. 6 Can. S. C. 30; North American Life Assur. Co. v. Croigen, 13 Can. S. C. 278, 18 N. S. 440; Mutual Life Assur. Co. v. Anderson, 1 N. B. Eq. Rep. 466; Brett v. Warnick, 44 Or. 511, 102 Am. St. Rep. 639, 75 Pac. 1061; Cunningham v. Smith, 70 Pa. 450; Bliss, Life Ins. § 30.

The only reason assigned for extending the rule condemning "wagering policies" and "covers for wager policies" to assignments of valid policies, made in good faith, is that, in either case, the death of the insured would be a pecuniary advantage to the assignee or the beneficiary, as the case might be. Is this a sufficient reason? Must every transaction be condemned of which the same thing is true? If so, the court must strike down:

1. All reversionary interests, particularly if the reversioner leases the life estate for a stipulated yearly rental.

2. All expectancies of every kind, except where there is an insurable interest in the life of the tenant in possession.

3. All purchases of estates in consideration of life support of the vendor by the vendee.

4. All contracts to pay annuities.

5. All legacies or devises to persons without interest in testator's life.

6. All policies in which beneficiaries without interest have been named in the policy itself, as in the cases of—

Foster v. Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. 125 Fed. 537; American Employers' Liability Ins. Co. v. Barr, 16 C. C. A. 51, 32 U. S. App. 444, 68 Fed. 873; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 402; Kentucky Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 11 C. C. A. 42, 22 U. S. App. 386, 548, 63 Fed. 93; Langdon v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. 14 Fed. 273; Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561, 24 L. ed. 287.

7. All policies where interest has ceased, as in the cases of—

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457, 24 L. ed. 251; Sides v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 16 Fed. 651.

8. All assignments where assignee's interest has ceased before the maturity of the policy, as in—

Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Hennessy, 39 C. C. A. 625, 99 Fed. 65.

9. All purchases of policies at judicial sales, by persons without interest, as in—

Gordon v. Ware Nat. Bank, 67 L.R.A. 550, 65 C. C. A. 580, 132 Fed. 444.

10. All policies where beneficiaries without interest are designated subsequent to the issuance of the policy by some means other than assignment, as in—

Robinson v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 68 Fed. 825; Ingersol v. Knights of Golden Rule, 47 Fed. 272; Lamont v. Grand Lodge, I. L. H. 31 Fed. 177; Lamont v. Hotel Men's Mut. Ben. Asso. 30 Fed. 817.

The reason for the law against "wager policies" is not applicable to assignments of valid policies.

Ashley v. Ashley, 3 Sim. 149; Dalby v. India & L. Life Assur. Co. 15 C. B. 365, 3 C. L. R. 61, 24 L. J. C. P. N. S. 2, 18 Jur.

1024, 3 Week. Rep. 116, 13 Eng. Rul. Cas. 383; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 597, 29 L. ed. 999, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.

There is no provision in the life insurance policy itself which militates against the right of the petitioner, as assignee, to collect the amount of the policy.

Bliss, Life Ins. 445; 2 Cooley, Briefs on Insurance, pp. 1082, 1859; 1 Cooley, Briefs on Insurance, p. 277; May, Ins. § 384; 3 Joye, Ins. § 2325; 1 Bacon, Ben. Soc. §§ 298, 310b; Spencer v. Myers, 150 N. Y. 269, 34 L.R.A. 175, 55 Am. St. Rep. 675, 44 N. E. 942; Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Comins, 72 N. H. 12, 101 Am. St. Rep. 650, 55 Atl. 191; Knights of Honor v. Watson, 64 N. H. 517, 15 Atl. 125; Brown v. Mansur, 64 N. H. 39, 5 Atl. 768; Foster v. Perferred Acci. Ins. Co. 125 Fed. 536; Clark v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 143 Fed. 175; Robinson v. Hurst, 78 Md. 59, 20 L.R.A. 761, 44 Am. St. Rep. 266, 26 Atl. 956; Hogue v. Minnesota Packing & Provision Co. 59 Minn. 39, 60 N. W. 812; Myers v. Schumann, 54 N. J. Eq. 414, 34 Atl. 1066; Johnson v. Van Epps, 110 Ill. 551; Groff v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 92 Ill. App. 207; Bank of Oil City v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co. 6 Legal Gaz. 348; Jarvis v. Binkley, 206 Ill. 541, 69 N. E. 582; Lec v. Murrell, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 104; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Tucker, 27 R. I. 170, 61 Atl. 142; Powell v. Dewey, 123 N. C. 103, 68 Am. St. Rep. 818, 31 S. E. 381; Moore v. Chicago Guaranty Fund Life Soc. 178 Ill. 202, 52 N. E. 882; Buckbee v. United States Ins. Annuity & T. Co. 18 Barb. 541; Viele v. Germania Ins. Co. 26 Iowa, 9, 96 Am. Dec. 83; Burges v. New York L. Ins. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 53 S. W. 602; Ramsay v. Myers, 6 Pa. Dist. R. 468.

By the decisions of the supreme court of Tennessee, the assignment in question is good.

Lewis v. Edwards, — Tenn. —, M. S. Opin. 1903; Rison v. Wilkerson, 3 Sneed, 565; Mutual Protection Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 5 Sneed, 269; Tennessee Lodge No. 20, K. H. v. Ladd, 5 Lea, 716; Williams v. Carson, 9 Baxt. 516; Clement v. New York L. Ins. Co. 101 Tenn. 22, 42 L.R.A. 247, 70 Am. St. Rep. 650, 46 S. W. 561; Scobey v. Waters, 10 Lea, 551; Gosling v. Caldwell, 1 Lea, 454, 27 Am. Rep. 774; Handwerker v. Diermeyer, 96 Tenn. 619, 36 S. W. 869; Wright v. Wright, 100 Tenn. 313, 45 S. W. 672.

Mr. George T. Hughes argued the cause and filed a brief for respondents:

This court will not, except it be in a case where the decision of the state court is imperative, reverse its own holdings to conform them to a decision by the state court.
56 L. ed.

Mohr v. Manierre, 101 U. S. 417, 25 L. ed. 1052; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85.

The Federal court, equally with the state court, has the power to determine what is the law of the state.

Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 478, 31 L. ed. 512, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

Decisions of state courts as to questions concerning contracts of insurance are not binding.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 865; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 603, 15 L. ed. 782; Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. v. Reliance M. Ins. Co. 179 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 49, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Gordon v. Ware Nat. Bank, 67 L.R.A. 550, 65 C. C. A. 580, 132 Fed. 444; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Lane, 151 Fed. 276.

Public policy is that principle of law which holds that no citizen can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public or against public good; and questions of public policy arise out of and are determined by common-law principles.

People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L.R.A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 409, 32 L. ed. 984, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Fowle v. Park, 131 U. S. 88, 33 L. ed. 67, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 704, 28 L. ed. 570, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Palmer, 109 U. S. 244, 27 L. ed. 922, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 22 L. ed. 315.

The only legitimate conclusion which can be reached from the opinions of this court is that, in whatever form presented, this court will not give effect to a mere speculative contract upon human life, whereby a person acquires an interest in the early death of another without any counterbalancing interest in the prolongation of that life, the result of which transaction would have a tendency to create a desire for the death of the other.

Cammack v. Lewis, 15 Wall. 643, 21 L. ed. 244; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457, 24 L. ed. 251; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561, 24 L. ed. 261; Page v. Burnstine, 102 U. S. 664, 26 L. ed. 268; Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775, 26 L. ed. 924; Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Hazzard, 41 Ind. 116, 13 Am. Rep. 313; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 597, 29 L. ed. 999, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; Crotty v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. 144 U. S. 621, 36 L. ed. 566, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 749.

With the single exception of the case of Gordon v. Ware. Nat. Bank, 67 L.R.A. 550, 65 C. C. A. 580, 132 Fed. 444, there is not to be found in the books a single case reported from any of the Federal courts in the Union where the question is raised or discussed which does not sustain our contention that the assignment of a policy to one having no insurable interest, under circumstances which exist in the case at bar, is contrary to public policy, and void.

American Employers' Liability Ins. Co. v. Barr, 16 C. C. A. 51, 32 U. S. App. 444, 68 Fed. 873; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Hennessy, 39 C. C. A. 625, 99 Fed. 64; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 402; Foster v. Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. 125 Fed. 536; Langdon v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. 14 Fed. 273; Lamont v. Grand Lodge, I. L. H. 31 Fed. 177; Alexander v. Lane, 85 C. C. A. 677, 157 Fed. 1002; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Lane, 151 Fed. 276.

If it be the law that a policy is assignable as any other chose in action, to any person, why not allow the assignee in bankruptcy to realize the most he could?

Morris v. Dodd, 110 Ga. 606, 50 L.R.A. 33, 78 Am. St. Rep. 129, 36 S. E. 83; Re White, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 451, and note, 98 C. C. A. 205, 174 Fed. 333.

The cases which hold that a policy cannot be assigned to one having no insurable interest are abstracted in the elaborate note of Judge Freeman to the case of Chamberlain v. Butler, 87 Am. St. Rep. 509, and in the full note to Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Elison, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 953, which contains an exhaustive memoranda of all the authorities on both sides of this question.

See also Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. 81 Ala. 329, 1 So. 561; Helmetag v. Miller, 76 Ala. 183, 52 Am. Rep. 316; Missouri Valley L. Ins. Co. v. Sturges, 18 Kan. 93, 26 Am. Rep. 761; Missouri Valley L. Ins. Co. v. McCrum, 36 Kan. 146, 59 Am. Rep. 537, 12 Pac. 517; Basye v. Adams, 81 Ky. 368; Beard v. Sharp, 100 Ky. 606, 38 S. W. 1057; Bromley v. Washington L. Ins. Co. 122 Ky. 402, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 747, 121 Am. St. Rep. 467, 92 S. W. 17, 12 Ann. Cas. 685; Heuser v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 47 Mo. App. 339; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Richards, 99 Mo. App. 88, 72 S. W. 487; Downey v. Hoffer, 110 Pa. 109, 20 Atl. 655; Keystone Mut. Ben. Asso. v. Norris, 115 Pa. 446, 2 Am. St. Rep. 572, 8 Atl. 638; Gilbert v. Moose, 104 Pa. 74, 49 Am. Rep. 570; Hoffman v. Hoke, 122 Pa. 377, 1 L.R.A. 229, 15 Atl. 437; Price v. Supreme Lodge, K. H. 68 Tex. 361, 4 S. W. 633; Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Hazelwood, 75 Tex. 338, 7 L.R.A. 217, 16 Am. 136

St. Rep. 893, 12 S. W. 621; Wilton v. New York L. Ins. Co. 34 Tex. Civ. App. 156, 78 S. W. 403; Tate v. Commercial Bldg. Asso. 97 Va. 74, 45 L.R.A. 243, 75 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 S. E. 382; Roller v. Moore (Roller v. Beam) 86 Va. 512, 6 L.R.A. 136, 10 S. E. 241.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill of interpleader brought by an insurance company to determine whether a policy of insurance issued to John C. Burchard, now deceased, upon his life, shall be paid to his administrators or to an assignee, the company having turned the amount into court. The material facts are that after he had paid two premiums and a third was overdue, Burchard, being in want and needing money for a surgical operation, asked Dr. Grigsby to buy the policy, and sold it to him in consideration of $100 and Grigsby's undertaking to pay the premiums due or to become due; and that Grigsby had no interest in the life of the assured. The circuit court of appeals, in deference to some intimations of this court, held the assignment valid only to the extent of the money actually given for it and the premiums subsequently paid. 94 C. C. A. 61, 168 Fed. 577.

Of course, the ground suggested for denying the validity of an assignment to a person having no interest in the life insured is the public policy that refuses to allow insurance to be taken out by such persons in the first place. A contract of insurance upon a life in which the insured has no interest is a pure wager that gives the insured a sinister counter interest in having the life come to an end. And *although that [155 counter interest always exists, as early was emphasized for England in the famous case of Wainewright (Janus Weathercock), the chance that in some cases it may prove a sufficient motive for crime is greatly enhanced if the whole world of the unscrupulous are free to bet on what life they choose. The very meaning of an insurable interest is an interest in having the life continue, and so one that is opposed to crime. And what, perhaps, is more important, the existence of such an interest makes a roughly selected class of persons who, by their general relations with the person whose life is insured, are less likely than criminals at large to attempt to compass his death.

But when the question arises upon an assignment, it is assumed that the objection to the insurance as a wager is out of the case. In the present instance the policy was perfectly good. There was a faint suggestion in argument that it had become void by the failure of Burchard to pay the third premium ad diem, and that when Grisby paid, he was making a new contract. But a condition in a policy that it shall be void if premiums are not paid when due means only that it shall be voidable at the option of the company. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Norton, 96 U. S. 234, 24 L. ed. 689; Oakes v. Manufacturers' F. & M. Ins. Co. 135 Mass. 248. The company waived the breach, if there was one, and the original contract with Burchard remained on foot. No question as to the character of that contract is before us. It has been performed and the money is in court. But this being so, not only does the objection to wagers disappear, but also the principle of public policy referred to, at least, in its most convincing form. The danger that might arise from a general license to all to insure whom they like does not exist. Obviously it is a very different thing from granting such a general license, to allow the holder of a valid insurance upon his own life to transfer it to one whom he, the party most concerned, is not afraid to trust. The law has [156]no *universal cynic fear of the temptation opened by a pecuniary benefit accruing upon a death. It shows no prejudice against remainders after life estates, even by the rule in Shelley's Case. Indeed, the ground of the objection to life insurance without interest in the earlier English cases was not the temptation to murder, but the fact that such wagers came to be regarded as a mischievous kind of gaming. Stat. 14 George III., chap. 48.

On the other hand, life insurance has become in our days one of the best recognized forms of investment and self-compelled saving. So far as reasonable safety permits, it is desirable to give to life policies the ordinary characteristics of property. This is recognized by the bankruptcy law, § 70, which provides that unless the cash surrender value of a policy like the one before us is secured to the trustee within thirty days after it has been stated, the policy shall pass to the trustee as assets. Of course the trustee may have no interest in the bankrupt's life. To deny the right to sell except to persons having such an interest is to diminish appreciably the value of the contract in the owner's hands. The collateral difficulty that arose from regarding life insurance as a contract of indemnity only (Godsall v. Boldero, 9 East, 72), long has disappeared (Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 501). And cases in which a person having an interest lends himself to one without any, as a cloak to what is, in its inception, a wager, have no similarity to those where an honest contract is sold in good faith.

Coming to the authorities in this court, 56 L. ed.

it is true that there are intimations in favor of the result come to by the circuit court of appeals. But the case in which the strongest of them occur was one of the type just referred to, the policy having been taken out for the purpose of allowing a stranger association to pay the premiums and receive the greater part of the benefit, and having been assigned to it at once.

Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775, 26 L. ed. 924. *On the other hand, it has been [157]decided that a valid policy is not avoided by the cessation of the insurable interest, even as against the insurer, unless so provided by the policy itself. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457, 24 L. ed. 251. And expressions more or less in favor of the doctrine that we adopt are to be found also in Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561, 24 L. ed. 287; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 591, 29 L. ed. 997, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877. It is enough to say that while the court below might hesitate to decide against the language of Warnock v. Davis, there has been no decision that precludes us from exercising our own judgment upon this much debated point. It is at least satisfactory to learn from the decision below that in Tennessee, where this assignment was made, although there has been much division of opinion, the supreme court of that state came to the conclusion that we adopt, in an unreported case,—Lewis v. Edwards, December 14, 1903. The law in England and the preponderance of decisions in our state courts are on the same side.

Some reference was made to a clause in the policy that "any claim against the company, arising under any assignment of the policy, shall be subject to proof of interest." But it rightly was assumed below that if there was no rule of law to that effect, and the company saw fit to pay, the clause did not diminish the rights of Grigsby, as against the administrators of Burchard's estate.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Lurton took no part in the decision of this case.

*UNITED STATES, Appt., [158
v.

FIDELITY TRUST COMPANY (Formerly the Fidelity Insurance, Trust, & Safe Deposit Company), as Executor and Trustee under the Last Will and Testament of Walter H. Tilden, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 158-160.)

Federal succession tax — vested interest — refunding.

The entire clear value of a legacy under a will devising the residuary estate in trust to pay over to the testator's niece the net income in quarterly payments for life, and not merely so much of such life estate as she had actually received before July 1, 1902, had "vested" prior to that date, in the sense of the provision of the act of June 27, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 406, chap. 1160, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 878), § 3, for the refunding of so much of the succession tax as may have been collected on "contingent beneficial interests which shall not have become vested" before the date mentioned.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 280.]

Argued November 15, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment for the refunding of a portion of a succession tax. Reversed.

See same case below on demurrer, 45 Ct. Cl. 362.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Barr argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Lehmann, filed a brief for appellant:

A present right to enjoy the income of property is a vested and indefeasible interest.

Bouvier's Law Dict. p. 422, "Contingent interest;" Mozley & W. Law Dict. "Contingent interest;" Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 563, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

The history of the act shows clearly that Congress used the expression "contingent beneficial interest" in its ordinary sense, and intended to cover only such interests as depended for their vesting in possession or enjoyment upon the happening of some certain event.

Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 563, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

Life estates in personal property are as well recognized now as life estates in realty, and are governed largely by the same rules.

18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 410.

A bequest of the income of personal property, with remainder over to the heirs and children of the first taker, passes merely

NOTE.—As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L.R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Romaine, 12 L.R.A. 401; and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

As to internal revenue tax on legacies, inheritances, and transfers—see note to Ward v. Sage, 108 C. C. A. 417.

a life estate to the first taker, and not an absolute interest.

Page, Wills, p. 686.

The rule that a remainder may be limited, after a life estate in personal property, is as well settled as any other principle in our law.

Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. 68, 8 L. ed. 322.

Bequests of life interests in both real and personal property were taxed without question under the inheritance tax act of 1864, the taxation of remainder interests which had not actually vested alone being held illegal.

Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 589, 24 L. ed. 212; Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 L. ed. 894.

The decisions of this court as to the subject of the tax and when it is imposed are conclusive of the proposition that a legacy of the income of personal property was taxable the moment such beneficial interest was acquired,—that is to say, upon the death of the testator—if the legatee immediately succeeded to the beneficial use or enjoyment of such right.

Hertz v. Woodman, 218 U. S. 205, 219, 54 L. ed. 1001, 1007, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 240, 22 L. ed. 80, 82.

Great weight should be given to the long and consistent construction placed by an executive department upon a statute which it was its province to administer.

Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 23, 35 L. ed. 363, 370, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Schell v. Fauché, 138 U. S. 562, 572, 34 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The use of mortality tables for the purpose of determining the present value of vested interests in personal property was authorized and proper.

Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 345, 47 L. ed. 1090, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

A legacy of the income of personal property for life or years, according to its estimated present value, has been held taxable in the second and eighth circuits.

Title Guarantee & T. Co. v. Ward, 164 Fed. 459, 107 C. C. A. 41, 184 Fed. 447; Westhus v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 441, 164 Fed. 795; Chouteau v. Allen, 95 C. C. A. 582, 170 Fed. 412; Shanley v. Herold, 141 Fed. 423.

Mr. Paul Fuller argued the cause, and, with Mr. Barry Mohun, filed a brief for appellee:

The funding act embraces taxes collected on remainder interests accruing subsequent to July 1, 1902.

Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 563, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

The refunding act embraces taxes collected on annuity payments accruing subsequent to July 1, 1902.

Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 114.

The principle involved in the taxation of, and the refundment of taxes collected upon, remainders and annuities, and ordinary income payments (as in the case at bar), is the same.

Union Trust Co. v. Lynch, 148 Fed. 49, affirmed in 90 C. C. A. 147, 164 Fed. 161.

The taxing statute only taxed the clear and actual value of that which actually passed to the legatee or distributee.

Vanderbilt v. Eidman and Disston v. McClain, supra.

The use of mortuary tables and of an assumed rate of interest were both unauthorized by the taxing statute.

Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 117; Herold v. Shanley, 76 C. C. A. 478, 146 Fed. 20; Kahn v. Herold, 147 Fed. 575.

Messrs. A. R. Serven, H. T. Newcomb, Morris F. Frey, and R. W. Joyce also filed a brief for appellee:

The refunding sentence must be liberally interpreted.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 46 L. ed. 697, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 267, 45 L. ed. 853, 854, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

The refunding sentence must be interpreted so as to avoid injustice.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The refunding sentence must be interpreted so as to give effect to every word which it contains.

Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112, 115, 25 L. ed. 782, 783.

When Congress, in the amendatory and refunding act, specifically excluded from taxation all interests not "absolutely vested," its purpose was far broader than would have been adequately expressed had it used the single word "vested."

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 414, 415, 4 L. ed. 579, 603.

The decision in Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 563, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331, if properly understood, establishes the principle that rights such as those of Mary Wadleigh Stokes, in so far as they were not to be realized until after July 1, 1902, were not taxable under the act of June 13, 1898, and amendments. As the uncertainties as to their realization, existing on July 1, 1902, made them untaxable, it follows that the amounts illegally collected on account of such rights are 56 L. ed.

within the scope of the refunding clause of the act of June 27, 1902.

Federal courts have repeatedly held that rights such as those taken by Mary Wadleigh Stokes are within the principle laid down by this court in Vanderbilt v. Eidman, supra; Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 114; Lynch v. Union Trust Co. 90 C. C. A. 147, 164 Fed. 161, 148 Fed. 49.

After the denial of the writ of certiorari in Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 114, the Treasury Department accepted that case as settling the law as to collections in respect to annuity rights extending beyond July 1, 1902, and proceeded to pay claims for the refunding of sums so collected as they were presented. In view of the substantial identity of this class of rights with the rights of Mary Wadleigh Stokes, the present case calls for the application of the rule that an interpretation of a taxing statute which would result in injustice will be avoided.

Writs of certiorari were denied in Disston v. McClain, supra, and Union Trust Co. v. Lynch, 148 Fed. 49, for one or the other or both of the two reasons given in Re Lau Ow Bew, 141 U. S. 583, 589, 35 L. ed. 868, 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43,—that is to say, either because (first) the question was not of sufficient importance, or (second) it was not "sufficiently open to controversy."

See also Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 41 L. ed. 1095, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Re Woods, 143 U. S. 202, 206, 36 L. ed. 125, 126, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 58, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Columbus Watch Co. v. Robbins, 148 U. S. 266, 270, 37 L. ed. 445, 447, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Warner v. New Orleans, 167 U. S. 467, 474, 42 L. ed. 239, 241, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Fields v. United States, 205 U. S. 292, 296, 51 L. ed. 807, 810, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543.

The granting of the writ in Eidman v. Tilghman, 203 U. S. 580, 51 L. ed. 326, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; McCoach v. Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Ins. Co. 205 U. S. 539, 51 L. ed. 921, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; and United States v. Marion Trust Co. 205 U. S. 539, 51 L. ed. 1191, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794, shows that the interpretation of the legacy tax provisions is of sufficient importance to require the issuance of the writ, where the questions at issue are sufficiently open to controversy.

The interpretation asked for in this case by the government would result in injustice, in that it would subject to taxation some incomes paid long after the repeal of the legacy tax act of June 13, 1898, while other incomes paid at the same time, under similar conditions, under similar wills, would not be taxed.

Hertz v. Woodman, 218 U. S. 205, 54 L. ed. 1001, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Shanley v. Herold, 141 Fed. 423; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The words and phrases necessary to impose the tax upon rights passing by will or intestate laws to receive income from property were well known, and had frequently been used at the time of the enactment of the war revenue act of June 13, 1898, and subsequent amendments, and if it had been the purpose of Congress to tax these interests, the necessary express terms would have been used.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

While mortuary tables have frequently been admitted as evidence, there is no case in which they have been regarded as conclusive, and their essential limitations have always been recognized, as well as the necessity of supplementing them by testimony showing the degree in which they should probably be corrected to meet the conditions of the particular life to which they were to be applied.

Herold v. Shanley, 76 C. C. A. 478, 146 Fed. 20; Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 114; Lynch v. Union Trust Co. 90 C. C. A. 147, 164 Fed. 161; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 30 L. ed. 257, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Grove v. Youell, 110 Mich. 285, 33 L.R.A. 298, 68 N. W. 132; Unger v. Leiter, 32 Ohio St. 210; Mandel v. McClave, 46 Ohio St. 407, 5 L.R.A. 519, 15 Am. St. Rep. 627, 22 N. E. 290; Hunn v. Michigan C. R. Co. 78 Mich. 513, 7 L.R.A. 500, 44 N. W. 502; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Houchins, 121 Ky. 526, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 375, 123 Am. St. Rep. 205, 89 S. W. 530; Kahn v. Herold, 147 Fed. 575, affirmed in 86 C. C. A. 598, 159 Fed. 608.

Assuming that Congress intended to reach such interests as that presented by this case, the commissioner of internal revenue forced himself, into a position where reliance upon the results of pure speculation could not be avoided. Taxation may not rest upon such a foundation.

Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

Congress can neither delegate power to fix a rate of taxation, nor power substantially equivalent thereto; and hence, if Congress had intended to intrust to the commissioner of internal revenue the power to fix a rate of interest to be used in assessing future interests, the attempted delegation would be void.

Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 99, 100; The Aurora v. United States, 7 Cranch, 382, 3 L. ed. 378; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat, 1, 41, 6 L. ed. 253, 262; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 287, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1064, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

The theory of the law of June 13, 1898, for which the government now contends, would impose the tax before the beneficiary could be identified. As the rate of the tax depends upon the relationship, or lack thereof, of the beneficiary to his testator or intestate, this construction would make the law inconsistent with itself.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 56, 44 L. ed. 969, 975, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

There is no administrative interpretation of the act of June 13, 1898, or of any earlier legacy tax act, which could be made to support the conclusion that the pretended tax in the case at bar was authorized by the statute.

Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 489, 49 L. ed. 563, 566, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 591, 24 L. ed. 213; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; Wright v. Blakeslee, 101 U. S. 174, 25 L. ed. 1048; Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 L. ed. 894; Sturges v. United States, 117 U. S. 363, 29 L. ed. 920, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Hertz v. Woodman, 218 U. S. 205, 54 L. ed. 1001, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; High v. Coyne, 178 U. S. 111, 44 L. ed. 997, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. McClain, 178 U. S. 113, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774; Murdock v. Ward, 178 U. S. 139, 44 L. ed. 1009, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Sherman v. United States, 178 U. S. 150, 44 L. ed. 1014, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 46 L. ed. 697, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Moore v. Ruckgaber, 184 U. S. 593, 46 L. ed. 705, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 47 L. ed. 1035, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Herold v. Shanley, 76 C. C. A. 478, 146 Fed. 20; Disston v. McClain, 77 C. C. A. 340, 147 Fed. 114; Thacher v. United States, 222 U. S.

149 Fed. 902; Herold v. Kahn, 86 C. C. A. 598, 159 Fed. 608.

Mr George P. Montague filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

So long and so far as the enjoyment is postponed to the future, to that extent no taxable legacy passes; and where the passing of the taxable legacy is in the future, or to the extent that the enjoyment of it is postponed to the future, the beneficial interest is contingent, within the meaning of the act.

Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 474, 18 L. ed. 869, 874; Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 589, 24 L. ed. 212; Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 L. ed. 894; Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 493, 49 L. ed. 563, 567, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

The mere right to receive something in the future, even though the right to receive has become vested in the present, does not constitute a taxable legacy or succession within the meaning of the act.

Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 589, 24 L. ed. 212; Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 L. ed. 894.

Life or mortuary tables are properly used only to get at proximate values, and never when definite or actual values are obtainable.

Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 556, 30 L. ed. 257, 259, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lynch v. Union Trust Co. 90 C. C. A. 147, 164 Fed. 167; Kahn v. Herold, 147 Fed. 575.

The act itself certainly contains no express provision authorizing the use of life tables, while the fact that the statute not only uses but reiterates the phrase "clear value," instead of saying "estimated or probable value," or even "market value," seems to negative any implied authority for the employment of such tables.

Herold v. Shanley, 76 C. C. A. 478, 146 Fed. 20.

Even where the use of life tables is allowed, the general rule is that the condition of the individual's health and the particular circumstances of the case are also to be considered, and that the computation by the tables is subject to modification thereby.

Rowley v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 8 Exch. 221, 42 L. J. Exch. N. S. 153, 29 L. T. N. S. 180, 21 Week. Rep. 869; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 557, 30 L. ed. 257, 259, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

In Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 589, 24 L. ed. 212; Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689, 26 L. ed. 894, it was decided that where the right to a succession vested and passed at the time of the testator's death, but where the passing of the taxable succession was deferred till the time of actual possession and enjoyment, a repeal of the act prior to the last-mentioned event defeated the tax.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit to recover a portion of a succession tax paid under the act of June 13, 1898, chap. 448, 30 Stat. at L. 448, 464. U. S. Comp. Stat. 191, p. 2286, *the[159] action being based on the act of June 27, 1902, chap. 1160, § 3, 32 Stat. at L. 406, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 878, which provides for refunding "so much of said tax as may have been collected on contingent beneficial interests which shall not have become vested prior to July first, nineteen hundred and two." The petitioner, appellee, was residuary legatee under a will, in trust to hold the fund "either as at present invested, or in such securities as to my said trustee may be deemed safe," and to pay over the net income to the testator's niece "in quarterly payments during all the period of her natural life." On June 8, 1900, the appellee made a return to the collector of internal revenue, stating that the value of the residuary estate was $120,303.94, and that of a specific legacy of silverware, etc., to the niece, $500. With the aid of mortuary tables, the rate of interest being assumed to be 4 per cent, the clear value of the legacies to the niece was fixed at $74,678.68, and an inheritance tax of $5,600.90 was assessed upon it, which was paid on August 16, 1900. Up to July 1, 1902, the date fixed by the statute, the petitioner had paid to the niece $17,027.59 income from the residue and had delivered to her the specific legacy valued at $500. The tax on these sums at the rate of taxation was $1,314.59, which, deducted from the whole tax paid, leaves $4,286.31, to recover which this suit is brought. The appellee had judgment in the court of claims. 45 Ct. Cl. 362.

The words "which shall not have become vested," quoted above, mean the same as "absolutely vested in possession or enjoyment" in a later clause ending the tax on contingent interests unless so vested before July 1, 1902. Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 500, 49 L. ed. 563, 570, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331. On this ground it is argued at great length that only so much of the life interest of the niece as she had received before the date mentioned had vested in the sense of the clause. We are of opinion that this argument cannot be maintained. The interest of the niece was not a contingent right to income as *it should accrue[160] in her lifetime; it was a vested life estate in a fund, changing in investment at the discretion of the trustee, but retaining its equitable identity. Objections like those that are made to treating a life estate as a present unity in the enjoyment of the life tenant might be made to the similar treatment of absolute ownership in fee. In actual life a fee can be enjoyed only minute by minute; but, although eternal in theory of law, by the same theory at every moment it is all and wholly in the owner's hands. The statute does not invite speculation in a new nonenclature, or attempt to reach profounder conceptions than those familiar to the law. When it speaks of interests absolutely vested in possession we presume that it uses familiar legal expressions in their familiar legal sense. It deals in terms with the interest, that is, the legal unit of right, not with the money received before a given moment. No better example of such an interest could be given than a life estate in a fund, the enjoyment of which actually has begun; none that more clearly and absolutely excludes the qualification "contingent" in the sense of the law. Vanderbilt v. Eidman, 196 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 563, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331, concerned a life estate in remainder, which, whether the remainder was technically vested or contingent (Ibid. 501, 502), was not vested in possession or enjoyment. It was assumed that the tax was payable in a case like this. Id. 488, 495.

Decree reversed.

161]*A. SANDOVAL and P. Sandoval, Appts.,
v.
EPES RANDOLPH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 161-164.)

Evidence — ownership — option agreement.

The contention of one sued in assumpsit as the agent for the buyer of a mine, upon an implied promise to refund a secret profit made in the execution of the agency, that he was in fact the owner of the mine at the time he agreed to act for the buyer in purchasing it, is not established by a contract antedating the agency, by which the owners agreed to sell the mine to the defendant in consideration, with right of redemption within six months, of a specified sum, with the further agreement that they would not exercise the right of redemption if he should pay to them the further consideration of a specified sum, since such contract is nothing more than an option.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 4.]

Submitted October 26, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Santa Cruz County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action of assumpsit. Affirmed.

See same case below, 11 Ariz. 371, 95 Pac. 119.

Messrs. Frank P. Flint and Henry S. Van Dyke submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. G. Bullard was on the brief:

The variances amounted to a total failure of proof.

Wilson v. Haley Live Stock Co. 153 U. S. 39, 38 L. ed. 627, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Volkening v. De Graaf, 81 N. Y. 268, 12 Jones & S. 424; Decker v. Saltzman, 59 N. Y. 275; Degraw v. Elmore, 50 N. Y. 1; Ross v. Mather, 51 N. Y. 108, 10 Am. Rep. 562; Walter v. Bennett, 16 N. Y. 250; Belknap v. Sealey, 14 N. Y. 143, 67 Am. Dec. 120; Bernhard v. Seligman, 54 N. Y. 661; Barnes v. Quigley, 59 N. Y. 265; Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135; Elmore v. Elmore, 114 Cal. 521, 46 Pac. 458; Forsell v. Pittsburgh & M. Copper Co. 38 Mont. 403, 100 Pac. 221; Bechtel v. Chase, 156 Cal. 707, 106 Pac. 81; Mullinax v. Lowry, 140 Mo. App. 42, 124 S. W. 572.

Plaintiff and his assignor are estopped to maintain this action, and, further, are guilty of laches.

St. John v. Hendrickson, 81 Ind. 350; Schmidt v. Mesmer, 116 Cal. 267, 48 Pac. 54; Oppenheimer v. Clunie, 142 Cal. 313, 75 Pac. 899; Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 897, 917, 965; Smith, Frauds, § 236.

The trial court committed prejudicial error in denying appellants' motion to amend their answer and specifically plead the statute of limitations applicable thereto.

Perrin v. Mallory Commission Co. 8 Ariz. 407, 76 Pac. 476.

Lindsay's cause of action, if any, was not assignable to plaintiff herein as a matter of law.

2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1020; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1040 G; Emmons v. Barton, 109 Cal. 662, 42 Pac. 303; Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 102 U. S. 154, 26 L. ed. 108; Mullinax v. Lowry, 140 Mo. App. 42, 124 S. W. 573.

NOTE.—As to the rights conferred by a "refusal" or "option"—see note to Litz v. Goosling, 21 L.R.A. 127.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives submitted the cause for appellee:

Whatever conflict there may have been in the evidence has been resolved by the findings of fact made by the trial court, and, in legal contemplation, adopted by the supreme court of the territory and upon these facts the law is entirely clear.

Bain v. Brown, 56 N. Y. 285; Crump v. Ingersoll, 44 Minn. 84, 46 N. W. 141; Rorebeck v. Van Eaton, 90 Iowa, 82, 57 N. W. 694; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1071-1073.

The allegations that the conduct of the agent was fraudulent were entirely unnecessary and wholly unimportant, and in no way change the character of the cause of action.

Frishmuth v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 46 C. C. A. 222, 107 Fed. 169; Seitz v. Seitz, 59 App. Div. 150, 69 N. Y. Supp. 170.

This court has uniformly declined to disturb the construction of a territorial statute by the territorial court, and has, in effect, given to the construction of territorial statutes by territorial courts the same weight as the construction of state statutes by state courts.

Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 51 L. ed. 1143, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Lurton:

Action for money had and received for the use of the plaintiff. A jury was waived and there was judgment for plaintiff upon a special finding of fact. This judgment was affirmed by the court below, the court holding that there was evidence supporting the findings of fact, and that when 162]*that was the case, the court could not go behind the facts so found.

The facts so found were in every essential respect the facts stated in the complaint. They were, in substance:

1. That the plaintiff procured the defendants to negotiate with the supposed owner of a silver mine in Mexico, and buy it from the owner for the lowest possible price for the plaintiff and another, who had since assigned his interest to the plaintiff.

2. That the defendants did thereafter bargain for the property, and did buy the same at the price of 20,000 dollars, Mexican silver, taking the title to one of them.

3. That the defendants represented that they had agreed to pay 20,000 dollars in American money for the mine, and that the plaintiff, believing this to be true, paid over to the defendants the full sum of 20,000 dollars in American currency, which was the equivalent of twice the sum which the defendants had actually agreed to pay and did later pay for the said property.

The action was in debt to recover this excess over the cost of the property, as money had and received for the use of the plaintiff.

It would be a great scandal if a principal thus betrayed by his agent might not declare in assumpsit without relying upon fraud and deceit in an action for damages. And so the court below held was the law, and that such was the action, notwithstanding the conduct of the Sandovals was characterized as deceitful and fraudulent.

Neither is it now contended that an agent who makes a secret profit in the execution of his agency may not be compelled to disgorge, and required to do so in an action upon an implied promise.

Neither do the appellants now deny that there was abundant evidence to support the finding that they did *agree to act as [163 the plaintiff's agents, and to buy for him from the supposed owner the mine they did buy; nor do they now deny that they represented to the plaintiff that they had bought the property for him at the price averred, when in fact they had paid for same only one half that price.

What they do say is that, as a matter of law, there was no relation of principal and agent, since there was conclusive evidence that they were themselves the owners of the property at the time they agreed to act for the plaintiff in buying it. Upon this hypothesis it is said that there is no evidence to support a judgment grounded upon their liability for a breach of duty as agents, since one may not act as agent for the buyer in the sale of property of which he is himself the sole owner.

But the finding of fact was that the defendants, after agreeing to purchase in behalf of the plaintiff, "and in pursuance of that agreement," purchased the said mining property," etc. This finding is a flat contradiction of the claim that they were the owners when they agreed to represent the plaintiff in buying the property. We lay out of consideration, in the present situation of this case, all conflicting oral evidence relating to the agreement. There is left only what is said to be conclusive documentary evidence to support the claim. But that does not do so. It consists in a contract antedating the agency agreement, by which the real owners, Ortiz and two others, agreed to sell the mine in question to one of the Sandovals, in consideration, with right of redemption within six months, of 1,060 pesos, Mexican, with the further agreement that they would not exercise the right of redemption if Sandoval should pay to them "the further consideration of the sum of 20,000 Mexican pesos." This was nothing more than an option, of which Sandoval availed himself in time, and while executing his agreement of agency.

164] *Every other suggestion of error hinges upon this alleged inability to act as agent, or upon points of procedure clearly foreclosed by the rulings of the Arizona courts.

Judgment affirmed.

PETER ANDERSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED REALTY COMPANY, Dow-Snell
Company, John P. Freeman, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 164-167.)

Removal of causes — further proceedings in state court — restoring jurisdiction.

The restoration of the jurisdiction of a state court after one of the original defendants had filed its petition and bond for the removal of a separable controversy to a Federal circuit court was effected by action and conduct equivalent to a formal waiver of new process and new pleadings or any formal remander by the Federal court, where the plaintiff, before any order was made in the state court, or the record filed in the Federal court, had an order entered in the state court, dismissing his action against the removing defendant and certain others having a like ground of removal, the order reciting that, in consideration of such dismissal, the petition for removal was withdrawn, and thereafter the case was proceeded with against the remaining defendants to verdict and judgment without any objection by either the plaintiff or the remaining defendants.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, X, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 27.]

Argued November 1, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Lucas County, in that state, affirming a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of that county, in favor of defendants in an action in which one of the original defendants had filed its petition and bond for the removal of a separable controversy to a Federal circuit court. Affirmed.

NOTE.—As to removal of causes in cases of separable controversy—see notes to Miller v. Clifford, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 50; Robbins v. Ellenbogen, 18 C. C. A. 86; Mecke v. Valleytown Mineral Co. 35 C. C. A. 155; Pollitz v. Wabash R. Co. 100 C. C. A. 4; Sloane v. Anderson, 29 L. ed. U. S. 899; Merchants Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 38 L. ed. U. S. 195; Butler v. National Home, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

See same case below, 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644.

Mr. Rhea P. Cary argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Harry E. King, Clayton W. Everett, and Oliver B. Snider argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward H. Rhoades, Edward H. Rhoades, Jr., Elmer E. Davis, George A. Bassett, and Rathbun Fuller, filed a brief for defendants in error:

If any right of removal ever existed in this case, it was abandoned and waived and the jurisdiction of the state court restored.

Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445-450, 22 L. ed. 365-368; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Smith, 13 Blatchf. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 6,035; McLean v. St. Paul & C. R. Co. 17 Blatchf. 363, Fed. Cas. No. 8,893, affirmed in 108 U. S. 212, 27 L. ed. 703, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186-198, 30 L. ed. 915-919, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Anderson v. United Realty Co. 79 Ohio St. 23, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 86 N. E. 644; Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio St. 514; St. Louis, W. & W. R. Co. v. Ransom, 29 Kan. 298; Amy v. Manning, 144 Mass. 153, 10 N. E. 737, affirmed in 140 U. S. 137, 35 L. ed. 386, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Smithson v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 71 Minn. 224, 73 N. W. 853, affirmed in 175 U. S. 635, 44 L. ed. 303, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald, 214 U. S. 191, 192, 53 L. ed. 963, 964, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546; Columbus Home Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 32 Mich. 402; First Nat. Bank v. Conway, 67 Wis. 210, 30 N. W. 215; Wadleigh v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 76 Wis. 439, 45 N. W. 109; Hazard v. Durant, 9 R. I. 606; Dart v. Arnis, 19 How. Pr. 429; Gaffney v. Gillette, 4 Dill. 264, note, Fed. Cas. No. 5,168; Hudson River R. & Terminal Co. v. Day, 54 Fed. 545; West Virginia v. King, 112 Fed. 369.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Lurton:

The single question for our consideration upon this writ of error concerns the jurisdiction of the state court to proceed with the action after one of the original defendants had filed its petition and bond for removal to the circuit court of the United States.

If, as we shall assume, there was a separable controversy and the requisite diversity of citizenship, it was the duty of the state court to accept the petition and bond and proceed no further in the case. A trial and judgment thereafter would be coram non iudice, unless its jurisdiction over the cause and the parties was in some way restored. National S. S. Co v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 27 L. ed. 87, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; 166] *Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 468, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251. But we are of opinion that the plaintiff in error is not in a position to now assert that the state court's subsequent exercise of jurisdiction was without authority. When the removal petition and bond was filed, the plaintiff, before any order was made in the state court or the record filed in the United States court, had an order entered in the state court, dismissing his action against the removing defendant and certain others having like ground of removal, the order reciting that in consideration of such dismissal the petition for removal was withdrawn. Thereafter the cause was proceeded with against the remaining defendants without the hint of any objection by either the plaintiff or the remaining defendants. Upon the contrary, many steps were taken and a long jury trial had, resulting in a verdict and judgment for the defendants. Not until the cause was carried to the Ohio circuit court by appeal of the plaintiff was there any objection made to the jurisdiction of the trial court.

The state court had jurisdiction over the subject-matter. It recovered jurisdiction over the remaining parties by action and conduct equivalent to a formal waiver of new process and new pleadings, or any formal remander by the United States court.

The Tugman Case, cited above, does not help the plaintiff in error. The defendant, whose right to remove had been erroneously denied, was held not to have waived his right to remove by subsequently consenting to a reference of the case to a referee, or by defending the suit both before the referee and the court, without protesting. This court said:

"When the state court adjudged that it had authority to proceed, the company was entitled to regard the decision as final, so far as that tribunal was concerned, and was not bound, in order to maintain the right of removal, to protest at subsequent stages of the trial against its exercise 167]*of jurisdiction. Indeed, such a course would scarcely have been respectful to the state court, after its ruling upon the point of jurisdiction had been made."

If, on the other hand, he had thereafter 56 L. ed.

invoked the court's jurisdiction in his own behalf, he would not have been permitted later to deny it. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. ed. 946, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 73, 51 L. ed. 369, 376, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald, 214 U. S. 191, 53 L. ed. 963, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE F. STEVER, J. B. Stever, and Harry I. Ball.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 167-175.)

Postoffice — fraud by use of mails — false pretenses.

1. The offense of using the mails in furtherance of "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," denounced by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3894, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2659, includes only schemes having a similitude to the lottery and other like schemes particularly described by the particular words of the section, and does not cover the use of the mails to promote other schemes to obtain money or property by means of false pretenses, which is embraced by the provisions of § 5480 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696), making criminal the use of the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, 113-115, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Postoffice — fraud by use of mails — false pretenses.

2. Making false and fraudulent representations through the mails to prospective buyers of cattle, to promote a scheme to defraud by inducing them to come and inspect the cattle, after which inferior cattle were to be substituted in the place of those inspected and sold, is not punishable under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3894, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2659, making criminal the use of the mails in furtherance of lotteries, or schemes of gain dependent upon chance, or "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," but such acts constitute the offense prohibited by § 5480 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696), of using the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, 113-115, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 448.]

Argued October 20, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a judgment quash-ing an indictment for the use of the mails to promote a scheme to obtain money or property by means of false pretenses. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There is a manifest difference between schemes to obtain money by false pretenses and schemes to defraud generally.

Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 312, 313, 40 L. ed. 709, 711, 712, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Jackson v. People, 126 Ill. 149, 18 N. E. 286.

Obtaining money by false pretenses was an offense at common law; to defraud was not necessarily so.

State v. Hewett, 31 Me. 396.

It was not strange, therefore, that Congress dealt with the common-law offense in a separate statute.

Section 3894 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2659) is not limited, either in its terms or by necessary implication, to lottery schemes.

United States v. Sears, Robuck & Co. decided February 23, 1909 (D. C. S. D. Iowa).

This court, in Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 505, 48 L. ed. 1092, 1097, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789, held that U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3929, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2686, which like § 3894, refers to both lottery schemes and schemes to defraud, covered two distinct subject matters.

Messrs. W. M. Smith and J. S. McKemey argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3894, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2659, only includes, by proper construction, lottery schemes.

Homer v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; United States v. Sauer, 88 Fed. 249.

Where words of a particular description in a statute are followed by general words that are not specific and limited, unless there be a clear manifestation of a contrary purpose, the general words are to be construed as applicable to persons or things or cases of like kind as those designated by the particular words.

Nichols v. State, 127 Ind. 406, 26 N. E. 839.

Statutes which are not inconsistent with one another, and which relate to the same subject-matter, are in pari materia, and should be construed together; and effect should be given to them all, although they contain no reference to one another, and were passed at different times.

Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 443;

Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1-7, 3 L. ed. 19-21; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556-564, 11 L. ed. 724-728; Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co. 18 Wall. 272-301, 21 L. ed. 841-844; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682-688, 34 L. ed. 832-834, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 323, 22 L. ed. 348.

In the construction of statutes, general words preceded or followed by particular words in the same or a subsequent clause, are qualified and restrained by the particular words; or, to state it somewhat differently, when general words follow, in a statute, words of particular and special meaning, if there be not a clear manifestation of a different legislative intent, they are construed as applicable to persons or things, or cases of like kind, as are designated by the particular words.

United States v. Garretson, 42 Fed. 22; Bishop, Statutory Crimes, §§ 245, 246; Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. 202, 11 L. ed. 236; Woolsey v. Cade, 54 Ala. 385, 25 Am. Rep. 711; Amos v. State, 73 Ala. 501.

Criminal statutes are to reach no further in meaning than their words. No person is to be made subject to them by implication, and all doubts concerning their interpretation are to preponderate in favor of the accused. Only those transactions are covered by them which are within both their spirit and their letter.

Bishop, Statutory Crimes, 2d ed. §§ 119, 193, 194, 218, 220, 227.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to review a judgment quashing an indictment, as not stating an offense triable in the western district of Kentucky. The indictment contained two counts. The first is drawn to bring the offense within § 3894, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2659), as amended, and the second is based upon § 5480, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696), and is for a conspiracy *to commit the offense charged in the[170 first count. The government now concedes that the latter count states no offense within western district of Kentucky, and withdraws the assignments of error relating to the judgment quashing it.

The count to be considered charges, in substance, that the defendants, on April 20, 1908, in the state of Iowa, devised a certain scheme for the purpose of obtaining money, etc., "by and under false pretenses," from various persons, among others, certain persons named, residing at Colesburg, within the jurisdiction of the court, to be effected by means of the United States mail, through correspondence with them. The scheme, summarily stated, was to be effected by inducing persons who should read their advertisements offering high grade cattle for sale, to open correspondence with them. That then the defendants were, through the mail, to make false and fraudulent representations as to the character of the cattle they offered for sale, and thereby induce such correspondents to come and inspect the cattle at Fairfield, Iowa, and that after a sale of cattle so inspected, were to substitute inferior cattle in the place of those inspected and sold. It is then averred that defendants succeeded in opening up correspondence with certain persons at Colesburg, Kentucky, and that in furtherance of said scheme, and for the purpose of obtaining money under false pretenses, they, the defendants, on April 20, 1908, "unlawfully did knowingly and fraudulently deposit and cause to be deposited in the mail, . . . at Fairfield, Iowa, and did then and there knowingly cause to be sent by said mail of the United States a certain letter to be conveyed and delivered by said mail of the United States at Colesburg, in the state of Kentucky, and in the western district thereof," to be delivered to persons there addressed and residing, which letter was calculated to accomplish the scheme intended, and which said letter the defendants are 171] charged *as "having caused to be delivered by mail to the person addressed."

For convenience we set out in the margin §§ 3894 and 5480, Revised Statutes, as amended.†

172]*The last clause of § 3894 provides that an offense against any of the provisions of the section "may be proceeded against

. . . either in the district at which the unlawful publication was mailed, or to which it is carried by mail for delivery, according to the direction thereon, or at which it is caused to be delivered by mail to the person to whom it is addressed."

The claim is that an indictment lies in the western district of Kentucky, because that is the district in which the defendants caused the letter mentioned "to be delivered by mail" to the person addressed.

The government has suggested that there is a distinction at common law between a false pretense and an indictable *cheat[173 or fraud. It may be conceded that, at the common law, a false pretense is not a promise, but a fraudulent and false representation of an existing or past fact, designed to induce one to part with money or goods. Bishop, Crim. Law, 6th ed. §§ 415, 419, and cases, English and American, there cited.

Whether the facts averred in this count constitute a scheme to obtain goods or money by a common-law false pretense may admit of grave doubt. But whether that be so or not, it would require very subtle distinction to conceive of a use of the mail to promote a scheme to obtain property or money by means of false pretenses which would not also be a "scheme or artifice to defraud" within the plain meaning of § 5480. For the purpose of the present discussion it is not important whether the pleader has characterized the scheme described as a false pretense or as "a scheme or artifice to defraud," since in either case a use of the mail prohibited by § 5480 is shown. That section was construed by this court, in Durland v. United States,

†Sec. 3894. No letter, postal card, or circular concerning any lottery, so-called gift concern, or other similar enterprise offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance, or concerning schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses, and no list of the drawings at any lottery or similar scheme, and no lottery ticket or part thereof, and no check, draft, bill, money, postal note, or money order for the purchase of any ticket, tickets, or part thereof, or of any share or any chance in any such lottery or gift enterprise, shall be carried in the mail or delivered at or through any postoffice or branch thereof, or by any letter carrier, nor shall any newspaper, circular, pamphlet or publication of any kind containing any advertisement of any lottery or gift enterprise of any kind offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance, or containing any list of prizes awarded at the drawings of any such lottery or gift enterprise, whether said list is of any part or of all of the drawing, be carried in the mail or delivered by any postmaster or letter carrier. Any person who shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited, or who shall knowingly send or or cause to be sent, anything to be conveyed or delivered by mail in violation of this section, or who shall knowingly cause to be delivered by mail anything herein forbidden to be carried by mail, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment for each offense. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section may be proceeded against by information or indictment, and tried and punished, either in the district at which the unlawful publication was mailed, or to which it is carried by mail for delivery according to the direction thereon, or at which it is caused to be delivered by mail to the person to whom it is addressed.

Sec. 5480. If any person, having devised, or intending to devise, any scheme or artifice to defraud, or to sell, dispose of, loan, exchange, alter, give away, or distribute, supply, or furnish, or procure for unlaw-

161 U. S. 306, 313, 40 L. ed. 709, 711, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508, as "including everything designed to defraud by representations as to the past or present, or suggestions and promises as to the future."

If, then, this indictment is also maintainable under § 3894, it must be because we are forced to conclude that Congress, when it revised the statutes, intended to make the use of the mails to effect a scheme to defraud indictable and punishable under either of two distinct provisions, and that the district attorney might elect as to which he would proceed under. Such a supposition is not to be lightly adopted. To so conclude would result in the anomaly of an offense created and punished by two distinct enactments. Under the one the accused may be proceeded against in a district where he could not be prosecuted under the other. The procedure under one differs in some important particulars from that admissible under the other, and the accused is subject to a measure of punishment *under one not possible under the other. Thus, under § 3894, an indictment will lie in the district in which the defendant caused the letter to be delivered by the mail to the person addressed. That is not the case under § 5480. Under § 3894, one may be imprisoned not longer than one year, while under the other he may be imprisoned for eighteen months. Under § 3894, he is subject to indictment for any number of violations. Under the other the indictment may only charge offenses to the number of three committed within the same six calendar months.

No such purpose can be fairly said to have actuated Congress. The two sections are intended to prevent the use of the mail for certain purposes. The one applies to the use of the mail for the purpose of promoting lotteries or other like schemes of chance. The other is intended to prohibit the use of the mail to carry on schemes of general fraud, the language being "any scheme or artifice to defraud." A scheme to defraud by means of false pretenses is, as we have seen, a "scheme or artifice to defraud," within the plain meaning and purpose of this section. The general words, "or concerning schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," found in § 3894, do not harmonize with the general purpose of that section, if construed as urged by the learned Attorney General. So construed, they would trench upon the ground covered by § 5480. The words referred to follow particular words descriptive of schemes of gain dependent upon chance, and are followed by further particular words relating to the same kind of lottery schemes.

In such circumstances, unless there is a clear manifestation to the contrary, general words, not specific or limited, should be construed as applicable to cases or matters of like kind with those described by the particular words.

Construing the two sections together as legislation in pari materia*, we find [175] no manifest legislative intent forbidding the application of the rule of construction referred to. We therefore conclude that the words, "or concerning schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property by false pretenses," are to be limited to schemes having a similitude to the lottery and other like schemes particularly described by the particular words of the section. This view finds strong support in ful use any counterfeit or spurious coin, bank notes, paper money, or any obligation or security of the United States, or of any state, territory, municipality, company, corporation, or person, or anything represented to be or intimated or held out to be such counterfeit or spurious articles, or any scheme or artifice to obtain money by or through correspondence, by what is commonly called the "sawdust swindle," or "counterfeit money fraud," or by dealing or pretending to deal in what is commonly called "green articles," "green coin," "bills," "paper goods," "spurious Treasury notes," "United States goods," "green cigars," or any other names or terms intended to be understood as relating to such counterfeit or spurious articles, to be effected by either opening or intending to open correspondence or communication with any person, whether resident within or outside of the United States, by means of the Postoffice Establishment of the United States, or by inciting such other person or any person to open communication with the person so devising or intending, shall, in and for executing such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do, place or cause to be placed, any letter, packet, writing, circular, pamphlet, or advertisement in any postoffice, branch postoffice, or street or hotel letter box of the United States, to be sent or delivered by the said Postoffice Establishment, or shall take or receive any such therefrom, such person so misusing the Postoffice Establishment shall, upon conviction, be punishable by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment for not more than eighteen months, or by both such punishments, at the discretion of the court. The indictment, information, or complaint may severally charge offenses to the number of three when committed within the same six calendar months; but the court thereupon shall give a single sentence, and shall proportion the punishment especially to the degree in which the abuse of the Postoffice Establishment enters as an instrument into such fraudulent scheme and device.

the case of United States v. Sauer, 88 Fed. 249, where the opinion was by Judge Sevens, then district judge.

The judgment of the court below is accordingly affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES F. MUNDAY and Archie W. Shiels.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 175-185.)

Mines — entry for disqualified principal — coal lands.

1. The prohibition against more than one entry of coal lands by the same person, which is made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2350, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441, prevents a qualified person from making a coal-land location apparently for himself, but in fact as an agent, for the purpose of securing to a corporation a larger area of coal lands than such corporation could lawfully locate for itself.

[For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — entry for disqualified principal — unsurveyed coal lands.

2. The restriction to one entry by the same person, made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2350, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441, governing entries of coal lands under the three preceding sections, which relate solely to surveyed lands, and which were expressly extended to Alaska by the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 658, chap. 796, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441), was made applicable to entries on unsurveyed coal lands in Alaska by the act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. 525, chap. 1772, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 556), enacted solely to provide for the sale of such lands, and continuing in force in Alaska all the coal-land laws of the United States not in conflict with its provisions, the fact that such statute imposes no restrictions upon alienation by one who has made a lawful location not warranting a different conclusion, and the words, "the three preceding sections," found in § 2350, having no material significance, but having been necessitated because the provisions of the original act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 607, chap. 279), when carried into the Revised Statutes, were made a part of the general land law embracing the sale of other public lands.

[For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

[No. 593.]

Argued October 25, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

NOTE.—On the location of a mining claim—see note to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R. A. (N.S.) 763.

56 L. ed.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington to review a judgment quashing an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States by unlawfully obtaining title to coal lands in the District of Alaska. Reversed.

See same case below, 186 Fed. 375.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2350, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441, is, by the express terms of §§ 1 and 4 of the act of April 28, 1904, continued in force in the district of Alaska, and this prohibits more than one entry of coal land by or for the same person or association of persons.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. United States, 164 U. S. 190, 41 L. ed. 399, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; United States v. Doughten, 186 Fed. 226; Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 22 L. ed. 639, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Scofield, General Land Office, June 21, 1911.

Authorities declaring the general principles of statutory construction, and particularly of the construction of statutes making grants of public rights or property, might be cited in great abundance, but it would serve no good purpose. Such statutes, we know, are to be strictly construed against the grantee.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. United States, 164 U. S. 190, 41 L. ed. 399, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

A manifest policy of the government with regard to some distinctive public property, which has been long established and steadfastly pursued, will not be deemed to have been abandoned unless the law on the subject admits of no other construction.

Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 22 L. ed. 639, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451.

Mr. E. C. Hughes argued the cause, and, with Mr. Wilmon Tucker, filed a brief for defendant in error Charles F. Munday:

A legislative act is to be interpreted according to the intention of the legislation apparent on its face.

United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 145, 27 L. ed. 886, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

The primary and general rule of construction is that the intent of the lawmaker is to be found in the language that he has used. He is presumed to know the meaning of words and the rules of grammar.

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 102, 42 L. ed. 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

Where a law is expressed in plain and unambiguous terms, whether those terms are general or limited, the legislature should be intended to mean what they have plainly expressed, and consequently no room is left for construction.

Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 670, 32 L. ed. 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The title of an act is referred to only in cases of doubt or ambiguity.

Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 430, 48 L. ed. 509, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

A provision in a statute continuing in force all other laws not in conflict amounts to no more than a statutory declaration of the common-law rule of construction.

It is a general rule of construction that where two statutes relate to the same or similar subjects, the later act will not be held to repeal the earlier by implication, unless there is a necessary repugnance between some or all of their provisions. Repeals by implication are never favored by the courts.

Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 58, 39 L. ed. 619, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 146, 147, 40 L. ed. 373, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; United States v. Matthews, 173 U. S. 388, 43 L. ed. 740, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413.

Considering the act of 1904 on the hypothesis that it was intended by Congress as an amendment of the act of June 6, 1900, extending U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2347-2352, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441, to the district of Alaska, and that the two laws, so far as not in conflict, are to be considered as one body of law, providing for the disposition of coal lands in that territory, the act of 1904 would constitute the later provision in a single body of laws.

Courts, in construing an amendment to a statute, must consider the amendment as a part of the original act, and the entire act as amended must be given the same construction as if the amendment had been a part of the original law.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 294; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 475, 50 L. ed. 832, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

In this view, §§ 2347-2352 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441) would appear first in the body of the law, and would define the right and the method of procedure of qualified persons to make cash entry of surveyed coal lands of the United States; and the provisions of the act of 1904 would follow and define the right and method of procedure of qualified persons who have opened or improved coal mines, to locate and acquire unsurveyed coal lands of the United States in the district of Alaska. So considered, § 2350 would, by its terms, be confined to the three sections immediately preceding it; in other words, it would declare that the sections of the law authorizing cash entry of surveyed lands "shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons." Upon what theory of statutory construction could the limitations of this section be held to apply to the subsequent provisions of the law granting a different right, providing a different method of procedure, and relating to a different classification of lands; namely, unsurveyed coal lands in the district of Alaska?

No reference can be had to the original statutes to control the construction of any section of the Revised Statutes when its meaning is plain, although in the original statutes it may have had a larger or more limited application than that given to it in the revision.

Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 402, 29 L. ed. 426, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

Words cannot be ingrafted upon one statute or provision of the law merely by reference to a public policy assumed to be declared by another statute, even though relating to the same general subject: and particularly where they relate to different classifications of that subject and provide different methods of procedure.

Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107, 18 L. ed. 518; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 37, 39 L. ed. 611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 521, 44 L. ed. 1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981.

Where a provision is left out of the statute, either by design or mistake of the legislature, the courts have no power to supply it. To do so would be to legislate, and not to construe.

Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; State ex rel. Everding v. Simon, 20 Or. 365, 26 Pac. 171; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 80, 9 L. ed. 1007.

Had Congress intended, when it enacted the law of 1904, to limit the right of qualified persons to associate themselves together in making, or in contracting to assign, locations of unsurveyed coal lands in the district of Alaska, it would have so declared in the law. Was it left out in words, to be put back by construction?

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 448, 45 L. ed. 1177, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

If, in the construction of the statute upon which the indictment in this case must rest, a doubt arises as to the legislative intent, what, then, is the rule of construction? Unless an express prohibition is found in the statute against doing the acts which are here charged as constituting a fraud intended to be committed against the government, how can it be said that the court erred in quashing the indictment? The essence of the crime attempted to be charged in the indictment is conspiracy to defraud by doing acts which the statute prohibits. In order, therefore, that the alleged violation of the law shall be made the basis of a crime, it is necessary that the contemplated acts shall be prohibited in clear and express terms. The law is intended to be read and understood by laymen and its terms complied with by them. Its language must be interpreted according to the ordinary and usual meaning of the words employed; and, when so construed, if a doubt arises, that doubt, in a penal case, must be resolved in favor of the defendant.

United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 394, 53 L. ed. 243, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Clayton, 2 Dill. 219, Fed. Cas. No. 14,814; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 282, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; France v. United States, 164 U. S. 676, 41 L. ed. 595, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 309, 44 L. ed. 780, 781, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. §§ 518, 520; The Enterprise, 1 Paine, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 4,499; The Ben R. 67 C. C. A. 290, 134 Fed. 784; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 219, 23 L. ed. 565; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 190, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Ex parte Bailey, 39 Fla. 734, 23 So. 552.

Mr. Charles W. Dorr argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hiram E. Hadley, filed a brief for defendant in error Archie W. Shiels:

The Alaska coal land act of April 28, 1904, provides the exclusive method for acquiring title to unsurveyed coal lands within the district of Alaska. It carries no restrictions against, nor limitations upon, alienation, but affirmatively recognizes assignments.

The freedom of sale and purchase is absolute unless restricted by statute.

Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 296, 20 L. ed. 562, 563; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 516, 517, 48 L. ed. 769, 771, 772, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 41 L. ed. 179, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 963; Barnes v. Poirier, 12 C. C. A. 9, 27 U. S. 56 L. ed.

App. 500, 64 Fed. 18; Mullen v. Wine, 26 Fed. 206; Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. 24, 13 L. ed. 877; Pereles v. Weil, 157 Fed. 419; Fackler v. Ford, 24 How. 322, 16 L. ed. 690; Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 363, 42 L. ed. 775, 778, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 21 L. ed. 759; Stark v. Starr, 94 U. S. 477, 24 L. ed. 276; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 562, 15 L. ed. 994, 996; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 650, 651, 26 L. ed. 875, 880, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 183; Billings v. Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. 2 C. C. A. 252, 10 U. S. App. 1, 51 Fed. 338; United States v. Biggs, 211 U. S. 507, 53 L. ed. 305, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181.

Nor can a prohibition in another act in pari materia be read into an act in which no prohibition is invested by Congress.

French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 238, 16 L. ed. 97, 99; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 191, 16 L. ed. 251, 253.

It being admitted that the locator may assign, it follows that there may be assignees, as it is not less lawful to buy than to sell.

United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 162, 163, 36 L. ed. 384, 386, 387, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

If we read the Alaska act and §§ 2347-2352 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441) together as one entire statute, then the restriction cannot apply to unsurveyed lands in Alaska, unless the first three sections of the 1904 statute are interpolated between §§ 2349 and 2350 of the Revised Statutes; and if so interpolated, then the restrictions under the present "three preceding sections" would be removed,—a result which is altogether ridiculous.

United States v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 25 L. ed. 631.

Defendants are entitled to the benefit of a strict construction of the law in their favor.

The Enterprise, 1 Paine, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 4,499; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 372, 379, 13 L. ed. 179, 182; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 265, 44 L. ed. 156, 157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; United States v. Corbett, 215 U. S. 244, 54 L. ed. 176, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; The Ben R. 67 C. C. A. 290, 134 Fed. 784; Field v. United States, 69 C. C. A. 568, 137 Fed. 8; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 219, 220, 23 L. ed. 563, 565; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 190, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 477, 6 L. ed. 693, 698; United States v. Houghton, 14 Fed. 544; Sarlls

v. United States, 152 U. S. 570, 38 L. ed. 556, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; United States v. Reed, 1 Low. Dec. 232, Fed. Cas. No. 16,136; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Messrs. E. C. Hughes and Charles W. Dorr also filed a separate brief for defendants in error:

Public land laws intended by Congress as means or instrumentalities to promote the exploration, settlement, and development of the public domain have uniformly received a liberal construction by the courts.

United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 150 U. S. 14, 37 L. ed. 979, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 675, 32 L. ed. 572, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 384, 39 L. ed. 183, 193, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Knepper v. Sands, 194 U. S. 485, 48 L. ed. 1086, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744; Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. 219-224, 19 L. ed. 138-140; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72-90, 20 L. ed. 485-489; Creede & C. Creek Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 351, 352, 49 L. ed. 509, 510, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error is prosecuted by the United States from a judgment sustaining a motion to quash an indictment.

The indictment is founded upon § 5440, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), and charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States by illegally obtaining title to 40 contiguous tracts of coal lands in the district of Alaska, aggregating 6,087 acres, collectively known as the Stracey group, and averred to be of the value of $10,000,000.

The indictment is too long to be set out, even in an abbreviated form. The gravamen of the conspiracy charged is that the defendants induced or procured divers qualified persons to take the several steps required by law *to make locations of Alaska coal lands, not for themselves, but as the mere agents or representatives of the defendants, for the purpose of securing to two named corporations a larger area of coal land than such corporations could lawfully locate for themselves.

For the defendants in error it has been very ably urged that since the concededly applicable coal-land law gives to every individual who is of age and a citizen of the United States, the right to make a coal-land location for himself, and to assign his location when made, that there can be no fraud if he makes such location in the first instance for the benefit of another competent to buy the location when made. But if the provisions of the general coal-land entry law, found in § 2350, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441), apply to the entry of coal lands in Alaska, the contention is now no longer an open one under the repeated interpretations of that section found in the cases of United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; and United States v. Forrester, 211 U. S. 399, 53 L. ed. 245, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

The corporations by whose procurement the forty locations by forty different persons were made, under the express terms of the statute referred to, were disqualified from making more than one location each, and being thus disqualified could not make a second location through an agent acting for their use and benefit. Any construction which would permit one prohibited by express command of the law from making more than one entry or location to make other entries or locations through the agency of a third person, qualified to make an entry for himself, would be to sanction a device which would nullify the purpose of the restriction.

The result must turn upon whether the restrictive features of § 2350, Revised Statutes, are applicable to the sale of coal lands in Alaska. The ruling of the court below and the contention made by the defendants in error is that the act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. p. 525, chap. 1772, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 556), is the *only act applicable to the unsurveyed [178 coal lands of Alaska. That act will be found set out in the margin.†

It purports to be an amendment of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 *Stat. at L. p. [179 658, chap. 796, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441), which extended to Alaska "so much of the public land laws of the United States . . . as relate to coal lands, namely, §§

†That any person or association of persons qualified to make entry under the coal-land laws of the United States, who shall have opened or improved a coal mine or coal mines on any of the unsurveyed public lands of the United States in the district of Alaska, may locate the lands upon which such mine or mines are situated, in rectangular tracts containing forty, eighty, or one hundred and sixty acres, with north and south boundary lines run according to the true meridian, by marking the four corners thereof with permanent monuments, so that the boundaries thereof may be readily and easily traced. And all such locators shall, within one year from the passage of 2347 to 2352, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441):" The sections of the general law thus extended to Alaska are set out in the margin.†

These sections came from the act of March 1803, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. p. 607, chap. 279). The only change made is in the substitution in § 2350 of the words, "The three preceding sections shall be held to authorize," etc., for the words of the 4th section of the original act, reading, "That this act shall be held to authorize,"—a change made necessary because the provisions of the original act are made a part of a chapter of the general land law embracing the sale of other public lands. The act of 1873, as thus carried into the Revised Statutes, this act, or within one year from making such location, file for record in the recording district, and with the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands are located or situated, a notice containing the name or names of the locator or locators, the date of the location, the description of the lands located, and a reference to such natural objects or permanent monuments as will readily identify the same.

Sec. 2. That such locator or locators, or their assigns, who are citizens of the United States, shall receive a patent to the lands located by presenting, at any time within three years from the date of such notice, to the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands so located are situated, an application therefor, accompanied by a certified copy of a plat of survey and field notes thereof, made by a United States deputy surveyor or a United States mineral surveyor, duly approved by the surveyor general for the district of Alaska and a payment of the sum of ten dollars per acre for the lands applied for; but no such application shall be allowed until after the applicant has caused a notice of the presentation thereof, embracing a description of the lands, to have been published in a newspaper in the district of Alaska published nearest the location of the premises, for a period of sixty days, and shall have caused copies of such notice, together with a certified copy of the official plat or survey, to have been kept posted in a conspicuous place upon the land applied for and in the land office for the district in which the lands are located for a like period, and until after he shall have furnished proof of such publication and posting, and such other proof as is required by the coal-land laws: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to the shore of any navigable waters within said district.

Sec. 3. That during such period of posting and publication, or within six months thereafter, any person or association of persons having or asserting any adverse interest or claim to the tract of land, or any part thereof, sought to be purchased, shall file in the land office where such application is pending, under oath, and adverse claim, setting forth the nature and extent thereof, and such adverse claimant shall, within sixty days after the filing of such adverse claim, begin an action to quiet title in a court of competent jurisdiction within the district of Alaska, and thereafter no patent shall issue for such claim until the final adjudication of the rights of the parties, and such patent shall then be issued in conformity with the final decree of such court therein.

Sec. 4. That all the provisions of the coal-land laws of the United States not in conflict with the provisions of this act shall continue and be in full force in the district of Alaska.

†Sec. 2347. Every person above the age of twenty-one years, who is a citizen of the United States, or who has declared his intention to become such, or any association of persons severally qualified as above, shall, upon application to the register of the proper land office, have the right to enter, by legal subdivisions, any quantity of vacant coal lands of the United States not otherwise appropriated or reserved by competent authority, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to such individual person, or three hundred and twenty acres to such association, upon payment to the receiver of not less than ten dollars per acre for such lands, where the same shall be situated more than fifteen miles from any completed railroad, and not less than twenty dollars per acre for such lands as shall be within fifteen miles of such road.

Sec. 2348. Any person or association of persons severally qualified, as above provided, who have opened and improved, or shall hereafter open and improve, any coal mine or mines upon the public lands, and shall be in actual possession of the same, shall be entitled to a preference right of entry, under the preceding section, of the mines so opened and improved; Provided, That when any association of not less than

This was the situation which brought about the act of April 28, 1904, set out in the margin.

The contention is that although this act of 1904 expressly provides "that all of the provisions of the coal-land laws of the United States not in conflict with the provisions of this act shall continue and be in full force in the district of Alaska," that the restrictions in the general coal-land law authorizing "only one entry by the same person or association of persons," etc., is in conflict, and therefore not operative to locations authorized by the later legislation.

Prior to the act of 1873, the disposition of coal lands was included in the general provisions regulating the sale of public lands, and under which there were no limitations upon the number of entries one person might make. But in 1873, when Congress sought to deal with the specific subject of the sale of coal lands, the rule was adopted of confining every qualified entryman to one entry, and every association of persons, not less than four in number and under certain conditions, to the entry of not exceeding 640 acres. A corporation has been held to be an association of persons within the meaning of this section. United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 169, 34 L. ed. 640, 643, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57. The policy of this restriction was to prevent 182] a monopolization of such coal lands by securing to every citizen the right to obtain for himself one tract, not exceeding 160 acres, of such coal land. Ibid. United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

That continued to be the uniform policy four persons, severally qualified as above provided, shall have expended not less than five thousand dollars in working and improving any such mine or mines, such association may enter not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, including such mining improvements.

Sec. 2349. All claims under the preceding section must be presented to the register of the proper land district within sixty days after the date of actual possession and the commencement of improvements on the land, by the filing of a declaratory statement therefor; but when the township plat is not on file at the date of such improvement, filing must be made within sixty days from the receipt of such plat at the district office; and where the improvements shall have been made prior to the expiration of three months from the third day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, sixty days from the expiration of such three months shall be allowed for the filing of a declaratory statement and no sale under the provisions of this section of Congress, and so continues, unless a departure has been made by the act of 1904. But, if so, it is only as to the unsurveyed, coal lands of Alaska, for undoubtedly when such lands shall be surveyed they will come at once under the restrictions of the general law as found in §§ 2347 to 2350, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, since the act of 1904 applies only to the unsurveyed public lands of Alaska.

There occurs to us no reason for assuming that Congress intended to abandon the policy of keeping open the right of every citizen to enter one tract, and no more, of the unsurveyed coal lands of Alaska, that would not lead also to the abandonment of the policy as respects coal lands which had been surveyed.

An intention to depart from a uniform policy so long enforced in regard to coal lands should not be imputed to Congress unless the act of 1904 admits of no other construction. Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 669, 22 L. ed. 639, 643, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451.

But it is said that the purpose to depart from the policy which imposed a restriction upon the number of locations which had before been authorized is manifest in the provision of § 2 of the act in question, which requires that the locator or locators, "or their assigns," who are citizens of the United States, shall receive a patent to the lands so located, etc. The fact that one who has made a lawful location is permitted to make an assignment, as is the plain implication from the requirement that a patent "shall" issue to "the locator or his assigns," is not indicative of a purpose to abandon the prohibition upon more than one location. By go-shall be allowed until the expiration of six months from the third day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-three.

Sec. 2350. The three preceding sections shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons; and no association of persons any member of which shall have taken the benefits of such sections, either as an individual or as a member of any other association, shall enter or hold any other lands under the provisions thereof; and no member of any association which shall have taken the benefit of such sections shall enter or hold any other lands under their provisions; and all persons claiming under section twenty-three hundred and forty-eight shall be required to prove their respective rights and pay for the lands filed upon within one year from the time prescribed for filing their respective claims; and upon failure to file the proper notice, or to pay for the land within the required period, the same shall be subject to entry by any other qualified applicant.

ing upon coal land, opening up a mine, permanently marking the boundaries, and filing 183]*and making the notices required under the law, one otherwise qualified initiates a claim to the land, and may, by further compliance with the law, earn the right to a patent. That the policy of the law stops at this point, and leaves him free to assign his location, does not impeach the intent of Congress to confine a locator to a single location. The prohibition is against more than one entry, not against alienation after a good-faith location.

Of the restrictions concerning the entry of land under the timber and stone act, it was said: "The act does not in any respect limit the dominion which the purchaser has over the land after its purchase from the government, or restrict in the slightest his power of alienation. All that it denounces is a prior agreement,—the acting for another in the purchase." United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 163, 36 L. ed. 384, 387, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

The same argument was addressed to this court in United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 389, 53 L. ed. 230, 241, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123, as a reason for confining the prohibition to one entry made by a qualified person for the use and benefit of another, who was disqualified from making a second entry. But this court said: "True, the statute imposes no limitation on the right of a purchaser who has acquired coal land from the United States to sell the same after he has become the owner of the land. The absence, however, of a limitation on the power to sell after acquisition, affords no ground for saying that the express prohibition of the statute against more than one entry by the same person should not be enforced according to its plain meaning. This clearly follows, since the right to sell that which one has lawfully acquired neither directly nor indirectly implies the authority to unlawfully acquire in violation of an express prohibition." Ibid.

Upon the same line of reasoning we find no reason for supposing that Congress intended by the act of 1904 to remove the restriction upon more than one entry by the 184]*same person, because it imposed none upon alienation after the right to a patent had accrued by a good-faith location.

But it is said that the restriction upon the right to make more than one entry by the same person applied only to entries made under the three preceding sections, i. e., §§ 2347, 2348, and 2349. That this peculiar limitation has no material significance, we have already pointed out, its presence in the section being due to the fact that § 2350, and the preceding three sections, constituting the original act of 1873, 56 L. ed.

were placed in the midst of a chapter embracing many other provisions in no wise related to the entry of coal lands. It is, however, to be borne in mind that this act of 1904 is but an amendment to the act of 1900, which extended these sections of the general coal entry law to the district of Alaska. The three acts are in pari materia and must be read together, and no part of the previously existing law upon the same subject is to be regarded as inoperative unless no other construction of the later legislation is reasonable.

The single object of Congress in the act of 1904 was to provide for the sale of coal lands which had not been surveyed. The provisions for the sale of such coal lands, in or out of Alaska, which had been surveyed, so that entries could be made "by legal subdivision," had already been covered by the general law which had been extended to Alaska. The conditions in Alaska were but temporary. When the coal land there should be brought under the system of surveys which prevailed in the better settled parts of the country, the act of 1904 would cease to be operative, having nothing to which it could apply. The legislation, read in the light of the situation and of the uniform policy which had so long prevailed of prohibiting more than one entry to one person, makes it plain that Congress did not intend to except the unsurveyed coal lands of Alaska from the operation of the restrictions which attached to *the sale of the surveyed coal lands in[185 Alaska and elsewhere.

The judgment must be reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings, not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

MISSOURI & KANSAS INTERURBAN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF OLATHE, Kansas.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 185, 186.)

Error to state court — finality of judgment.

A judgment of the highest court of a state, affirming, without directing a dismissal, the judgment of the court below, which had sustained a demurrer to the petition in a civil suit upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, but had not dismissed the suit, lacks the finality requisite to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 726.]

Submitted November 13, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed, without directing a dismissal, a judgment of the District Court of Johnson County, in that state, which had sustained a demurrer to the petition upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, but had not dismissed the suit. Dismissed for want of final judgment.

See same case below, 81 Kan. 328, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 861, 105 Pac. 521; on rehearing, 82 Kan. 4, 107 Pac. 539.

Mr. Frank Doster submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. A. F. Hunt, Jr., A. M. Harvey, and J. E. Addington were on the brief.

Mr. Stephen H. Allen submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Hughes:

Motion to dismiss. This suit was brought by the railway company, plaintiff in error, against the city of Olathe, Kansas, in the 186]district court of Johnson county, *in that state, to recover damages caused by the repeal of an ordinance authorizing the use of certain streets of the city for an inter-urban railway, and by the consequent prevention, until the passage of a new ordinance, of its construction and operation. The defendant demurred to the petition upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The district court sustained the demurrer, and its decision was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. And this writ of error is brought.

The record fails to disclose a final judgment. The supreme court affirmed the judgment of the lower court, but this merely sustained the demurrer without dismissing Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On what judgments of state courts are final for the purpose of review in the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

the suit. The supreme court did not direct its dismissal, but the cause was left standing in the court below for such proceedings as might be had according to law after the decision on the demurrer, either by amendment of the petition or entry of final judgment.

As it does not appear from the record that the judgment sought to be reviewed was one which finally determined the cause, this court is without jurisdiction. Miners' Bank v. United States, 5 How. 213, 12 L. ed. 121; McComb v. Knox County, 91 U. S. 1, 23 L. ed. 185; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 339, 40 L. ed. 991, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

Dismissed.

*MISSOURI & KANSAS INTERUR-[187
BAN RAILWAY COMPANY, William B.
Strang, F. R. Ogg, et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF OLATHE, Kansas.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 187-190.)

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on non-Federal ground.

A decision of the highest court of a state, enforcing the payment by a street railway company to a municipality of the sum contracted to be paid when the road should be completed, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court, as giving effect to a resolution of the common council which the company asserts impaired its contract right to construct a certain turn-out, where the court placed its decision distinctly upon the ground that, without regard to that resolution or to the question of the right of the company to construct the turn-out, the money was payable because the road had been substantially completed.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 727.]

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

Submitted November 13, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Johnson County, in that state, enforcing the payment by a street railway company to a municipality of the sum contracted to be paid when the road should be completed. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below 84 Kan. 408, 114 Pac. 228.

Mr. Frank Doster submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. A. F. Hunt, Jr., A. M. Harvey, and J. E. Addington were on the brief:

Federal questions arise on objections to the reception of evidence specifically setting forth the Federal right claimed.

Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

It is part of the duty of the Federal courts, under the impairment of obligation of contract clause in the Constitution, to decide whether there is a valid contract and what its construction is, and whether, as construed, there is any subsequent legislation, by municipality or by the state legislature, which impairs its obligation.

Mercantile Trust & D. Co. v. Columbus, 203 U. S. 311-320, 51 L. ed. 198-202, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83.

When a claim of constitutional right is distinctly set up and relied on in the state court, appellate jurisdiction exists, even though the state court does not decide the question raised, as by resting its decision on some non-Federal ground, if the necessary effect of the judgment rendered is to deny the claim of a Federal right.

Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 260, 41 L. ed. 992, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

Whenever the highest court in a state shall adjudge that not to be a contract which, on the other hand, has been asserted by a litigant to be one, and, being such, to have been impaired by state legislation, a Federal question arises.

Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black. 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Bridge Props. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 490; Delmas v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. ed. 757; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921.
56 L. ed.

Mr. Stephen H. Allen submitted the cause for defendant in error:

No Federal question is presented by the record in this case. The defendants sought to raise the question whether the passage of the resolution setting aside the approval of the specifications operated as an impairment of the contract resulting from such approval. The court not only declined to pass on this question, but declined to consider the controversy concerning the passing track. It decided the case on the broad ground that the defendant was liable whichever way that question might be resolved, and held that the right to construct a passing track, without which the railway could be and was operated, was a mere matter of detail, and that the denial of the right to construct it afforded no defense to the plaintiff's claim.

Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 216, 41 L. ed. 132, 136, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 370, 20 L. ed. 414; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Todd County, 142 U. S. 282, 35 L. ed. 1014, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 393, 38 L. ed. 206, 207, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Seneca Nation v. Christy, 162 U. S. 283, 40 L. ed. 970, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 581, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; Seeberger v. McCormick, 175 U. S. 274, 44 L. ed. 161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Hughes:

Motion to dismiss. The city of Olathe, Kansas, granted to the railway company, plaintiff in error, the privilege *of us-[188 ing certain streets for its railway, and the railway company agreed to pay therefor the sum of $9,000 when the road was completed. This suit was brought in October, 1908, to recover this amount, and the railway company defended upon the ground that the road had not been completed, and hence that the money was not due. It appeared that the company had built and was operating its railway over the entire route save only a certain "turn-out," the construction of which the city prevented. On the trial, evidence was received, over objection, of a resolution adopted by the mayor and common council on March 21, 1910, pending the suit, which purported to set aside their approval of the plans and specifications so far as the "turn-out" was concerned. But the decision of the court, which went for the city, was not in any sense based on that. The trial court found the facts to be as follows:

"The map or ground plan of the said proposed railway contained a red line indicating the main line of the said railway, over the streets of said city, and in addition to said main railway the Y on Santa Fé street was indicated on said map. The said map also contained a red line, which indicated a contemplated turn-out on East Park street, near the State Institution. The specifications filed with the city clerk by the defendant company specifies in detail the work therein named, but does not mention the 'turn-out' above mentioned. The mayor and members of the city council at the time did not know that the red line above mentioned indicated the turn-out claimed by the defendant.

"On August 28th, 1907, the city brought an injunction suit restraining the defendant company from laying the said switch or turn-out above mentioned, which suit is still pending.

"The said railway company laid its main tracks, together with the Y on Santa Fé street, and commenced operating cars over the entire distance from some time in the 189]*month of August, 1907, and has continued to use said track down to the present time, excepting the period of a few months when the operation of said railway was interrupted by changing from a motor car service to an electric service.

"The turn-out above mentioned is not a necessary part of the construction of said road in order to reasonably operate the same throughout said city, and to the terminus, as provided in said ordinance.

"The road as contemplated by said franchise was substantially completed within the meaning of said franchise in the month of August, 1907."

Judgment, entered accordingly, was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, and the grounds of its decision are thus stated in its opinion:

"In brief, the question involved is whether the work to be done by the company under the franchise can be regarded as having been completed, in such sense as to make the payment of the $9,000 due, in view of the fact that the city has prevented the construction of the turn-out. The company maintains that upon the acceptance of its specifications it acquired a contract right to build the turn-out, which cannot be affected by any subsequent action of the city. The city contends that it cannot by contract divest itself of the power to control the use of the streets for the benefit of the public, and that the turn-out, if constructed at the point designated, would unreasonably interfere with the use of the street as a highway. These matters need not be determined in this case. They are proper subjects for consideration in the injunction suit. In whatever way they may be determined, we think the judgment here appealed from must be affirmed upon the ground that the work of the company authorized by the franchise has long since been substantially completed. The location of the turn-out is a mere detail. The right of the company to construct it at the place selected can be determined in the *injunction action. A final judgment[190 for the city in that proceeding will demonstrate that the stopping of work on the turn-out was rightful, and therefore could not be a just ground for the company's refusing to make the promised payment. If, on the other hand, it develops that the injunction was wrongfully issued, the company's remedy for any consequent injury lies in seeking damages therefor, not in delaying payment of the amount agreed upon as the consideration for the granting of the franchise." [84 Kan. 410, 114 Pac. 228.]

It thus plainly appears that the decision did not give effect to the subsequent resolution, which it is asserted impaired the obligation of the contract, but was placed distinctly upon the ground that, without regard to that resolution, or to the question of the right of the company to construct the turn-out, the money was payable, as the road had been substantially completed. The judgment would have been the same had the resolution not been adopted at all. No effect whatever has been given to it by the state court, and this court is without jurisdiction to review its judgment. Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Kennebec & P. R. Co. v. Portland & K. R. Co. 14 Wall. 23, 20 L. ed. 850; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Plainview, 143 U. S. 371, 392, 36 L. ed. 191, 200, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 350, 46 L. ed. 936, 943, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691. As was said by Mr. Justice Gray in New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. pp. 38, 39, 31 L. ed. 614, 615, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741: "But when the state court gives no effect to the subsequent law, but decides, on grounds independent of that law, that the right claimed was not conferred by the contract, the case stands just as if the subsequent law had not been passed, and this court has no jurisdiction."

Dismissed.

191]*MISSOURI & KANSAS INTERURBAN RAILWAY COMPANY, William B. Strang, F. R. Ogg, et al., Pliffs. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF OLATHE, Kansas.

[No. 728.]

By Mr. Justice Hughes:

In case No. 728, between the same parties, the same judgment will be entered as in the preceding case, No. 727.

JOHN I. MARTIN et al., Pliffs. in Err.,

v.

A. J. WEST.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 191-198.)

Error to state court — scope of review — statutory construction.

1. The Federal Supreme Court, on writ

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens, Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

Admiralty jurisdiction of action arising out of collision of vessel with bridge.

This question is to be solved, as is pointed out by Mr. Justice Van Devanter in the principal case, according to the locality of the injured thing at the time of the collision. Hence, when the action is against the owners of the bridge for the injuries received by the vessel, we should expect to find, and do find, that the case is one for the admiralty courts. Assante v. Charleston Bridge Co. 40 Fed. 765; Hill v. Essex County, 45 Fed. 260; Boston v. Crowley, 38 Fed. 202; Etheridge v. Philadelphia, 26 Fed. 43; Re Rock Island Bridge Co. 6 Wall. 56 L. ed.

of error to a state court, will accept that court's construction of a state statute giving a lien on vessels for injuries committed by them to persons or property, as including injuries to a bridge, caused by a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124-2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Admiralty — jurisdiction — collision with bridge.

2. A collision between a vessel and a supporting pier of a bridge over a navigable water way of the United States, caused by the negligent management of the vessel, and resulting in the collapse of a span of the bridge, and its fall into the stream, is a nonmaritime tort, and a cause of action arising thereon is therefore not within the exclusive admiralty jurisdiction of the Federal courts, but the owner of the bridge may pursue the remedy afforded by a state statute, even though that law gives a lien on the vessel.

[For other cases, see Admiralty, 187-192, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — lien on foreign vessel.

3. The creation and enforcement of a lien for a nonmaritime tort against a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce, under Ballinger's (Wash.) Anno. Codes & Statutes, §§ 5953, 5954, which embrace all vessels, whether domestic or foreign, and whether engaged in intrastate or interstate commerce, does not offend against the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 364-366, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 33.]

Argued and submitted November 2, 1911.
Decided December 4, 1911.

213, 18 L. ed. 753; Oregon City Transp. Co. v. Columbia Street Bridge Co. 53 Fed. 549.

But actions against the vessel for injuries to the bridge, due to a collision between the two, are not within the admiralty jurisdiction. Charleston Bridge Co. v. The John C. Sweeney, 55 Fed. 540; Milwaukee v. The Curtis, 3 L.R.A. 711, 37 Fed. 705; Chicago v. The Queen City, 17 Ill. App. 203; The Neil Cochran, Brown, Adm. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 10,087; The Savannah, Fed. Cas. No. 12,384; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Cleveland S. S. Co. 208 U. S. 316, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414, 13 Ann. Cas. 125; The Troy, 208 U. S. 321, 52 L. ed. 512, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

An analogous case involving the same principle is Phoenix Constr. Co. v. The Poughkeepsie, 212 U. S. 558, 53 L. ed. 651, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687, where the Federal Supreme Court, on the authority of the two cases last above cited, affirmed the decree below, dismissing for want of jurisdiction a libel in rem against a vessel for injuries inflicted by such vessel upon certain borings made in the Hudson river for the purpose of locating a tunnel aqueduct under the river bed.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed, on rehearing, a judgment of the Superior Court for Chehalis County, in that state, enforcing a lien for a nonmaritime tort against a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce. Affirmed.

See same case below, 47 Wash. 417, 92 Pac. 334; on rehearing 51 Wash. 85, 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 324, 97 Pac. 1102.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John Trumbull argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

If the wrong or negligence originates on the land, but the substance and consummation of the injury and damage—in other words, the cause of action—takes place upon the high seas or navigable waters, the admiralty must have exclusive jurisdiction.

Hermann v. Port Blakely Mill Co. 69 Fed. 646; The City of Lincoln, 25 Fed. 835.

Whilst the supreme court of Washington has held the statute of that state applicable to sustain the attachment of the vessel thereunder for the tort alleged, it by no means follows that such construction by that court can be accepted as binding in this court.

The Chusan, 2 Story, 455, Fed. Cas. No. 2,717; Guffey v. Alaska & P. S. S. Co. 64 C. C. A. 571, 130 Fed. 278.

In all cases where it is necessary to determine whether or not the rights secured by the Constitution or some law of the United States have been violated by a state statute or a municipal ordinance, the Supreme Court of the United States will place its own independent construction upon such state law.

Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Bridge Proprs. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Delmas v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. ed. 757; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 490; Northwestern University v. Illinois, 99 U. S. 309, 25 L. ed. 387; Yick Wo v. Hawkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 38 L. ed. 793, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Easton v. Iowa, 188 U. S. 220, 47 L. ed. 452, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 522.

The principle of maritime law—that the vessel, in whosoever hands she lawfully is, is herself considered the wrongdoer, and liable for the tort, and subject to a maritime lien for damages (Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386-403, 39 L. ed. 742-750, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Trans-atlantique, 182 U. S. 406-414, 45 L. ed. 1155-1160, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831)—was apparently clearly in the mind of the legislature when this act was passed.

It is common knowledge that the maritime law does not give liens against domestic vessels for supplies, material, repairs, service, etc., furnished them in the home ports.

Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355, 23 L. ed. 903; The Edith (Poole v. Tyler) 94 U. S. 518, 24 L. ed. 167; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. 324, 8 L. ed. 700; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. ed. 266; The Lottawanna (Wilson v. Bell) 20 Wall. 201, 22 L. ed. 259.

In the absence of a statute no maritime lien exists in favor of a master for service (Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355, 23 L. ed. 903) not even for maritime wages (The Orleans v. Phœbus, 11 Pet. 175, 9 L. ed. 677).

The statute only contemplates a lien where there has been any contract or service.

Waddell v. The Daisy, 2 Wash. Terr. 84, 3 Pac. 616; Washington Iron Works v. Jensen, 3 Wash. 587, 28 Pac. 1019; The Chusan, 2 Story, 455, Fed. Cas. No. 2,717; The Laurel, 113 Fed. 373; Guffey v. Alaska & P. S. S. Co. 64 C. C. A. 517, 130 Fed. 271; The Lyndhurst, 48 Fed. 839; The Kate, 164 U. S. 458-470, 41 L. ed. 512-518, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; Cuddy v. Clement, 51 C. C. A. 288, 113 Fed. 454; The Iris, 40 C. C. A. 301, 100 Fed. 104; The Electron, 21 C. C. A. 12, 45 U. S. App. 16, 74 Fed. 689.

That a state may enact lien laws as to ships owned within it has long been settled. Not a line, however, of any decision to that effect, can be fairly construed as authorizing also liens on ships owned without the state. Indeed, it is questionable whether such liens were intended to be supported, even within the state, beyond the home port, but, be this as it may, they are supported on local ships only. Examine any decision in which one of these liens was directly involved, and it will be found to go no further; nay, by plain intendment, to forbid more.

The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. ed. 609; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. 324, 8 L. ed. 700; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. ed. 266; The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt) 21 Wall. 558, 22 L. ed. 654; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 345, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 47 L. ed. 770, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Benedict, Admiralty, 4th ed. § 198; Hughes, Admiralty, p. 109.

The Washington statute, as interpreted by the state supreme court, offends against the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

The Chusan, 2 Story, 255, Fed. Cas. No. 2,717; The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 47 L. ed. 770, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Easton v. Iowa, 188 U. S. 220, 47 L. ed. 452, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 522; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

Mr. W. C. Keegin submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The case is one that was within the jurisdiction of the state court, and the admiralty court of the United States did not have jurisdiction thereover.

The Savannah, Fed. Cas. No. 12,384; Milwaukee v. The Curtis, 3 L.R.A. 711, 37 Fed. 705; The John C. Sweeney, 55 Fed. 540; The Poughkeepsie, 162 Fed. 494, affirmed in 212 U. S. 558, 53 L. ed. 651, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; The Plymouth (Hough v. Western Transp. Co.) 3 Wall. 20, 18 L. ed. 125; Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 30 L. ed. 274, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Cleveland S. S. Co. 208 U. S. 316, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1215; The Troy, 208 U. S. 322, 52 L. ed. 513, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

The validity of this statute has been recognized by the United States in the district court for the state of Washington, as well as by the circuit court of appeals for that circuit, subsequent to the decision of this court in the case of The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 47 L. ed. 770, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491. (See The Energia, 124 Fed. 842, and Guffey v. Alaska & P. S. S. Co. 64 C. C. A. 517, 130 Fed. 278.)

And the construction put upon the statute by the state supreme court as to its scope and effect is conclusive here (Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 541, 51 L. ed. 305, 309, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167).

That the provisions of state statutes like those here in question are valid and effective when they do not intrench upon the dominion of admiralty is well settled.

Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Knapp, S. & Co. v. McCaffrey, 177 U. S. 638, 44 L. ed. 921, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 824; The Winnebago (Iroquois Transp. Co. v. De Laney Forge & Iron Co.) 205 U. S. 355, 51 L. ed. 837, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. ed. 708, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 56 L. ed.

823, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 907; Berwin-White Coal Min. Co. v. Metropolitan S. S. Co. 166 Fed. 782, affirmed in 97 C. C. A. 477, 173 Fed. 471; Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479, 85 Am. St. Rep. 215, 65 Pac. 1032; The Victorian, 24 Or. 121, 41 Am. St. Rep. 838, 32 Pac. 1040; Scatcherd Lumber Co. v. Rike, 113 Ala. 559, 59 Am. St. Rep. 147, 21 So. 136; Globe Iron Works v. The John B. Ketcham, 2d, 100 Mich. 583, 43 Am. St. Rep. 464, 59 N. W. 247; Reynolds v. Nielson, 116 Wis. 483, 96 Am. St. Rep. 1000, 93 N. W. 455.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arose out of the collision, on May 7, 1906, of the steamer Norwood, owned and enrolled at San Francisco, with a supporting pier of a toll drawbridge between Aberdeen and South Aberdeen, in Chehalis county, Washington, over the Chehalis river, a navigable stream flowing into an arm of the Pacific ocean. The pier stood upon the bed of the river, in navigable water, and the bridge was maintained and used as a connection between highways on either side of the stream, and not as an aid to navigation. The vessel was engaged in interstate commerce, was proceeding under her own motive power, and so struck the pier as to do serious injury to it, and to cause one span of the bridge to collapse and fall into the river within a few hours thereafter. The cause of the collision was the negligent management of the vessel by her master and owners.

In a suit brought in the superior court of Chehalis county, by the owner of the bridge, against the master and owners of the vessel, the former asserted and sought to enforce, under a statute of the state (Ballinger's Anno. Codes & Statutes, §§ 59-53, 5954), a lien against the vessel for his damages so sustained; caused the vessel to be seized and detained by a temporary receiver, until released by the substitution of a bond by the master and owners in place of the vessel; and recovered a judgment, assessing his damages at $13,751.89, and establishing the lien so asserted. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state (51 Wash. 85, 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 324, 97 Pac. 1102), and its decision is now called in question upon various grounds, which, in view of our prior decisions, require but brief notice.

*The pertinent portions of the state[196 statute are as follows:

"Sec. 5953. All steamers, vessels, and boats, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, are liable,—

"6. For injuries committed by them to persons or property within this state, or while transporting such persons or property to or from this state.

"Demands for these several causes constitute liens upon all steamers, vessels, and boats, and their tackle, apparel, and furniture, and have priority in their order herein enumerated, and have preference over all other demands; but such liens only continue in force for the period of three years from the time the cause of action accrued.

"Sec. 5954. Such liens may be enforced, in all cases of maritime contracts or service, by a suit in admiralty, in rem, and the law regulating proceedings in admiralty shall govern in all such suits; and in all cases of contracts or service not maritime, by a civil action in any district court of this territory."

1. It is objected that the statute does not include injuries to a fixed structure like a bridge, but only to persons or property while being transported, or, at most, to movable property susceptible of being transported; and does not include a foreign vessel, such as the Norwood, but only domestic vessels. But of this it is enough to say, the supreme court of the state has construed the statute otherwise, and the case is on in which we accept that construction. The Winnebago (Iroquois Transp. Co. v. De Laney Forge & Iron Co.) 205 U. S. 354, 51 L. ed. 836, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 51 L. ed. 305, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167.

2. It next is insisted that the injury on account of which the lien was asserted was a maritime tort, and therefore the cause of action was within the exclusive admiralty jurisdiction of the courts of the United States; the argument being that, as the collapsing span of the bridge fell into the river, it was there that the substance and consummation of the wrong took place.

197] *It may be that the damage ensuing from the collision was aggravated by the fact that the span fell into the stream and was subjected to the force of the current, and submerged in the water; but, if that be so, it furnishes no criterion for determining whether the tort was maritime or non-maritime, because that question must be resolved according to the locality and character of the injured thing—the bridge, with its spans and supporting piers—at the time of the collision. It was then that the causal influence of the negligent management of the vessel took effect injuriously and gave rise to a cause of action; and what followed is important only as bearing upon the extent of the injury and resulting liability. This is well illustrated in Johnson v. Chi- cago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254. There, the jib boom of a schooner, in the Chicago river, was negligently driven through the wall of a warehouse on adjacent land, whereby a large quantity of shelled corn, stored in the warehouse, ran out into the river and was lost. It was held that the substance and consummation of the wrong took place on land, and that the tort was nonmaritime, although the damage inflicted consisted chiefly of the loss of the corn. Other applications of the same principle are shown in The Strabo, 90 Fed. 110, and The Haxby, 95 Fed. 170.

As the bridge was essentially a land structure, maintained and used as an aid to commerce on land, its locality and character were such that the tort was nonmaritime (The Plymouth [Haugh v. Western Transp. Co.] 3 Wall. 20, 18 L. ed. 125; The Blackheath [United States v. Evans] 195 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 236, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Cleveland S. S. Co. 208 U. S. 316, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1215; The Troy, 208 U. S. 321, 52 L. ed. 512, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416); and consequently it was admissible to pursue in the state court the remedy provided by the state statute, even though that law gave a lien on the vessel (Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. supra; Knapp, S. & Co. Co. v. McCaffrey, 177 U. S. 638, 44 L. ed. 921, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 824; The Winnebago, supra).

3. Lastly, it is contended that the statute, as interpreted *by the supreme[198] court of the state, offends against the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, in that the creation and enforcement of such a lien against a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce is an unwarranted interference with such commerce.

We do not perceive in the statute, as interpreted and applied in the present case, any basis for this contention. As interpreted, the statute embraces all vessels, whether domestic or foreign, and whether engaged in intrastate or interstate commerce, and therefore it cannot be said that its purpose is to regulate the latter. Its enforcement may occasionally and temporarily interrupt or prevent the use of a vessel in such commerce, as in this instance; but such an interference is incidental only, is almost inseparable from the compulsory enforcement of liabilities of the class in question, is not in conflict with any regulation of Congress, and does not in itself offend against the commerce clause of the Constitution. Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 400, 30 L.

ed. 447, 451, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; The Winnebago (Iroquois Transp. Co. v. De Laney Forge & Iron Co.) 205 U. S. 354, 362, 51 L. ed. 836, 840, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 217 U. S. 157, 179, 54 L. ed. 708, 720, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 823, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 907.

We think the questions presented were rightly decided by the Supreme Court of the state, and its judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

199]*UNITED STATES OF AMERICA et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CONGRESS CONSTRUCTION COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 199-204.)

Error to circuit court — jurisdiction below.

1. The objection that an action brought by the United States against the principal and sureties on the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of February 24, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 811, chap. 778, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 948), amending the act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), for his failure to pay certain designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in construction, should, under such statutes, when rightly construed, have been brought in the Federal circuit court for the district wherein the contract was to be performed, instead of in the court for the district where the defendants reside, raises a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court which will sustain a direct writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 895-914, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — proper district for suit — action on bond of public contractor.

2. The restriction as to the place of suit when persons holding unpaid demands for labor or materials bring an action in the name of the United States, on the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of February 24, 1905, amending the act of August 13, 1894, to the Federal circuit court for the district in which said contract is to be performed, "and not elsewhere," governs as well where the action is brought by the United States against the principal and sureties on the bond, for the failure to pay certain designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in the construction of the work.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — proper district for suit — action on bond of public contractor — absent defendants.

3. The limitation to the Federal circuit court of the district wherein a contract for a public work is to be performed of an action brought by the United States against the principal and sureties on the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of February 24, 1905, amending the act of August 13, 1894, for his failure to pay certain designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in construction, operates pro tanto to displace the provisions upon that subject in the general jurisdictional act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), § 1, and amply authorizes the circuit court for the district wherein the action is required to be brought to obtain jurisdiction of the persons of the defendants through the service upon them of its process in whatever district they may be found.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 63.]

Argued and submitted November 14 and 15, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment dismissing, because brought in the wrong district, an action brought by the United States against the principal and sureties on the bond of a contractor for a public work, for his failure to pay certain designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in construction. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. Jesse R. Long submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error other than the United States.

Mr. Allen G. Mills submitted the cause for S. N. Crowen, one of the defendants in error.

*Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action by the United States against the principal and sureties on a bond, given conformably to the act of August 13, 1894, chap. 280, 28 Stat. at L. 278, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523, as amended February 24, 1905, chap. 778, 33 Stat. at L. 811, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; and Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333.

As to proper Federal district for suit—see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

56 L. ed.

1909, p. 948, for the performance of a contract for the construction of a public building, and containing the required additional condition relating to the payment of claims for labor and materials. As stated in the declaration, the right of action arose out of the fact that, although the building had been satisfactorily completed, and full payment therefor had been made to the contractor, the latter had failed to make payment to designated subcontractors who had furnished labor and materials used in the construction of the building. The action was brought in the circuit court of the district whereof the defendants were inhabitants, which, as appeared on the face of the declaration, was not the district in which the contract was to be performed. The subcontractors intervened and asked to have their claims adjudicated and judgment rendered thereon. The principal in the bond did not appear, but the sureties appeared specially, and interposed pleas to the jurisdiction, upon the ground that, under the statute, conformably to which the bond was given, power to entertain the action was vested exclusively in the circuit court of the district wherein the contract was to be performed. The pleas were sustained and the action dismissed for want of jurisdiction, whereupon this direct writ of error was sued out and the jurisdictional question duly certified.

Before coming to that question it is necessary to consider a motion to dismiss, wherein the position is taken that the jurisdiction of the circuit court was not in issue in the sense of the 5th section of the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, 26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549. The position evidently rests upon a misconception *of the true import of the clause, "In any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue," in that section, as interpreted by repeated decisions of this court, which, with one accord, hold that the jurisdiction of a circuit or district court is in issue in the sense intended whenever the power of the court to hear and determine the cause, as defined or limited by the Constitution or statutes of the United States, is in controversy. The cases of Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; United States v. Larkin, 208 U. S. 333, 52 L. ed. 517, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; and Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185, cited in support of the motion, do not conflict, but fully accord, with this holding. In the first case, as this court was careful to state, the power of the circuit court under the Federal law was not in controversy, but only its authority, in the exercise of that power, to proceed in harmony with recognized rules of law applicable alike to all courts, whether Federal or state, possessing concurrent jurisdiction. In the second case, neither the interpretation nor the operation of any statute defining or limiting the power of the district court was in issue, but only the place of seizure of jewels sought to be forfeited as fraudulently imported, which was a subsidiary matter, not amounting to a jurisdictional question in the sense of the statute. In the third case, the issue related, as was expressly said, to the applicability of a rule of law which was general in its nature, and quite as controlling in other courts as in those of Federal creation. And so it was that in those cases the jurisdiction of the courts below was held not to have been in issue in the sense intended. On the other hand, in Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. United States, 213 U. S. 10, 53 L. ed. 675, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, a case closely in point here, the application of the same guiding principle operated to sustain our jurisdiction. There, as here, the objection to the jurisdiction of the circuit court was that the action was brought in one district, when, under the Federal statutes, rightly interpreted, it should have been brought *in another. The [202 objection was overruled, the case came here upon a direct writ of error, and the ruling was reviewed and reversed; it being said in the opinion: "A party who is sued in the wrong district, and does not waive the objection, may of right appear specially and object to the jurisdiction of the court, and, the decision being against his objection, may of right bring the question directly to this court."

Here the jurisdiction of the circuit court, in the sense of its power to entertain the action, in view of the statutory provisions bearing upon the place for bringing such an action, was directly in issue, and so the case is rightly here upon a direct writ of error. The motion to dismiss is accordingly denied.

Whether or not, under the act of 1894, as amended in 1905, power to entertain the action was vested exclusively in the circuit court of the district wherein the contract was to be performed, is the question which was presented to the court below and answered in the affirmative; and the correctness of that answer turns upon the nature of the action and the provisions of the statute.

According to the declaration, the contract for the construction of the building had been satisfactorily performed, full payment therefor had been made to the contractor, the conditions of the bond had been breached only by his failure to pay designated subcontractors for labor and materials used in the construction of the building, and the object sought to be attained was the adjudication and enforcement of those demands, unaccompanied by any pecuniary demand of the United States. Manifestly, therefore, the action, although brought by the United States, was essentially one in behalf of the subcontractors, and the respective interests of the United States and the subcontractors therein were in no wise different from what they would have been had the action been brought in the 203]*name of the United States by the subcontractors, for the use and benefit of the latter.

The statute, whilst authorizing persons holding unpaid demands for labor or materials to bring such an action in the name of the United States, expressly requires that it be brought "in the circuit court of the United States in the district in which said contract was to be performed and executed, irrespective of the amount in controversy, and not elsewhere," and also provides that only one such action shall be brought, and that it shall be so instituted and conducted, in point of notice and otherwise, that all demands of that class may be adjudicated therein and included in a single recovery.

Considering the purpose of the statute, as manifested in these provisions, we think the restriction respecting the place of suit was intended to apply, and does apply, to all actions brought in the name of the United States, for the purpose only of securing an adjudication and enforcement of demands for labor or materials, whether instituted by the United States or by the creditors themselves. The reasons for the restriction are as applicable in the one instance as in the other, and it is difficult to believe that it was intended that it should be less potent when the United States acts for the creditors than when they act for themselves. The contention to the contrary is rested largely upon the supposition that, in instances like the present, where the defendants, or some of them, are inhabitants of another district, there is an insuperable barrier to the maintenance of the action in the district wherein the contract was to be performed. But this supposition is a mistaken one, for the provision restricting the place of suit operates pro tanto to displace the provision upon that subject in the general jurisdictional act (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, § 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), and amply authorizes the circuit court in the district wherein the action is required to be brought to obtain jurisdiction of the persons of the defendants 204]through *the service upon them of its 56 L. ed.

process in whatever district they may be found.

We conclude that the question of jurisdiction was rightly resolved by the Circuit Court, and its judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, EX
RELATIONE LUCY ANN TURNER,
Dixey Criswell, and Maude Turner, Willie
Turner, Anna Turner, and Florence Turner, Minors, Suing by Their Mother and Next Friend, Lucy Ann Turner, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

WALTER L. FISHER,†Secretary of the Interior.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 204-209.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

1. Those whose names were duly entered as Creek freedmen by blood on the rolls made and approved by the Secretary of the Interior acquired rights of which they could not be deprived without the notice and opportunity to be heard essential to due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 764-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

2. Notice to the attorney for those whose names were duly entered as Creek freedmen by blood on the rolls made and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, given a few hours before the hearing of a motion to strike their names from the roll on the ground that their enrolment had been secured by perjury, was not such notice as afforded due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 764-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — to control executive action.

3. Mandamus will lie, in the absence of other controlling facts, to compel the Secretary of the Interior to restore to the freedmen rolls of the Creek Nation the names of those who have been arbitrarily stricken from such rolls without the notice and opportunity to be heard essential to due process of law.

†Resignation of Richard A. Ballinger as Secretary of the Interior suggested October 30, 1911, and Walter L. Fisher, his successor in office, substituted as the party defendant in error herein.

NOTE.—On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; M'Cluney v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — not a writ of right.

4. Mandamus is not a writ of right. It issues to remedy a wrong, not to promote one, and will not be granted in aid of those who do not come into court with clean hands.

Mandamus — to control executive action — defense.

5. Proof that the enrolment of certain persons as Creek freedmen was procured by fraud defeats the right to compel the Secretary of the Interior by mandamus to restore their names to the rolls, even though such names have been arbitrarily stricken therefrom without the notice and opportunity for hearing essential to due process of law.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — standing on demurrer.

6. Mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to restore to the freedmen rolls of the Creek Nation the names of those who had been arbitrarily stricken therefrom without due process of law was properly refused where a general demurrer to the answer, setting up that the original enrolment was procured by fraud, was overruled, and the relators, instead of replying, elected to stand on their demurrer.

[Procedure in mandamus, see Mandamus, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 60.]

Argued November 14, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, refusing mandamus to require the Secretary of the Interior to restore the names of relators to the freedmen rolls of the Creek Nation, from which they had been stricken. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 195; on prior appeal, 31 App. D. C. 332.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

In error from a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming an order of the lower court, refusing to issue a writ of mandamus requiring the Secretary of the Interior to restore the names of relators to the freedmen rolls of the Creek Nation, from which they had been stricken. 31 App. D. C. 332, 33 App. D. C. 195.

Mr. Charles H. Merillat argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles J. Kappler, James K. Jones, and W. D. Halfhill, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The right to be heard before property is taken or rights or privileges withdrawn which have been previously legally awarded is of the essence of due process of law.

Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 255, 53 L. ed. 172, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Even receivers' certificates cannot be canceled without a hearing.

Cornelius v. Kessell, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

When Congress declared that the rolls, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be final rolls of citizenship, upon which distribution of lands and moneys should be made, it meant that, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the matter was final, not interlocutory or tentative or preliminary, and that thereafter his jurisdiction had ceased and determined.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 486.

It did not, of course, mean that the courts of equity, exercising their usual powers as courts of equity, could not be resorted to in any exceptional and extraordinary cases.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

Due process of law, in addition to notice and a hearing, also means a hearing before a tribunal authorized by law to conduct the proceedings it undertakes; arbitrary assumption of a power by a tribunal, and proceedings by it without jurisdiction, are not due process of law; and where the tribunal has jurisdiction, its action is not due process of law if it refuses the accused a right to put in his defense.

Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 414, 42 L. ed. 220, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259, 20 L. ed. 80; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 277, 23 L. ed. 915; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 124, 32 L. ed. 626, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231.

If the proceedings taken by the Secretary of the Interior were proceedings taken after his authority and jurisdiction in the premises had been exhausted, then those proceedings are a nullity,—of course, except as they might be taken for his information, as a basis for some independent and legal proceedings warranted by due course of law.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 125, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

If they were taken without a hearing, they amount to nothing, and the pleading of the same cannot in law be a good defense, and the demurrer does not admit them to be a good defense, but concedes merely that if it be true that these illegal findings were made and those unwarranted and hence unlawful sworn statements given by so-called witnesses, they do not in law constitute a good defense to the facts stated in the petition of plaintiffs in error. The recitation of the so-called evidence and the findings thereon is not a pleading of facts, as in United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 637, 34 L. ed. 812, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197, but a recitation of some irrelevant and illegal proceedings and evidence.

The plaintiffs in error, who, as given vested rights by regular proceedings, must be made defendants before these rights could be forfeited, would be compelled to be plaintiffs, and to assume the burden of proof as such before they could have any lawful standing. They would have to prove, by a preponderance of evidence, that their right, already vested, was a lawful, and not a fraudulent right, whereas enrolled parties have a right in equity to insist that their enrolment shall be set aside only upon the most clear and convincing proof of fraud or gross mistake, and by an appropriate judicial proceeding.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

It is respectfully submitted that this would not be law in the due and regular course of its administration, and that it is as true in this case as in the criminal case of Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 732, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; that only in the exact administration of the law will justice in the long run be done, and the confidence of the public in such administration be maintained.

As to the pleadings, the rule is that it is not sufficient to charge fraud generally, but that the facts showing the fraud must be distinctly set forth, and not evidence tending to show there was fraud, and the charges then must be proved by clear and satisfactory evidence.

Lalone v. United States, 164 U. S. 255, 41 L. ed. 425, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74.

There is in the instant case every reason to apply the doctrine set forth in 13 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 723, that, according to the weight of authority, denials in the return or answer must be positive, and not on information and belief, and the further rule (same page) that, in the return to a mandamus, facts are to be stated, and not evidence, and the further rule that the return or answer must have a high degree of certainty, and is to be construed most strongly against the respondent.

13 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 716; Harwood v. Marshall, 10 Md. 464.

The return must be good, tested by the ordinary rules of pleading, both in form and substance. It must either deny the facts stated in the writ, on which the claim of the relator is founded, or must state other facts sufficient in law to defeat the relator's claim; and these facts should be stated positively and distinctly; and if, instead of stating facts, the return merely sets out or refers to matters of evidence from which these facts are inferred, it is objectionable.

People v. Baker, 35 Barb. 105; Com. ex rel. Middleton v. Allegheny County, 37 Pa. 237; Moses, Mandamus, p. 210.

Where the return fails to answer the important facts alleged in the petition, every intendment and presumption will be made against it.

People ex rel. Brewster v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 502, 60 Am. Dec. 769.

The plaintiffs in error have no remedy by mandamus. If the enrolment were fraudulent, defendant has a remedy,—that of a suit to cancel the enrolment; for just as a patent to land can be canceled for fraud, so an enrolment can be similarly canceled.

Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

The writ in the United States is a writ of right; and where a party is entitled to a right, though it be in the discretion of the court, still, being a right, it cannot be said to be discretionary on the part of the court.

Merrill, Mandamus, §§ 62–64.

The Secretary of the Interior had jurisdiction expressly conferred on him to consider applications for enrolment and to approve enrolments. This conferred jurisdiction and power; exercise of the right was a power he had; the correctness or otherwise of its exercise is but a matter of wisdom, and not of power.

Foltz v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 8 C. C. A. 635, 19 U. S. App. 581, 60 Fed. 316.

That there are errors in the exercise of jurisdiction does not mean an absence of lawful power to do the act authorized.

McNitt v. Turner, 16 Wall. 364, 21 L. ed. 347.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

By their demurrer, upon which they have elected finally to stand, relators admit the allegation of fraud, as well as that they are not members of the Creek Nation.

Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S.

247, 257, 40 L. ed. 414, 417, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

Counsel contended that by their demurrer they merely admit that the respondent believed that relators had procured their enrolment by fraud. Manifestly such a construction of the answer is unwarranted. The allegation is direct and specific that the enrolment of relators was procured by fraud. The fact that such allegation was made upon information and belief does not alter the character of the charge, but merely shows the basis therefor. Respondent could not make the averment upon his own knowledge, because he was referring to the acts of his predecessor.

United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 640, 646, 34 L. ed. 811, 813, 815, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197.

A court of law, following the rule in equity, will not lend its aid by the extraordinary writ of mandamus to enforce rights fraudulently acquired.

High, Extr. Legal Rem. § 26; Merrill, Mandamus, §§ 68, 71, 72; 2 Spelling, Inj. & Extr. Rem. §§ 1371, 1380; People ex rel. Wood v. Board of Assessors, 137 N. Y. 204, 33 N. E. 145; People ex rel. Durant Land & Improv. Co. v. Jeroloman, 139 N. Y. 17, 34 N. E. 726; Com. ex rel. Vandyke v. Henry, 49 Pa. 538; State ex rel. McBride v. Phillips County, 26 Kan. 419; State ex rel. McCellan v. Graves, 19 Md. 351, 81 Am. Dec. 639; Macoupin County v. People, 58 Ill. 191; People v. Ketchum, 72 Ill. 212; Ansonia v. Studley, 67 Conn. 170, 34 Atl. 1030; People ex rel. Mabley v. Superior Ct. Judge, 41 Mich. 31, 1 N. W. 985; State ex rel. Clarke v. Earle, 42 N. J. L. 94; State ex rel. Gillilan v. Home Street R. Co. 43 Neb. 830, 62 N. W. 225.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Lamar:

1. Where, under the provisions of acts of Congress, and after a hearing, the names of relators were duly entered as Creek freedmen by blood on the rolls made and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, rights were acquired of which the freedmen could not be deprived without that character of notice and opportunity to be heard essential to due process of law. Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

2. Notice to the attorney of such freedmen, given a few hours before the hearing of a motion to strike their names, on the ground that their enrolment had been secured by perjury, was not such notice as afforded due process. *Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 399, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4

Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 393, 40 L. ed. 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 414, 42 L. ed. 220, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841.

3. In the absence of other controlling facts, the Secretary of the Interior could have been required by mandamus to restore the names of those thus arbitrarily stricken off without notice. Garfield v. United States, supra.

4. But mandamus is not a writ of right. It issues to remedy a wrong, not to promote one, and will not be granted in aid of those who do not come into court with clean hands.

5. Although the petition for the writ alleged that relators were freedmen, duly enrolled, and denied the truth of the testimony on which their names were stricken off, yet, where the answer of the Secretary referred to that testimony, and alleged, "on information and belief, that the relators were not freedmen members or members by blood or marriage of the Creek Nation, and that their enrolment had been procured by fraud," a defense was stated, proof of which would have defeated the right to a restoration of relators' names, even though they had been improperly stricken from the rolls without due process. United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 646, 34 L. ed. 811, 815, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 257, 40 L. ed. 417, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

6. Where a general demurrer to an answer containing such defense was overruled, and the relators, instead of replying, elected to stand on their demurrer, the writ of mandamus was properly refused. Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. supra.

7. To have issued the writ would have involved the useless thing of requiring relators' names to be re-entered, and in other proceedings having their names stricken because the original enrolment had been procured by fraud, thus admitted by the demurrer.

Affirmed.

*BANKER BROTHERS COMPANY,[210
Plff. in Err.,

v.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 210-214.)

Commerce — state license tax — retail vendors — goods made outside state.

A state does not tax interstate transactions by imposing a tax upon a domestic

NOTE.—On license or occupation tax upon hawkers and peddlers, and persons engaged in soliciting orders by sample or otherwise, corporation selling within a designated territory in the state automobiles built by a foreign corporation under an arrangement by which the latter agreed to build for and sell to the former, for cash, at a specified less than list price, deliveries to be made as soon as practicable after orders should be received, the domestic corporation customarily making payment through drafts attached to the bills of lading, and there being nothing connecting the ultimate buyer with the manufacturer other than a warranty direct from manufacturer to buyer, and such buyer's agreement "to pay the list price f. o. b. factory," since such sales are not interstate ones, the relation of principal and agent between the foreign and domestic corporations not existing so far as the buyer is concerned.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 384-401, 438-462, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 72.]

Argued November 17, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, in that state, imposing a retail vendor's tax upon a domestic corporation selling automobiles built by a foreign corporation, leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of the state having been refused. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Pa. Super. Ct. 101.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward J. Kent and Henry A. Miller argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiff in error is clearly engaged in interstate commerce, and is therefore not liable to taxation.

Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 166, 34 L. ed. 153, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725.

Property from another state only becomes liable to taxation when it has reached its destination, and becomes mingled with the other property of the state, and enjoys the protection of its laws.

American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. ed. 754, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

Mr. George H. Calvert argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James M. Magee, Donald Thompson, Murdoch Kendrick, and Mr. John C. Bell, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The fact that, upon receipt of an order from its customer, Banker Brothers Company orders the automobile from the manufacturer, outside the state, in no way affects the question.

Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 65, 49 L. ed. 666, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Merchandise, even though an article of interstate commerce, is subject to state taxation, provided the act imposing such tax does not attempt to regulate interstate commerce, or discriminate against it.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 436, 6 L. ed. 684; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 520, 48 L. ed. 546, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 146, 49 L. ed. 423, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; I. M. Darnell & Son Co. v. Memphis, 208 U. S. 119, 52 L. ed. 417, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Phillips v. Mobile, 208 U. S. 479, 52 L. ed. 581, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 320, 39 L. ed. 437, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

Upon receipt of the automobile by Banker Brothers Company, it had reached its destination, and was at rest in the state, within the meaning of this rule.

General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 228, 52 L. ed. 764, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 578, 39 L. ed. 540, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 96, 47 L. ed. 399, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 521, 48 L. ed. 546, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

The act levying the tax does not attempt to regulate interstate commerce, and does not discriminate against it.

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 501, 30 L. ed. 698, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The right of the state to tax trades, pro-as a violation of the commerce clause—see notes to State v. Bayer, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 297, and Dozier v. State, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 265.

56 L. ed.

On peddlers and drummers as related to interstate commerce—see notes to Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97, and Stockard v. Morgan, 46 L. ed. U. S. 785.

fessions, and occupations cannot be questioned by the Federal government.

Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 306, 38 L. ed. 719, 724, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 592, 43 L. ed. 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 35, 46 L. ed. 793, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The Banker Brothers Company, a corporation doing business in Pittsburg, was charged, as retail vendors, with a tax of 1 per cent on $351,000 on sales of automobiles to persons in Pennsylvania, under a statute of that state. It denied liability on the ground that the sales were interstate transactions. A decision of that point involves the question as to whether Banker Brothers Company acted as principal or as agent of a New York manufacturer.

It appears that the George N. Pierce Company was engaged in the business of manufacturing automobiles in Buffalo, and in 1905 made a contract by which it agreed "to build for and sell automobiles to Banker Brothers Company at 20 per cent less than list prices. Deliveries to be f. o. b. Buffalo as soon as practicable after order for deliveries are received. Payments to be made in cash."

The Banker Brothers Company kept no machines in stock except those used for demonstration, and were allowed to sell only within a restricted territory on terms stipulated by the manufacturer. The purchaser of the machine was to pay at least 10 per cent when he signed a printed form addressed to Banker Brothers Company, requesting it "to enter my order for—motor car, for which I agree to pay the list price, f. o. b. factory, as follows: $——upon signing this order, and the balance upon delivery of the car to me."

The name of the Pierce Company did not appear anywhere on this printed form furnished by it, but when the Banker Brothers Company accepted the order, it remitted the cash to the Pierce Company. If the latter 213] accepted the order, it agreed thereupon to make the automobile and ship it, drawing on Banker Brothers Company for the balance of the list price, less 20 per cent, with bill of lading attached. The Banker Brothers Company, on paying the draft, took up the bill of lading, received from the carrier an automobile which, though shipped in interstate commerce, had become at rest in the state of Pennsylvania. Banker Brothers Company had the title, and delivered it to the buyer on his paying the balance of the purchase money. Compare Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649. The written contract was silent on the subject, but it was stipulated that the Pierce Company warranted the machine direct to the purchaser.

It is contended that Banker Brothers Company were agents and the Pierce Company an undisclosed principal. It is urged that the sale was an interstate transaction between the manufacturer and the purchaser, with Banker Brothers Company merely acting as an agent which looked after the delivery of the machine and collected the purchase price.

This is one of the common cases in which parties find it to their interest to occupy the position of vendor and vendee for some purposes under a contract containing terms which, for the purpose of restricting sales and securing payment, come near to creating the relation of principal and agent. But, as between Banker Brothers Company and the Pittsburg purchaser, there can be no doubt that it occupied the position of vendor. As such it was bound by its contract to him, and under the duty of paying to the state a tax on the sale.

The name of the Pierce Company was not mentioned in the order signed by the purchaser. Had there been a breach of its terms he would have had a cause of action against the Banker Brothers Company, with whom alone he dealt. If he had failed to complete the purchase, the Pierce Company would have no right to sue him on the *contract. The fact that he was liable 214 for the freight by virtue of the agreement to "pay the list price f. o. b. factory" did not convert it into a sale by the manufacturer at the factory; neither was that result accomplished because, with the machine, Banker Brothers Company also delivered to the buyer in Pittsburg a warranty from the manufacturer direct.

These were mere incidents of the interstate contract of sale between Banker Brothers Company and the purchaser in Pittsburg, who was not concerned with the question as to how the machine was acquired by his vendor, or whether that company bought it from another dealer in the same city, or from the manufacturer in New York. The contract was made in Pennsylvania, and was there to be performed by the delivery of the automobile and the payment of the balance of the purchase price. See American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; American Exp. Co.

v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 146, 49 L. ed. 423, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182. The court properly held it was not an interstate transaction, but taxable under the laws of Pennsylvania.

Affirmed.

215]*UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UPDIKE GRAIN COMPANY and Crowell Lumber & Grain Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 215-221.)

Carriers — allowance to shippers — discrimination.

1. A carrier cannot refuse the allowance for elevator service on through grain in carloads at terminal points to elevator owners who, through ownership of the grain, derive an incidental advantage by using the opportunity afforded during the process of elevation to weigh, store, inspect, clean, mix, or otherwise treat the grain, in view of the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, 590, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), recognizing that services in transportation, rendered by an owner of the property transported, are to be paid for by the carrier.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — discrimination — elevator charges.

2. A carrier cannot enforce a rule making its allowance for elevator service on through grain in carloads at terminal points conditional upon the return of the empty car to the carrier within forty-eight hours after delivery to the elevator, so as to defeat the right to compensation for elevator service rendered at elevators located on the lines of other railroads, where the return of the cars to the carrier was made impossible by the rules of a railway association of which the carrier was a member, and over which the elevator owners had no control, no such impossibility existing if the elevator was one of those located along the carrier's tracks.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — discrimination — elevator charges.

3. A carrier may make its allowance for elevator service on through grain in carloads at terminal points at elevators located on the lines of other carriers, as well as those located along its own tracks, conditional upon the return of the empty car to the carrier within forty-eight hours after delivery to the elevator, where such car can be unloaded and returned in a much shorter time.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 353, 354, 355, 356.]

Argued October 18, 1911. Decided December 4, 1911.

FOUR WRITS OF ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment modifying, and affirming as modified, a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Nebraska, directing a verdict in favor of plaintiffs in an action by elevator owners to recover from the carrier compensation for elevator service. Affirmed.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 583, 178 Fed. 223.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Messrs. F. C. Dillard and Henry W. Clark, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edward P. Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. Constantine J. Smyth, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The great purpose of the act to regulate commerce was to secure equality of rates and to destroy favoritism.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The fact that discrimination is accomplished by published tariffs and published rules and regulations does not relieve it of its odium.

Carr v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 1; Koch Secret Service v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 523.

Rebates, preferences, and illegal discriminations cannot be granted under the disguise of a rate or regulation.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

The existence of an outstanding contract, even though made prior to the amendment to the interstate commerce law, cannot justify the granting of illegal preferences.

Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

In 1899, the Union Pacific found it desirable to have grain unloaded at its terminals in Council Bluffs in order that cars might be promptly returned for use on its line. In consideration that Peavey would there erect and maintain an elevator, it agreed to pay him 1½ cents per hundred for elevating grain. It subsequently made similar contracts with what are called "Peavey Companies," which had elevators along its tracks in the cities of Omaha, South Omaha, and Kansas City, terminal points of the Union Pacific. Thereafter it agreed, on certain conditions, to pay for similar service by elevator companies in the same cities, even though the elevators were not located immediately on the railroad tracks. It thereupon filed a tariff circular with the Commission, in which the Union Pacific recited that "to expedite the movement and to secure the prompt release and return of equipment, an allowance will be made" to elevators performing the service on through grain in carloads, transferred by the elevators at the points named:

NOTE.—As to what constitutes an unlawful preference or discrimination by a carrier under interstate commerce regulations—see note to Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 230. 56 L. ed.

"No allowance will be made when more than forty-eight hours elapse between the time of delivery to the elevator or connecting line and the release and return of the empty car to the Union Pacific."

217] *That company was and is a member of a railway association, which regulated the switching, loading, and unloading of cars. One of its rules provided that "cars received loaded in switching service must be confined to switching territory, and when emptied must be returned to the owner, if a direct connection within that territory, or to the road from which received, or may be loaded in accordance with rule 2 a, b, c."

Rule 2 a, "loaded via any road, so that the home road will participate in the freight rate; (b) loaded to the road from which originally received, if such loading is in the direction of the home road, but not otherwise; (c) loaded to an intermediate road, if in the direction of the home road."

As the Peavey elevators were located alongside the tracks of the Union Pacific, these rules did not affect their right to recover for elevation service. But, as the elevators of the defendants in error were located on the lines of other railroads in Omaha and South Omaha, it frequently happened that cars, after being unloaded at their elevators, were not returned to the Union Pacific, and that others were not returned within forty-eight hours. In those cases the Union Pacific refused to make payment for unloading these cars. The defendants in error filed a complaint with the Commission, asking for reparation. An order to that effect having been granted, they brought a joint suit for reparation.

Most of the allegations in the complaint were denied by the Union Pacific in its answer, which claimed that nothing was due, because the plaintiffs had not returned the cars within forty-eight hours stipulated in the tariff on file. It also alleged that the grain had been unloaded through plaintiffs' private elevators, which were not operated in the exercise of any public duty, but for the purpose of private gain; that the handling of the grain was for the *pur-[218 pose of having it weighed, stored, inspected, cleaned, mixed, or otherwise treated in the elevator, and that the tariff allowing for elevator charges in their elevator was unlawful.

After hearing evidence showing the amount of grain elevated for which payment had not been made, and considering the tariff and rules of the switching company, the court directed a verdict in favor of each of the plaintiffs for the amount shown to be due them. The judgment as modified was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (101 C. C. A. 583, 178 Fed. 230), and the railroad brought the case here. There are forty assignments of error, but they need not be separately considered, as the case must be determined by a few controlling principles:

1. The Union Pacific's contention that payment for reparation cannot be made to the owner who stores and mixes the grain must first be considered.

The long-mooted question as to whether elevation was such a part of transportation as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission was answered by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, 590, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), in which Congress declared that the term "transportation" shall include . . . all . . . facilities of shipment, . . . irrespective of ownership, . . . and all services in connection with the . . . elevation and transfer in transit . . . and handling of property transported." Carriers were required "to provide and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor."

The act recognized that the shipper himself might own the elevator or other facility included within the definition of transportation. For § 4 (34 Stat. at L. 590, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1159) provides that "if the owner . . . renders any service connected with such transportation, or furnishes any instrumentality used therein, the charge and allowance therefor shall be no more than is just and reasonable," *the Commission[219 being authorized to determine what was reasonable.

This act was passed after the decision by the Commission in 1904 (10 Inters. Com. Rep. 309) that the Peavey contract was valid, and after the recommendation in its report for 1905 (p. 11), that it should be given authority to determine whether the allowance paid to the owner was just. The statute must be taken as a legislative recogdition of the long-continued practice, and a declaration that the incidental advantage derived by the owner was not undue.

In pursuance of the authority thus expressly conferred, the Interstate Commerce Commission, in April, 1907 (12 Inters. Com. Rep. 86), fixed the allowance for elevating grain at $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent per hundred pounds, being actual cost, with no allowance whatever for profit. Its final order (14 Inters. Com. Rep. 315), prohibiting any payment to the owner who performed this transportation service, was reversed, as being beyond the jurisdiction of the Commission, because Congress had expressly permitted such payment to be made (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Peavey, 222 U. S. 42, ante, 22, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22). The language of the statute and this decision answer the Union Pacific's contention that it was unlawful to pay these companies for transportation services.

2. The Union Pacific's desire to have cars promptly unloaded so that they might be returned to its own line may have been the principal motive which induced it to agree to pay elevator charges. But the consideration moving between the carrier and the elevator was the service performed by the latter in unloading grain at terminal points. This relieved the carrier of the expense of building similar structures, and avoided the delay of having the grain transferred from one car to another by the slow process of shoveling. When the service was rendered, the carrier received value for which it was bound to pay, whether performed 220] by the owner of the grain or * some other person hired for the same purpose. Having earned the compensation, the elevator company could not be deprived of its right because foreign cars were not returned to the Union Pacific under the rules of the railway association of which the Union Pacific was a member, and over which the elevator companies had no control.

3. For elevating grain from like foreign cars the Peavey Companies were paid because their elevators happened to be located on the Union Pacific tracks. But if the rule is valid against the plaintiffs, it would put it in the power of the carrier to say which elevator should be paid, and which not paid, for performing the same transportation service. It could load grain belonging to the plaintiffs into foreign cars, and, in spite of the service rendered by them to the carrier in unloading, no payment would be made, because these foreign cars, under the rule, were not returned to the Union Pacific. It is not necessary that any such improper purpose should be shown to exist. It might have existed, and if so, could not be proved by the injured party. 56 L. ed.

The power to make such a discrimination would prevent the enforcement of any regulation frequently having such operation.

The carrier cannot pay one shipper for transportation service, and enforce an arbitrary rule which deprives another of compensation for similar service. To receive the benefit of such work by one elevator without making compensation therefor would, in effect, be the involuntary payment by such elevator of a rebate to the railroad company, for it would enable the railroad to receive more net freight on its grain than was received from its competitor located on the railroad's tracks. This cannot be directly done, nor indirectly by means of regulation. A rule apparently fair on its face and reasonable in its terms may, in fact, be unfair and unreasonable if it operates so as to give one an advantage of which another, similarly situated, cannot avail himself.

*4. The trial court was right in hold-[221 ing that the railroad company must make reparation by paying for the elevation of grain in those cars not returned in forty-eight hours, because they belonged to the switching company, or to a road which had a direct connection in the switching territory (2 a), and in those which, when emptied, were routed so that the home road participated in the freight rate (2 b).

But while elevators off the tracks of the Union Pacific cannot be affected by unreasonable rules tending to deprive them of just compensation, neither can they disregard the obligation promptly to unload, so that the cars might be put in service as soon as practicable. This was conceded by the defendants in error, and they accepted the ruling that they were not entitled to recover for elevating grain out of some 200 cars, which could have been unloaded and returned in a much shorter time, but which they detained beyond the forty-eight hours.

Judgments affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Hughes concur in the result, in view of the decision in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Peavey, 222 U. S. 42, ante, 83 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

*CHICAGO JUNCTION RAILWAY[222 COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM R. KING.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 222-225.)

Error to circuit court of appeals — Federal question.

1. A constitutional question first advanced on the trial of a cause cannot serve as the basis for a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court of appeals.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 790-807, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to circuit court of appeals — Federal question.

2. An action to recover damages for personal injuries, based upon the Federal safety-appliance act, is one in which the judgment of a circuit court of appeals may be reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 790-807, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to circuit court of appeals — scope of review.

3. The Federal Supreme Court, when reviewing a judgment of a circuit court of appeals, affirming a judgment of a circuit court in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, discharges its whole duty, with reference to the contention that the plaintiff was so clearly guilty of contributory negligence that it was the duty of the court to have directed a verdict for defendant, by giving to the record such examination and consideration as may be necessary in order to determine whether plain error was committed by the court below, and is not called upon to scrutinize the whole record for the purpose of discovering whether it may not be possible by a minute analysis of the evidence to draw inferences therefrom which may possibly conflict with the conclusions below as to the tendencies of the proof.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4206-4300, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 34.]

Argued and submitted November 2 and 3, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, based upon the Federal safety-appliance act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 652, 169 Fed. 372.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John D. Black argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Barton Payne, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. James C. McShane submitted the cause for defendant in error.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This action to recover for personal injuries, begun in a *state court, was re-[223 moved to a circuit court and there decided for the plaintiff. To obtain a reversal of a judgment affirming, the case is here upon an assumption that a constitutional question is involved which gives jurisdiction. It is admitted that such question, that is, the repugnancy of the safety appliance law to the Constitution, is now not open to controversy because of a recent decision. Southern R. Co. v. United States. [222 U. S. 20, ante, 2, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2.] Yet, as the case is here, other errors relied upon, it is urged, must be decided. But even conceding that the constitutional question was not wholly frivolous when first advanced, as it arose only at the trial, it does not give jurisdiction. Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490. But this is negligible, since, by the pleadings, the cause of action was based on a statute of the United States—the safety appliance law—which gives jurisdiction. Macfadden v. United States, supra. The damage thus arose: After cutting out some cars from an interstate freight train at the Union Stock Yards in Chicago, the train could not be re-coupled because of a broken knuckle on the coupler of one of the cars. The plaintiff, a switchman, secured a new knuckle, and going between the cars to put it in place of the broken one, was crushed by a backward movement of the train, which brought the uncoupled cars together. The movement was ordered by the train conductor with the purpose of shoving the train back several city blocks to where it was proposed to repair the coupler.

Coming to consider the contentions, although they seemingly involve many propositions, they all are reducible to the assertion that the plaintiff was so clearly guilty of contributory negligence, in one aspect or the other, that it was the duty of the court to instruct a verdict for the defendant. Indeed, this is expressly stated in the argument to be the result of all the propositions except two, relating to an instruction given and to one refused. But these *two instructions, when rightly con-[224 sidered, are of the same character, as they also rest ultimately upon the contention that the proof on particular subjects was such as to necessitate a binding instruction for the railway company.

The following, therefore, as to all the contentions, is clearly apparent: First. That while they may in a general sense involve the safety appliance law, none of them directly invoked the interpretation of that law. Second. That while the contentions, from an ultimate point of view, present a question of law—that is, Was there any substantial evidence to go to the jury?—in their primary aspect they call for an examination of the entire evidence to determine whether it had any substantial tendency to establish the right of the plaintiff to recover. Third. That although we have jurisdiction to review, because the cause of action, as stated in the pleadings, rested upon the safety appliance law, the questions now presented, in a broad sense, are of a character which ordinarily it was the purpose of the judiciary act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488], to submit to the final jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals.

Under the conditions just stated, we do not think we are called upon to scrutinize the whole record for the purpose of discovering whether it may not be possible, by a minute analysis of the evidence, to draw therefrom inferences which may possibly conflict with the conclusion of the courts below as to the tendencies of the proof. We are of this opinion because, in this and cases like it, that is, in cases where the conditions are in all respects identical with those here presented, we think our whole duty will be performed by giving to the record such examination and consideration as may be necessary to enable us to determine whether plain error was committed by the court below in any of the particulars complained of. In the discharge of such duty in this case, in view of the full opinion of the circuit court of appeals, and in the light of the adequate examination which 225] we have made of the *record, as we find nothing giving rise to a clear conviction on our part that error has resulted from the action of the courts below, it follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be and it is affirmed.

Affirmed.

MUTUAL LOAN COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
GEORGE J. MARTELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 225-236.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — regulating assignments of future earnings.

1. Making invalid against the employer

Constitutionality of statute restricting right to assign salary or wages.

A statute absolutely prohibiting the assignment of future wages by employees was upheld in International Text-Book Co. v. 56 L. ed.

assignments of, or orders for, wages to be earned in the future, unless recorded, accepted in writing by the employer, and accompanied by the written consent of the wife of the employee, as is done by Mass. Laws 1908, chap. 605, §§ 7, 8, is a valid exercise of the police power, and does not deny the assignee due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 591-695, 870-876, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — regulating assignments of future earnings.

2. Exempting national banks, and banks under the supervision of the bank commissioner, and certain loan companies, from the provisions of Mass. Laws 1908, chap. 605, §§ 7, 8, making invalid against the employer assignments of, or orders for, wages to be earned in the future, unless recorded, accepted in writing by the employer, and accompanied by the written consent of the wife of the employee, does not deny the equal protection of the laws to an assignee not falling within one of the excepted classes.

[For other cases, see Const. Law, IV. a, in Dig. Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 29.]

Submitted October 27, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment affirmed by the Supreme Judicial Court of that state, upholding the validity of a statute regulating assignments of future earnings. Affirmed.

See same case below in Supreme Judicial Court, 200 Mass. 482, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 128 Am. St. Rep. 446, 86 N. E. 916.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lee M. Friedman submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

An assignment of future earnings which many accrue under an existing employment is a valid contract, and creates rights which may be enforced both at law and in equity.

Tripp v. Brownell, 12 Cush. 376.

The employee has an actual and real interest in wages to be earned in the future by virtue of his contract. Profitable employment is a realty, and wages to accrue thereunder constitute a present existing right of property which may be sold or assigned, as any other property.

Citizens' Loan Asso. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 196 Mass. 528, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1025, Weissinger, 160 Ind. 349, 65 L.R.A. 599, 98 Am. St. Rep. 334, 65 N. E. 521, and declared not to be an unreasonable restraint upon the liberty of the citizen, nor to deprive him of his property without due process of law. And this decision was followed 124 Am. St. Rep. 584, 82 N. E. 696, 13 Ann. Cas. 365.

The holder of an assignment of wages stands upon a firmer plane than a mortgagee of future-acquired property. The assignee of wages to be earned under an existing contract gets a present right, perfect in itself, requiring no further action on his part.

Ibid.

The liberty mentioned in the 14th Amendment means not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person, as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to impress the right of the person to be free in the employment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or vocation; and for that purpose to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L.R.A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 53, 49 L. ed. 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 684, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257.

It is the duty of the government to exercise, whenever public policy in a broad sense demands, for the benefit of society at large, regulations to guard its morals, safety, health, order, or to insure in any respect such economic conditions as an advancing civilization of a highly complex character requires. The power to exercise such is police power. The legislature cannot, under the guise of such regulations, invade personal rights or private property.

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627; Ex parte Sohneke, 148 Cal. 262, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 813, 113 Am. St. Rep. 236, 82 Pac. 956, 7 Ann. Cas. 475.

The general right to make a contract in relation to his business is part of the liberty of the individual provided by the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L.R.A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 53, 49 L. ed. 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Kuhn v. Detroit, 70 Mich. 534, 38 N. W. 470; State v. Redmon, 134 Wis. 89, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 229, 126 Am. St. Rep. 1003, 114 N. W. 137, 15 Ann. Cas. 408; People v. Steele, 231 Ill. 341, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 361, 121 Am. St. Rep. 321, 83 N. E. 236; People v. Marcus, 185 N. Y. 257, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 282, 113 Am. St. Rep. 902, 77 N. E. 1073, 7 Ann. Cas. 118; Bessette v. People, 193 Ill. 334, 56 L.R.A. 558, 62 N. E. 215; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285.

To place all employees of the whole commonwealth under the guardianship of the in Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Ebersole, — Ind. —, 87 N. E. 1090.

And the court in McCallum v. Simplex Electrical Co. 197 Mass. 388, 83 N. E. 1108, expressed its entire confidence in the constitutionality of a statute limiting the right to make assignments of future earnings to a period not exceeding two years.

These decisions, like that of the Massachusetts court in the principal case, all rest upon the theory that the wage earner is peculiarly susceptible to wrongs and imposition which it is the proper office of the police power to prevent.

And because the statute applies not only to "wages," but to "salary," which, in the court's opinion, makes it too broad in its terms to be justified as an exercise of the police power for the purpose of mitigating or remedying the wrong at which it is aimed, the supreme court of Illinois held unconstitutional in Massie v. Cessna, 239 Ill. 352, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1108, 130 Am. St. Rep. 234, 88 N. E. 152, the Illinois statute which makes invalid the assignment of the "wages" or "salary" of any person unless it is in writing, signed and acknowledged by the assignor and his or her husband or wife, and is entered on the justice's docket and a copy served upon the employer. The court pointed out that the statute made no classification of salaried employees, but included them all; and said that there was nothing in the public policy of the state requiring or warranting such an abridgment of the right of persons earning the higher salaries to assign or transfer them as they choose, and nothing requiring or warranting a statute giving to such persons the benefit that might with entire propriety be given to wage earners by an act in reference to the assignment of wages.

The court also found unconstitutional the provision of the statute making void assignments of wages or salary when given as security for loans tainted with usury, because the law of the state makes no such provision with reference to other instruments or other conveyances given to secure usurious debts.

legislature, and by one sweeping provision, as exhibited in § 7, take away the liberty of every one of them by depriving them of the freedom of disposing of what the supreme court of Massachusetts (Citizens' Loan Asso. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 196 Mass. 528, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1025, 124 Am. St. Rep. 584, 82 N. E. 696, 13 Ann. Cas. 365) has recognized as an absolute property right, is surely such an abuse of legislative power as to require little argument to demonstrate its unconstitutionality.

Property does not consist merely of the title and possession, but includes the right to make any legal use of it, and the right to pledge or mortgage or to sell and transfer it. The right to contract a debt or other obligation is included in the right to liberty, and is also a right of property.

Kuhn v. Detroit, 70 Mich. 534, 38 N. W. 470; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 53, 49 L. ed. 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454.

If § 7 is considered simply from the standpoint of an unlawful interference with liberty of contract and the taking of property without due process of law, it is and must be declared unconstitutional.

Massie v. Cessna, 239 Ill. 355, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1108, 130 Am. St. Rep. 234, 88 N. E. 152; State v. Redmon, 134 Wis. 89, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 229, 126 Am. St. Rep. 1003, 114 N. W. 137, 15 Ann. Cas. 408; People v. Steele, 231 Ill. 340, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 361, 121 Am. St. Rep. 321, 83 N. W. 236; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Toney v. State, 141 Ala. 120, 67 L.R.A. 286, 109 Am. St. Rep. 23, 37 So. 332, 3 Ann. Cas. 319; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530, 58 L.R.A. 748, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098; Coffeyville Vitrified Brick & Tile Co. v. Perry, 69 Kan. 297, 66 L.R.A. 185, 76 Pac. 848, 1 Ann. Cas. 936; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 52 L.R.A. 283, 80 Am. St. Rep. 176, 58 S. E. 1007; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 58 Ark. 407, 23 L.R.A. 264, 41 Am. St. Rep. 109, 25 S. W. 75; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L.R.A. 445, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624; State v. Missouri Tie & Timber Co. 181 Mo. 536, 65 L.R.A. 588, 103 Am. St. Rep. 614, 80 S. W. 933, 2 Ann. Cas. 119; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 32 N. E. 62; Republic Iron & Steele Co. v. State, 160 Ind. 379, 62 L.R.A. 136, 66 N. E. 1005; Com. v. Perry, 155

Mass. 117, 14 L.R.A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126.

To defend § 7 as a proper police regulation, it must be made clear that in some way the public generally must be affected either in health, morals, or in its general welfare.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 53, 49 L. ed. 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

If the business of assigning wages is a regulation required in the interests of the general welfare of the public, there is no reason for making the law apply only to cases where a loan of money is the debt to be secured, and such a classification is arbitrary and unreasonable, and the legislation for that reason is unconstitutional and void.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 222, 8 L.R.A. 419, 45 N. W. 156; Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 33 L.R.A. 589, 36 S. W. 697; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 146, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 340; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

In Gladney v. Sydnor, 172 Mo. 318, 60 L.R.A. 880, 85 Am. St. Rep. 517, 72 S. W. 554, it was held that a vested right of a man to convey his homestead without the co-operation of his wife was impaired by a statute making him incapable of conveying it unless his wife joined in the conveyance.

In Hubbard v. Hubbard 77 Vt. 73, 67 L.R.A. 969, 107 Am. St. Rep. 749, 58 Atl. 969, 2 Ann. Cas. 315, an act which authorized a court of chancery "in its discretion," on a wife's petition, to empower her to convey real estate by her separate deed, was held unconstitutional, in that it undertook to clothe a court with power to deprive a husband of his property without due process of law.

Any exemption that passes the line of regulation, and leaves in certain corporations and persons property rights greater than are accorded to others in the same general line of business, as § 6 of this act clearly does, makes the act unconstitutional.

Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 28, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Re Home Discount Co. 147 Fed. 538; Vanzant v. Waddel, 2 Yerg. 270; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 156, 41 L. ed. 668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385.

The character of police regulations, whether reasonable, impartial, and consistent with the Constitution, is a question for this court; for the police power is too vague, indeterminate, and dangerous to be left without control, and hence the courts have ever interfered to correct an unreasonable exertion or a mistaken application of it; and when the legislature passes an act which plainly transcends the limits of the police power of the state, it is the duty of the judiciary to pronounce its invalidity, and to nullify the legislative attempt to invade the citizen's right,—to hold that every act of the general assembly passed under the guise of an exercise of the police power, or sought to be defended upon that ground, was beyond judicial control, would render every guaranty of personal rights found in the Constitution of little or no value.

Ex parte Whitewell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L.R.A. 727, 35 Am. St. Rep. 152, 32 Pac. 870; Re Morgan, 26 Colo. 415, 47 L.R.A. 52, 77 Am. St. Rep. 269, 58 Pac. 1071; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; State v. Speyer, 67 Vt. 502, 29 L.R.A. 573, 48 Am. St. Rep. 832, 32 Atl. 476; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302; Taylor v. Pine Bluff, 34 Ark. 603; Platte & D. Canal & Mill Co. v. Dowell, 17 Colo. 376, 30 Pac. 68.

Where there is no justifiable ground under the Constitution for discrimination, such discrimination is unconstitutional.

Com v. Hana, 195 Mass. 262, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 799, 122 Am. St. Rep. 251, 81 N. E. 149, 11 Ann. Cas. 514.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in the case is the validity, under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, of a statute of the state of Massachusetts, which (§ 7) makes invalid against the employer of a person any assignment of or order for wages to be earned in the future, to secure a loan of less than $200, until the assignment or order be accepted in writing by the employer, and the assignment or order and acceptance be filed and recorded with the clerk of the city or town in the place of residence or employment, according as the person making the assignment be or be not a resident of the commonwealth. If such person be married, the written consent of his wife must be attached to the assignment or order. Section 8. National banks and banks which are under the supervision of the bank commissioner, and certain loan companies, are exempt from the provisions of the act. Section 6.

*The action is in contract on two[232 promissory notes given by two different persons, with an assignment by each of wages to be earned in the future in the defendant's service (defendant in error here, and we will so designate him, and the plaintiff in error as plaintiff). The assignments were duly recorded, but were not accepted in writing by defendant. The assignor in the second assignment was a married man whose wife did not consent to the assignment.

Judgment was entered in the superior court for the defendant, which was affirmed by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. 200 Mass. 482, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 128 Am. St. Rep. 446, 86 N. E. 916.

The contention of plaintiff is (1) that the provisions of §§ 7 and 8 deprive it of due process of law, and (2) that § 6 deprives it of the equal protection of the laws.

(1) To sustain this contention it is urged that the statute being an exercise of the police power of the state, its purpose must have "some clear, real, and substantial connection" with the preservation of the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare; and it is insisted that the statute of Massachusetts has not such connection and is therefore invalid.

This court has had many occasions to define, in general terms, the police power, and to give particularity to the definitions by special applications. In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175, it was said that "the police power of a state embraces regulations designed to promote the public convenience or the general prosperity, as well as regulations designed to promote the public health, the public morals, or the public safety;" and that the validity of a police regulation "must depend upon the circumstances of each case and the character of the regulation, whether arbitrary or reasonable, and whether really designed to accomplish a legitimate public purpose."

In Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 318, 51 L. ed. 499, 502, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, it was decided that the police power is not confined "to the suppression of what is offensive, disorderly, or unsanitary," but "extends to so dealing with the conditions which exist in the state as to bring out of them the greatest welfare of its people."

In a sense, the police power is but another name for the power of government; and a contention that a particular exercise of it offends the due process clause of the Constitution is apt to be very intangible to a precise consideration and answer. Certain general principles, however, must be taken for granted. It is certainly the province of the state, by its legislature, to adopt such policy as to it seems best. There are constitutional limitations, of course, but these allow a very comprehensive range of judgment. And within that range the Massachusetts statute can be justified. Legislation cannot be judged by theoretical standards. It must be tested by the concrete conditions which induced it; and this test was applied by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts in passing on the validity of the statute under review.

The court hesitated to say, as at least one court has said, that a total prohibition of the assignment of wages would be valid, but justified the partial restriction of the statute on the ground that the extravagance or improvidence of the wage earner might tempt to the disposition of wages to be earned, and he and his family, deprived of the means of support, might become a public charge. It was pointed out, besides, that his need might be taken advantage of by the unscrupulous. The purposes of the statute are certainly assisted by the formalities which it prescribes as requisite to the validity of an assignment. The requirement that it (the assignment) be accepted in writing by the employer, it was pointed out, protects him and secures the assignment from dispute; and the requirement that the acceptance and the assignment be recorded checks an attempt of the wage earner to procure a dishonest credit.

234]*The court found more difficulty with the provision which requires the consent of the wage earner's wife to the assignment, but justified it on the general considerations we have mentioned, and on the ground of her interest in the right use of his wages, though she have no legal title in them.

We cannot say, therefore, that the statute as a police regulation is arbitrary and unreasonable, and not designed to accomplish a legitimate public purpose. We certainly cannot oppose to the legislation our notions of its necessity, and we have expressed "the propriety of deferring to the tribunals on the spot." Laurel Hill Cemetery v. San Francisco, 216 U. S. 358, 365, 54 L. ed. 515, 518, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301.

There are other grounds upon which the statute may be sustained than those expressed by the supreme judicial court of the state. As we have seen, it does not prohibit assignments of wages to be earned. It prescribes conditions to the validity of such assignments, and in this it has many examples in legislation. It has the same general foundation that laws have which prescribe the evidence of transactions and the manner of the execution and authentication of legal instruments. The laws of the states exhibit in their diversities the power of the legislature over property, its devolution and transfer. It is rather late in the day to question that power. See Arnett v. Reade, 220 U. S. 311, 55 L. ed. 477, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1040, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

But if we consider the Massachusetts statute strictly as a limitation upon the power of contract, it still must be held valid. A statute not unlike it came before this court in Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. It was a statute of the state of Tennessee, and required the redemption in cash of any store orders or other evidence of indebtedness issued by employers in payment of wages due to employees. It was assailed as an arbitrary interference with the right of contract. It was sustained as a proper exercise of the power of the state.

*There, must, indeed, be a certain[235 freedom of contract, and, as there cannot be a precise, verbal expression of the limitations of it, arguments against any particular limitation may have plausible strength, yet many legal restrictions have been and must be put upon such freedom in adapting human laws to human conduct and necessities. A too precise reasoning should not be exercised, and before this court may interfere there must be a clear case of abuse of power. See Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259, where the right of contract and its limitation by the legislature are fully discussed.

(2) This contention attacks § 6 of the statute, which exempts from its provisions certain banks, banking institutions, and loan companies. It is urged that the provision is discriminatory, and therefore denies to plaintiff the equal protection of the laws.

We have declared so often the wide range of discretion which the legislature possesses in classifying the objects of its legislation that we may be excused from a citation of the cases. We shall only repeat that the classification need not be scientific nor logically appropriate, and if not palpably arbitrary, and is uniform within the class, it is within such discretion. The legislation under review was directed at certain evils which had arisen, and the legislature, considering them and from whence they arose, might have thought or discerned that they could not or would not arise from a greater freedom to the institutions mentioned than to individuals. This was the view that the supreme judicial court took, and, we think, rightly took. The court said that the legislature might have decided that the dangers which the statute was intended to prevent would not exist in any considerable degree in loans made by institutions which were under the supervision of bank commissioners, and "believed rightly that the business done by them would not 236] need regulation in the interest *of employees or employers," citing State v. Wickenhoefer, 6 Penn. (Del.) 120, 64 Atl. 273, a decision by the supreme court of Delaware. See Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

But even if some degree of evil which the statute was intended to prevent could be ascribed to loans made by the exempted institutions, their exception would not make the law unconstitutional. Legislation may recognize degrees of evil without being arbitrary, unreasonable, or in conflict with the equal-protection provision of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 195, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

This court sustained a classification like that of the Massachusetts statute in Griffith v. Connecticut, 218 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 1151, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, where a statute of Connecticut, which fixed maximum rates of interest upon money loaned within the state to persons subject to its jurisdiction, was upheld as a valid exercise of the police power of the state; and a provision of the statute which exempted from its operation "any national bank or trust company duly incorporated under the laws of the state, and pawnbrokers," was decided to be a legal classification.

Judgment affirmed.

237]*UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, A. L. Mohler, J. M. Henry, and Henry Swagtek, Apts.,
v.

MASON CITY & FORT DODGE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 237-251.)

Railroads — joint use of tracks — effect of judgment.

The use of the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company as accessory only to the use of that company's bridge over the Missouri river at Omaha, and not for purposes which, like local switching are wholly independent of any use of the bridge, was what was authorized by a decree based upon the bridge acts of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 246), and February 24, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 430, chap. 67), adjudging to the Mason City & Fort Dodge Railroad Company and its lessee the right to the equal and joint use of the main and passing tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company from their eastern terminus at Council Bluffs to a connection with the Union Stock Yards Railroad and the other railroads connecting with the Union Pacific Railroad at South Omaha, including the bridge across the Missouri river at that point, and of the connections with the Union Stock Yards tracks and with the tracks of all other railway companies connecting at or near South Omaha with the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to the same extent and upon the same terms as defined in certain existing contracts between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and other railways, the common object of both statutes being the more perfect connection of the roads running to the bridge on either side of the river.

180

[For other cases, see Railroads, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 31.]

Argued November 2, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Nebraska, adjudging appellants in contempt of a decree giving the Mason City & Fort Dodge Railroad Company and its lessee the right to use the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad company. Reversed.

See same case below, 91 C. C. A. 530, 165 Fed. 844.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. N. H. Loomis, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. John Barton Payne argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

*Mr. Justice McKenna delivered [238 the opinion of the court:

The question in the case is whether the decree of the United States circuit court for the district of Nebraska, rendered in a suit brought by appellee against the Union Pacific Railroad Company in 1903, which adjudged to appellee and to its lessee, the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, the equal and joint use of the main and passing tracks of the Union Pacific, means the use of such tracks in connection with the bridge of that company over the Missouri river between Omaha and Council Bluffs, or the tracks independently of such use; or, in other words, a general use of the tracks for business having no connection with the bridge or use of it; or, to be more specific and to bring forward the particular use claimed, whether, as facilities for elevators established by appellee in Omaha "and generally for a grain terminal," or as shall be necessary or convenient in its business as a common carrier, it may operate its own motive power and use the tracks of the Union Pacific to deliver cars to the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railroad, which has connection with the tracks of the Union Pacific. The appellee contends that such right is given by the decree. The appellants assert that the Union Pacific alone has the right to deliver cars to appellee's property, or take them from it to connecting carriers, as it does, it is contended, for all other railroads, according to contracts which have obtained for many years.

222 U. S.

The circuit court decided that the decree gave the use contended for by the appellee, and adjudged appellants guilty of contempt for obstructing such use. The decision was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 91 C. C. A. 530, 165 Fed. 844.

239]*The decree adjudged that appellee and its lessee, the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, were "admitted into the full, equal, and joint use of the main and passing tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, now located and established, or which may hereafter be located and established, from the eastern terminus of said tracks in Council Bluffs, in the state of Iowa, to a connection with the Union Stock Yards Railroad and the other railroads connecting with the Union Pacific Railroad at South Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, including the bridge over which said tracks extend across the Missouri river between the cities of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebraska; also the connection with, and the tracks pertaining thereto, of the general passenger station of the said Union Pacific Railroad in Omaha, and said passenger station and all tracks and facilities connected therewith; also a connection with the side or spur tracks leading from the main line to the lower grade of the sidings and spur tracks in Omaha, and such extensions as may be hereafter made; also a connection with the side tracks in Omaha on which to receive from and deliver to said Union Pacific Railroad Company freight which may be handled through the warehouses, or many be switched by the said Union Pacific Railroad Company; also the connections with the Union Stock Yards tracks in South Omaha, and with the tracks of all other railway companies which now or may hereafter connect at or near South Omaha, with the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, hereinbefore described, each and all, to the same extent and upon the same terms and conditions stated in the contracts between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company, and the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company, as appears by the contracts in evidence in this case, and the depot contract, and the supplemental contract *between the same parties, be-[240 ing Exhibits 6 and 7, attached to the bill of complaint herein, without preference or discrimination."

"It is manifest that the rights of appellee and its lessee company, which were adjudged by the decree, are measured by the rights of the other railroads mentioned in the decree, and what they were is defined in certain cases in which they came up for consideration.

The first of the cases was Union P. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. ed. 265, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173. It was brought by the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company against the Union Pacific Railroad Company to compel specific performance of a contract in regard to the use of the tracks of the latter. The following is a summary of the facts: The Union Pacific Company controlled and operated more than 5,000 miles of railroad, and, among others, a main line extending from Council Bluffs, Iowa, by way of Omaha and Valley Station, Nebraska, to Ogden, Utah, a distance of about 1,100 miles, and other roads not necessary to mention.

The Rock Island Company owned and operated a line of railway extending from Chicago, by way of Davenport, Iowa, to St. Joseph, Missouri, and thence, through certain points, to Colorado Springs and Denver. It also operated other lines, amounting in the aggregate to more than 3,000 miles. The St. Paul Company was operating more than 6,000 miles of railroad, and one of its lines extended from Chicago to Council Bluffs.

The Rock Island Company determined to connect its lines from Chicago to Council Bluffs with its southerly line to Colorado Springs by constructing a bridge across the Missouri river at Council Bluffs, and a railroad from that terminus, by way of Omaha and South Omaha and other points, thereby shortening its line from Chicago to Denver. The St. Paul Company joined in the undertaking *in order to extend its line[241 from Council Bluffs on to Omaha and South Omaha. The two companies, to execute their purpose, caused a corporation to be created under the laws of Iowa, with power to build a bridge across the river at Omaha, Congress granting to the corporation the necessary franchise. 23 Stat. at L. 43, chap. 82. Pending the making of the surveys and other preparations, the Union Pacific Company proposed to the companies to make with them a trackage arrangement by which they could use the bridge and tracks of the Union Pacific Company between Council Bluffs and South Omaha for their terminal facilities in Omaha and South Omaha, and the continuous line desired by the Rock Island Company could be completed. The proposal was accepted and the contracts subsequently drawn. The preamble to the Rock Island Company contract recited that that company had become a domestic corporation of Nebraska, and proposed to extend its railway from its terminus at Council Bluffs to a connection with its leased line, the Chicago, Kansas, & Nebraska Railway, at the city of Beatrice; that the parties to the contract believed that the interests of all would be promoted by using for a part of said extension the main tracks of the Union Pacific Railway Company in the cities of Council Bluffs and Omaha, the bridge over the Missouri river, and portions of certain other roads not necessary to mention.

The specific and material provision was as follows, the italics being ours: "The Pacific Company hereby lets the Rock Island Company into the full, equal, and joint possession and use of its main and passing tracks, now located and established, or which may be hereafter located and established, between the terminus of such tracks in the city of Council Bluffs, in the state of Iowa, and a line drawn at a right angle across said tracks within one and one-half (1½) miles southerly from the present passenger station of South Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, including *the bridge on which said tracks extend across the Missouri river, between said cities of Council Bluffs and Omaha; connections with Union Depot tracks in Omaha, the side or spur track leading from its main tracks to the lower grade of the Pacific Company's sidings and spur tracks in Omaha, and such extensions thereof as may be hereafter made; side tracks in Omaha on which to receive from and deliver to the Rock Island Company freight that may be handled through the warehouses, or switched by the Pacific Company; the connections with the Union Stock Yards tracks in South Omaha, and conveniently located grounds in South Omaha, on which the Rock Island Company may construct, maintain, and exclusively use a track or tracks, aggregating three thousand (3,000) feet in length, for the storage of cars and other purposes, for the term of nine hundred and ninety-nine (999) years." The consideration is expressed, and it is provided, "that the Pacific Company lets the Rock Island Company into the full, joint, and equal possession and use of its tracks, stations, and appurtenances along the line of the railway of the Republican Valley Company," the Pacific Company reserving the right to admit any other company to the joint use and possession of the same tracks and property upon substantially the same terms.

Performance of the contract was entered into. Subsequently a change of management of the Pacific Company took place, and that company forcibly prevented the Rock Island Company and the St. Paul Company from using the tracks at Omaha which they were entitled to use under the contracts, and absolutely refused to perform the contracts.

Suit was then brought by those companies to compel specific performance of the contracts, and the Pacific Company set up as a defense that the contracts were ultra vires, and that the use of its road, as claimed, would deprive it of the means granted to it by the act of Congress, *of [243 earning money with which to maintain its corporate existence, perform the duties of a common carrier, and meet the demands of the government. The defenses were not sustained, and it was decreed that the contract was "the valid obligation of the parties thereto, and should be performed in good faith by each of them;" that it secured the several rights embraced therein, all of which were specifically set forth, subject to certain limitations which need not be given. 47 Fed. 15. The decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 2 C. C. A. 174, 10 U. S. App. 98, 51 Fed. 309.

The case in this court was considered on the appeal of the Rock Island Company, the court saying that if the decree in favor of that company be affirmed, a like result must follow in the case of the St. Paul Company, and stated the questions to be "whether these contracts are within the corporate powers of the parties; were duly authorized as respects the Union Pacific Company; were such contracts as a court of equity can specifically enforce; and were properly enforceable on the merits." More specifically, it was said that it could be remarked "in the outset that the main contention of the Pacific Company concerns the tracks between Council Bluffs and South Omaha, including the bridge." This, then, we must accept as the subject of the controversy to which the court addressed itself and by which the decision must be explained.

It was decided that the contracts were not ultra vires, the court basing its decision upon the general powers of the Pacific Company in relation to the subject-matter and its duties as a common carrier, and decided that there was no reasonable ground upon which it could "be held invalid as an unlawful assumption of power." But the court, going beyond such general operation and relation, said: "But the determination of the existence of the power to grant running rights in this instance does not rest on these considerations," and based its 244]decision "as well upon the provisions of the Pacific Railroad acts relating to the bridge over the Missouri river, and its construction and operation, holding that those acts "imposed on the Pacific Company the duty of permitting the Rock Island Company to run its engines, cars, and trains over the bridge and tracks between Council Bluffs and Omaha." And the court said "that South Omaha was included."

These propositions were announced: The original charter of 1862 required the construction of the Pacific road from the east bank of the river, and so impliedly authorized the company to bridge it. The implication was made express by the amendatory act of 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 356, chap. 216], and the company given authority "to construct a bridge over said Missouri river." The bridge was for the company's road, and no provision was made for other roads, nor were special means provided for the construction of the bridge. By 1871, several roads had been built from the East to Council Bluffs, and others were in process of construction in Nebraska, with Omaha as their terminus. On February 24th of that year the Omaha bridge act was passed (16 Stat. at L. 430, chap. 67), in which it was provided that "for the more perfect connection of any railroads that are or shall be constructed to the Missouri river, at or near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebraska," the company was authorized to issue bonds not exceeding two and one-half million dollars, and to "secure the same by mortgage on the bridge and approaches and appurtenances, as it may deem needful, to construct and maintain its bridge over said river, and the tracks and depots required to perfect the same, as now authorized by law of Congress."

The act further provided that for the use and protection of the bridge and property the company should be governed and limited by the act of Congress of 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 246), in regard to the construction of certain *bridges and to establish them as post roads. Nine bridges were authorized by that act to be constructed, eight over the Mississippi river and one over the Missouri river, and it was provided in § 1 of the act which authorized the construction of the bridge across the Mississippi at Quincy, Illinois, that, when constructed, the trains of all railroads terminating at the river should be allowed to cross, for reasonable compensation to be made to the owners of the bridge. This provision was made applicable to the other bridges.

The court said: "The common object of both these act plainly was the more perfect connection of roads running to the bridges on either side of the river;" and this, it was further said, was in harmony with the numerous acts of Congress referred to in the opinion of the circuit court of appeals.

Answering the objection that if these acts justified the granting of the use of the bridge, it did not justify the granting of the use of the tracks, the court remarked that the authority was given to place a mortgage "on the bridge and approaches and appurtenances," and that it would seem clear that the approaches on both sides of the river must be regarded as a part of the structure. And it was further said: "Moreover, the act refers to 'the tracks and depots required to perfect the same.' A railroad bridge can be of no use to the public unless united with necessary appurtenances, such as approaches, tracks, depots, and other facilities for the public accommodation. And we consider Council Bluffs, Omaha, and South Omaha, under the facts, as necessarily embraced in the intention of Congress. It is true that it appears that from the depot to the point in South Omaha where the tracks of the companies connected, is about 4 miles; but the scheme of Congress was to accomplish the more perfect connection 'at or near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebraska,' and we think this distance reasonably within the terms *of the act of 1871, liberal-246 ly construed, as the act should be."

The next case which came to this court was Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 199 U. S. 160, 50 L. ed. 134, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19. The Mason City Company was complainant in the suit in the circuit court, and operated a railroad having its western terminus at Council Bluffs, and sought in that suit to connect with and use the bridge, approaches, and tracks of the Union Pacific Company upon the same terms and conditions as the roads which were parties to the suit in 163 U. S., supra. It based its claim upon the acts therein set out and considered, it having no contract with the Union Pacific, as the other railroads had. The circuit court and the circuit court of appeals sustained its claim. 124 Fed. 409, 64 C. C. A. 348, 128 Fed. 230.

In this court, the Mason City Company contended that its right to the use of the bridge and approaches was determined by the decision in 163 U. S., and, further, that, if mistaken in that, it had such right under the statutes of the United States and by the terms of the contract between the city of Omaha and county of Douglass, with which contract we are not concerned. To the contention the Union Pacific replied that so much of the opinion as dealt with the statutory obligation was obiter dictum. It also urged that the statutes were misconstrued, and that the status of the present Union Pacific Company differed so much from that of the then defendant as to make them inapplicable.

Disposing of the contention that the reference to the statutory obligation of the Union Pacific was obiter, the court said:

"While the claim of the plaintiffs in that case was founded directly upon contracts, yet, if there were a statutory duty to let them into the joint use of the bridge and its approaches, that was enough to sustain a decree in their favor, and the contracts [247] might be regarded as *simply relieving the court of the work of settling minor matters, such as method of use, compensation therefor, and matter of control. Indeed, the alleged invalidity of the contracts was rested largely on the scope of the statutes, and the duties to the government and the public imposed thereby on the railroad company."

To the contention that the statutes had been misconstrued, the court replied that "we see no reason to question the conclusion announced in the former opinion." The other contentions were also held untenable. The decree against the Union Pacific was affirmed, with some minor reservations which it is unnecessary to notice.

It was this decree that the Union Pacific Company was, in the present case, adjudged guilty of contempt for violating. The decree we have already set out.

The parties are in sharp controversy as to its meaning, but, necessarily, whatever ambiguity arises from some of its parts, its extent must be determined by what preceded it and what it was intended to execute,—in other words, that the bridge act of 1871 is the measure of the rights given by decree in connection with the act of 1866, providing for a bridge across the Mississippi river at Quincy, Illinois, and other bridges. 14 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 246. The latter act, as we have seen, provided that "all trains of all roads terminating at said river, at or opposite said point, shall be allowed to cross said bridge for reasonable compensation." And, as we have also seen, the act of 1871 was passed "for the more perfect connection of any railroads that are or shall be constructed to the Missouri river at or near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Nebraska." And the powers conferred and the use and protection of the bridge that should be erected were "governed and limited" by the provisions of the act of 1866. The two acts, therefore, express the powers conferred and the obligations imposed on the Union Pacific Company. And this court so construed them, saying, as we have seen, that "the [248 common object of both these acts was the more perfect connection of roads running to the bridge on either side of the river." A right to the "approaches and appurtenances" was given as necessary to the connection and to make it effective. It did not otherwise subject the property of the Union Pacific Company to the use of other companies. It bridged the river—"the transportation gap"—between Council Bluffs and Omaha, the country east of the river and the country west of it. It did no more. It did not intend to give to other roads a right in the terminal of the Union Pacific Company beyond what was necessary for a right of passage over the "gap," giving the same continuity to other roads which the Union Pacific Company had. That the act of Congress had this object the circuit court of appeals did not deny. The court said:

"It is true that the object of the requirement of the acts of Congress was to bridge the transportation gap, and to facilitate the transfer of cars passing between railroads east and railroads west of the Missouri river, but this fact did not deprive the court, which was called upon to enforce this legislation, of its jurisdiction to prescribe the limits and the terms of the use which the Pacific Company should allow, nor of its power and duty to exercise a wide and wise judicial discretion in fixing those limits and terms."

Of course, the court had power to pass on the issues presented to it, and we might have to yield to its decision as res judicata if its decree was as broad as asserted, but we do not so understand its decree. It gave only what the chief justice, in 163 U. S., called "running rights." As we have already pointed out, the original charter of the Pacific road only impliedly authorized the building of a bridge across the river. The act of 1864 expressly authorized it, but the bridge contemplated was for the use of the Pacific Company only. No provision was made for other roads. The act of 1871 enlarged the powers of the *company, [249 giving it means to construct the bridge, but at the same time put the obligation on the company of permitting its use by other roads, as we have seen, "indicating [we quote from 163 U. S. 587] a settled policy that all structures of this character should allow connecting roads to cross them with their cars, trains, and engines." And this was the right which was given over the tracks, such right over the tracks being necessary, to the right over the bridge. Id. 587, 588. The right to cross them, bridge and tracks, it will be observed, and thereby provide "for the more perfect connection of the roads east of the river with those west of it." That this was the purpose is expressed in many places in the opinion. The bridge was decided to be the principal and dominating thing, to which the rights in the tracks were accessory and only given as appurtenant and necessary as a means to avail of its use.

The Mason City Company would upset this order and make paramount the use of the tracks; indeed, make the use of the tracks independent of any use of the bridge, though the only rights it possesses are given by the act authorizing the construction of the bridge. It was because its railroad connected with the Union Pacific at Council Bluffs that it was enabled to invoke the provisions of that act. It now claims a right on the west side of the river to the use of tracks in connection with what it terms "a grain terminal" in Omaha, for which purpose it has purchased certain real estate. And it represents "that, in order to provide the necessary elevators and other special facilities, it has purchased other real estate, the title to which it has caused to be conveyed to the Omaha Grain Terminals, a corporation of the state of Nebraska, every share of the capital stock of said corporation being owned by" it. It sets forth, in detail, length of tracks and their connection with those of the Union Pacific, and the number and capacity of the elevators which are necessary to accommodate "the 250] grain business naturally tributary *to the city of Omaha." It also sets forth that, as a carrier of live stock and live stock products, it must have facilities "in close proximity to the South Omaha stock yards." We quote these averments to illustrate the extent of the rights claimed. It is to accommodate the business thus described and its business as a common carrier that the Mason City Company asserts the right to use the tracks of the Union Pacific Company which connect with the tracks of other companies,—specifically, in this case, with the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company. It was a prevention of the use of the latter tracks in order to deliver a car of stucco hauled by an engine of the Mason City Company to the Rock Island Company that was held to condemn the decree. If the Mason City Company had the right to deliver that car, it had the right to deliver all cars, and the court so decreed, finding that there was a physical connection between the tracks of the Rock Island and the main tracks of the Union Pacific at South Omaha, and that, by the terms of the decree, the Mason City Company had "the right to run its engines, cars, or trains" over such tracks, and from them

"over and through the said connection onto the tracks of the Union Pacific Company at South Omaha."

The court, therefore, decided that the decree authorized the use of the Union Pacific track for local switching purposes, and enjoined the prevention of such use. As we have pointed out, we do not think the decree justified the conclusion of the court. The rights asserted transcend anything given by the bridge act. The tracks of the Union Pacific Company, as urged by its counsel, are its property, and the supervision and control thereof cannot be taken from it and given to its connections except to the extent expressed in the bridge act, which gave, as we have seen, the use of the bridge and of the main and passing tracks as necessary approaches to the bridge. And it is of special significance that none of the "tenant companies" (parties *in[251 163 U. S.) ever claimed such right except in one attempt by the Rock Island, after these proceedings, to punish the Union Pacific officers for contempt.

We are therefore of opinion that the decree admitted appellee to the use of the "main and passing tracks" of the Union Pacific Company from their eastern terminus at Council Bluffs, only to a physical connection with the roads and at the places mentioned therein, including the bridge over which the tracks extend across the Missouri river between Council Bluffs and Omaha. And that such use was all that was necessary to constitute the road's continuous lines from east to west or from west to east.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals, affirming the order of the Circuit Court, adjudging the appellants guilty of contempt of the decree entered August 12, 1903, is reversed, and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

ALUMINUM COMPANY OF AMERICA,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
GEORGE H. RAMSEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 251-256.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — abolishing fellow servant rule.
1. Abolishing the fellow servant rule as

NOTE.—On the validity of statute abrogating fellow-servant rule—see note to Bradford Constr. Co. v. Heflin, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1040.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 954.

to corporations operating railroads within the state, as is done by Ark. act of March 8, 1907, does not deny such a corporation the equal protection of the laws because the statute does not apply to individual employers.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 286-291, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes— who may assail validity.

2. A corporation operating a railroad in the state cannot challenge the validity of Ark. act of March 8, 1907, abolishing the fellow servant rule, because such statute may make an unconstitutional discrimination between individuals and corporations engaged in mining, but not operating railroads.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 53-60, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 56.]

Submitted November 8, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Saline Circuit Court, upholding a state statute abolishing the fellow servant rule. Affirmed.

See same case below, 89 Ark. 522, 117 S. W. 568.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Uriah M. Rose, George B. Rose, Wilson E. Hemingway, and J. F. Loughborough submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Corporations are persons within the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and are entitled to all the protection of this Amendment.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132.

This court has consistently held from the beginning of its decisions involving this question that equal protection of the laws did not mean that the same law should apply to everyone; that different conditions require and authorize different laws, and that special legislation was not therefore unequal. The court has as consistently held that wherever there is special legislation, the warrant for it must be found in differing situations; that classification of subjects for special legislation shall not be arbitrary and without reason, but must rest upon some real basis of classification.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 29, 32 L. ed. 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Barbier v. Connolly 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 30, 25 L. ed. 992; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 88, 41 L. ed. 80, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 184, 41 L. ed. 679, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 633, 41 L. ed. 854, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 469, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 211, 39 L. ed. 676, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 412, 417, 54 L. ed. 536, 539, 541, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 112, 46 L. ed. 109, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

In the nature of things, a wide discretion in the matter of classification must be vested in the state, and this court has always held that if the classification is observed to rest upon any real basis or difference in circumstances or conditions, and is not merely arbitrary, it will be sustained.

Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 562, 43 L. ed. 554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; District of Columbia v. Brooke, 214 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 941, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560.

In whatever guise legislation may be couched, if its practical effect and operation are to deny the equal protection of the law, the court will disregard fancied refinements, and will uphold the supremacy of the United States Constitution by giving it a sensible and practical operation.

Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 81, 34 L. ed. 862, 863, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The reason assigned for the classification does not depend upon any difference in circumstances or conditions, but is purely arbitrary.

Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 81 Miss. 557, 62 L.R.A. 407, 95 Am. St. Rep. 476, 34 So. 533.

The right of the state to impose terms upon corporations must be always exercised with due regard to the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 415, 19 L. ed. 973; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 407, 15 L. ed. 452; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. St. Louis County, 179 U. S. 302, 305, 45 L. ed. 201, 202, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 540, 24 L. ed. 151; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 50 L. ed. 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 6 Ann. Cas. 317; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 942, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. v. Evans, 14 C. C. A. 116, 31 U. S. App. 432, 66 Fed. 809.

Statutes abolishing the fellow-servant doctrine as to railroads and other classes of business have been before the court with the argument that such statutes deny the equal protection of the laws; but in all of these cases the court has sustained the legislation only on the ground that they made a classification applying equally to all that were in the same situation.

Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McLaughlin, 119 U. S. 566, 30 L. ed. 477, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1366; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585. See also St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Emmons, 149 U. S. 364, 37 L. ed. 769, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322, 53 L. ed. 530, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, 15 Ann. Cas. 645.

Plaintiff in error is not a railroad company.

Bridwell v. Gate City Terminal Co. 127 Ga. 520, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 56 S. E. 624; Union Trust Co. v. Kendall, 20 Kan. 517; Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light & Street R. Co. 36 Fla. 519, 29 L.R.A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44, 18 So. 444; Funk v. St. Paul City R. Co. 61 Minn. 435, 29 L.R.A. 208, 52 Am. St. Rep. 608, 63 N. W. 1099; State v. Duluth Gas & Water Co. 76 Minn. 96, 57 L.R.A. 63, 78 N. W. 1032; Hestonville, M. & F. Pass. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 89 Pa. 219; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux 56 L. ed.

City Cable R. Co. 68 Fed. 82; Riley v. Galveston City R. Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 247, 35 S. W. 826; Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672, 69 Am. St. Rep. 736, 74 N. W. 1074; Louisville & P. R. Co. v. Louisville City R. Co. 2 Duv. 175; Williams v. City Electric Street R. Co. 41 Fed. 556; Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Simon, 20 Or. 60, 10 L.R.A. 251, 23 Am. St. Rep. 86, 25 Pac. 147; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Bonner v. Franklin Co-op. Asso. 4 Tex. Civ. App. 166, 23 S. W. 317; Turner v. Cross, 83 Tex. 218, 15 L.R.A. 262, 18 S. W. 578.

The term "railroad company" is so well understood by all persons as not to merit an effort to construe its meaning.

Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 33, 39 L. ed. 601, 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, 42 L. ed. 394, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 478, 6 L. ed. 693, 699; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

It is not a question of construing the scope of a remedy provided by the statute, but it is a question of who are included within the burdens of a statute that is in derogation of the common law.

Thompson v. Baxter, 92 Tenn. 305, 36 Am. St. Rep. 85, 21 S. W. 668; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 575; Northern P. R. Co. v. Whalen, 149 U. S. 157, 37 L. ed. 686, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Beeson v. Busenbark, 44 Kan. 669, 10 L.R.A. 839, 25 Pac. 48; Re Swan, 150 U. S. 649, 37 L. ed. 1210, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225.

Messrs. Henry M. Armistead and T. M. Mehaffy submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. J. E. Williams was on the brief:

This court is without jurisdiction because:

(a) No Federal question is involved in the state court's construction of the statute.

(b) If there is a Federal question, it is foreclosed by repeated decisions of this court.

Ozan Lumber Co. v. Biddie, 87 Ark. 587, 113 S. W. 796; Hoadley v. San Francisco (Clark v. San Francisco) 124 U. S. 639, 31 L. ed. 553, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659; Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322-345, 53 L. ed. 530-542, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, 15 Ann. Cas. 645; Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45-54, 53 L. ed. 81-85, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 353, 46 L. ed. 944, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L.

ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 211, 32 L. ed. 110, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 676, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 351, 44 L. ed. 194, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Wilmington Star Min. Co. v. Fulton, 205 U. S. 74, 51 L. ed. 716, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 416, 49 L. ed. 1108, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224.

Even though there be color of jurisdiction, the case should be affirmed as an appeal taken for delay.

Chanute v. Trader, 132 U. S. 210, 33 L. ed. 345, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Richardson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 169 U. S. 128, 42 L. ed. 687, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 45 L. ed. 557, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Stephenson Iron Min. Co. v. Kibble, 205 U. S. 537, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

Messrs. Henry M. Armistead and T. M. Mehaffy also filed a separate brief for defendant in error:

The act of the legislature of Arkansas, adopted in 1907, is constitutional under the power reserved in the Arkansas Constitution of 1874, to alter or amend corporate charters.

Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322, 53 L. ed. 530, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, 15 Ann. Cas. 645; Northern C. R. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258, 47 L. ed. 167, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 567, 38 L. ed. 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45, 53 L. ed. 81, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 133; Close v. Greenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed.

408, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Sperry & H. Co. v. Rhodes, 220 U. S. 502, 55 L. ed. 561, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 17, 46 L. ed. 57, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 565, 55 L. ed. 337, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 359; Hamilton Gas-light & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

The adoption of the act is a legitimate exercise of the right of classification of corporations as artificial persons, subject to special rules, independently of the reserved power to amend charters.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 211, 32 L. ed. 110, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 676, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 351, 44 L. ed. 194, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Wilmington Star Min. Co. v. Fulton, 205 U. S. 60, 51 L. ed. 708, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 55 L. ed. 78, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 226, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 114, 54 L. ed. 688, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 555, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 413, 54 L. ed. 817, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Atehison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 104, 43 L. ed. 912, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 48 L. ed. 971, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

The hazard incurred by the defendant in error was a risk of railroading, as to which the legislature might make a special rule.

Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error brought this action against the plaintiff in error in the Saline circuit court of the state of Arkansas to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been received by him while in the employment of the company, which maintained a railroad to its mines, on account of the negligence of a fellow servant.

The action was based upon a statute of the state called by the parties "the fellow servant law." The statute makes railroad corporations operating within the state, and every company, whether incorporated or not, engaged in the mining of coal, "liable to respond in damages for injuries or death sustained" by agents, employees, or servants, "resulting from a careless omission of duty or negligence of such employer," or "any authorized agent, servant, or employee of the said employer," in the same manner as though the carelessness, omission of duty, or negligence was that of the employer.

The company assailed the constitutionality of the statute by the request for the following instruction, which was refused by the trial court. "You are instructed that the act of the legislature, approved March 8th, 1907, known as 'the fellow servant law,' in providing it shall apply to all corporations, but shall not apply to individuals, persons, or partnerships, except those engaged in the operation of a railroad or coal mine, denies to this defendant the equal protection of the law, and is in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

255]*There was a verdict for the plaintiff, defendant in error here, upon which judgment was duly entered. It was sustained by the supreme court of Arkansas, 89 Ark. 522, 117 S. W. 568.

The supreme court sustained the action of the trial court in refusing the instruction, on the authority of Ozan Lumber Co. v. Biddle, which had been previously decided, and which is reported in 87 Ark. 587, 113 S. W. 796. This action of the court is assigned as error, and is the Federal question relied on.

A motion is made to dismiss, and, alternately, to affirm, respectively, on the ground that there is no Federal question in the state court's construction of the statute, and that if there be such a question, it is foreclosed by repeated decisions of this court. In support of the motion to dismiss, it is contended that the state court decided that the act assailed is an amendment to the charter of the corporation under the reserved right to amend, alter, or repeal the charter, and of this the corporation cannot complain, the exertion of such right being a condition of its existence.

In Ozan Lumber Co. v. Biddle, supra, the court decided that "the fellow servant law" was an amendment to the charters of corporations, made under the right reserved in the Constitution of the state to repeal, alter, or amend such charters. The Ozan Lumber Company, however, was a domestic corporation, and whether the principle of the decision would be applicable to foreign corporations, as plaintiff in error in the case at bar is, being a Pennsylvania corporation, depends on many considerations, and involves questions not local; so we pass to the consideration of the merits.

On the merits the case is in a very narrow compass and does not demand much discussion, though plaintiff in error earnestly presses the contention that the statute is discriminatory in that it applies to all corporations, but does not apply to individuals or partnerships. Whether *that exact[256 distinction, that is, the distinction merely between corporations and partnerships and individuals, is competent for a legislature to make, under its power of classifying objects, we are not called upon to decide. The distinction made by the statute is broader. The distinction (among others) it makes is between railroads operating in the state and individuals, and such distinction has been maintained by this court as not offending the Constitution of the United States. Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159. See also Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 504, 52 L. ed. 307, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, and El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

What grievance plaintiff in error might have if it were not operating a railroad, we are not called upon to consider, because it is limited in its complaint to the effect of the statute on it, and cannot appropriate the grievance that corporations engaged in mining, but not operating railroads, may have on account of the distinction made between them and individuals.

It is true that the supreme court of the state, following Ozan Lumber Co. v. Biddle, supra, decided the law was a regulation of corporations, and applied it to the plaintiff in error because it was a corporation, not distinguishing it as one operating a railroad. It, however, may be so distinguished under the statute. That is, the statute constitutes a class of corporations operating railroads, and under the cases we have cited the classification is valid, there being equality within the class. In other words, not only the plaintiff in error, but all other corporations operating railroads, are covered by the statute.

We think, therefore, that the statute of Arkansas is not repugnant to the 14th Amendment, and the judgment is affirmed.

257] *UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

HERMAN F. GARBISH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 257-261.)

Master and servant — regulating hours of labor — extraordinary emergency.

The building of a public levee on the Mississippi river in the eastern district of Louisiana cannot be said to present at all times an extraordinary emergency, within the meaning of the act of August 1, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 340, chap. 352, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2521), regulating the hours of labor of laborers and mechanics on public works, and making it unlawful to require or permit such employees to work a longer time except in cases of extraordinary emergency.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 362.]

Argued November 7, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for violating a Federal statute regulating the hours of labor on public works. Reversed and remanded with directions to overrule the demurrer.

See same case below, 180 Fed. 502.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—What constitutes extraordinary emergency within the meaning of a statute regulating hours of labor.

Statutes limiting hours of labor frequently make an exception in favor of cases of extraordinary emergency. Definitions of the phrase as used in this connection are not numerous, but it is defined in United States v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co. 149 Fed. 809, as "something unforeseen, sudden, unexpected, which would call for immediate action or remedy." It imports a sudden and unexpected happening; an unforeseen occurrence or condition calling for immediate action to avert imminent danger to health or life or property; an unusual peril, actual, and not imaginary, suddenly creating a situation so different from the usual or ordinary course in the prosecution of the work that the court may and must conclude that the legislators contemplated excepting from the operation of the law such an occurrence so sudden, rare, and unforeseen. Penn Bridge Co. v. United States, 29 App. D. C. 452, 10 Ann. Cas. 719. This is in accord with the words of Mr. Justice McKenna in the principal case: "It is a special occurrence, and the phrase used emphasizes this. It is not an emergency simply which is expressed by it, something merely sudden

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. E. D. Saunders argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Defendant in error was indicted for violation of the act *of Congress of August [258 1, 1892, chapter 352, 27 Stat. at L. 340, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2521, which restricts the service and employment of all laborers and mechanics who are now or may hereafter be employed by the government or by any contractor or subcontractor, upon any of the public works of the United States, to eight hours in any one calendar day, and makes it unlawful for any officer of the government or any such contractor to require or permit any such laborer to work a longer time "except in cases of extraordinary emergency."

The indictment set out in proper form that defendant in error had violated the law by permitting and requiring his employees engaged in building a public levee on the Mississippi river, which was part of the public works of the United States, to work more than eight hours "on the 17th day of August, 1908, at a time and under circumstances when there was no extraordinary emergency, for the reason that at that season of the year, to wit, during the months of August, September, October, and November and December, the waters of the Mississippi river annually fall below the and unexpected, but an extraordinary one,—one exceeding the common degree." The phrase cannot contemplate conditions of danger which necessarily exist and inhere in the work to be done, and which will always be present from the beginning to the end of the work. United States v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co. supra.

A change by public officials in the specifications of a contract for the erection of a concrete bridge, made after the date of the contract, by which the contractor was required to put in a certain amount of concrete masonry within a limited time, which was impossible if only eight hours' service was required, because if the work was stopped at the end of eight hours the concrete would harden and might be cleft, causing cracks and perhaps disintegration of the arch, and because the scarcity of workmen forbade working in shifts, does not present a case of "extraordinary emergency" with in the meaning of D. C. Code, § 892 [31 Stat. at L. 1334, chap. 854], limiting to eight hours the daily labor of workmen on public works, except in cases of such emergency. Penn Bridge Co. v. United States, supra. The court said that both the District and the contractor should have known that concrete in an arch may not harden in level of the surrounding land and are retained within the banks of said river without the necessity of any artificial levees, as was true on August 17, 1908." It is further charged that the levees were being constructed in the usual and ordinary course of levee building, done annually for the increase in size and strength of such levees, in preparation for the high waters that come down the river, the levees being of standard size and sufficient to resist usual high water, but not unusual high waters that occasionally, although not every year, come down the river, it being the policy, rule, and custom of the government to increase the standard of levees by destroying inferior levees, and replacing them with stronger and higher ones year by year until the levees shall all be brought to a standard able to withstand any unusual floods. And it is further charged that the 259] particular *work which the defendant in error was constructing was nothing unusual or out of the ordinary, but was being done in pursuance of the policy indicated and at the usual time, so as to allow the levee time to settle and pack, and become ready and able to serve the purposes for which it was constructed; that is, to withstand and retain the high waters of the Mississippi river before their usual annual rise, and the time of construction being the usual and customary time to so complete and perfect the levee, before the annual rise of the waters, as would exist in the construction of any levee on the river "any year, and at any place, and by any contractor, all of whom know, as did the said Garbish, that the waters of the Mississippi river annually fall and are retained within the natural banks thereof during the period or season aforesaid, and begin to rise above the natural banks thereof, and therefore to need artificial levees to retain them, in the month of January each year."

Defendant demurred to the indictment, on the ground that it did not set forth any offense against the laws of the United States, or any violation of the laws of the United States. The demurrer was sustained.

In passing upon the demurrer the court said that the defendant rested his case upon the proposition "that the building of levees on the Mississippi river, in the eastern district of Louisiana, at all times presents an extraordinary emergency," and hence that the work on the river is exempt from the operation of the law. The court took judicial notice of the fact asserted and sustained the conclusion from it. The court said that certain facts were within the common knowledge of the people of the district, which, taken in connection with the specific allegations of the indictment, overcame the mere conclusion of the pleader that no extraordinary emergency existed, and instanced the following: The work on the levees was absolutely necessary for the preservation of property *and the [260 cultivation of the land; therefore it has always been usual for levee work to proceed with the utmost despatch, and the labor of the day has never been restricted to eight a given part of eight hours, and that since the contract permitted the District engineers to make changes in the plan, the contractor might have contemplated that the excavation would need greater depth to support the arch of the bridge than an earlier examination had shown likely to be required.

But the installation of a new pump by the commissioners of a city, in order to increase the pumping capacity of the waterworks system and to guard against the disastrous consequences which might probably result from any breakage or impairment of the single pump which had theretofore been the sole reliance of the city, and had been in almost continuous operation, presented a case of extraordinary emergency within the meaning of a statute providing that eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work for all classes of employees in the state, except in cases of "extraordinary emergency caused by fire, flood, or danger to life or property." People ex rel. Usoy v. Waring, 52 App. Div. 36, 64 N. Y. Supp. 865.

A delay, not entirely unexpected, in obtaining the timber required for the construction of a pier at the Boston Navy Yard, does not create an "extraordinary emergency," within the meaning of the exception in the act of Congress of August 1, 1892, forbidding a contractor upon any public work of the United States, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, to permit or require employees thereon to work more than eight hours each day. Ellis v. United States, 206 U. S. 246, 51 L. ed. 1047, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, 11 Ann. Cas. 589.

The building of a dam across the Ohio river is not, in its nature, emergency work, so as to present, during the entire life of the contract for its construction, a case of extraordinary emergency within the meaning of this statute. United States v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co. 149 Fed. 809.

And the extraordinary emergency presented by a flood which will justify the builder of such dam in requiring or permitting his workmen to work more than eight hours a day does not continue during the time required to repair the injuries and remove the obstacles caused by the flood. Ibid.

On the general question of limitation of hours of labor by statute or ordinance—see note to People v. Orange County Road Constr. Co. 65 L.R.A. 33. And as to the constitutionality of such statutes—see note to Atkin v. Kansas, 48 L. ed. U. S. 148.

hours. "It is necessary, the court said, that the levees be built in as short a time as possible, that they may settle and that the grass may become well rooted on them before they are called upon to bear the strain of the high river.

From these facts the court assumed the existence of others, as follows:

"It is true that the months of August, September, October, November, and December are the most favorable for levee building, but there is no certainty that during any part of these months the river will maintain a low stage. When the river is bank full, necessarily no levees can be built. Statistics of the river's height at New Orleans show that during the past twenty-five years the river has been bank full on nearly every day of the year, and these statistics may well apply to the locality where the defendant was working. An unprecedented rain or an early freeze, followed by a thaw anywhere in the valley of the Mississippi river or its tributaries, might unexpectedly cause the river to rise at New Orleans. No one can foresee or anticipate the acts of nature, and who can say that a few days' more time, in which it might have become solidified, would not have so materially added to the levee's strength as to enable it to withstand the pressure, and without which it might significantly fail?" [180 Fed. 503].

The government insists that the court assumed too extensive a judicial knowledge, and urges that the most important of the assumed facts, that the river has been bank full almost every day in the year, and the extension of the fact to the locality where defendant was working, is contradicted by the official hydrographs, 1871 to 1907, and 1907 to 1911, attached to the government's brief, from which it appears that at Carrollton, which is a few miles above New Orleans and a few miles below St. James parish, the river, from 1872 to 1910, had never been above the stage at which it begins to interfere with the construction of levees, in August, September, October, and November, and only a few days in August, 1875, touched that stage; and the government further contends that it was not a matter to be judicially taken notice of that the work could not be properly expedited unless the laborers be employed more than eight hours a day. But, aside from these considerations, it has been decided that no mere requirement of business convenience or pecuniary advantage is an extraordinary emergency within the meaning of the act. Ellis v. United States, 206 U. S. 246, 256, 257, 51 L. ed. 1047, 1052, 1053, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 589. And, besides, the extraordinary emergency which relieves from the act is not one that is contemplated and inheres necessarily in the work. United States v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co. 149 Fed. 809. It is a special occurrence, and the phrase used emphasizes this. It is not an emergency simply which is expressed by it, something merely sudden and unexpected, but an extraordinary one, —one exceeding the common degree. We must assume that the phrase was used with a consciousness of its meaning and with the intention of conveying such meaning. As said by the Solicitor General, "the phrase 'continuing extraordinary emergency' is self-contradictory."

The building and repair of levees on the Mississippi river is one of the most important and conspicuous of the public works of the United States, and if it had been intended to exempt it from the provisions of the act of August 1, 1892, which declared a public policy in regard to labor, it would have been expressed. There is no hardship in this to a contractor. He has before him the law and the conditions affecting the work which he may undertake, and can govern himself accordingly.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded with directions to overrule the demurrer.

*CHARLES F. CONSAUL and Ida M. Moyers, Administrators of the Estate of Gilbert Moyers, Deceased, Apts.,
v.

HORACE S. CUMMINGS, Administrator of the Estate of George B. Edmonds, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 262-274.)

Partnership — accounting by surviving partner.

1. The surviving member of a special

NOTE.—On the rights of the estate of a law partner in the compensation for business unfinished at the time of his death—see note to Clifton v. Clark, 66 L.R.A. 821.

On the effect of dissolution of partnership generally—see note to Mason v. Pewabic Min. Co. 33 L. ed. U. S. 524.

As to the right of partner to compensation for services on winding up firm business—see note to Ruggles v. Buckley, 101 C. C. A. 549.

As to the allowance of interest in partnership accounting—see note to Winchester v. Glazier, 9 L.R.A. 425.

As to laches as a defense—see notes to Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L.R.A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. 8 L.R.A. 248; Coffey v. Emigh, 10 L.R.A. 125; Pratt v. Carroll, 3 L. ed. U. S. 627; Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720 and Abraham v. Ordway, 39 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

partnership between lawyers for the prosecution of a number of claims against the United States in Congress and before the court of claims, the compensation for which service was contingent on success, and was to be paid in solido and divided between the partners in the same manner, cannot claim, on an accounting, to be entitled to compensation for such services rendered by him after the dissolution, in the prosecution and collection of the claims, as he had agreed in the partnership agreement to render.

[For other cases, see Partnership, VI. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Partnership — rights of personal representative of deceased partner.

2. The interest of the estate of a deceased member of a special partnership between lawyers for the prosecution of certain claims against the United States in Congress and before the court of claims, in the fees earned under the partnership agreement, cannot be diminished on the theory that the contract of employment by the clients was revoked by his insanity or death, where they made no such objection, and apparently acquiesced in the arrangement by which the claims were put in the hands of the other partner.

[For other cases, see Partnership, 187-190, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interest — on accounting — from what time.

3. The surviving partner is properly charged with interest on the balance found, on an accounting, to be due to the personal representatives of the deceased partner, from the date when the bill was filed, where, in response to a demand for settlement, he at first promised to make a statement, and then contended, without substantial support, that the partnership was dissolved because the deceased partner had transferred his interest in the fees, and also resisted the accounting, and failed to produce the proper books, vouchers, and statements,—especially, where he did not except to this method of calculating interest, but, on the contrary, obtained a ruling that, on the same basis, he should be allowed interest on advances made by him to the deceased partner.

[For other cases, see Interest, I. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Laches — suit for accounting — delay.

4. The delay in filing the bill will not bar a suit for an accounting from the surviving partner in a special partnership between lawyers for the prosecution of a number of claims against the United States in Congress and before the court of claims, the fees for which services were contingent upon success, and were to be paid in solido, and divided between the partners in the same manner, where such bill, though not filed until eight years after the other partner had been adjudged a lunatic, and three years after his death, was filed within four months after the fees were collected.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 38.]

Argued November 6, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which, on a third appeal, affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District for an accounting by a surviving partner. Affirmed.

See same case below on 1st appeal, 24 App. D. C. 36; 2d appeal, 30 App. D. C. 540; 3d appeal, 33 App. D. C. 132.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The facts in these cases are fully set out in the decisions in the various appeals reported in 17 App. D. C. 269, 24 App. D. C. 36, 30 App. D. C. 540, 33 App. D. C. 132. Only what is material to an understanding of the assignments of error need be now stated.

George B. Edmonds was an attorney in Washington, practising in the court of claims. Under agreements to pay contingent fees, and giving him power of substitution, he represented a large number of clients, who had claims pending in that court and before Congress. A schedule was attached to a contract made in 1888 by Edmonds with Gilbert Moyers, also an attorney, in which they agreed "as special partners to prosecute these claims in Congress and before the court. The fees and expenses were to be equally divided. Edmonds also stipulated therein that said "Moyers shall represent and be associated with me in the prosecution of the said claims as joint attorney of record."

Edmonds was adjudged a lunatic in 1891, and Cummings was appointed his committee. There had only been a few collections, and most of the claims were still pending at the time of Edmonds's death, in 1896. By virtue of appropriations made in March, 1899, Moyers collected a large amount in May, 1899. Cummings made a demand on him for a settlement, and Moyers several times promised to make a statement, explaining that the delay was caused by [264] bad health. Nothing having been done, Cummings was appointed administrator of Edmonds on August 22, 1899, and on September 16, 1899, filed a bill for an accounting. Among other things Moyers, in his answer, claimed that Edmonds, in consideration of money advanced by him in ignorance of the lunacy proceedings, had conveyed to Moyers all his interest in the fees that might be collected. This transfer he claimed operated as a dissolution of the firm. The court ordered an accounting; Moyers appealed. That decree having been affirmed, the case was referred to a master. He found that Edmonds had not sold his interest in the fees and that the partnership had not been dissolved, but allowed Moyers credit for the amount advanced in 1892. He found that the fees earned aggregated about $26,000, and after deducting the expenses and allowing Moyers credit for the advances, found balance in favor of complainant, with interest thereon, from September 16, 1899, the date Moyers should have accounted. Moyers, on the appeal, offered no objection to this award of interest, but claimed that, under the same rule, interest should have been allowed him on the advances made in 1892. The court of appeals sustained this view, and directed that, in restating the account, interest should be allowed Moyers on these advances from, say, January, 1893, to September 16, 1899. On a subsequent hearing the account was thus restated. On a later appeal the court held that, as Moyers had taken no exception, this ruling was conclusive. The court also held that Moyers was entitled to credit for expenses advanced in claims which were finally disallowed by the court.

During the litigation other claims were pending in the court of claims. But in view of the controversy over the fees, Moyers abandoned some of them, and on his advice a few of the claims were put in the hands of attorneys associated with Moyers in business. They made collection, but the master charged Moyers with the proportion 265] of the *fees thereon due Edmonds under the original contract. Other claims were withdrawn by clients and placed with attorneys not connected with Moyers in business. Congress passed additional acts of appropriation, by virtue of which some of the other claims in the schedule were collected. These items were included in the master's final statement of account. This was approved by the chancellor and affirmed on appeal. The case is here on numerous assignments of error, all of which have been abandoned except those in which Moyers's administrators claim that (1) he should have been allowed compensation for services after the dissolution of the firm; (2) that he should not have been charged with interest from September 16, 1899, but only from the final decree of November, 1908, when for the first time the amount due was made certain; and (3) the refusal to dismiss the bill on the ground of complainant's laches.

Messrs. Charles F. Consaul and A. S. Worthington argued the cause, and, with Miss Ida May Moyers, filed a brief for appellants:

This special partnership, like any other partnership, ceased and terminated at latest with the death of Edmonds.

Scholefield v. Eichelberger, 7 Pet. 586, 8 L. ed. 793; Burwell v. Cawood, 2 How. 560-576, 11 L. ed. 378-384; Davis v. Christian, 15 Gratt. 11; Gratz v. Bayard, 11 Serg. & R. 41; Knapp v. McBride, 7 Ala. 19; Goodburn v. Stevens, 5 Gall. 1; Williamson v. Wilson, 1 Bland, Ch. 418; Griswold v. Waddington, 15 Johns. 82; White v. Union Ins. Co. 1 Nott, & M'C. 559, 9 Am. Dec. 726; Story, Partn. 7th ed. § 317; Parsons, Partn. 4th ed. § 342; Ames v. Downing, 1 Bradf. 321.

The partnership having thus been dissolved by operation of law, upon the death of Edmonds, his estate would, at most, have a right to recover from Moyers or his estate, only one half of the reasonable value of partnership services rendered during the existence of the partnership, viz., prior to the death of Edmonds, and even this distribution should be made only after deduction in favor of Moyers of his expenses incurred in the prosecution of the partnership claims or business.

Babbitt v. Riddell, 1 Grant, Cas. 161; Justice v. Lairy, 19 Ind. App. 277, 65 Am. St. Rep. 405, 49 N. E. 459; Denver v. Roane, 99 U. S. 355, 25 L. ed. 476; Starr v. Case, 59 Iowa, 491, 13 N. W. 645; Rowell v. Rowell, 122 Wis. 24, 99 N. W. 473; Lamb v. Wilson, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 496, 92 N. W. 167, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 505, 97 N. W. 325, 70 Neb. 729, 98 N. W. 37; Vanduzer v. McMillan, 37 Ga. 299; Royster v. Johnson, 73 N. C. 475; Newell v. Humphrey, 37 Vt. 270; Zell's Appeal, 126 Pa. 333, 17 Atl. 647; Maynard v. Richards, 166 Ill. 466, 57 Am. St. Rep. 145, 46 N. E. 1138; Schenkl v. Dana, 118 Mass. 238; Cameron v. Francisco, 26 Ohio St. 190; Thayer v. Badger, 171 Mass. 279, 50 N. E. 541; Turnbull v. Pomeroy, 140 Mass. 117, 3 N. E. 15; Robinson v. Simmons, 146 Mass. 176, 4 Am. St. Rep. 299, 15 N. E. 558; Condon v. Callahan, 115 Tenn. 291, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 643, 112 Am. St. Rep. 833, 89 S. W. 400, 5 Ann. Cas. 659; Brown v. De Tastet, Jacob, 284, 23 Revised Rep. 59; Sterne v. Goep, 20 Hun, 397; Osment v. McElrath, 68 Cal. 466, 58 Am. Rep. 17, 9 Pac. 731.

A power of attorney dies with the death of the attorney.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat, 174, 5 L. ed. 589.

Any relation of employer and employee existing between Edmonds and Gilbert Moyers at the time of the death of Edmonds terminated with the death of the employer.

Mechem, Agency, § 249; Gage v. Allison, 1 Brev. 495, 2 Am. Dec. 682; Merrick's Estate, 8 Watts & S. 402; Adriance v. Rutherford, 57 Mich. 170, 23 N. W. 718.

Interest is not properly allowable on running or open accounts, or on accounts which are unliquidated, or concerning which there is an honest dispute between the parties, and is not usually allowable on partnership accountings until a balance has been struck.

Gyger's Appeal, 62 Pa. 73, 1 Am. Rep. 382; Clark v. Clark, 46 Conn. 590; Imperial Hotel Co. v. H. B. Claflin Co. 175 Ill. 124, 51 N. E. 610; Pieser v. Minkota Mill. Co. 94 Ill. App. 597; Henderson Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Lowell Mach. Shops, 86 Ky. 668, 7 S. W. 142; Sweeney v. Neely, 53 Mich. 424, 19 N. W. 127; Houston v. Crutcher, 31 Miss. 51; Holden v. Peace, 39 N. C. (4 Ired. Eq.) 223, 45 Am. Dec. 514; Pengra v. Wheeler, 24 Or. 532, 21 L.R.A. 726, 34 Pac. 354; Grubb's Appeal, 66 Pa. 117, 3 Mor. Min. Rep. 416; Stearns v. Mason, 24 Gratt. 484; South Carolina v. Port Royal & A. R. Co. 89 Fed. 565; Haskell v. Vaughan, 5 Sneed, 618; Rogers v. Yarnell, 51 Ark. 198, 10 S. W. 622; Heald v. Hendy, 89 Cal. 632, 27 Pac. 67; Raymond Bros. v. Williams, 40 Iowa, 117; Williams v. Hersey, 17 Kan. 18; Ory v. Winter, 6 Mart. N. S. 606; Flannery v. Anderson, 4 Nev. 437; Edwards v. Dargan 30 S. C. 177, 8 S. E. 858; Stamps v. Tennessee Producers' Marble Co. — Tenn. —, 59 S. W. 769.

In some cases, it is true, interest has been allowed in suits for partnership accounting, or on open accounts, but in every one of those cases there were peculiar circumstances which led the courts to believe that the party held chargeable with interest had been guilty of misconduct.

Freeman v. Freeman, 142 Mass. 98, 7 N. E. 710; Banner v. May, 2 Wash. 221, 26 Pac. 248; Ryan Drug Co. v. Hvamsahl, 92 Wis. 62, 65 N. W. 873.

The bill should have been dismissed for lack of equity in view of the obvious laches of the complainant.

Abraham v. Ordway, 158 U. S. 416, 421, 39 L. ed. 1036, 1039, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; McKnight v. Taylor, 1 How. 161, 11 L. ed. 86; Piatt v. Vattier, 9 Pet. 405, 416, 9 L. ed. 173, 177; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 1, 22 Revised Rep. 99; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 93, 11 Am. Dec. 417; Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. 190, 8 Am. Dec. 478; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481, 5 L. ed. 311; Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489, 6 L. ed. 142; Willison v. Watkins, 3 Pet. 44, 7 L. ed. 596; Miller v. M'Intyre, 6 Pet. 61, 66, 8 L. ed. 320, 322; Bowman v. Wathen, 1 How. 189, 11 L. ed. 97; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. 87, 96, 17 L. ed. 836, 839; Norris v. Haggin, 136 U. S. 386, 34 L. ed. 424, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 942; Harwood v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co. 17 Wall. 78, 21 L. ed. 558; Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201-211, 25 L. ed. 431-434; Wollensak v. Reiher, 115 U. S. 96-102, 29 L. ed. 350-352, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1137; 56 L. ed.

Wagner v. Baird, 7 How. 234-258, 12 L. ed. 681-691; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45-56, 23 L. ed. 203-207; Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 161, 24 L. ed. 423; Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 183-187, 31 L. ed. 396-399, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Willard v. Wood, 1 App. D. C. 44; Sis v. Boarman, 11 App. D. C. 116; Gildersleeve v. New Mexico Min. Co. 161 U. S. 578, 40 L. ed. 814, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Galliher v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 368-372, 36 L. ed. 738-740, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377, 30 L. ed. 718, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Stearns v. Page, 7 How. 819, 12 L. ed. 928; Ware v. Galveston City Co. 146 U. S. 102, 36 L. ed. 904, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Moore v. Greene, 19 How. 69, 15 L. ed. 533; Beaubien v. Beaubien, 23 How. 190, 16 L. ed. 484; New Albany v. Burke, 11 Wall. 107, 20 L. ed. 159; Foster v. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. 146 U. S. 88, 36 L. ed. 899, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 25 L. ed. 807; Hardt v. Heidweyer, 152 U. S. 547, 38 L. ed. 548, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Marsh v. Whitmore, 21 Wall. 178-185, 22 L. ed. 482-485; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 36 L. ed. 719, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

In an ordinary professional partnership, and especially in the special partnership of Moyers and Edmonds, the adjudged insanity of Edmonds operated, under the well-recognized law of agency, to do three things, to-wit:

First. His adjudged insanity abrogated all Edmonds's contracts with claimants, and all powers of attorney held by him.

Second. It operated to remove from the special partnership, therefore, both his contribution or capital represented by his control of claims or business, and also made it impossible for him longer to render personal services in partnership business.

Third. It annulled Edmonds's authority as agent or attorney for the claimants, and hence necessarily annulled the authority of Moyers as subagent, thereby dissolving the partnership relation just as effectually and just as necessarily as though by death of Edmonds, or as by one partner accepting a judicial position, which precluded him from practising law.

Parsons, Partn. §§ 362, 363.

The distinction between professional partnerships and those formed for commercial purposes is not a matter of mere recent recognition.

Farr v. Pearce, 3 Madd. Ch. 74; 1 Parsons, Contr. *198; Weeks, Attorneys at Law, p. 505, §§ 246, 256; Ratcliff v. Baird, 14 Tex. 43; Isler v. Baker, 6 Humph. 85; Story, Agency, 9th ed. § 487; Mechem, Agency, §§ 258, 262; Clark & S. Agency, §§ 188 (a), 188 (d).

The employment was that of Edmonds, and not of Moyers and Edmonds, either jointly or jointly and severally.

Baxter v. Billings, 28 C. C. A. 85, 49 U. S. App. 767, 83 Fed. 790.

Mr. Charles Cowles Tucker argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. Miller Kenyon, filed a brief for appellee:

A bill in equity may be maintained by personal representatives of a deceased partner, against survivors, for all accounting and discovery.

Denver v. Roane, 99 U. S. 355-361, 25 L. ed. 476-479; Dye v. Bowling, 82 Mo. App. 592; Brew v. Cochran, 141 Fed. 462; Bowdish v. Metzger, 71 Kan. 754, 81 Pac. 484.

A surviving partner is entitled to no allowance for winding up the business, unless otherwise stipulated; and this rule applies to partnerships between attorneys.

Denver v. Roane, 99 U. S. 355-361, 25 L. ed. 476-479; Little v. Caldwell, 101 Cal. 560, 40 Am. St. Rep. 89, 36 Pac. 107; Osment v. McElrath, 68 Cal. 471, 58 Am. Rep. 17, 9 Pac. 731; Justice v. Lairy, 19 Ind. App. 279, 65 Am. St. Rep. 405, 49 N. E. 459; Porter v. Long, 124 Mich. 592, 83 N. W. 601.

Where an attorney at law refuses to act as a partner, and repudiates his obligation to aid in the prosecution of one of the firm's cases, he is not entitled to fees subsequently earned in the cause.

Denver v. Roane, 99 U. S. 355-361, 25 L. ed. 476-479; Shaeffer v. Blair, 149 U. S. 258, 37 L. ed. 725, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Blair v. Shaeffer, 33 Fed. 224; Gilmore v. Ham, 40 Am. St. Rep. 570, note; Breaux v. Le Blanc, 69 Am. St. Rep. 422, note; Miller v. Hale, 96 Mo. App. 430, 70 S. W. 258.

Under the circumstances of this particular case, it would be inequitable to allow compensation to the surviving partner.

Thayer v. Badger, 171 Mass. 279, 50 N. E. 541; Robinson v. Simmons, 146 Mass. 167, 4 Am. St. Rep. 299, 15 N. E. 558; Clifton v. Clark, 66 L.R.A. 821, note; Williams v. Pedersen, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 396, note; Condon v. Callahan, 5 Ann. Cas. 664, note.

As to executory contracts only partly fulfilled, the death of one partner does not absolve the other from rendering the services contracted for, and the active functions of the partnership are continued in existence until the full performance by the surviving partner.

Clifton v. Clark, 1 Ann. Cas. 401, note, 83 Miss. 446, 66 L.R.A. 821, 102 Am. St.

Rep. 458, 36 So. 251; Little v. Caldwell, 101 Cal. 553, 40 Am. St. Rep. 89, 36 Pac. 107.

As to liability of a surviving partner for interest on the share of his deceased partner, see the note to Porter v. Long, 4 Ann. Cas. 180.

Laches, of course, means an inexcusable delay in asserting a right, or a neglect to do what in the law one should have done, for an unreasonable, unexplained, or inexcusable length of time, under circumstances permitting diligence.

24 Cyc. 840; 16 Cyc. 252.

There is no room to apply the doctrine of laches to the instant case.

McIntire v. Pryor, 173 U. S. 38, 53-59, 43 L. ed. 606, 611-613, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 352.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In this accounting of the affairs of a special partnership between attorneys at law, the survivor claims compensation for services rendered after dissolution of the firm.

Claims of this sort are not favored. They lead to efforts to prove a disparity between the partners, when the law implies equality. They necessitate a balancing of the value of the work of each in securing the business and earning the profits, as well as a comparison of the time they may spend on the matters under consideration. Each partner is bound to devote himself to the firm's business, and there is no implied obligation that, for performing this duty, he should be paid more than his proportionate share of the gains. Neglect by one to do his part may be of such character as to justify a dissolution. But as long as the firm continues, there is usually no deduction because one partner has not been as active as the other. The same is true where death prevents either of the partners *from[270 performing his contract. The law did not permit him to appoint a substitute, nor can his personal representative, no matter how well qualified, assist in winding up the affairs of the firm. Whether that be considered a right or duty, it is in either event cast on the survivor. In performing it he only carries out an obligation implied in the partnership relation, and is therefore entitled to no compensation for thus doing what he was bound to do, and what would have been imposed on the other had the order of their death been different. To allow the survivor compensation wherever he continues the business would be to offer an inducement to delay the settlement, which ought to be made as soon as possible.

To this general rule there are exceptions, where, under peculiar circumstances, the principles of equity entitle the survivor to compensation. Thayer v. Badger, 171 Mass. 279, 50 N. E. 541. Thus, where, by authority of law, or under a power in the will, the personal representative consents that the business may be continued by the survivor, the estate must pay for such additional services. Or where, without such consent, and at his own risk, the survivor continues the business and makes a profit, the estate is bound to allow reasonable compensation if it elects to share in the gains thus made.

So, where a member of a firm, by his voluntary act, dissolved the partnership, the partner who continued the business was allowed compensation for performing services in which he had the right to have expected the continued assistance of the other. Extra compensation has also been allowed in a few cases where, in order to realize on the assets, it was absolutely necessary for the survivor to continue the business beyond the reasonable time allowed for winding up its affairs. See Justice v. Lairy, 19 Ind. App. 272, 65 Am. St. Rep. 405, 49 N. E. 459; Zell's Appeal, 126 Pa. 329, 17 Atl. 647; Schenkl v. Dana, 118 Mass. 236; Gray v. Hamil, 82 Ga. 375, 6 L.R.A. 72, 10 S. E. 205; Beatty v. Wray, 19 Pa. 516, 57 Am. Dec. 677; Cameron v. 271] Francisco, 26 Ohio St. 190; Robinson v. Simmon*, 146 Mass. 167, 4 Am. St. Rep. 299, 15 N. E. 558; Holmes v. Higgins, 1 Barn. & C. 74, 2 Dowl. & R. 196, 1 L. J. K. B. 47. Then, too, there is a suggestion in Denver v. Roane, 99 U. S. 359, 25 L. ed. 478, that there may be "a different rule in cases of winding up partnerships between lawyers and other professional men, where the profits of the firm are the result solely of professional skill and labor."

This point is not involved, and on it no ruling is made, because we are not dealing with questions between the administrator of the deceased and the surviving member of an ordinary law partnership, where the latter conducts to a conclusion the business of the firm, under circumstances where there may be a right from time to time to call on the client for compensation for the value of services rendered, and even though the case is finally lost. Here the agreement related solely to litigation in which compensation was for success, and not for the value of services rendered. Such payment was to be in solido, and the partners agreed that the fees should be divided in solido.

Moyers insists, however, that the peculiar facts of this case bring him within the other exceptions pointed out above; that when Edmonds was adjudged a lunatic, in 1891, the firm was dissolved; that with the knowledge of Cummings, who was acting as Edmonds's committee, Moyers continued to prosecute the claims, paid out large sums for necessary expenses, and, in spite of probable failure, rendered valuable services, which finally earned the fees now to be divided. He claims that in equity and good conscience he should be paid reasonable compensation for this work, in which Edmonds rendered no assistance.

Moyers put in his services against the claims turned over to the firm by Edmonds, who stipulated that Moyers should represent him, and to that end "be associated in the prosecution of the claims as joint attorney of record." Edmonds rendered little or no assistance, and apparently was not expected to do so, for Moyers himself testified that "the contract was 'an em-[272 ployment of me to attend to certain business for him in the court of claims in regard to certain cases. It might be styled a limited partnership. It was not a general partnership.'" In prosecuting the claims and collecting the money Moyers, therefore, only did what he contracted to do, and is not entitled to compensation beyond that set out in the agreement. That these services extended over a long period does not increase his share nor lessen Edmonds's interest in the profits. Under the contract, Moyers agreed to prosecute the claims, and could neither abandon them without just cause nor advise clients to put them in the hands of others. If he did so, he is chargeable with the fees which should have been earned by him under the articles of partnership. Neither can Edmonds's interest be diminished on the ground that the contract of employment by the client was revoked by his insanity or death. They made no such objection, and apparently acquiesced in Edmonds's arrangement by which they were put in the hands of Moyers. The survivor cannot retain the business thus coming to him by virtue of a contract with Edmonds without accounting for his share of the fees.

Moyers was charged with interest on the balance due from September 16, 1899, when the suit was filed, being the date on which the master found he should have accounted with the complainant. Moyers contends that what, if anything, was due, was uncertain; that it required numerous references in order to properly side the account; that it was not liquidated until the final decree in November, 1908, when, for the first time, the true balance was ascertained; and hence that interest should only run from that date. Interest is allowed by way of damages for failure to pay money when it is due, and frequently is not allowed except from the time the amount to be paid has been definitely ascertained. But there are many cases in which interest is charged from a prior date. Here the defendant *at first promised to make a statement, then contended, without substantial support, that the partnership was dissolved because Edmonds had transferred his interest in the fees. He resisted the accounting, failed to produce books, vouchers, and statements proper to be kept by a surviving partner. As the court of appeals said, the delay and difficulty in reaching a conclusion were largely due to his failure to keep proper books. Under the circumstances the master properly allowed interest from the date the bill was filed. Spalding v. Mason, 161 U. S. 395, 40 L. ed. 745, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 9 C. C. A. 468, 21 U. S. App. 50, 61 Fed. 237, 247. Moyers did not except to this method of calculating interest; on the contrary, he obtained a ruling that, on the same basis, he should be allowed interest from 1892 on advances then made by him to Edmonds. He cannot now complain that the account was stated in accordance with a rule in which he acquiesced, and the benefit of which he invoked.

In the last assignment, it is alleged that the court erred in not dismissing the bill because of complainant's laches in filing it. It is contended that after Cummings was appointed committee of Edmonds, in 1891, he knew of the contract of special partnership and that Moyers was prosecuting these claims, and not only made no demand for a settlement, but permitted Moyers to do all the work, incur all of the expenses, and run all of the risks, without notifying him that Edmonds's representative would claim one half of the profits. It is urged that such conduct was inequitable, and that to wait until eight years before filing proceedings constituted laches which requires a dismissal of the bill. We find nothing in the facts or in the relation of the parties that made it incumbent on Cummings to warn Moyers of Edmonds's claim, even if Cummings had the full knowledge of all the facts which is necessary to raise any such obligation. Edmonds's right was rooted in the contract, and has only been enforced in pursuance *of its terms. Cummings had no title to Edmonds's property, but was a mere curator, with limited powers. He could not have sold Edmonds's interest in these claims to Moyers or anyone else without an order of court. For a much stronger reason he could not accomplish the same result and destroy Edmonds's right therein by a mere nonaction. The fees were not collected until the spring of 1899, and within four months thereafter the bill for an accounting was filed.

The decree is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN MORGAN and Alfred Y. Morgan.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 274-282.)

Food and drugs — prosecution — notice and hearing.

The notice and preliminary hearing by the Department of Agriculture which must be given under the pure food and drug act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1187), to the person from whom the sample was obtained, when, upon examination by the board of chemistry, an article is found to be adulterated or misbranded, is not a condition precedent to the prosecution of a manufacturer, instituted by the Department of Agriculture or its agent, for shipping misbranded goods in interstate commerce.

[No. 463.]

Argued and submitted October 19, 1911.
Decided December 11, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment in a prosecution for shipping misbranded goods in interstate commerce. Reversed.

See same case below, 181 Fed. 587.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

*The defendants maintained an establishment in New York where, after filtering Croton water drawn from the city pipes, adding mineral salts, and charging it with carbonic acid, the water was bottled and sold as "Imperial Spring Water." In October, 1908, a food and drug inspector applied to a druggist in Newark, New Jersey, for several bottles of this water. The druggist, not having them in stock, ordered them from the defendants, who shipped them from New York to the druggist in Newark. He delivered them to the inspector, who paid therefor.

The judge, in his opinion, treats the prosecution as having been instituted by the inspector, though this does not affirmatively appear in the record, and the defendants were not indicted until April, 1910, when they were found guilty of shipping misbranded goods in interstate commerce.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes a violation of pure food regulations—see note to Brina v. United States, 105 C. C. A. 559.

They moved in arrest of judgment on the ground that it was not alleged that they had been given notice and a preliminary hearing by the Department of Agriculture, contending this was a condition precedent to the return of a valid indictment. The judge held that such hearing must be granted in all cases where the prosecution was instituted by the Department of Agriculture or its agent (181 Fed. 587), and from a later order sustaining the motion in arrest, the government brought the case here under criminal appeals act.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jesse C. Adkins and Loring C. Christie, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

It is uniformly held, in construing statutes imposing upon certain public officers the duty of their enforcement, that such duty is not exclusive, but proceedings for violations of the statute may be begun in the usual way.

Com. v. Carroll, 145 Mass. 403, 14 N. E. 618; Com. v. Murphy, 147 Mass. 577, 18 N. E. 418; Com. v. Mullen, 176 Mass. 132, 57 N. E. 331; Isenhour v. State, 157 Ind. 517, 87 Am. St. Rep. 223, 62 N. E. 40; Com. v. Spencer, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 301; Com. v. Arow, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 1; People v. Beaman, 102 App. Div. 155, 92 N. Y. Supp. 295; Com. v. Bowers, 140 Mass. 483, 5 N. E. 469; Atty. Gen. v. Great Northern R. Co. 1 Drew. & S. 154, 29 L. J. Ch. N. S. 794, 6 Jur. N. S. 1006, 8 Week. Rep. 556.

Mr. Alexander Thain submitted the cause for defendants in error:

The courts have already had occasion to comment upon the fact that the usefulness of this act is threatened by the unreasonable zeal sometimes shown in its enforcement.

Re Wilson, 168 Fed. 566; French Silver Dragée Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 316, 179 Fed. 824.

When an act, not before subject to punishment, is declared penal, and a mode is pointed out in which it is to be prosecuted, that mode must be strictly pursued.

Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 9th ed. § 230.

The rules governing statutory construction sustain the construction put upon this statute by the court below.

Beal, Cardinal Rules of Legal Interpretation, 2d ed. 443; Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 565, 25 L. ed. 892, 894; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 288, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 373, 378, 13 L. ed. 179, 181; 1 Wharton, Precedents, p. 28; Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 9th ed. § 166.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The Federal courts have not agreed as to the effect of the provision for notice and hearing, found in § 4 of the pure food and drug act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1187). United States v. Nine Barrels of Olives, 179 Fed. 984; United States v. Twenty Cases of Grape Juice, 189 Fed. 331. Whether it confers a right upon the defendant, or results in imposing a duty upon the district attorney, can be determined by a brief examination of a few of the provisions of the act.

Under the pure food law not only a manufacturer, but any dealer, shipping adulterated or misbranded goods in interstate commerce, is guilty of a misdemeanor. In aid of enforcement of the statute, it is made the duty of the Department of Agriculture to collect specimens of such articles so shipped, and the Bureau of Chemistry is required to analyze them. But, even if the specimen, on analysis, is found to be adulterated, there is no requirement that the case should be turned over at once to the district attorney, for the reason that the "party from whom the sample was obtained" might be a dealer holding a guaranty from his vender that the articles were not adulterated. In such case the dealer is not liable to prosecution, but the guarantor (§ 9) is made "amenable to the prosecutions, fines, and penalties."

*The act, therefore, declares (§ 4)[280] that when, on such examination by the Board of Chemistry, the article is found to be adulterated, "notice shall be given to the party from whom the sample was obtained. Any party so notified shall be given an opportunity to be heard." If it then appears that he has violated the statute, the Secretary of Agriculture is required to certify that fact, together with a copy of the analysis, to the proper district attorney, who (§ 5), without delay, must "institute appropriate proceedings," by indictment, or libel for condemnation, or both, as the facts may warrant.

But the act also contemplates (§ 5) that complaints may be made to the district attorney by state health officials. In that class of cases, no doubt because the state agents investigate without giving a hearing, the district attorney is not obliged to prosecute unless such state officers "shall present satisfactory evidence of such violation." But the very fact that he must do so in that event recognizes that he may begin proceedings against a defendant who has not been given a notice and an opportunity to be heard.

In providing for notice in one case, and permitting prosecutions without it in another, the statute clearly shows that there was no intent to make notice jurisdictional. This view is strengthened by the fact that it contains no reference to giving notice to anyone except "to the party from whom the sample was obtained." And if, on the hearing given him, it appears that he is a dealer holding a guaranty, the act, in providing for proceedings against such guarantor, contains no suggestion that a new notice shall be given him before an indictment can be submitted to the grand jury.

In cases like the present, or where foreign goods are labeled as of domestic manufacture and vice versa, no scientific examination may be necessary. But usually a chemical analysis will be required to determine whether an article is adulterated. The 281]Bureau of Chemistry is *equipped to do that work, so that in practice most prosecutions will be based on reports made by the Department of Agriculture after notice. But the hearing is not judicial. There is no provision for compelling the presence of the party from whom the sample was received; if he voluntarily attends, he is not in jeopardy; an adverse finding is not binding against him; and a decision in his favor is not an acquittal which prevents a subsequent hearing before the Department, or a trial in court.

The provision as to the hearing is administrative, creating a condition where the district attorney is compelled to prosecute without delay. When he receives the Secretary's report, he is not to make another and independent examination, but is bound to accept the finding of the Department that the goods are adulterated or misbranded, and that the party from whom they had been obtained held no guaranty. But the fact that the statute compels him to act in one case does not deprive him of the power voluntarily to proceed in that and every other case under his general powers. If, for any reason, the executive department failed to report violations of this law, its neglect would leave untouched the duty of the district attorney to prosecute "all delinquents for crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States." Rev. Stat. §§ 771, 1022, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 601, 720. So, an improper finding by the Department would no more stay the grand jury than an order of discharge by a committing magistrate after an ordinary preliminary trial. For the statute contains no expression indicating an intention to withdraw offenses under this act from the general powers of the grand jury, who are diligently to inquire and true presentment make of all matters called to their attention by the court, or that may come to their knowledge during the then present service.

Repeals by implication are not favored, and there is certainly no presumption that a law passed in the interest *of the public health was to hamper district attorneys, curtail the powers of grand juries, or make them, with evidence in hand, halt in their investigation and await the action of the Department. To graft such an exception upon the criminal law would require a clear and unambiguous expression of the legislative will.

It was argued that the privilege of a preliminary hearing was granted so as to prevent malicious prosecutions. But, had such been its intention, the statute would have required that a hearing should be given to all persons charged with a violation of the act, and not merely to those from whom the sample was received. A further answer is, that as to this and every other offense, the 4th Amendment furnishes the citizen the nearest practicable safeguard against malicious accusations. He cannot be tried on an information unless it is supported by the oath of someone having knowledge of facts showing the existence of probable cause. Nor can an indictment be found until after an examination of witnesses, under oath, by grand jurors,—the chosen instruments of the law to protect the citizen against unfounded prosecutions, whether they be instituted by the government or prompted by private malice. There is nothing in the nature of the offense under the pure food law, or in the language of the statute, which indicates that Congress intended to grant violators of this act a conditional immunity from prosecution, or to confer upon them a privilege not given every other person charged with a crime. The judgment is reversed.

*UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AT[283
THE RELATION AND TO THE USE OF ROBERT D. KINNEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUAR-ANTY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 283, 284.)

Appeal — reversible error — denying motion for judgment on pleadings.

1. The denial of a motion for judgment because of the insufficiency of an affidavit of defense, without passing upon the merits of the motion, cannot possibly constitute reversible error, where the defendant afterwards filed formal pleas to the statement of plaintiff's claim, and joined issue thereon, the effect of the ruling being simply to postpone consideration of the subject until the trial.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4997-5019, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — bill of exceptions — what constitutes.

2. A paper in the record on writ of error, styled "Exceptions to the Charge to Jury," initialed "J. B. McP., Trial Judge," and signed by the plaintiff, is not a bill of exceptions.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3484-3499, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — bill of exceptions — matters as to evidence.

3. An appellate court has no means of determining whether reversible error arose from the action of the trial court on any of the subjects referred to in the bill of exceptions, where all such matters depend for their solution upon an examination of the evidence, which is not in the record.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3528-3546, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 664.]

Submitted December 4, 1911. Decided December 18, 1911.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, entered upon a directed verdict in favor of defendant in a suit to recover upon the bond of a clerk of a Federal circuit court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 455, 186 Fed. 477.

Mr. Robert D. Kinney in propria persona submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Counsel for the defendant in error moves that the writ of error be dismissed because none of the evidence given at the trial, nor the charge of the court, has been made a part of the record. The learned counsel mistakes his remedy for the case he alleges. He should suggest a specific diminution of the record in matter necessary to the hearing in this court, and ask for certiorari, when the question as to the necessity of additional matter will be determined by the appellate court.

Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 9 C. C. A. 468, 21 U. S. App. 50, 61 Fed. 237; Burnham v. North Chicago Street R. Co. 30 C. C. A. 594, 59 U. S. App. 274, 87 Fed. 170.

The certificate of the clerk of the trial court to the transcript of record is in proper form, and made according to the plaintiff's præcipe authorizing it. A writ of error will not be dismissed for omission in 56 L. ed.

the transcript, where the clerk's certificate states that it is according to præcipe.

Burnham v. North Chicago Street R. Co. supra; United States v. Davenport, 142 U. S. 704, 35 L. ed. 1174, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992; Gregory v. Pike, 12 C. C. A. 202, 21 U. S. App. 474, 64 Fed. 415; United States v. Gomez, 1 Wall. 690, 17 L. ed. 677; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Dinsmore, 108 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 640, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

It is plaintiff's right to have its review of the judgment of the circuit court of appeals on the process in error, which has been duly sued out and prosecuted in the case.

United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 159 U. S. 548, 40 L. ed. 255, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69; Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676, 46 L. ed. 754, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543.

Messrs. Bayard Henry and Thomas Stokes submitted the cause for defendant in error:

This court will be unable to consider the case upon its merits because none of the evidence given at the trial, nor the trial, nor the charge of the court, has been made a part of the record.

Suydam v. Williamson, 20 How. 427, 433, 15 L. ed. 978, 980; Hanna v. Maas, 122 U. S. 24, 30 L. ed. 1117, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Bank of New Orleans v. Caldwell, 154 U. S. 592, 21 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1171; Michigan Ins. Bank v. Eldred, 143 U. S. 293, 298, 36 L. ed. 162, 163, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450; Lee Won Jeong v. United States, 76 C. C. A. 190, 145 Fed. 512; Rodgers v. United States, 81 C. C. A. 568, 152 Fed. 426; Reader v. Haggin, 88 C. C. A. 91, 160 Fed. 909.

The affidavit of defense is not a pleading, and its purpose is merely to show a defense sufficient to prevent a summary judgment; when this purpose has been accomplished, it has performed its whole duty. It does not in any way limit the defense to be made at the trial, and in the present case a complete defense may have been proved at the trial, so far as the court can tell, in the absence of the evidence, although not even suggested in the affidavit of defense.

Flegal v. Hoover, 156 Pa. 281, 27 Atl. 162.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

The trial court instructed a verdict for the defendant, *and the court below[284 affirmed its action. The suit was to recover upon the bond of a clerk of a circuit court. 108 C. C. A. 455, 186 Fed. 477. We think a motion to affirm must prevail.

All the errors relied upon complain of a refusal to grant a motion of the plaintiff for judgment because of the insufficiency of "an affidavit of defense" and of various rulings made at the trial. Although the motion for judgment was denied, its merits were not passed upon, since the effect of the ruling was simply to postpone consideration of the subject until the trial, and therefore the exception, which was formally allowed, was simply "to the refusal by the court to decide the issue of law raised by plaintiff's motion for judgment," etc. But afterwards the defendant filed formal pleas to the statement of plaintiff's claim and joined issue thereon. As the ruling left it open to raise the question presented by the motion, it follows that the mere order of postponement did not prejudice and cannot possibly constitute reversible error. As to the contentions which relate to occurrences at the trial, they cannot be considered, as the record contains no bill of exceptions. The paper in the record styled "Exceptions to the Charge to Jury," initialed "J. B. McP., Trial Judge," and signed by the plaintiff, is not a bill of exceptions (Origet v. United States, 125 U. S. 243, 31 L. ed. 745, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846), but if it were to be treated as a bill of exceptions, as all the matters therein referred to depend for their solution upon an examination of the evidence, which is not in the record, it follows that we have no means of determining whether reversible error arose from an action of the court on any of the subjects to which the paper refers. This being the case, it becomes our duty to affirm.

Affirmed.

285]*LEWERS & COOKE, Limited, Appt.,
v.

MARY H. ATCHERLY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 285-295.)

Federal courts — following territorial decisions — conclusiveness of judgment.

1. The holding of the Hawaiian supreme court that a person seeking the registration and confirmation in the court of land registration of a title which depends upon an unexecuted decree is, as against the holder of the outstanding legal title, in the same position as a party asking the aid of a court of chancery in executing a former decree, and takes the risk of opening up such decree for re-examination, will be followed by the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — following territorial decisions — conclusiveness of judgment of Hawaiian Land Commission.

2. The Federal Supreme Court will follow a decision of the Hawaiian supreme court, that a judgment of the land commission of 1845, adjudging a parcel of land to a specified person in fee simple, cannot be attacked except by a direct appeal to the supreme court provided by law.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — probate matters.

3. A decree establishing a will does not determine that any particular property belongs to the decedent's estate.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 666-684, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Lis pendens — purchaser pending suit.

4. A purchaser of real property pendente lite stands in no better position than its vendor, the complainant in such suit.

[For other cases, see Lis Pendens, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — law of case — stare decisis.

5. A decree of the Hawaiian supreme court overruling a demurrer to the bill in a suit over the title to real property does not preclude that court from adopting a contrary principle when the controversy again comes before it.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. o, 2; Courts, VII. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 69.]

Argued December 4, 1911. Decided December 18, 1911.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Court of Land Registration, refusing the registration and confirmation of a title to land. Affirmed.

See same case below, 19 Haw. 334.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. David L. Worthington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William R. Castle, W. A. Greenwell, and Alfred L. Castle, filed a brief for appellant:

It was error to overrule the discretion of the court of land registration in declining to reopen the decree of 1858.

Darling v. Westmoreland, 52 N. H. 401,

Street Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

On conclusiveness of probate as res judicata—see note to Sly v. Hunt, 21 L.R.A. 680.

As to conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals—see note to Hastings v. Foxworthy, 34 L.R.A. 321.

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel

13 Am. Rep. 55; 14 Cyc. 384; Central Trust Co. v. Grant Locomotive Works, 135 U. S. 207, 34 L. ed. 97, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Davis v. Braden, 10 Pet. 286, 9 L. ed. 427; Early v. Rogers, 16 How. 599, 14 L. ed. 1074; Slicer v. Bank of Pittsburg, 16 How. 571, 14 L. ed. 1063; McAllister v. Kuhn, 96 U. S. 87, 24 L. ed. 615; United States v. Estudillo, 1 Wall. 710, 17 L. ed. 702; Rio Grande Irrig. & Colonization Co. v. Gildersleeve, 174 U. S. 603, 43 L. ed. 1103, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

The decree of Judge Robertson, admitting the will of Kaniū to probate, is a binding adjudication that Kalakaua was, after the death of Kaniū, beneficially entitled to the premises in question.

Keliipalapela v. Pamano, 1 How. 281.

The decree of November 2, 1858, is a conclusive adjudication between the parties, and is complete and final.

Kapiolani v. Atcherly, 14 Haw. 651; Kuala v. Kuapahi, 15 Haw. 300; McChesney v. Kona Sugar Co. 15 Haw. 710; United States use of Hine v. Morse, 218 U. S. 493, 505, 54 L. ed. 1123, 1127, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37, 21 Ann. Cas. 782; Mellen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 33 L. ed. 178, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781.

If the decision of 1903 is not the law of the case, then the question should be regarded as foreclosed on the ground of stare decisis.

Vail v. Arizona, 207 U. S. 201, 52 L. ed. 169, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107.

A single decision of the Hawaiian supreme court has been held to establish a rule of property.

Kealoha v. Castle, 210 U. S. 149, 52 L. ed. 998, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684.

It is not only a rule of property, but is a rule of this particular property, which the purchaser had a right to rely on, and which is binding on every court until reversed.

Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 343, 11 L. ed. 292; The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. 451, 458, 13 L. ed. 1062, 1065; Henderson v. Griffin, 5 Pet. 151, 8 L. ed. 79; Minnesota Min. Co. v. National Min. Co. 3 Wall. 332, 18 L. ed. 42; Bibb v. Bibb, 79 Ala. 437; Hihn v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 398; Schori v. Stephens, 62 Ind. 441; Frank v. Evansville & I. R. Co. 111 Ind. 132, 12 N. E. 105; Dunklin County v. Chouteau, 120 Mo. 577, 25 S. W. 553; White v. Kyle, 1 Serg. & R. 15; Bright v. Easterly, 199 Pa. 88, 48 Atl. 810; Henderson v. Rost, 11 La. Ann. 541; Wilkins v. Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. 110 Tenn. 442, 75 S. W. 1026; Union R. Co. v. Chickasaw Cooperage Co. 116 Tenn. 598, 95 S. W. 171; O'Rourke v. Clopper, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 377, 54 S. W. 930.

Every person is presumed to know the law, and an innocent person who acts in accordance with the law as then declared is entitled to its protection.
56 L. ed..

State v. Comptoir National D'Escompte, 51 La. Ann. 1272, 26 So. 91.

Whatever doubt the court of Hawaii had in this case about the power of the court in 1858, that decision declared the power of the court, and construed the statutes which gave the supreme court jurisdiction, and the statute which gave the land court jurisdiction. That construction, and the construction by the court in 1903, becomes a part of the law, and whatever doubt the court now may have, so far as the rights acquired thereunder, they cannot be reversed.

1 Kent, Com. 476; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 319; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The rule is the same in regard to a conveyance as to any other contract. Its validity and effect are determined by the laws then in force.

Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Stephenson v. Boody, 139 Ind. 66, 38 N. E. 331; Haskett v. Maxey, 134 Ind. 182, 19 L.R.A. 379, 33 N. E. 358; Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 508, 4 So. 476; Fisher v. Lott, 33 Ky. L. Rep. 609, 110 S. W. 822; Myers v. Boyd, 144 Ind. 496, 43 N. E. 567.

Nor is it material in this case that the change is by judicial decision, and not by statute.

Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

The rule applies where the question involved is the jurisdiction of a court with reference to land.

Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 508, 4 So. 476; Herndon v. Moore, 18 S. C. 355; Hall v. Wells, 54 Miss. 301.

A decision, until it is reversed, makes the law of a jurisdiction as much as a statute unrepealed.

Kuhn v. Fairmont Coal Co. 215 U. S. 372, 54 L. ed. 239, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

Mr. Lyle A. Dickey argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. M. Watson, filed a brief for appellee:

The supreme court was not bound to follow its own prior decision in Kapiolani v. Atcherly, 14 Haw. 651, as stare decisis.

Hertz v. Woodman, 218 U. S. 205, 212, 54 L. ed. 1001, 1005, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621;

King v. West Virginia, 216 U. S. 92, 100, 54 L. ed. 396, 401, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225.

A ruling on a demurrer is not such a final adjudication that the court may not reconsider its action and enter a contrary order, nor decide the same matter differently when subsequently presented again in the same case.

31 Cyc. 350; Hamilton v. Marks, 63 Mo. 172; Jungk v. Reed, 12 Utah, 202, 42 Pac. 294; Reeves v. Petty, 44 Tex. 254; Meyers v. Dittmar, 47 Tex. 373; Norton v. Knapp, 64 Iowa, 112, 19 N. W. 867; Hastings v. Foxworthy, 45 Neb. 697, 34 L.R.A. 321, 63 N. W. 955; Pennsylvania Co. v. Platt, 47 Ohio St. 379, 25 N. E. 1028; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 339, 341, 40 L. ed. 991, 992, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

Appellant, as a purchaser, bought pendente lite, with notice of the pending litigation and the claims of Mary H. Atch-erley, and so has no right to rely on any rule of law, there being no final decree.

Mellen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 370, 33 L. ed. 178, 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Gay v. Parpart, 106 U. S. 679, 696, 27 L. ed. 256, 262, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Wm. W. Bierce v. Waterhouse, 219 U. S. 320, 337, 55 L. ed. 237, 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

As appellant is in the position of one suing in equity to enforce the decree of 1858 against appellee, the court had a right to refuse to enforce that decree if found erroneous, and not worthy of enforcement.

O'Connell v. M'Namara, 3 Drury & War. 411, 2 Connor & L. 266, note; Lawrence Mfg. Co. v. Janesville Cotton Mills, 138 U. S. 552, 561, 34 L. ed. 1005, 1008, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 184 U. S. 450, 483, 46 L. ed. 636, 652, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Gay v. Parpart, 106 U. S. 679, 699, 27 L. ed. 256, 263, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; West v. Skip, 1 Ves. Sr. 240, 19 Eng. Rul. Cas. 618; Lancaster v. Snow, 184 Ill. 537, 56 N. E. 813; Wadhams v. Gay, 73 Ill. 430; German-American Title & T. Co. v. Shallcross, 147 Pa. 490, 30 Am. St. Rep. 751, 23 Atl. 770; Wheeler v. Eldred, 121 Cal. 29, 66 Am. St. Rep. 20, 53 Pac. 431; Hamilton v. Houghton, 2 Bligh, 193, 21 Revised Rep. 65; Johnson v. Northey, Prec. in Ch. 134; Lawrence v. Berney, 2 Rep. in Ch. 127.

Practice in the courts of a territory is based upon local statutes and procedure; and the Supreme Court of the United States is not disposed to review the decision of the territorial supreme court in such cases.

Santa Fe County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 307, 54 L. ed. 202, 208, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Sweeney v. Lomme, 22 Wall. 208, 213, 22 L. ed. 727, 728; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 479, 51 L. ed. 1143, 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Maytin v. Vela, 216 U. S. 598, 602, 54 L. ed. 632, 634, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Armijo v. Armijo, 181 U. S. 558, 561, 45 L. ed. 1000, 1002, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 363, 53 L. ed. 1030, 1033, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

The subject-matter is a local one, in which this court should give the greatest weight to the local decisions, and uphold the decision of the local court, if possible. The decision below should be regarded as if it were that of a state rather than a territory.

Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 321, 33 L. ed. 918, 919, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 60, 55 L. ed. 82, 94, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 584, 31 L. ed. 795, 799; 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Kuhn v. Fairmont Coal Co. 215 U. S. 349, 359, 54 L. ed. 228, 233, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Boston Chamber of Commerce v. Boston, 217 U. S. 189, 194, 54 L. ed. 725, 726, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459; Maiorano v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 213 U. S. 268, 53 L. ed. 792, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Kealoha v. Castle, 210 U. S. 149, 153, 52 L. ed. 998, 1001, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684.

The awards of the board of commissioners to quiet land titles gave fee-simple titles for the first time; did away with feudal tenure, and settled forever all claims to lands, arising prior to December 10, 1845.

Kekiekie v. Dennis, 1 Haw. 42; Kukilahu v. Gill, 1 Haw. 54; Bishop v. Namakalaa, 2 Haw. 240; Keelikolani v. Robinson, 2 Haw. 514, 539; Kanaina v. Long, 3 Haw. 332; Kahoomana v. Moehonua, 3 Haw. 635; Kalakaua v. Keaweamahi, 4 Haw. 579; Kaai v. Mahuka, 5 Haw. 354; Kenoa v. Meek, 6 Haw. 67; Kekauluohi's Estate, 6 Haw. 178; Thurston v. Bishop, 7 Haw. 428.

Probate of a will does not determine the legal effect of the will on any property, or that the testator owns any property.

Black, Judgm. § 635.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree refusing to the appellant the registration and confirmation of its title to a parcel of land, described as lot 1 of land commission award 129, royal patent 1602. 18 Haw. 625. 19 Haw. 47. The appellant claims through mesne conveyances from David Kalakaua. Kalakaua was adopted by one Kaniu as her child. She had certain rights, not fully defined, in the land, and left all her property to Kalakaua by an oral will in 1844. Her husband, Kinimaka, seems to have reported this to the King, as required in those days, and there is evidence that the King disapproved it on account of Kalakaua's youth. The fact is not found or admitted, however, and the judge who established the will denied the power of the King. Later the King gave the land to Kinimaka, and in 1849 the land commission 293]adjudged it *to him in fee simple. In 1856, on or shortly before his coming of age, Kalakaua filed a bill in equity in the court of land registration to establish a trust against Kinimaka, but this suit was not carried to final decree. In 1858 he proved the will of Kaniū, 2 Haw. 82, and thereafter in the same year brought another bill against the widow and guardian of the minor children of Kinimaka, who had died, which ended in a decree that the guardian convey the premises to Kalakaua. This was in 1858. There was no conveyance in accordance with the decree, but Kalakaua occupied the land before and after he became King, conveyed it to his wife, Kapiolani, in 1868, and after his death she occupied it until her death in 1898.

The respondent claims by virtue of a remainder limited in the will of Kinimaka. In 1901 she brought an action of ejectment, whereupon the Kapiolani Estate, Limited, brought a suit in equity to restrain her, on the ground of the foregoing facts. There was a demurrer, which was overruled (14 Haw. 651), and in that stage of the case the appellant bought from the Kapiolani Estate. The cause is still pending, the parties having agreed to try their rights in the present suit.

When the demurrer to the bill of the Kapiolani Estate was overruled the subject mainly discussed was whether the decree of 1858 against the guardian of Kinimaka's children bound the children, they not having been made parties to the bill, as it was admitted that they should have been. But the decision now appealed from, while hinting at a possible difference upon that point, in view of "the many indications that the decree of 1858 was substantially a consent decree," placed itself upon a different ground. It held that the appellant, "in seeking to register a title depending upon the unexecuted decree in Kalakaua v. Pai and Armstrong, is, as against the holder of the outstanding legal title, in the same position as a party asking 294]the aid of a court of chancery *in executing a former decree, and it is well established that he must take the risk of opening up such decree for re-examination. Lawrence Mfg. Co. v. Janesville Cotton Mills, 138 U. S. 552, 34 L. ed. 1005, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402." Acting on this rule, as to the application of which in practice we see 56 L. ed.

no sufficient reason for not following the local court, the supreme court came to the conclusion that the adjudication of the land commission in 1849 bound all interests, and that the decree of 1858 was wrong.

On this point also there is every reason for attributing great weight to the decision of the court on the spot. It concerns the powers of another earlier local tribunal, and involves obscure local history concerning a time when the forms of our law were just beginning to superimpose themselves upon the customs of the islanders. Such customs are likely to be distorted when translated into English legal speech. Thus Kaniū is spoken of as the owner of the land; yet a few years before the King would have done with it as he liked, and that the tradition and fact had not wholly disappeared after his grant of the Constitution of 1839 is indicated by his alleged conduct touching the will. The precariousness of titles is emphasized by the laws of 1842. So it is said that Kinimaka was the natural guardian of Kalakaua; we presume on the evidence that Kaniū assented to a suggestion that she had better leave her property in Kinimaka's hands till Kalakaua came of age. But it would be going rather far to apply the refined rules of the English chancery concerning fiduciary duties to the relations between two Sandwich islanders in 1846, on the strength of such a fact. The real foundation of settled titles seems to have been the establishment of the land commission in 1845. Thurston v. Bishop, 7 Haw. 421, 428. When the supreme court of Hawaii repeats what it has been saying for many years, that the decisions of that board could not be attacked except by a direct appeal to the supreme court provided by law, no imperfect analogy, *such as that of patents issued by [295 our Land Department, is sufficient to overthrow the tradition, fortified as it is by logic and good sense.

Of course, the later decree establishing the will does not affect the case. That determined only that Kaniū left all her property to Kalakaua, but not that any particular property belonged to the inheritance. The decree overruling the demurrer of the defendant to the bill of the Kapiolani Estate also is relied upon. But as that case has not passed to a final decree, and the appellant bought the land in controversy pendente lite, it can stand no better than its vendor, the party to the suit. Mellen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 370, 33 L. ed. 178, 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781. If that case, instead of this, had been prosecuted to final decree, there was nothing in its former action to hinder the supreme court from adopting the principle now laid down, even though it thereby should overrule an interlocutory decision previously reached. King v. West Virginia, 216 U. S. 92, 100, 101, 54 L. ed. 396, 401, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225. Other details were mentioned in argument, but nothing more seems to us to need remark.

Decree affirmed.

THEODORE ALBERT MAYER, Appt.,
v.

AMERICAN SECURITY & TRUST COMPANY, Executor and Trustee under the Last Will and Testament of Theodore J. Mayer, Deceased, Washington Loan & Trust Company, Trustee, and George Washington University.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 295-300.)

Wills — residuary clause — estate upon condition.

An equitable estate which can be defeated only by performance of the conditions remains in the grantor, and passes under the residuary clause in his will, where the grantee executes a declaration of trust by which it is to convey the premises to a specified educational institution "when and at such times as" such institution shall perform certain conditions, and, in case of nonperformance within a reasonable time, is to reconvey the premises to the grantor, his heirs and assigns.

[For other cases, see Wills, III. e; III. g, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 77.]

Argued December 5, 1911. Decided December 18, 1911.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a bill in a suit for a conveyance to the complainant of a parcel of land to which he claims a right under a trust deed. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 391.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington and Edwin C. Brandenburg argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Clarence A. Brandenburg and F. Walter Brandenburg, filed a brief for appellant:

The grant was a condition subsequent.

Devlin, Deeds, § 958; Hayden v. Stoughton, 5 Pick. 528; Wilson v. Galt, 18 Ill. 431; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551; Finlay v. King, 3 Pet. 346, 374, 7 L. ed. 701, 711.

A possibility of reverter is not an interest or estate in land that can be devised or assigned.

Vail v. Long Island R. Co. 106 N. Y. 287, 60 Am. Rep. 449, 12 N. E. 607; Towle v. Remsen, 70 N. Y. 309; De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N. Y. 506, 57 Am. Dec. 470; Nicoll v. New York & E. R. Co. 12 N. Y. 131; Locke v. Hale, 165 Mass. 20, 42 N. E. 331; Bouvier v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. 67 N. J. L. 281, 60 L.R.A. 750, 51 Atl. 781; Helms v. Helms, 137 N. C. 206, 49 S. E. 110; Ohio Iron Co. v. Auburn Iron Co. 64 Minn. 407, 67 N. W. 221; Warner v. Bennett, 31 Conn. 469; Higbee v. Rodeman, 129 Ind. 247, 28 N. E. 442; Brenbroick v. St. Luke's Hospital, 23 App. Div. 339, 48 N. Y. Supp. 363; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 277; Sexton v. Chicago Storage Co. 129 Ill. 331, 16 Am. St. Rep. 274, 21 N. E. 920; Denver & S. F. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 22, 14 Colo. 327, 23 Pac. 978; Bouvier v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. 60 L.R.A. 762, note; First Presby. Church v. Elliott, 65 S. C. 251, 43 S. E. 674; Upington v. Corrigan, 151 N. Y. 143, 37 L.R.A. 794, 45 N. E. 359; Methodist Protestant Church v. Young, 130 N. C. 8, 40 S. E. 691; Goodright ex dem. Fowler v. Forrester, 8 East, 566, 1 Taunt. 578; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551; Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U. S. 693, 24 L. ed. 1101; Dawson v. Western Maryland R. Co. 107 Md. 70, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 809, 126 Am. St. Rep. 337, 68 Atl. 301, 15 Ann. Cas. 678.

There is no presumption in favor of an intention on the part of the testator to deprive his heir at law of his real estate. Such an intent must be clear and free from doubt.

Rizer v. Perry, 58 Md. 121; Bourke v. Boone, 94 Md. 477, 51 Atl. 396.

By the residuary clause of the will the testator did not intend to dispose of this property.

Hambleton v. Darrington, 36 Md. 446; Doe ex dem. Morris v. Underdown, Willes, Rep. 293; Wright v. Hall, Fortescue, 182.

The words used in the agreement regarding a reconveyance are practically a direction to reconvey to the heir, inasmuch as the interest of the testator, before breach, was not assignable.

Locke v. Hale, 165 Mass. 20, 42 N. E. 331.

Moreover, to sustain the decision of the lower court and tie up the property here involved until appellant reaches forty-eight years of age does violence to the rule of law so frequently laid down by the highest court of the state of Maryland, and as so clearly stated in the case of Mercer v. Safe Deposit & T. Co. 91 Md. 114, 45 Atl. 865, that "the law favors the early vesting of estates. This is a familiar rule of law which has been frequently recognized and enforced in the decisions of this court."

Mr. William F. Mattingly argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The cases where the donor conveys directly to the donee upon condition, and cases of mere possibility of reverter, have no application to the case at bar; yet, if the testator's estate in this property was a contingency coupled with an interest, or a possibility coupled with an interest, and it was all that and more, then it was devisable, and passed to the residuary legatee.

4 Kent, Com. *261; Purefoy v. Rogers, 2 Wm's Saund. 388k; Doe ex dem. Cholmondeley v. Weatherby, 11 East, 322; William v. Thomas, 12 East, 141; Hayden v. Stoughton, 5 Pick. 528; Clapp v. Stoughton, 10 Pick. 463; Austin v. Cambridgeport, 21 Pick. 215; Jones v. Roe, 3 T. R. 88.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill for a conveyance to the plaintiff of a parcel of land to which he claims a right under a trust deed of his father, Theodore J. Mayer. The case was heard on bill and answer, the supreme court dismissed the bill, and its decree was affirmed by the court of appeals. 33 App. D. C. 391. The facts are these: On February 5, 1907, Mayer conveyed the premises to the Washington Loan & Trust Company and the latter executed a declaration of trust by which it was to convey them to the George Washington University "when and at such times as" the University should comply with certain conditions, by the purchase of certain other specified land, etc. "In the event of the failure of the said University to comply with the terms and conditions of this trust within a reasonable time after the execution of this instrument, which reasonable time is to be determined by the trustee, when said property, so as aforesaid conveyed to the trustee, is to be reconveyed to the said Theodore J. Mayer, his heirs and assigns." The word "when" in the sentence is superfluous, but the meaning is plain. The reasonable time was determined and has elapsed, as is agreed by the University as well as by the trustee, and the conditions have not been performed, but in March, 1907, before the breach of condition, Mayer died.

Mayer made his will on February 15, 1907, a few days after the trust deed and a month before his death. After pecuniary legacies and a specific devise to the plaintiff of his residence, its contents, etc., he gave the residue of his estate to the American Security & Trust Company "in trust to make various payments to the plaintiff at different stated times, and upon his attaining the age of forty-eight years to convey all of the trust fund remaining in its hands to the plaintiff in fee. Then followed gifts to the plaintiff's children in the event of his dying before the testator or before reaching the age of forty-eight, and alternative legacies if he left no children surviving him. The question is whether the property covered by the trust deed should be conveyed to the plaintiff now or falls into the residue to be held upon the trusts created by the will.

The argument for the appellant is that that the grantor, Mayer, retained a mere possibility of reverter, which was not devisable, and that if he had more than that, still he did not devise it by his will. But the answer is plain. Of course the grantee, the Washington Loan & Trust Company, got the legal title in fee, but by its declaration of trust and its answer it disavowed any beneficial interest, and if the equitable title was in Mayer, it was subject to devise by him. But it necessarily was either in Mayer or in the George Washington University, and the courts below were quite right in holding that all rights of the University were subject to a condition precedent that never was fulfilled. The beginning of its rights was to be by conveyance "when and at such time as" the University should have made the required purchase. Or, as stated in another clause not yet quoted, "This declaration of trust is intended to set forth the terms and conditions under which the said Chevy Chase property, or the proceeds thereof, is to be conveyed or given to the said George Washington University." That it was not given until those terms and conditions were complied with could not be said more plainly. We should add that the University by its answer makes no claim either to the land or to the profits between the date of the deed and the loss of its rights.

Mayer, then, at his death, had a present equitable right to *the land, subject[300 only to be defeated by an event that has not happened; and we see as little ground for doubting that he disposed of it as there is for denying that he had it. The residuary clause is in the usual form, "All the rest and residue of my estate, real, personal, and mixed, which I now possess or which may hereafter be acquired by me,"—amply sufficient to carry the equitable estate. No doubt Mayer thought that the Chevy Chase property would go another way, but it manifestly was not certain, and moreover, one of the objects of a residuary clause is to gather up unremembered as well as uncertain rights.

Decree affirmed.

ACME HARVESTER COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.

BEEKMAN LUMBER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 300-312.)

Error to state court — Federal question — finding of fact.

1. The right to have a review in the Federal Supreme Court of a judgment of a state court in which the defeated party set up the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings as a bar to the action, and further relied upon an injunction issued out of the bankruptcy court, undertaking to stay the proceedings in the state court, and also contended that the proper construction of the bankruptcy act precluded the state court from taking jurisdiction, cannot be defeated by the finding of the state court as a matter of fact that the bankruptcy proceedings had been concluded by denial of the adjudication in bankruptcy and an abandonment of the proceedings

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1595-1600, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — conflicting jurisdiction — state and Federal courts.

2. The pendency of bankruptcy proceedings in a Federal court when an attachment suit of a single creditor was begun in a state court precludes that court, when that fact is made to appear, from proceeding in such suit to judgment and appropriation of the property.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — conflicting jurisdiction — state and Federal courts.

3. A state court is justified in proceeding to judgment on the attachment suit of a single creditor, notwithstanding the suggestion of the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings, where the bankruptcy court, finding an outstanding creditors' committee under which it was proposed to administer and distribute the debtor's estate, declined to appoint a receiver, recognizing the propriety of the proceedings of the creditors' committee, and received the reports of such committee, and allowed it for years to operate the property and to mature a plan for

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On review of decisions of state courts in the settlement of the debts outside of the court, and not contemplated in the bankruptcy act, the creditors in large numbers having signified a purpose to take stock in a reorganization, and for more than five years after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, having made no attempt to adjudicate the debtor a bankrupt, or proceed to the settlement of the estate under the requirements of the act, since, under the circumstances, the state court was justified in determining that the bankruptcy court had lost its jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — enjoining proceedings in state court — territorial jurisdiction.

4. A Federal district court sitting as a court of bankruptcy has no power to issue an ex parte injunction without notice or service of process, attempting to restrain a creditor from suing in a state outside the jurisdiction of the district court, but such proceeding could only have binding force upon the creditor if jurisdiction were obtained over it by ancillary proceedings in a court having jurisdiction, and upon service of process upon such creditor.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 9.]

Argued and submitted April 25, 1911. Decided December 18, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Jackson County Circuit Court in that state in favor of plaintiff in an action in which the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings was set up as a bar. Affirmed.

See same case below 215 Mo. 221, 114 S. W. 1087.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander New and Edwin A. Krauthoff submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Arthur Miller was on the brief:

The filing of the petition in bankruptcy cases involving questions of bankruptcy—see note to Thompson v. Fairbanks, 49 L. ed. U. S. 577.

As to conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and state courts—see notes to Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356, and J. I. Case Plow Works v. Finks, 26 C. C. A. 50.

On enjoining proceedings in Federal courts—see notes to Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 16 C. C. A. 90; Central Trust Co. v. Grantham, 27 C. C. A. 575; and Copeland v. Bruning, 63 C. C. A. 437.

On pendency of action in state or Federal court as ground for abatement of action in the other—see notes to Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. v. Shoshone Min. Co. 47 C. C. A. 205; and Barnsdall v. Waltemeyer, 73 C. C. A. 521.

is a caveat to all the world, and in effect an attachment and injunction.

Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 14, 46 L. ed. 411, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Re Granite City Bank, 70 C. C. A. 316, 137 Fed. 818; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; Ex parte City Bank, 3 How. 321, 11 L. ed. 616; Re Richardson, 2 Ben. 517, Fed. Cas. No. 11,774; Re Weinger, 126 Fed. 876; Re Jersey Island Packing Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 560, 71 C. C. A. 75, 138 Fed. 625; Re Union Trust Co. 59 C. C. A. 461, 122 Fed. 937; Re Kleinhaus, 113 Fed. 109; Re Emslie, 42 C. C. A. 350, 102 Fed. 292; Bear v. Chase, 40 C. C. A. 182, 99 Fed. 924; Morgan v. Campbell, 22 Wall. 381, 22 L. ed. 796; Clarke v. Larremore, 188 U. S. 486, 47 L. ed. 555, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Cruchet v. Red Rover Min. Co. 155 Fed. 486; State Bank v. Cox, 74 C. C. A. 285, 143 Fed. 91; 62 Cent. L. J. 264.

The object of a Bankrupt act, so far as creditors are concerned, is to secure equality of distribution among them of the property of the bankrupt,—not among some of the creditors, but among all of them.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 449, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1178, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

The duty of the courts is to carry this intention of Congress into effect to the extent which the language of the act justifies. Mere schemes and artifices to avoid the letter and spirit of the law will not be tolerated.

Re Blount, 142 Fed. 263.

The district court in Illinois had the power to enjoin proceedings pending outside of its district.

Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. p. 105; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; Re Wood & Henderson, 210 U. S. 246, 52 L. ed. 1046, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Re Williams, 120 Fed. 34.

A district court of the United States, in exercising jurisdiction in a proceeding in bankruptcy, is administering a law which has for its basis a constitutional grant of power to enact such a law; consequently, the jurisdiction of the court is coexistent with the Constitution. That is to say, the power of a Federal court in bankruptcy follows the Constitution, and so the rule has been stated.

Re Granite City Bank, 70 C. C. A. 316, 137 Fed. 818.

If it be contended that the remedy is to be found in the filing of an ancillary petition in bankruptcy in Missouri, and by calling on the bankruptcy court for the western district of Missouri to protect the situation, then we are met with the ruling that there is no such thing as an ancillary proceeding in bankruptcy.

56 L. ed.

Re Williams, 123 Fed. 321; Re Williams, 120 Fed. 38; Ross-Mecham Foundry Co. v. Southern Car & Foundry Co. 124 Fed. 403; Re Tybo Min. & Reduction Co. 132 Fed. 697; Re Von Hartz, 74 C. C. A. 58, 142 Fed. 726; Hull v. Burr, 83 C. C. A. 61, 153 Fed. 945; Remington, Bankr. § 1705; Re Granite City Bank, 70 C. C. A. 316, 137 Fed. 818.

The court of bankruptcy itself has the power to stay a proceeding begun after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

Paine v. Caldwell, 1 Haskell, 452, Fed. Cas. No. 10,674; Re Litchfield, 13 Fed. 863; Re Schrom, 97 Fed. 760; Re Williams, 120 Fed. 38.

The bankrupt itself had such an interest in the controversy that it could have instituted a suit on the equity side of a court having jurisdiction of the parties, or have applied to the bankruptcy court to enjoin the prosecution of the action in attachment brought by the Beekman Company against the Acme Company.

Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co. 89 Fed. 691; Jones v. Leach, Fed. Cas. No. 7,475; Re Klein, 97 Fed. 31; Re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991; Re Bowie, 15 Pittsb. L. J. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728; Ex parte Foster, 2 Story, 131, Fed. Cas. No. 4,960; Re Hufnagel, Fed. Cas. No. 6,837; Re Uirich, 6 Ben. 483, Fed. Cas. No. 14,328; Re Schnepf, 2 Ben. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 12,471; Re Wallace, Deady, 433, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; Re Vogel, Fed. Cas. No. 16,983; Loveland, Bankr. p. 107; Re Wollock, 120 Fed. 516.

Under the facts pleaded in the answer in the case, it was the duty of the circuit court of Jackson County, Missouri, at Kansas City, itself to have enjoined the prosecution of the action of the Beekman Company against the Acme Company, or, what is to the same effect, should have ordered the action stayed.

Sachleben v. Heintze, 117 Mo. 526, 24 S. W. 54; Swope v. Weller, 119 Mo. 565, 25 S. W. 204; Martin v. Turnbaugh, 153 Mo. 186, 54 S. W. 515; Wendover v. Baker, 121 Mo. 273, 25 S. W. 918.

The authorities with respect to the staying of a suit are found collected in the textbooks on the subject.

2 Remington, Bankr. pp. 1596, et seq.; Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. pp. 107 et seq.

The power to appoint a receiver should be invoked with caution, and only when absolutely necessary to preserve assets.

Re Rosenthal, 144 Fed. 549; Collier, Bankr. 6th ed. pp. 19, 20.

If it be contended that the failure to appoint a receiver is a dismissal of the petition, then it must follow that the converse of the proposition is equally true,

--the appointment of a receiver is an adjudication in bankruptcy. But this is not true.

Re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co. 92 Fed. 329; Re Seivers, 91 Fed. 366; Selkregg v. Hamilton Bros. 144 Fed. 557; 1 Remington, Bankr. pp. 234 et seq.

The mere fact that the petition remained on file from October, 1903, until June, 1905, where the case was tried in the circuit court, or even until October, 1908, when the case was argued in the supreme court of Missouri, does not operate as a dismissal or a discontinuance of the proceeding in bankruptcy.

St. Francis Mill Co. v. Sugg, 142 Mo. 358, 44 S. W. 247; Nicholls-Shepard Co. v. Donovan, 67 Mo. App. 286; Sublette v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 66 Mo. App. 331; Wernse v. McPike, 76 Mo. 249, 86 Mo. 565, 100 Mo. 476, 13 S. W. 809; St. Francis Mill Co. v. Sugg, 169 Mo. 130, 69 S. W. 359; Ex parte Driver, 51 Ala. 41; Gilbert v. Hardwick, 11 Ga. 599; Peirce v. Bank of Tennessee, 1 Swan, 265.

The trial court having disposed of the question as a matter of law, and the evidence relied upon by the supreme court of Missouri to sustain the conclusion said to have been reached by that court being wholly insufficient for that purpose, a question of law arises which this court has the jurisdiction to examine.

Knorpp v. Wagner, 195 Mo. 662, 93 S. W. 961; Nolan v. Shickle, 3 Mo. App. 300; Pawling v. United States, 4 Cranch, 221, 2 L. ed. 602; Parks v. Ross, 11 How. 362, 13 L. ed. 730; Boland v. Missouri R. Co. 36 Mo. 491; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 147, 46 L. ed. 1093, 1095, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 131, 132, 45 L. ed. 457, 460, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 408; Runkle v. Burnham, 153 U. S. 216, 225, 38 L. ed. 694, 697, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Woodson County, 76 C. C. A. 114, 145 Fed. 151; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 96, 37 L. ed. 380, 382, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

The right of the Acme Company to have a pending action abated depended upon a law of the United States, and hence this court has jurisdiction to review the action of the court below.

Taylor, Jurisdiction, § 211; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, 50 L. ed. 527; 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 202, 16 L. ed. 309; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 445, 447, 11 L. ed. 1049, 1050; Pollard v. Kibbe, 14 Pet. 360, 10 L. ed. 493; Berthold v. McDonald, 22 How. 334, 16 L. ed. 318.

The Supreme Court of the United States has frequently exercised jurisdiction to review on writ of error actions of state courts in bankruptcy cases.

Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 44 L. ed. 723, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. ed. 277; Factors' & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 741, 28 L. ed. 582, 583, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Mays v. Fritton, 131 U. S. CXIV, Appx. and 21 L. ed. 127; Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 518, 40 L. ed. 791, 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; Williams v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 35 L. ed. 550, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 533, 534, 29 L. ed. 467, 468, 469, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 506, 29 L. ed. 244, 246, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009; Palmer v. Hussey, 119 U. S. 96, 30 L. ed. 362, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 28 L. ed. 565, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

In the case of an appeal from a circuit court of appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, the jurisdiction of this court is the same as on a writ of error issued to the highest court of a state.

Chapman v. Bowen, 207 U. S. 89, 52 L. ed. 116, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32.

Under the bankruptcy law of 1898, this court has assumed jurisdiction in the following cases coming to this court under the provisions of the section cited, from a circuit court of appeals:

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Pickens v. Roy, 187 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 128, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 47 L. ed. 318, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 196 U. S. 502, 49 L. ed. 571, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Whitney v. Dresser, 200 U. S. 532, 50 L. ed. 584, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 51 L. ed. 128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; New Jersey v. Anderson, 203 U. S. 483, 51 L. ed. 284, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 51 L. ed. 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Gazlay v. Williams, 210 U. S. 41, 52 L. ed. 950, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

And the following cases under the bankruptcy law of 1898 have been reviewed by this court on writ of error to a state court:

Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 47 L. ed. 1084, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Kean v.

Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. ed. 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Tinker v. Colwell, 193 U. S. 473, 48 L. ed. 754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505; Crawford v. Burke, 195 U. S. 176, 49 L. ed. 147, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Kaufman v. Tredway, 195 U. S. 271, 49 L. ed. 190, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Birkett v. Columbia Bank, 195 U. S. 345, 49 L. ed. 231, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Cramer v. Wilson, 195 U. S. 408, 49 L. ed. 256, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Bullis v. O'Beirne, 195 U. S. 606, 49 L. ed. 340, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Wetmore v. Markoe, 196 U. S. 68, 49 L. ed. 390, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172, 2 Ann. Cas. 265; First Nat. Bank v. Lasater, 196 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 408, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, 50 L. ed. 527, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 51 L. ed. 606, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 522, 51 L. ed. 596, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Tindle v. Birkett, 205 U. S. 183, 51 L. ed. 762, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 521, 51 L. ed. 911, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596; Blunthenthal v. Jones, 208 U. S. 64, 52 L. ed. 390, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192.

Mr. Hannis Taylor argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Findings of fact are accepted as conclusive by this court on writ of error to a state court.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Central Min. Co. 213 U. S. 72, 53 L. ed. 702, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Merced Min. Co. v. Boggs, 3 Wall. 310, 18 L. ed. 247; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114, 46 L. ed. 830, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; United States Exp. Co. v. Kountze Bros. 8 Wall. 342, 19 L. ed. 457; Behn v. Campbell, 205 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 857, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

Broad and sweeping as the provisions of the bankrupt act are in conferring jurisdiction to grant injunctions to stay suits in other courts, both state and Federal, in order to preserve the estate of the bankrupt and distribute it pari passu between and among his creditors, it is confined by the terms of the act itself to the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the district court.

Toland v. Sprague, 12 Pet. 300, 328, 9 L. ed. 1093, 1104; Re Waukesha Water Co. 116 Fed. 1009; Paine v. Caldwell, 1 Haskell, 452, Fed. Cas. No. 10,674; Jobbins v. 56 L. ed.

Montague, 5 Ben. 425, Fed. Cas. No. 7,329; Re Litchfield, 13 Fed. 863.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:†

This case is here upon writ of error to the supreme court of the state of Missouri. The facts stated in the record disclose that on October 19, 1903, an agreement was formulated, having for its purpose the placing of the affairs of the Acme Harvester Company, plaintiff in error, in the hands of a committee of creditors. With this purpose in view an agreement for the signature of the creditors was circulated, naming a committee of five, and calling upon the stockholders of the Acme Harvester Company to deposit their shares with the committee, the directors and officers of the company to resign their respective offices, and the committee to have power to elect a board of directors, who should act until the debts of the company were paid in full, and, when so paid, the shares of stock to be redelivered to the owners. In the circular accompanying the agreement for the signature of the creditors it was set forth that the affairs of the company were in such shape that, if kept a going concern, the debts could be paid, and deprecating a resort to legal proceedings in court.

On October 22, 1903, certain creditors filed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the Acme Harvester Company in the district court of the United States for the Northern district of Illinois, seeking to have the company adjudicated a bankrupt, charging that it was insolvent and had made certain preferential transfers of property. On October 24, 1903, the creditors' committee issued a circular in which they recited that one half the creditors in number and two thirds in amount had already signed the creditors' agreement; that a petition in bankruptcy had been filed by a law firm claiming to represent three claims, for the purpose of throwing the company into bankruptcy; that one of the creditors had already withdrawn from the proceedings, and setting forth that the success of such proceedings would wreck the company, destroy its business, and sacrifice the value of its assets. The committee added an expression of its confidence that the court would deny an application for a receiver, and leave the business in the hands of the creditors. On October 26, 1903, the creditors' committee issued another circular, in which it was said that the United States district court in Chicago had refused to appoint a receiver, and in so doing the judge had said:

†Announced by Mr. Chief Justice White, Mr. Justice Day being absent.

"This estate is a very large one, and is in the hands of a committee of reputable creditors. It is my judgment that the creditors ought to manage and control the estate. The creditors can produce results 303] much better than any *receiver in handling a large manufacturing concern like the Acme Harvester Company."

The circular further said that the court had referred the matter to the referee in bankruptcy to inquire into the truth of the allegations of the petition, and to ascertain whether the petitioning creditors had any standing or right to file the petition, adding that there was really only one creditor left in the bankruptcy proceeding. On November 2, 1903, a circular was issued in which it was stated that an overwhelming majority of the creditors had signified their approval of the plan, and had executed and forwarded the agreement to the creditors' committee. On December 2, 1903, the Acme Harvester Company, by its vice president, wrote to the Beekman Lumber Company, calling attention to the fact that the lumber company had not yet signed the creditors' agreement, and saying:

"You may not be aware that U. S. Judge Kohlsaat has stopped the matter of anyone bringing suit against this company, or endeavoring to throw it into bankruptcy, he having decided that we are solvent, and that the only reasonable and fair way to handle the business, paying its debts, etc., is through the medium of the credit committee, elected by our heaviest creditors. This being the case, the only basis on which your claim will receive recognition is by joining with the balance of our creditors, signing the agreement, thus putting yourselves on record that you are a creditor, and are entitled to such dividends as from time to time the committee might declare."

The Beekman Lumber Company, it appears, did not sign the creditors' agreement, nor, so far as the record discloses, prove its claim in bankruptcy, and on December 7, 1903, filed a petition in the circuit court of Jackson county, Missouri, for the purpose of recovering a judgment against the Acme Harvester Company upon 304] an account *for lumber sold and delivered prior to the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy. No trustee having been selected in the bankruptcy proceedings, the Acme Harvester Company appeared in the state court to file a motion to stay the proceedings, setting up the pending proceedings in bankruptcy. This motion was sustained on January 11, 1904. On May 14, 1904, motion to stay was overruled, and the former order set aside. On October 3, 1904, a petition was filed in the district court of the United States at Chicago, where the bankruptcy proceedings were pending, for an injunction against the Beekman Lumber Company to restrain it from further pursuing its action in the state court. An injunction was granted, without notice to the Beekman Lumber Company, on ex parte hearing the same day. From reports in the record it appears that the creditors' committee took charge of the company's property, and, as such committee, made reports to the United States district judge at Chicago of the doings of the committee in the management of the property, purchases, sales, etc. The creditors' committee also issued a statement to the creditors, showing the results of the business, inclosing copies of the reports made to the Federal district court, and commending a reorganization of the company on the basis of stock issued to creditors, at par, for their claims, and 50 cents on the dollar to creditors who did not go into the reorganization. A circular letter, issued by the committee on April 1, 1905, states that two thirds of the creditors had already been heard from, about eighty per cent (80%) of them desired stock, and the rest preferred fifty per cent (50%) in cash.

On October 12, 1904, the Acme Harvester Company answered in the state court, setting up the pendency of the bankruptcy proceeding and the issuing of the injunction in the district court of Chicago. Replication was filed by the plaintiff, and, upon trial, judgment on the *account was di- 305] rected and rendered on June 20, 1905, in favor of the plaintiff for the amount of its account. Thereafter proceedings in review were prosecuted to the supreme court of Missouri, and that court held that the district court of the United States had no authority to issue the injunction against proceedings in the state court, and held further that the facts disclosed that the district court of the United States had declined to adjudicate the Acme Harvester Company a bankrupt, and left the property to be administered outside of the bankruptcy law, and that the prosecution in bankruptcy had been abandoned. 215 Mo. 221, 114 S. W. 1087.

A motion to dismiss the proceedings for want of jurisdiction was made in this court and passed for consideration to the merits. The contention is that, inasmuch as the supreme court of the state found, as a matter of fact, that the bankruptcy proceedings had been concluded, by denial of the adjudication and an abandonment of the proceedings, that this finding of fact is binding upon this court upon writ of error to the state court, and therefore there is no substantial basis for the writ of error. We are of the opinion that the contention in this respect is not well founded. The defendant below set up a proceeding in a Federal court as a protection against further prosecution in the state court. It further set up the issuing of an injunction in the Federal court, undertaking to stay proceedings in the state court. Thereby the defendant claimed the benefit of a Federal right, which brought the case within § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). The denial of a right claimed under the judgment of a court of the United States lays the foundation for a review in this court. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Long Island Loan & T. Co. 172 U. S. 493, 43 L. ed. 528, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

The alleged finding of fact that the jurisdiction of the Federal court had ended cannot conclude this court in reviewing a question of this character. The defendant asserted the power and jurisdiction of the Federal court, invoked before the beginning of the state proceedings, and alleged its sufficiency to protect it against further proceedings in the state court. The right of ultimate determination of a contention of that character in this court cannot be defeated by the finding of the state court that the Federal court had exceeded or ended its jurisdiction. The determination of a question of that kind is not a finding upon a disputed question of fact, nor within that class of cases in which this court has repeatedly held that the facts as found in the state court would be regarded as conclusive here. Moreover, the case involved a construction of the bankruptcy act. As the plaintiff in error contended that the proper construction of the act would defeat the jurisdiction of the state court, the adverse ruling gave this court jurisdiction. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, 50 L. ed. 527, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Proceeding, then, to the determination of the case upon its merits, the first question is. Should the state court have declined to exercise its jurisdiction when the pending proceeding in bankruptcy was set up in denial of the right to entertain further proceedings in the state tribunal? It appears from the facts already stated that the petition in bankruptcy had been filed some time before the attempt to attach the property of the bankrupt in the hands of the garnishee in the state court. There is no dispute upon this record that the money attached was owing to the bankrupt, and was unquestionably its property.

56 L. ed.

Whatever may be the limitations of the doctrine declared by this court, speaking by the late Chief Justice Fuller in Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 14, 43 L. ed. 405, 411, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, where it is said: "It is as true of the present law [1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418)] as it was of that of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176], that the filing of the petition is a caveat to all the world, and, in effect, an attachment and injunction. International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 866. And on adjudication, title to the bankrupt's property became vested in the trustee * (§§ 70, [307 21e), with actual or constructive possession, and placed in the custody of the bankruptcy court,"—it is none the less certain that an attachment of the bankrupt's property after the filing of the petition and before adjudication cannot operate to remove the bankrupt's estate from the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court for the purpose of administration under the act of Congress. It is the purpose of the bankruptcy law, passed in pursuance of the power of Congress, to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, to place the property of the bankrupt under the control of the court, wherever it is found, with a view to its equal distribution among the creditors. The filing of the petition is an assertion of jurisdiction with a view to the determination of the status of the bankrupt and a settlement and distribution of his estate. The exclusive jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is so far in rem that the estate is regarded as in custodia legis from the filing of the petition. It is true that under § 70a of the act of 1898 the trustee of the estate, on his appointment and qualification, is vested by operation of law with the title of the bankrupt as of the date he was adjudicated a bankrupt; but there are many provisions of the law which show its purpose to hold the property of the bankrupt intact from the time of the filing of the petition, in order that it may be administered under the law if an adjudication in bankruptcy shall follow the beginning of the proceedings. Paragraph 5, § 70a, in reciting the property which vests in the trustee, says there shall vest "property which, prior to the filing of the petition [the bankrupt] . . . could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against . . . [the bankrupt]." Under § 67c attachments within four months before the filing of the petition are dissolved by the adjudication in the event of the insolvency of the bankrupt, if their enforcement would work a preference. Provision is made *for the [308 prompt taking possession of the bankrupt's property, before adjudication, if necessary (§ 69a). Every person is forbidden to receive any property after the filing of the petition, with intent to defeat the purposes of the act. These provisions, and others might be recited, show the policy and purpose of the bankruptcy act to hold the estate in the custody of the court for the benefit of creditors after the filing of the petition and until the question of adjudication is determined. To permit creditors to attach the bankrupt's property between the filing of the petition and the time of adjudication would be to encourage a race of diligence to defeat the purposes of the act and prevent the equal distribution of the estate among all creditors of the same class, which is the policy of the law. The filing of the petition asserts the jurisdiction of the Federal court, the issuing of its process brings the defendant into court, the selection of the trustee is to follow upon the adjudication, and thereupon the estate belonging to the bankrupt, held by him or for him, vests in the trustee. Pending the proceedings the law holds the property to abide the decision of the court upon the question of adjudication as effectively as if an attachment had been issued, and prevents creditors from defeating the purposes of the law by bringing separate attachment suits, which would virtually amount to preferences in favor of such creditors. See in this connection the well-considered cases of State Bank v. Cox, 74 C. C. A. 285, 143 Fed. 91 (C. C. A. Seventh C.); Shawnee County v. Hurley (C. C. A. Eighth C.) 94 C. C. A. 362, 169 Fed. 92, 94.

It follows that, if the bankruptcy proceedings were pending, so that the bankruptcy court acquired jurisdiction over the estate, it was error for the state court to proceed to a judgment and appropriation of the property on the attachment suit of a single creditor. It therefore becomes necessary to inquire whether the state court was right in determining that the bankruptcy court had *lost its jurisdiction because of the proceedings had therein. In addition to the facts stated, the supreme court of Missouri, in its opinion, said that at the time of the hearing in that court, five years after the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, counsel admitted that no adjudication in bankruptcy had as yet taken place. The case presented therefore shows that the bankruptcy court, upon the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, found an outstanding creditors' agreement under which it was proposed to administer and distribute the estate. It declined to appoint a receiver; it recognized the propriety of the proceedings of the creditors' committee; it received reports of the creditors' committee, and allowed it for years to go on in the operation of the property, to mature a plan for the settlement of the debts outside of the court, and not contemplated in the bankruptcy act. The creditors in large numbers signified a purpose to take stock in a reorganization, and for more than five years after the time of the filing of the petition, it was found by the supreme court of Missouri, had made no attempt to adjudicate the corporation a bankrupt, or proceed to the settlement of the estate under the requirements of the act.

It was the duty of the bankruptcy court, if it intended to administer the property under the bankruptcy law, to promptly determine the question of adjudication, to proceed with the selection of a trustee and the administration and distribution of the estate, as required by the act. This it evidently declined to do; and permitted the creditors' committee, which had been organized for the avowed purpose of defeating court proceedings, to administer the estate, to buy and sell property, and mature a plan for the reorganization of the concern. This may have been for the benefit of the creditors, but it was not the administration of the law as laid down in the bankruptcy act. It is not within the province of the bankruptcy court to deny an adjudication in bankruptcy, and then hold jurisdiction *over the property for the purpose of [310] allowing some of the creditors to effect a reorganization and distribution of the property.

We cannot say that the supreme court of Missouri was wrong; indeed, we think it was right in reaching the conclusion that the district court had declined to adjudicate the corporation a bankrupt and vest its property in a trustee, and, deeming it best for the creditors to follow out their plans, had found that the case was not one calling for the intervention of the bankruptcy court. Indeed, there is nothing in the record to contradict the statement of the circular in evidence in the court below, that the court had found the corporation solvent. With the question of adjudication determined against the right to proceed in bankruptcy, the jurisdiction of the district court ended, and the property became subject to the ordinary methods of procedure in courts of competent jurisdiction.

It is suggested that even now the bankruptcy court may proceed to an adjudication, but this suggestion is at war with all that has been done with the knowledge and sanction of the district court. As we have seen, the property to be administered in the bankruptcy court is that which belonged to the bankrupt at the filing of the petition, and then subject to his debts. This property can never be recovered. With the sanction of the district court much of it has been sold, its character has been changed, and it has been dealt with by the creditors' committee regardless of the provisions of the bankruptcy law. Many of the creditors have signified their purpose to adjust their claims by taking stock in a reorganization, or 50 cents on the dollar, of the amount of their claims. The whole proceeding makes it clear that the district court denied the adjudication and declined to exercise its jurisdiction as a bankruptcy court.

As to the injunction, we are of the opinion that there was no power in the district court to issue an ex parte injunction, [311]*without notice or service of process, attempting to restrain the Beekman Lumber Company from suing in a state outside the jurisdiction of the district court. Such proceeding could only have binding force upon the lumber company if jurisdiction were obtained over it by proceedings in a court having jurisdiction, and upon service of process upon such creditor.

Whether ancillary proceedings could be had in a district court in aid of the jurisdiction of an original court of bankruptcy was a subject of much discussion and diverse decisions in the Federal courts. In Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 54 L. ed. 402, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, and Re Elkus, 216 U. S. 115, 54 L. ed. 407, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377, the matter came before this court, and it was there determined that there was ancillary jurisdiction in the courts of bankruptcy, in aid of the original jurisdiction in the bankruptcy court, to make orders and issue processes summarily in aid of the original jurisdiction. In the opinion in Babbitt v. Dutcher it was pointed out by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, speaking for the court, that the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts under the act of 1898 was limited to their respective territorial limits, and was in substance the same as that provided by the act of 1867, giving such courts jurisdiction in their respective districts in matters of proceedings in bankruptcy. The necessary deduction from these cases is to deny to the district courts jurisdiction such as was sought to be asserted in this case by the issuing of an injunction against one not a party to the proceeding, and which undertook to have effect in the distant jurisdiction outside the territorial jurisdiction of the district court. Under the act of 1898, as expounded in the two cases in 216 U. S., supra, the injunction might have been sought in the district court of the United States in the district in Missouri, where personal service could have been made upon the Beekman Lumber Company. Since the decision *in the cases [312 just referred to, Congress has passed the act of June 25, 1910, amending the bankruptcy law, specifically giving ancillary jurisdiction over persons and property within their respective territorial limits to the district courts of the United States in aid of the receiver or trustee appointed in a bankruptcy proceeding pending in another court of bankruptcy. 36 Stat. at L. page 838, chap. 412.

Nor is there anything in the decision in Re Wood & Henderson, 210 U. S. 246, 52 L. ed. 1046, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621, running counter to the conclusion herein announced. In that case it was held, under § 64d, giving the bankruptcy court having jurisdiction of the estate the right to determine the amount of an attorneys' fee paid out of the estate in anticipation of bankruptcy proceedings, that notice might be served outside the district with a view to a hearing to determine the amount of such compensation. In that case it was expressly held that § 64d was sui generis, and the right to send notice to the attorneys outside of the district was based upon the theory of that section that the property was within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, which could alone determine the amount to be deducted for the attorneys' fee in anticipation of the proceedings; that the proceeding was administrative in character, and that for its purpose a hearing might be had upon form of notice sufficient to advise the attorneys that the court was proceeding to act under the authority conferred by the law.

Finding no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of Missouri, it is affirmed.

*CITY OF CHICAGO, Plff. in Err., [313
v.

FRANK STURGES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 313-324.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — municipal liability for damage by mob — police power.

1. Making a municipality liable for three fourths of the damage to property within its limits caused by a mob or riot, as is done by Ill. Laws 1887, p. 237, which saves to the owner his action against the rioters and gives the municipality a lien upon any judgment against such participants for reimbursement, or a remedy to the municipality directly against the individuals causing the damage, to the amount of any judgment it may have paid the sufferer, is a valid exercise of the police power, and does not deny to the municipality due process of law because it imposes liability irrespective of any question of the power of the municipality to have prevented the violence, or of negligence in the use of its power.

NOTE.—On municipal liability for damage by mob—see notes to Gianfortone v. New Orleans, 24 L.R.A. 592; Adamson v. New York, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 925; and Chicago v. Pennsylvania Co. 57 C. C. A. 517.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — municipal liability for damage by mob.

2. A city is not denied the equal protection of the laws by Ill. Laws 1887, p. 237, imposing upon it a liability for damage to property within its limits, caused by a mob or riot, because when property damaged under like circumstances is situated in a village or other incorporated town, the liability is imposed upon the county instead of upon such village or town.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 39.]

Argued November 6, 1911. Decided December 18, 1911.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Cook County, in that state, enforcing a statutory liability against a municipality for damage caused by a mob or riot. Affirmed.

See same case below, 237 Ill. 46, 86 N. E. 683.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John W. Beckwith and Joseph F. Grossman argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Sexton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

English authority for legislation under the police power of the state is inapplicable to our jurisprudence. In England there are no vested rights. Its police power is absolute and without limitation.

4 Coke, Inst. 36.

To justify legislation in this country under the police power of the state, it must appear that the act is reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose for which it is passed, and not unduly oppressive.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

The proceedings in the state courts in which judgment was rendered against plaintiff in error herein were not due process of law. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed against him, this is not due process of law.

Ziegler v. South & North Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 594; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702.

The state has no greater control over the property rights of municipal corporations than of other corporations or individuals.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. ed. 629, 673; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Louisville v. Com. 1 Duv. 295, 85 Am. Dec. 624; New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478; Touchard v. Touchard, 5 Cal. 306.

The funds of plaintiff in error are its private property, and they cannot be taken without due process of law.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 694, 4 L. ed. 629, 673; Chicago v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 87 Ill. App. 611; People v. Fields, 58 N. Y. 491.

The guaranty of the equal protection of the law means that no person or class of persons shall be denied the same protection of the laws which is enjoyed by other persons or other classes in the same place and in like circumstances.

Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

To justify legislation affecting a class of persons, the classification must bear a reasonable relation to the purposes for which the legislation is aimed.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; People ex rel. Stuck-

222 U. S.

art v. Knopf, 183 Ill. 410, 56 N. E. 15; Bessette v. People, 193 Ill. 334, 56 L.R.A. 558, 62 N. E. 215; State ex rel. Richards v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 435; State, Hightown, Prosecutor, v. Glenn, 47 N. J. L. 105; People ex rel. Danville v. Fox, 247 Ill. 402, 93 N. E. 302.

Each city, village, or town incorporated prior to the adoption of the Illinois Constitution of 1870 is as similar or dissimilar as their special charters; and hence the fact that a municipality was organized under the name of "city," prior to the Constitution of 1870, bears no reasonable relation to the purposes of the act, which is to suppress mob violence and to indemnify the owners of property for damages occasioned by mobs and riots throughout the state.

People ex rel. Thorp v. Normal, 170 Ill. 468, 48 N. E. 901.

The judgment of the state supreme court that there is such a difference between cities, villages, and towns as to form a rational basis for classification in the act under consideration, is not conclusive upon the Supreme Court of the United States.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 222, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 77, 44 L. ed. 680, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680, 30 L. ed. 523, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

The terms "city," "village," or "incorporated town" are not synonymous, nor is the term "city" generic, so as to include "village" or "incorporated town."

Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680, 30 L. ed. 523, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Pitzman v. Freeburg, 92 Ill. 111; People ex rel. Danville v. Fox, 247 Ill. 402, 93 N. E. 302.

The act is penal as well as remedial, and should be strictly construed.

Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 670; Underhill v. Manchester, 45 N. H. 221.

The statute is in derogation of the common law, and nothing can be read into it by implication.

Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. ed. 892; Porter v. Dement, 35 Ill. 478; Thompson v. Weller, 85 Ill. 197; Hamilton v. Jones, 125 Ind. 176, 25 N. E. 192; Thornburg v. American Strawboard Co. 141 Ind. 443, 50 Am. St. Rep. 334, 40 N. E. 1062; Sarazin v. Union R. Co. 153 Mo. 479, 55 S. W. 92.

The statute gives to owners of property in the county outside the limits of any city a right of action against said county, but does not give such right to owners of property within the same county, if within the limits of any city.
56 L. ed.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

The statute imposes a burden upon some of the inhabitants of the county (those living within the limits of a city) which is double that imposed upon all other inhabitants of the same county. The former exclusively must bear the burden of indemnifying persons for property destroyed within the limits of their city, and must also share the burden of indemnification for property destroyed in their county outside the limits of any city; but the latter must only share with the inhabitants of cities in indemnifying owners of property destroyed in the county outside city limits.

Ibid.

Messrs. Edward J. Brundage and Robert N. Holt also filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The "equal protection of the law" covers privileges conferred as well as liabilities imposed.

Guthrie, 14th Amendment, Lecture 4, p. 111; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

Laws inflicting penalties should operate equally on all citizens equally situated.

Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 28, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98.

An arbitrary classification of persons or corporations to be affected does not render a law applying to one such class general in character.

Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L.R.A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L.R.A. 445, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624; People ex rel. Deneen v. Martin, 178 Ill. 611, 53 N. E. 309; People ex rel. Stuckart v. Knopf, 183 Ill. 410, 56 N. E. 155; Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389, 63 L.R.A. 73, 95 Am. St. Rep. 241, 67 N. E. 28.

Where a general law can be made applicable, a special law is unconstitutional.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Badenoch v. Chicago, 222 Ill. 72, 78 N. E. 31; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 34, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Hibbard v. Chicago, 173 Ill. 91, 40 L.R.A.

621, 50 N. E. 256; People ex rel. Miller v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; People ex rel. Stuckart v. Knopf, 183 Ill. 410, 56 N. E. 155; People ex rel. Gleeson v. Mecch, 101 Ill. 200.

The mere fact that a municipality has adopted the form of government provided for cities affords no reasonable basis for conferring upon it benefits and privileges withheld from villages of equal population, and differing from cities only in that they have not incorporated as cities.

People ex rel. Danville v. Fox, 247 Ill. 402, 93 N. E. 302.

There is a very important difference as between counties and those municipal corporations known as cities, villages, and towns. Cities, villages, and towns are voluntary organizations, while counties are quasi municipal organizations, involuntarily organized.

Dill. Mun. Corp. chap. 2, § 23, p. 42.

Due process of law requires that a party be given an opportunity to be heard on every question of fact or liability.

Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Lackey, 78 Ill. 55; Zeigler v. South & North Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 594; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Jensen v. Union P. R. Co. 6 Utah, 253, 4 L.R.A. 724, 21 Pac. 994; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177; Wadsworth v. Union P. R. Co. 18 Colo. 600, 23 L.R.A. 812, 36 Am. St. Rep. 309, 33 Pac. 515; Catril v. Union P. R. Co. 2 Idaho, 576, 21 Pac. 416; Bielenberg v. Montana Union R. Co. 8 Mont. 271, 2 L.R.A. 813, 20 Pac. 314; Thompson v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 Mont. 279, 21 Pac. 25; Schenck v. Union P. R. Co. 5 Wyo. 430, 40 Pac. 840; East Kingston v. Towle, 48 N. H. 57, 2 Am. Rep. 174, 97 Am. Dec. 575; Stoudenmire v. Brown, 48 Ala. 699; Street v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 577.

Due process of law requires only what is demanded by the usual general law, according to the nature of the particular matter in hand. It will not tolerate unusual or arbitrary actions.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

Where the void provisions in a statute cannot be eliminated without affecting the remaining portions, the whole statute becomes void.

Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 178, 179; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177.

A corporation is a person within the meaning of the equal protection provision of the 14th Amendment.

Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247.

Equal protection means subjection to equal laws, applying alike to all in the same situation.

Ibid.

The province of construction lies wholly within the domain of ambiguity.

Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 421, 44 L. ed. 219, 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Ottawa Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Downey, 127 Ill. 201, 20 N. E. 20; Sedgw. Statutes, § 271; Wellford v. Snyder, 137 U. S. 524, 34 L. ed. 780, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

The court declined to hear Messrs. Almon W. Buckley, Frank J. Loesch, James Stillwell, and Timothy J. Scofield for defendant in error:

It is a rule of construction that a penal statute is to be strictly construed; but courts do not construe such statutes so strictly as to defeat the apparent purpose of the legislature in the enactment of the law.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42; Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, 288; United States v. Winn, 3 Sumn. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 16,740; Hines v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 95 N. C. 434, 59 Am. Rep. 250; People v. Goodhart, 248 Ill. 373, 94 N. E. 148.

A penal statute is one which imposes punishment for a violation of statutes, and which the governor of a state, or the President of the United States, is vested with power to pardon.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Methven, 21 Ohio St. 586; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 358.

The indemnifying statute here involved, as construed by the supreme court of Illinois, is not an act for the punishment of a city or county for a failure or an inability to control the actions of mobs and riotous assemblages.

Sturges v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 46, 86 N. E. 683.

When an act of the legislature can be construed and applied so as to avoid conflict with the Constitution and give it the force of law, such construction will be adopted by the courts.

Colwell v. May's Landing Water Power Co. 19 N. J. Eq. 249; People ex rel. Burrows v. Orange County, 17 N. Y. 241; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 384; Cooley, Const. Law, 184, 185; Grenada County v. Brogden (Grenada County v. Brown) 112 U. S. 261, 28 L. ed. 704, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

The indemnifying act here involved is remedial, and should be liberally construed.

Sturges v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 46, 86 N. E. 683; Schiellein v. Kings County, 43 Barb. 490; Sarles v. New York, 47 Barb. 447;

Underhill v. Manchester, 45 N. H. 214; Hermits of St. Augustine v. Philadelphia County, Brightly (Pa.) 116.

There is a difference between cities and villages which forms a rational basis for a valid classification for purposes of legislation.

Dawson Soap Co. v. Chicago, 234 Ill. 314, 84 N. E. 920, 14 Ann. Cas. 1131; Sturges v. Chicago, 237 Ill. 46, 86 N. E. 683; People ex rel. Davis v. Nellis, 249 Ill. 12, 94 N. E. 165.

A legislature may classify cities, and enact laws applicable to such cities, according to their classification, but the classification must not be arbitrary.

State, Anderson, Prosecutor, v. Trenton, 42 N. J. L. 486; People ex rel. Danville v. Fox, 247 Ill. 402, 93 N. E. 302.

The Supreme Court of the United States is not authorized to inquire into the grounds or reasons upon which a state supreme court proceeds in its construction of a state statute.

Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894.

A village is a small assemblage of houses for dwelling, or business, or both, in the country, whether situated upon regularly laid out streets and alleys or not.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Williams, 27 Ill. 48; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Spangler, 71 Ill. 568.

The supreme court of Illinois construes the word "village," as used in the act for the incorporation of cities and villages, to be a village or small collection of residences which has become incorporated for the better regulation of its internal police.

Phillips v. Scales Mound, 195 Ill. 358, 63 N. E. 180.

Cities and villages organized under special charters, and having thereafter adopted the general law, exercise all powers conferred upon cities and villages by the general law, and in addition thereto such powers as were conferred upon them respectively by their special charters which are not inconsistent with the general law, the adoption of the general law, not abrogating their special charters.

Speight v. People, 87 Ill. 595; Fuller v. Heath, 89 Ill. 296; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 155, 3 N. E. 448; Smith v. People, 154 Ill. 58, 39 N. E. 319; Brenan v. People, 176 Ill. 620, 52 N. E. 353; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Randle, 183 Ill. 364, 55 N. E. 728; School Trustees v. School Inspectors, 214 Ill. 30, 73 N. E. 412; People ex rel. School Inspectors v. Mottinger, 215 Ill. 256, 74 N. E. 150; People ex rel. Chicago v. Hummel, 215 Ill. 71, 74 N. E. 78.

The word "city," as used in the indemnity act here involved, is a generic designation and includes villages.

Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Martin v. People, 87 Ill. 524; Bruner v. Madison County, 111 Ill. 11; People ex rel. Longenecker v. Harvey, 142 Ill. 573, 32 N. E. 295; Phillips v. Scales Mound, 195 Ill. 353, 63 N. E. 180; People ex rel. Mohlenbrock v. Pike, 197 Ill. 452, 64 N. E. 393; State ex rel. Rice v. Simmons, 35 Mo. App. 374; State ex rel. Wood v. Goldstucker, 40 Wis. 124; State, Bell, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 40 N. J. L. 552, 29 Am. Rep. 266; Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680, 30 L. ed. 523, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

Every borough or city is a town.

1 Coke, Inst. 116.

The act in question does not violate the provisions of the 14th Amendment guarantying due process of law.

Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Williams v. Parker, 188 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 559, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 50 L. ed. 167, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 50 L. ed. 744, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

Municipal corporations are instrumentalities of the state for the convenient administration of government within their limits. Their functions are for the public good. They are created, among other purposes, to manage the concerns, police, and public interest of the people living within their territory, and they are subject to legal obligations and duties, and derive all their powers from the legislature, except where the Constitution of the state otherwise provides. They have only such powers as the legislature confers upon them. All the rights, duties, and obligations of such a corporation must be ascertained and defined by the laws of the state which created it.

Louisiana ex rel. Folsom v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 27 L. ed. 936, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. ed. 822; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

The terms of the act do not violate the provisions of the 14th Amendment guarantying the equal protection of the laws.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R.

Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The only question under this writ of error is as to the validity of a statute of the state of Illinois entitled, "An Act to Indemnify the Owner of Property for Damages by Mobs and Riots." Laws of 1887, p. 237.

The defendant in error recovered a judgment against the city under that statute, which was affirmed in the supreme court of the state. 237 Ill. 46, 86 N. E. 683. The validity of the law under the Illinois Constitution was thus affirmed, and that question is thereby foreclosed. But it was urged in the Illinois courts that the act violated the guaranty of due process of law and the equal protection of the law, as provided by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

By the provisions of the statute referred to, a city is made liable for three fourths of the damage resulting to property situated therein, caused by the violence of any mob or riotous assemblage of more than twelve persons, not abetted or permitted by the negligent or wrongful act of the owner, etc. If the damage be to property not within the city, then the county in which it is located is in like manner made responsible. The act saves to the owner his action against the rioters, and gives the city or county, as the case may be, a lien upon any judgment against such participants for reimbursement, or a remedy to the city or county directly against the individuals causing the damage, to the amount of any judgment it may have paid the sufferer.

It is said that the act denies to the city due process of law, since it imposes liability irrespective of any question of the power of the city to have prevented the violence, or of negligence in the use of its power. 322] This was the interpretation *placed upon the act by the supreme court of Illinois. Does the law as thus interpreted deny due process of law? That the law provides for a judicial hearing and a remedy over against those primarily liable narrows the objection to the single question of legislative power to impose liability regardless of fault.

It is a general principle of our law that there is no individual liability for an act which ordinary human care and foresight could not guard against. It is also a general principle of the same law that a loss from any cause purely accidental must rest where it chances to fall. But behind and above these general principles which the law recognizes as ordinarily prevailing, there lies the legislative power, which, in the absence of organic restraint, may, for the general welfare of society, impose obligations and responsibilities otherwise non-existent.

Primarily, governments exist for the maintenance of social order. Hence it is that the obligation of the government to protect life, liberty, and property against the conduct of the indifferent, the careless, and the evil-minded, may be regarded as lying at the very foundation of the social compact. A recognition of this supreme obligation is found in those exertions of the legislative power which have as an end the preservation of social order and the protection of the welfare of the public and of the individual. If such legislation be reasonably adapted to the end in view, affords a hearing before judgment, and is not forbidden by some other affirmative provision of constitutional law, it is not to be regarded as denying due process of law under the provisions of the 14th Amendment.

The law in question is a valid exercise of the police power of the state of Illinois. It rests upon the duty of the state to protect its citizens in the enjoyment and possession of their acquisitions, and is but a recognition of the obligation of the state to preserve social order and the property of the citizen against the violence of a riot or a mob.

*The state is the creator of subor-[323]dinate municipal governments. It vests in them the police powers essential to the preservation of law and order. It imposes upon them the duty of protecting property situated within their limits from the violence of such public breaches of the peace as are mobs and riots. This duty and obligation thus intrusted to the local subordinate government is by this enactment emphasized and enforced by imposing upon the local community absolute liability for property losses resulting from the violence of such public tumults.

The policy of imposing liability upon a civil subdivision of government exercising delegated police power is familiar to every student of the common law. We find it recognized in the beginning of the police system of Anglo-Saxon people. Thus, "The Hundred," a very early form of civil subdivision, was held answerable for robberies committed within the division. By a series of statutes, beginning possibly in 1285, in the statutes of Westminster, coming on down to the 27th Elizabeth, the riot act of George I. and act of George II., chap. 10, we may find a continuous recognition of the principle that a civil subdivision intrusted with the duty of protecting property in its midst, and with police power to discharge the function, may be made answerable not only for negligence affirmatively shown, but absolutely as not having afforded a protection adequate to the obligation. Statutes of a similar character have been enacted by several of the states and held valid exertions of the police power. Darlington v. New York, 31 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248; Fauvia v. New Orleans, 20 La. Ann. 410; Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 670. The imposition of absolute liability upon the community when property is destroyed through the violence of a mob is not, therefore, an unusual police regulation. Neither is it arbitrary, as not resting upon reasonable grounds of policy. Such a regulation has a tendency to deter the 324]*lawless, since the sufferer must be compensated by a tax burden which will fall upon all property, including that of the evil doers as members of the community. It is likewise calculated to stimulate the exertions of the indifferent and the law-abiding to avoid the falling of a burden which they must share with the lawless. In that it directly operates on and affects public opinion, it tends strongly to the upholding of the empire of the law.

There remains the contention that the act discriminates between cities and villages or other incorporated towns.

The liability is imposed upon the city if the property be within the limits of a city; if not, then upon the county. The classification is not an unreasonable one. A city is presumptively the more populous and better organized community. As such it may well be singled out and made exclusively responsible for the consequence of riots and mobs to property therein.

The county, which includes the city and other incorporated subdivisions, is, not unreasonably, made liable to all sufferers whose property is not within the limits of a city.

The power of the state to impose liability for damage and injury to property from riots and mobs includes the power to make a classification of the subordinate municipalities upon which the responsibility may be imposed. It is a matter for the exercise of legislative discretion, and the equal protection of the law is not denied where the classification is not so unreasonable and extravagant as to be a mere arbitrary mandate.

56 L. ed.

The cases upon this subject are so numerous as to need no further elucidation.

Among the later cases are Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 865; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; House v. Mayes, 219 U. S. 270, 55 L. ed. 213, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

Judgment affirmed.

*ALLEN A. BROWN et al., Appts., [325 v.

ALTON WATER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 325-334.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below — prior appeal to circuit court of appeals.

A direct appeal will not lie to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), to review, as presenting a question of jurisdiction, a decree of a circuit court entered pursuant to the mandate of a circuit court of appeals, which, being of the opinion that the bill was within the ancillary jurisdiction of the circuit court, had reversed a decree of that court dismissing such bill for want of jurisdiction, since there was an opportunity afforded by the statute to obtain a review of the jurisdictional question in the Supreme Court, either upon a certificate of the circuit court of appeals, or on writ of certiorari to that court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 990-993, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 75.]

Argued December 4 and 5, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois to review a decree entered pursuant to the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, reversing a prior decree of the Circuit Court, dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a bill invoking the ancillary jurisdiction of the court to protect rights acquired under a foreclosure decree. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On direct appeals to Federal Supreme Court from circuit and district courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333.

Messrs. Elijah N. Zoline and James Hamilton Lewis argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

Mr. William Burry argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Levi Davis and F. B. Johnstone, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In view of the fact that our interposition was vainly sought at one or the other stage 326] of this protracted litigation, *we shall state the history of the controversy more fully than perhaps we would otherwise do.

In 1901 the New England Water Company owned and operated a water plant at Alton, Illinois. This plant was acquired from the Alton Water Works Company. In October, 1901, the United Water Works Company filed in a court of the state of Illinois a creditors' bill against the New England Water Company and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, trustee under a mortgage covering the plant of the waterworks company. Other parties and corporations, because of their asserted claims in or to the property, were joined as defendants.

The Farmers' Loan & Trust Company not only appeared in the cause, but in the same court filed a bill to foreclose its mortgage. Among those made defendants to this bill were a corporation known as the Boston Water & Light Company and the International Trust Company. The Boston Company was made a defendant on the ground that it asserted some claim to a portion of the property which the complainant insisted was covered by the mortgage sought to be foreclosed as a result of an after-acquired property clause contained in that mortgage. The International Trust Company was made a defendant as trustee of a mortgage executed in favor of that company by the Boston Company, embracing the property which the bill averred was covered by the prior mortgage in favor of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company.

The causes were consolidated and a receiver was appointed. The Boston Water & Light Company, asserting a separable controversy, removed the consolidated cause to the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Illinois, and that court overruled a motion to remand. The International Trust Company answered and contested the claim made in the bill that the property mortgaged to it was covered by the mortgage of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company.

327] *The circuit court entered a final decree on December 23, 1903. By that decree the operation of the mortgage in favor of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, as 222 charged in the bill, was recognized and the priorities of the respective liens upon the property were fixed. While the lien of the mortgage in favor of the International Trust Company, as trustee, was recognized, it was decreed to be subordinate to the prior mortgage to the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company. The decree contained the usual provisions fixing the amount due, directing payment, ordering a sale upon default in payment, and barring all parties and their privies.

The circuit court of appeals, on an appeal taken by the International Trust Company and others, finally disposed of the case. The removal was sustained, and it was held that by the after-acquired property clause in the mortgage of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, that mortgage embraced the property covered by the mortgage in favor of the International Trust Company as trustee. 69 C. C. A. 297, 136 Fed. 521. A writ of certiorari was refused by this court on April 3, 1905. Boston Water & Light Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. and New England Waterworks Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 197 U. S. 622, 49 L. ed. 910, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798, 799.

A sale under the decree of foreclosure took place, the property bringing about enough to satisfy the mortgage in favor of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company. Pending a motion to confirm this sale, certain parties, the same who are now appellants, alleging themselves to be holders of bonds secured by the mortgage of the International Trust Company, objected to the confirmation of the sale, on the ground that the property embraced in the mortgage to the International Trust Company was not covered by the mortgage of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company. It was alleged that the persons appearing were not privies to the foreclosure proceedings and the decree entered *therein, because they had 328 not been made parties eo nomine, and were not represented by the International Trust Company, as the powers conferred upon that corporation by the deed of trust did not give authority to represent the bondholders. The objections were stricken from the files, and the sale was confirmed. Among other things, the order of confirmation enjoined all parties to the suit and all persons claiming through or under them, their attorneys, solicitors, etc., "from setting up any pretended or alleged title against the title of the purchasers." A question as to the distribution of the proceeds among coupon holders was subsequently reviewed in the circuit court of appeals. 70 C. C. A. 163, 137 Fed. 729.

The present appellee, the Alton Water Company, became the owner of the property sold under the decree in foreclosure. Subsequently the present appellants, as holders of bonds secured by the mortgage to the International Trust Company, and the same persons who had objected to the confirmation of the sale, treating the prior foreclosure proceedings as to them as non-existing, commenced in a state court a suit to foreclose the mortgage in favor of the International Trust Company. The International Trust Company, the Boston Water & Light Company, the Alton Water Works Company, the Alton Water Company, as one in possession of the property, as well as other bondholders, various alleged lien holders, and adverse claimants, were made parties. As stated by both parties in argument, persons who were interested in maintaining the decree in the prior foreclosure proceedings asked a commitment for contempt against the attorney who appeared for the complainants in the suit in the state court, and under the stress of a commitment for contempt the proceedings in the state court were discontinued. The commitment was, however, set aside by the circuit court of appeals, 83 C. C. A. 211, 154 Fed. 273, and a petition for a writ of 329 certiorari to review the order of reversal was denied by this court. Peck v. Lewis, 207 U. S. 593, 52 L. ed. 355, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

Following the decision last referred to, appellants refiled their foreclosure bill in the state court. The Alton Water Company thereupon filed in the court below the bill which is now before us as ancillary to the bill filed in the original foreclosure suit, invoking the authority of the court in virtue of the jurisdiction acquired in the foreclosure proceedings, to protect, as between the parties to such suit, the rights acquired under the foreclosure sale. The bill only prayed that the further prosecution in the state court be enjoined. The defendants were those who were asserting the right as bondholders under the International Trust Company mortgage to foreclosure in the state court, and their attorneys. Each of such defendants separately filed a general demurrer, and each also specially demurred on the ground that the court was "without jurisdiction, both over the subject-matter and parties to the suit," and that the bill was not an ancillary bill, as it appeared on its face that the defendant was not a party to the prior foreclosure proceedings. The demurrers were sustained and the bill was dismissed "for want of jurisdiction."

The circuit court of appeals reversed this decree, and held that the persons who, as alleged bondholders, were complainants in the foreclosure suit in the state court, had been fully represented in the prior foreclosure by the International Trust Company, and therefore that such persons were parties and privies to the prior decree, and their rights were concluded thereby. Upon this basis it was expressly decided that the bill did not invoke the power of the court as a matter of original jurisdiction, but was, in its essence, purely ancillary, since it only sought the aid of the court to uphold a jurisdiction previously acquired, and to enforce and protect an authority previously exerted. In thus enforcing its prior decree it was pointed out there was no 330 room for saying that the original jurisdiction and power of the court as a Federal court was involved, upon the theory that the defendants had not been brought in by proper process, since there was no controversy on that subject. It was moreover held that upon the premises stated, none of the grounds of demurrer raised any controversy as to the general power of the court, under the laws of the United States, to administer the relief prayed, but simply called in question the right of the court, as a matter of chancery practice, to afford relief in the mode and manner asked. The court decided that the case was one properly within its appellate cognizance, and was not within the category of cases susceptible of being brought directly to this court from a circuit court, as involving the jurisdiction and authority of the circuit court as a Federal court. 92 C. C. A. 598, 166 Fed. 840. A petition for certiorari to review this action of the court was denied on January 11, 1909. Lewis v. Alton Water Co. 212 U. S. 581, 53 L. ed. 659, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

Several months after the filing of the mandate of the circuit court of appeals, reversing the decree of dismissal, the cause was heard upon bill and answer and upon the default of certain defendants. A decree was entered perpetually enjoining the prosecution of the cause in the state court, and prohibiting any attempt in the future to foreclose the mortgage to the International Trust Company. Thereupon the court allowed the direct appeal which is now before us. At the time of granting the appeal there was filed among the papers in the cause a certificate signed by the presiding judge, in which in substance it was recited that when the case came on for hearing, the answering defendants challenged the jurisdiction of the court as a Federal court to hear and determine the cause, and that the objection was overruled and exception taken. It was further recited that, at the close of the hearing, the defendants excepted to the ruling "that the acts stated in the answers do not 331 constitute a sufficient defense in law to the cause of action of the complainants, and that no constitutional guaranties or privileges of the defendants, as set forth in their answers, were violated by the entering of the decree set forth in the bill and answer, and that the defendants were not deprived of their property without due process of law, in violation of the Federal Constitution."

It is plain that our right to review depends on the existence of a question of jurisdiction subject, under the judiciary act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488], to be brought here directly from a circuit court. The case reduces itself to this, since the matters of constitutional right to which the court refers in its certificate are not independent, but are involved in and subordinate to the question of jurisdiction, and hence will be disposed of by deciding that issue.

It is not disputable that the action of the court below on the question of jurisdiction was the necessary result of the decision of the circuit court of appeals, since it was the imperative duty of the circuit court to give effect to that decision. As consequently it will be impossible to reverse for error the action of the circuit court without reversing the foundation upon which the action of that court rested, that is, the dominant decree of the circuit court of appeals, it must result that the decree can only be reversed by reviewing and reversing the decree of the circuit court of appeals. That decree, however, not being before us, and moreover, as the statute gives no power to this court to review a decree of a circuit court of appeals merely because of the existence of a question of jurisdiction, it comes to pass that we may not by indirection do that which we cannot do directly, and hence the decree of the circuit court, under the conditions here existing, is not susceptible of being reviewed.

The fundamental mistake which underlies the argument by which it is sought to sustain the right to a direct *review consists in failing to distinguish between the mere methods of review provided by the act of 1891, and the distribution made by that act of original and appellate judicial power. More immediately the fault of the argument consists in disregarding the duty of the circuit court to apply the law of the case arising from the decision of the circuit court of appeals,—an error hitherto pointed out in Aspen Min. & Mill. Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4. That case involved an unsuccessful attempt to obtain a review in this court of a judgment of a circuit court entered in compliance with a mandate of the circuit court of appeals, to which the case had been previously taken. In denying the right to review under the circumstances, the court said (p. 37):

"That court [the circuit court of appeals] took jurisdiction, passed upon the case, and determined by its judgment that the appeal had been properly taken. If error was committed in so doing, it is not for the circuit court to pass upon that question. The circuit court could not do otherwise than carry out the mandate from the court of appeals, and could not refuse to do so on the ground of want of jurisdiction in itself or in the appellate court."

But the proposition insisted upon virtually is that this ruling is inapplicable here, since this case involves a question of jurisdiction directly reviewable in this court under the act of 1891. The reasoning sustaining this assumption is as follows: As, it is said, the decision of the circuit court was in favor of the defendants, and therefore no occasion arose to seek a review of the question of jurisdiction until the decree of the circuit court of appeals, unless it be held that the right exists to review the action of the circuit court, it will arise that the right of direct review of the jurisdictional questions, which it was the purpose of the act of 1891 to confer upon this court, will be lost in many cases, and thus the purpose of the statute be frustrated. This, however, as already pointed out, in *a changed form of statement[333 involves confounding the remedial process created by the act of 1891, with the distribution of jurisdiction made by that act. True it is that the act confers authority to directly review the classes of jurisdictional questions which the act contemplates. True, also, it is that the act does not deprive judgments of the circuit courts of appeals of their final character, and open them to review in this court, because alone of the presence of a jurisdictional question susceptible of being reviewed directly from a circuit court. But this affords no reason for the exertion of an appellate power not conferred by the act, nor does it justify the assumption that the power of this court to review in such a case would be wanting. On the contrary, as pointed out long ago by this court, the remedial processes which the statute of 1891 creates when rightly understood are adequate, by one method or the other, to afford ample opportunity for a review by this court of every judgment or decree of a lower court which the statute contemplated should be reviewed and revised by this court. Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 41 L. ed. 745, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343. Thus, as the case cited points out, if a question of jurisdiction which would be directly reviewable in this court if arising in the circuit court should develop or require decision for the first time in the circuit courts of appeals, the power to certify to this court would afford ample means to obtain a review by this court of such question. And if that right in such a case should not be exerted by the circuit court of appeals, the discretionary right to allow the writ of certiorari which the act confers would afford a complete means of securing, in the fullest degree, the results contemplated by the act. It is, of course, an obvious misconception to indulge in the assumption that it was the duty of the circuit court of appeals to have certified the question of jurisdiction, since the opinion of that court shows that it deemed the case would not have justified a 334] direct appeal to this court had *the question of jurisdiction arisen primarily in the circuit court. The fact that after the decision of the circuit court of appeals a petition for certiorari was considered and by this court denied makes it certain that there was opportunity by this court to revise the action of the circuit court of appeals.

As it follows that we have no jurisdiction to review by direct appeal the action of the Circuit Court in giving effect to the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, it results that the appeal must be dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

R. J. BERRYMAN, Assessor; P. B. Hawley, Treasurer; W. J. Honeycutt, Auditor, et al., Appts.,

v.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF WHITMAN COLLEGE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 334-353.)

Courts — jurisdictional amount — suit to enjoin tax.

1. A suit to enjoin the collection of taxes on the property of an educational institution on the ground of a perpetual contract of exemption from taxation, protected from impairment by the contract clause of the Federal Constitution, involves the amount essential to sustain the original jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, where the contract right exceeds in value that amount, although the particular tax assessed and levied is less than that sum.

[For other cases, see Courts, 925, 926, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Territories — power of legislature — grant of especial privileges.

2. The granting of especial privileges by any form of legislative action, and not merely the conferring of such privileges as a part of the grant of a forbidden private charter, was what was prohibited by the provision of the Washington organic act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat at L. 426, chap. 150), that the territorial legislature should not grant private charters or especial privileges, but might enact general incorporation acts.

[For other cases, see Territories, 26-35, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Territories — power of legislature — grant of especial privileges.

3. The generic prohibition against the granting of especial privileges, made by the Washington organic act of March 2, 1867, cannot be construed as intended to forbid merely the creation of such privileges as a legislative grant of an exclusive right to ferries, bridges, etc., even if it be conceded that such grants were a common form of territorial legislative abuse prior to the adoption of that statute, and were the generating cause of the insertion of this prohibition.

[For other cases, see Territories, 26-35, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — exemptions — construction.

4. The rule of strict construction is just as applicable when determining whether words of restriction found in the fundamental law are intended to operate as a limitation on the legislative power to grant contract exemptions from taxation, as where the question is whether the particular terms of an alleged contract did or did not embrace an exemption from taxation.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 372-375, 396-417, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — exemptions — legislative power.

5. A territorial statute giving perpetual succession to an incorporated educational institution, and endowing it with a perpetual exemption from taxation as to all its property, real and personal, grants an especial privilege within the meaning of the provisions of the Washington organic act of March 2, 1867, that the territorial legislature shall not grant private charters or especial privileges, but may enact general incorporation acts.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 396-417, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Territories — congressional confirmation — acquiescence.

6. The assent of Congress to the grant

That exemption from taxation, whether a contract or not, is not implied—see note to Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 L. ed. U. S. 805.

As to the power of a state legislature to exempt from taxation—see note to Hogg v. Mackay, 19 L.R.A. 77.

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of Federal courts as affected by the amount in dispute—see notes to Rich v. Bray, 2 L.R.A. 225; Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 75; Tennent-Stribling Shoe Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 459, and O. J. Lewis Mercantile Co. v. Klepner, 100 C. C. A. 288.

of an especial privilege by the territorial legislature, contrary to the express provisions of the organic act, cannot be implied from its failure to disapprove such enactment.

[For other cases, see Territories, 40, 41, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No 95.]

Argued December 13, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Washington to review a decree enjoining the collection of a tax on the ground of a perpetual contract exemption from taxation. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 156 Fed. 112.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Everett J. Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lester S. Wilson, filed a brief for appellants:

The effect on future taxation of a decision that the particular taxation is invalid cannot be availed of to add to the sum or value of the matter in dispute.

Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Clay Center v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 145 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 685, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; New England Mortg. Secur. Co. v. Gay, 145 U. S. 123, 36 L. ed. 646, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 815; Citizens' Bank v. Cannon, 164 U. S. 319, 41 L. ed. 451, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Rude v. Westcott, 130 U. S. 152, 32 L. ed. 888, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 206, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

The prayer for a perpetual injunction against future taxation does not strengthen or add to the value of the matter in dispute.

Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Washington & G. R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. ed. 951, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64.

The territorial grant of exemption was an "especial privilege," within the meaning of the amendment to the organic act of Congress relating to territories, of March 2, 1867, being § 1889 of U. S. Revised Statutes.

Given v. Wright, 117 U. S. 648, 29 L. ed. 1021, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217, 23 L. ed. 860; Wilson v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417, 26 L. ed. 401; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176, 29 L. ed. 121, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 813; Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. (Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry)

112 U. S. 609, 28 L. ed. 837, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

A territorial law passed in violation of the positive prohibition of Congress is void.

Clayton v. Utah, 132 U. S. 632, 33 L. ed. 455, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

This court has several times held that the assent of Congress may be implied, from lapse of time, and without specific sanction, to certain laws of a territory. But the laws so presumptively sanctioned relate to territorial matters of a general character, within the apparent scope of a territorial legislature, and necessary to the efficient regulation and control of those general matters which had been delegated to the territorial legislature by Congress.

Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 446, 20 L. ed. 662; Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 12 How. 7, 13 L. ed. 870; Baca v. Perez, 8 N. M. 187, 42 Pac. 162.

Mr. W. T. Dovell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Thomas Burke and George Turner, filed a brief for appellee:

When the object or purpose of the bill is the assertion of a right which is alleged to be disputed by the respondent, and it may be fairly gathered from the bill that the asserted right is of a value in excess of $2,000, jurisdiction is thereby conferred.

Brown v. Trousdale, 138 U. S. 389, 34 L. ed. 987, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McConnell, 82 Fed. 65; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 41 L. ed. 648, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Kuteman, 4 C. C. A. 503, 13 U. S. App. 99, 54 Fed. 547; Stinson v. Dousman, 20 How. 461, 15 L. ed. 966; Evenson v. Spaulding, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 904, 82 C. C. A. 263, 150 Fed. 517; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Frank, 110 Fed. 689; Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167, 32 L. ed. 895, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Albright & New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 L. ed. 346, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609; Simon v. House, 46 Fed. 317; Humes v. Ft. Smith, 93 Fed. 857; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756; Hutchinson v. Beckham, 55 C. C. A. 333, 118 Fed. 399; Pennsylvania Co. v. Bay, 138 Fed. 203; Bitterman v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 207 U. S. 225, 52 L. ed. 183, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91, 12 Ann. Cas. 693; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Ward, 2 Black, 485, 17 L. ed. 311; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. 205 U. S. 322, 51 L. ed. 821, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Lanning v. Osborne, 79 Fed. 657.

The term "especial privileges," as used in the act of Congress, does not refer to a grant of this character.

Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U.

S. 176, 29 L. ed. 121, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 813; Phoenix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. ed. 660, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Elk Point v. Vaughn, 1 Dak. 113, 46 N. W. 578; Plattsmouth v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 80 Neb. 460, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 654, 127 Am. St. Rep. 779, 114 N. W. 588; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 27 L. ed. 401, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

An institution of the character of Whitman College renders to the state a consideration to support its charter.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 519, 4 L. ed. 629; Home of Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 437, 19 L. ed. 495, 497; Nobles County v. Hamline University, 46 Minn. 316, 48 N. W. 1119; Yale University v. New Haven, 71 Conn. 316, 43 L.R.A. 490, 42 Atl. 87.

No grant made by the state for an adequate consideration may be called an "especial privilege."

Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. 33 Fed. 769; Exempt Firemen's Benev. Fund v. Roome, 93 N. Y. 313, 45 Am. Rep. 217.

The failure of Congress to disapprove the act of the legislature is the strongest possible evidence of approval by that body.

Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 446, 20 L. ed. 662; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 54, note; Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 12 How. 1, 13 L. ed. 867; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Lesueur, 2 Ariz. 428, 1 L.R.A. 244, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 189, 19 Pac. 157; Sperling v. Calfee, 7 Mont. 514, 19 Pac. 204; Baca v. Perez, 8 N. M. 187, 42 Pac. 162; Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. 540.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

On December 20, 1859, the legislature of Washington enacted a private law creating Whitman Seminary in Walla Walla county. By the act eight persons were incorporated under the name of the "President and Trustees of Whitman Seminary." The corporation was given perpetual existence and the incorporators authority to govern its affairs and to name their successors. The right to acquire and hold real estate was conferred, with the duty of devoting all the revenue to the support of an institution of learning, for the education of both sexes, which it was the purpose of the act to have established. The capital stock of the corporation was limited by the 6th section to $150,000. The act was accepted by the incorporators, and the institution for which it provided, the Whitman Seminary, was established in Walla Walla county. After a lapse of twenty-three years, the Seminary, in November, 1883, owned considerable personal and real property, devoted to the purposes of the corporation.

56 L. ed.

In that year and month a special act was passed by the territorial legislature, entitled, "An Act to Amend . . ." the act previously referred to. By this act, in the form of an amendment, the original incorporators were incorporated under the name of "The Board of Trustees of Whitman College." The act, section by section, amended the prior act. It gave the trustees power to perpetuate themselves and govern the new corporation, which [343] was endowed with perpetual existence. The act, in many respects, enlarged the powers of the old corporation, struck out the 6th section, which contained the limitation of $150,000 of capital stock, and substituted for it the following: "That the property of said Board of Trustees of Whitman College, including all income and proceeds, shall be used exclusively for the purpose of education, and in consideration of said use the said property, income, and proceeds shall not be subject to taxation." The organic law of the territory, the act of Congress of March, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 426, chap. 150), when this last act was passed, contained the following, now embodied in Rev. Stat. § 1889:

"That the legislative assemblies of the several territories of the United States shall not, after the passage of this act, grant private charters or especial privileges, but they may, by general incorporation acts, permit persons to associate themselves together as bodies corporate, for mining, manufacturing, and other industrial pursuits, or the construction or operation of railroads, wagon roads, irrigating ditches, and the colonization and improvement of lands in connection therewith, or for colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries, or any benevolent, charitable, or scientific association."

Whitman College took over the property and effects of the Seminary. It increased its holdings of real and personal property, the avails of which were all devoted to the purposes of the institution. It was in existence when the territorial government passed out of being and the state of Washington was incorporated into the Union, and it is conceded by both sides in argument that no question which requires to be decided on this record calls for a consideration of any of the events or legislation which were a part of the transition from the territorial form of government to statehood. Up to 1905 it is inferable that no attempt was made to tax the property of Whitman College. *In 1905, however, [344] the assessing officers of the county of Walla Walla, who are the appellants upon this record, acting under the authority of the state taxing law, and upon the assumption that the property of the corporation was taxable, assessed its real property in the county of Walla Walla not actually and physically used for the purposes of the institution, and taxes were levied on such assessment, amounting to $946.32. The corporation thereupon filed in the circuit court of the United States the bill which is now before us. The bill contained no averment of diversity of citizenship, and exclusively invoked the authority of the court below upon the ground of the existence of a perpetual contract right of exemption from taxation created by the 6th section of the act of 1883, and the impairment of such contract by the assessment and levy of the taxes in question.

The bill, as amended by stipulation, averred the existence of the contract, the compliance by the corporation with all its obligations, the acquisition of large amounts of property through contributions and otherwise dedicated to the purposes of the corporation, the detriment and loss which would be occasioned as the result of levying taxes upon the property of the corporation by the county of Walla Walla or otherwise by state authority, the destruction of the right of perpetual exemption, not only as to the present, but as to all future acquired property of the corporation, which would result, and a consequent loss or damage vastly in excess of $2,000. In substance, the prayer was for a decree recognizing and enforcing the contract of perpetual exemption from taxation as to all the property of the corporation, present or prospective, and for an injunction adequate to secure these results.

The defendants by demurrers challenged the jurisdiction of the court and the equity of the bill. After hearing, the court held that it had jurisdiction, that the contract 345*]declared on had been established, and was protected from impairment by the contract clause of the Constitution, and therefore the assessment and levy of the taxes complained of were void. As defendants elected not to further plead, a final decree was entered, granting the relief prayed in the bill. The appeal now before us was then taken.

The taxing officers of the county of Walla Walla, the defendants below and appellants here, insist that we may not review the merits, because the court below had no jurisdiction over the cause, and therefore we must reverse and remand, with directions to dismiss the bill. This rests upon the proposition that, as the tax was below the jurisdictional amount, it afforded no basis for jurisdiction. The sum of the levied tax, it is urged, could not be increased by considering the power of taxation which might be exerted in other taxing districts, or by adding taxes which, if the right to tax existed, might be assessed and levied in future years. This, it is insisted, is not only sustained by reason, but is sanctioned by prior decisions of this court.

Both assumptions are wrong. The first, because it misconceives the character of the relief prayed, which was the enforcement of a contract exemption during the perpetual life of the corporation, and as broad as its power to acquire and hold property.

Considering the averments of the bill, the amount and value of the property of the corporation, and the nature and character of the contract of exemption asserted, it cannot be doubted that the value of the thing in issue, the contract right, exceeded in value the jurisdictional amount. Granting that the uncertainties of the future and the shifting ownership of property forbids, in a contest merely over the validity of a tax, adding the sum of future taxes which might be levied to the amount of taxes actually levied for the purpose of jurisdiction, that principle can have no application to a case where the issue *presented is[346 not only the right to collect, but also to levy all future taxes. The admission that the right to tax may be abridged by contract, and that such contract may not be impaired without violating the Constitution, carries with it of necessity the power and the duty to protect the contract right, and in the nature of things causes jurisdiction for such purpose to be measured by the value of the right to be protected, and not by the value of some mere isolated element of that right. And the doctrine just cited has been applied in two cases so obviously in principle like this as practically to foreclose the question. The first is New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905. In that case a corporation of the state of Louisiana filed its bill in the circuit court to enjoin the collection of all taxes of a particular character against it, on the ground of a contract of exemption protected from impairment by the contract clause of the Constitution. As a means of establishing the existence of the contract exemption relied upon, certain judgments recognizing the existence of the contract exemption and enjoining particular taxes were pleaded as conclusively, by the principle of the thing adjudged, establishing the existence of the alleged contract. It was contended, among other things, that as the controversies in the cases in which judgments had been rendered concerned taxes for only particular years, the thing adjudged arising from the judgments was necessarily restricted to the taxes of the years in controversy, and did not extend to future taxes, as they were not and could not have been embraced in the litigation. Deciding that this contention was unsound, and deducing the existence of the contract as the result of the proof arising from the thing adjudged, it was pointed out that to deny in a case of contract exempting from taxation the right to a decree coextensive with the power to tax which the contract restrained would be, in and of itself, an impairment of the contract, since, if judicial power was not adequate to control by the thing adjudged the right to a contract exemption, and to prevent violations of such right, the power to contract would be of no avail. The second case, Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, came here on error to the court of appeals of the state of Kentucky. In the state court a judgment of a circuit court of the United States, recognizing the existence of contract exemption from taxation, was pleaded as a bar against the enforcement of taxes which were embraced within the contract of exemption. The state court refused to give effect to the pleaded judgment of the circuit court of the United States on the ground that as, by the settled rule in Kentucky, judgments restraining the collection of taxes were limited to the particular taxes referred to, and did not extend to taxes for future years, the judgment of the circuit court should be so limited, and therefore that judgment was not res judicata. In reversing the action of the state court on this subject, this court said (p. 512):

"The vice of this argument consists in assuming that the taxes for specific years were alone involved and covered by the decree of the court. The controversy was as to the force and effect of the Hewitt law as a contract; not for one year, but for all years; not for one assessment, but for all assessments of taxes upon certain property of the bank. The contest was over the contract and the consequent want of power to collect any and all taxes the assessment of which did violence to the contract rights of the bank. The court had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject-matter of the suit, and it was adjudicated that there was a contract which was entitled to protection against impairment by state legislation within the right guaranteed by the Federal Constitution. This adjudication necessarily included not only the taxes for specific years, but foreclosed the right to collect any taxes concerning which the contract afforded immunity to the bank."

348]*Measuring the contention as to the absence of the jurisdictional sum by the 56 L. ed.

principles thus established, it answers itself, since the argument is equivalent to saying that a subject which is necessarily included in the relief to be granted, and is, in the nature of things, concluded by the decree to be rendered, is yet excluded from consideration for the purpose of the issues in the cause,—that is, may not be taken into account in ascertaining whether there is jurisdiction over the controversy.

We state in the margin the cases principally relied upon to support the contention as to the want of jurisdiction.† It would suffice to say of these cases that if they supported the proposition which they are cited to maintain, they have been qualified and restricted by the cases which we have just reviewed. But such result is uncalled for, as an analysis of the case will show that all of them considered, in the absence of contract, where the right to levy a particular tax was assailed, whether there was authority to make up the jurisdictional amount required, by calling into the consideration the influence which the judgment might have upon different taxes or the power to take in view future illegal taxes, upon the theory that they might be levied.

We come to the merits, that is, to determine whether the special act incorporating Whitman College was a private charter within the prohibition of the organic act, and therefore void, and, if not, whether the exemption from taxation which it conferred was an "especial privilege" within the prohibition of the organic act, and hence beyond the power of the territorial legislature to grant. We thus at once bring face to face the act of 1883 and the *prohibitions of the organic act, dis- [349 missing all questions concerning the incorporation of the territory of Washington into the Union as a state, because, as we have seen, it is conceded that nothing on that subject controls the question here to be decided.

We do not think it necessary to inquire whether the act of 1883, although it be assumed that it virtually called into being a new juridical person, endowed with new powers and duties, may be treated, not as the original grant of a private charter, but as simply an amendment of the prior charter, because of the form in which the act of 1883 was couched. This is done, because, as the issues for decision will be disposed of by considering the case in the light of the prohibition against "especial privileges," it will become unnecessary to consider the operation of the prohibition against the grant of private charters. We think it clear also that the disjunctive character of the prohibition found in the organic act excludes in reason the possibility of saying, as contended in argument, that the especial privileges provided against were simply intended to prohibit the conferring of such privileges as part and parcel of the granting of the prohibited private charters. To adopt such a view would cause the prohibition against especial privileges to be superfluous, and would be repugnant to the plain intent of the act, as manifested from its language. That intent, we think, was to take away the power to grant the forbidden especial privileges by any form of legislative action, leaving no room, therefore, for the implication that it was the purpose of the organic act to recognize the right to give especial privileges, provided only it was not made a part of the grant of a forbidden private charter. And this also completely serves to dispose of the contention that it was the intention of the prohibition against especial privileges to forbid merely the creation of such privileges as a legislative grant of an exclusive 350]right to ferries, bridges, etc., *which it is urged was a common form of territorial legislative abuse prior to the adoption, in 1867, of the organic act, and therefore was presumably the evil intended to be reached by the enactment of that act. We say this because, even if it be conceded that such alleged abuses were the generating cause of the insertion in the organic act of the prohibition against especial privileges, that concession affords no ground for the generic prohibition, and for saying that it should be only applied to one class of especial privileges, to the exclusion of all other such privileges. We must be controlled by the power which the act manifests, not by a consideration of the mere motive which initially energized the bringing of the power into play.

†Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Clay Center v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 145 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 685, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; New England Mortg. Secur. Co. v. Gay, 145 U. S. 123, 36 L. ed. 646, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 815; Citizens' Bank v. Cannon, 164 U. S. 319, 41 L. ed. 451, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Rude v. Westcott, 130 U. S. 152, 32 L. ed. 888, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Walter v. Northeastern R. Co. 147 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 206, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

We at once, moreover, concede, for the sake of the argument, that the exemption from taxation which was conferred was upon a consideration, and therefore rested in contract, and if it was in the power of the territorial government to make, is protected from impairment by the contract clause of the Constitution. With this concession in mind, and before coming to determine whether the exemption was valid, that is, whether, in and by virtue of the prohibition in the organic law forbidding especial privileges, the territorial legislature was incompetent to grant a contract exemption, we briefly advert to the contention made that a broad meaning must be given to the organic act for the purpose, if it can be done, of establishing that there was no limit upon the power of the territorial legislature to exempt. It is conceded that the elementary rule is that exemptions from taxation must be strictly construed. But it is said that this applies only to the contract of alleged exemption, and has no relation to the inquiry whether the legislature had the power to exempt, because full legislative power must be presumed to exist unless there be a plain prohibition to the contrary. While we are of opinion that the contention has *no direct bearing on[351 the more important proposition here to be decided, we cannot give it, even by silence, our assent, because we consider that it admits, on the one hand, the rule of strict construction, and at once denies it upon the other, by improperly restricting the area of its operation. We say this because if, in a particular case, the duty arises of determining whether words of restriction found in the fundamental law are intended to operate a limitation on the legislative power to grant contract exemptions from taxation, the rule of strict construction is just as applicable as it would be to a case where it was applied for the purpose of determining whether the particular terms of an alleged contract did or did not embrace an exemption from taxation. We think the rule of construction is as broad as the subject to which it relates, and its operation does not depend upon whether the question is one of limitation of legislative power or of the true interpretation of a contract asserted to be one of exemption.

This brings us to the text of the organic act. That a contract giving perpetual succession to a corporation, and endowing it with a perpetual exemption from taxation as to all its property, real and personal, is an "especial privilege," seems to us too clear for anything but statement. We fail to see how any other conclusion can be reached, in view of the fact that the very essence of such a contract is to endow the corporation as to its property forever with the privilege of being exempt from the operation and control of the essential governmental power of taxation, and thereafter to cause the corporation and all its property, so far as that subject is concerned, to live under the law of the contract, and not under the law of general taxation.

But it is said that while this may be the superficial view, it is not an accurate and legal one, since the word "privilege" has been construed by this court not to include a 352]contract of exemption from taxation. The cases relied upon are, Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176, 29 L. ed. 121, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 813, and Phoenix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. ed. 660, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471. Briefly, the subject passed upon in those cases and in others of a similar character was this: Where a corporation enjoyed a right of exemption as to the whole or a part of its property, did such exemption from taxation pass under a foreclosure sale to the purchaser, at such sale when by law the rights and privileges of the corporation were transferred by the sale? In other words, the question was whether the transmission of the privileges of the corporation to another embraced the privilege resulting from a contract exemption from taxation. It was held that it did not, upon the theory that a contract exemption from taxation was so exceptional in its nature that the right to transmit it was not embraced in the general authority to transmit privileges, and therefore the power to transfer must be expressly and specially conferred. These rulings were but an illustration in another form of the duty to which we have previously referred under all circumstances to bring to the consideration of the question whether a contract exemption from taxation exists, the rule of strict construction. And of course, when the principle upon which the cases were decided is rightly understood, their inappositeness to the case before us is manifest. This must be, unless it can be said that a ruling which held that a contract of exemption was a privilege of such character that it could not be transmitted without express authority was a ruling that a contract exemption was no privilege at all.

It is urged that, as in this case there was a consideration for the especial privilege granted, the agreement of the incorporators to establish and maintain an institution of learning, therefore the exemption cannot be held to be an especial privilege within the intendment of the organic act, since the privilege so bestowed was 353]conferred not as *an especial privilege, but as an equivalent for the contract obligations assumed. As we have seen, however, it is the contract of exemption which, in the very nature of things, characterizes the grant as an especial privilege. When this is borne in mind it appears that the proposition is that the feature which gave to the grant the essential characteristic of an especial privilege must be held to cause it not to be of that nature.

The only principal contention remaining unnoticed is the alleged acquiescence of Congress in the grant of exemption, resulting from its failure to disapprove the act of 1883. Rev. Stat. § 1850. The foundation, however, upon which that contention rests, has been decided to be without merit. Clayton v. Utah, 132 U. S. 632, 642, 33 L. ed. 455, 459, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

We have not reviewed the minor considerations which, in various forms of statement, have been pressed in argument concerning the wisdom displayed by the territorial assembly in enacting the act of 1883, and the far-reaching and public benefits which have resulted from the provisions of that act, and the possible injury to the public weal to arise from now holding that the contract exemption from taxation which the act granted was beyond the scope of the legislative authority. It suffices to say that whatever may be the cogency of the suggestions thus made, it is obvious that they but invite us into a field of inquiry which lies beyond the line which separates the judicial from the legislative authority, and therefore we may not give heed to them.

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause is remanded to the District Court, with directions for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

*ROCK ISLAND PLOW COMPANY, [354]
Appt.,
v.

W. J. REARDON, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Frank Brown, Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 354-364.)

Execution — lien — delivery to sheriff.

1. The delivery to the sheriff of an execution on a judgment operates without levy, in Illinois, to create a lien upon the real and personal property of the judgment debtor within the county.

[For other cases, see Execution, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Execution — lien — conditional sales.

2. The lien created in Illinois by the delivery to the sheriff of an execution on a judgment attaches to the property held by the judgment debtor under a contract of conditional sale, and is paramount to the rights of the conditional vendor.

[For other cases, see Execution, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to laches as a defense—see notes to Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L.R.A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. 8 L.R.A. 248; Coffey v. Emigh, 10 L.R.A. 125; Pratt v. Carroll, 3 L. ed. U. S. 627; Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; and Abraham v. Ordway, 39 L. ed. U. S. 1027.

Bankruptcy — lien of execution creditor — preservation for benefit of estate.

3. The liens of execution creditors on property held by the insolvent judgment debtor under a contract of conditional sale, as they existed when a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed, could not be subsequently destroyed so as to prevent a court of bankruptcy from preserving them for the benefit of the estate, by the act of the conditional vendor in retaking the property.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 296-304, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Laches — as barring relief — rights of trustee in bankruptcy.

4. The trustee in bankruptcy is not barred, on the ground of laches, from asserting rights under the liens of execution creditors upon property held by the bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, which had been preserved for the benefit of the estate by an order of the bankruptcy court because the first based his right to relief solely upon the claim that an unlawful preference was created through the payment of an indebtedness by the transfer of the property to the vendor by the bankrupt when insolvent.

[Laches as equitable defense, see Limitation of Actions, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 98.]

Submitted December 11, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, dismissing the bill in a suit by a trustee to preserve liens of execution creditors for the benefit of the bankrupt estate. Affirmed.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 118, 168 Fed. 654.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice White:
355] *Whether the plow company or Reardon, as trustee of the bankrupt estate of Frank Brown, have the better right to certain personal property delivered by Brown to the plow company, is the question to be decided on this record.

The facts pertinent to the controversy are these: Brown was a merchant and engaged in business at Pekin, Tazewell county, Illinois. On November 13, 1907, he confessed judgment for $247.15 and $400 and costs in favor of a creditor, the Peoria Cordage Company, a corporation, and on the same day an execution was issued, which was received and indorsed by the sheriff of Tazewell county on the following day. On November 23, 1907, Brown confessed judgment in favor of another creditor, the D. M. Sechler Carriage Company, a corporation, for the sum of $282.25 and $400, with costs, and on the same day execution issued, and on the next day was received and indorsed by the sheriff of Tazewell county. While these executions were outstanding and unsatisfied, Brown, on November 25, 1907, delivered merchandise, consisting of gang plows, cultivators, and other farm implements of the value of $500, to the Rock Island Company, appellant, and as the result of the transaction an indebtedness of Brown to the plow company of $406 was extinguished. When the goods were delivered to the plow company, Brown was insolvent, and the plow company had reason to believe that such was the fact. Two days after the delivery of the property to the plow company, Brown filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, and Reardon was subsequently qualified as trustee of the bankrupt estate.

Seeking to avail of the provisions of § 67, paragraphs c and f of the bankruptcy act, the trustee, on January 21, 1908, filed with the referee a petition setting forth the obtaining of the judgments by the Sechler and cordage companies heretofore referred to, that the executions issued on those judgments were liens from the date of receipt by the sheriff on all the real and personal property *of the bankrupt located in Tazewell county, Illinois, and continued to be liens down to the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and prayed that the liens of said executions might be declared null and void as to the Sechler and cordage companies, but might be preserved for the benefit of the estate in bankruptcy. The creditors just named entered their appearance and consented that the prayer of the petition be granted, and an order was entered on the date when the petition was filed, granting the relief sought.

Three days after the entry of the subrogation order the trustee commenced this litigation by filing a bill of complaint on the chancery side of the district court of the United States, southern district of Illinois, northern division,—the same court in which the bankruptcy proceedings were pending. The petition assailed the transfer and delivery of property by Brown to the plow company on November 25, 1907, heretofore referred to, as an unlawful preference. The court was asked to decree a surrender of the property to the trustee, or payment of its value. On March 27, 1908, the plow company filed its plea, and therein in substance contended that the assailed transaction was not an unlawful preference. It averred that it had previously delivered the property to Brown, under and by virtue of the terms of certain written contracts, annexed as exhibits to the plea; that the title of such property "always was and remained in" the plow company; and, that it "lawfully took and repossessed itself" of the property by reason of the failure of Brown to pay for the same according to the contracts. Shortly after, the trustee, by leave, filed an amendment to his bill of complaint. The amendment consisted in detailing the facts as to the obtaining of the judgments of the Sechler and cordage companies heretofore referred to, and an issue of executions on the judgments prior to the transfer of Brown to the plow company, and that the executions 357]*were outstanding at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The proceedings before the referee culminating in the order preserving the liens of the judgments for the benefit of the bankrupt estate were next set forth, and it was claimed that the liens thereby preserved were superior to any claim which the plow company had to the goods in controversy. In a plea to the amended bill the plow company reiterated the facts upon which it based the claim that, in receiving the goods from Brown, it merely took possession of its own property, and had not obtained an unlawful preference. It further sets forth that when it received the goods no levy had been made under either of the executions issued upon the judgments obtained by the Sechler and cordage companies, and that in consequence it had the superior right to the goods. Want of notice of the subrogation proceedings and the consequent invalidity of the order of subrogation was also averred. It was in addition averred that the judgment in favor of the cordage company was not a valid lien on January 21, 1908, the date when the order of subrogation was made, because prior thereto the execution had been returned by the sheriff and filed and docketed in the court which had issued the same. Furthermore, it was averred that the execution on the Sechler judgment had been returned by the sheriff with an indorsement, "no property found," and was filed on February 22, 1908, in the court from which it had issued, and that rights based upon the issue of such execution could not be originated thereafter, viz., on April 16, 1908, when the amended bill was filed.

The cause was heard upon the sufficiency of the plea just reviewed, and the plea was held sufficient. The trustee elected not to file a reply to the plea, and a decree was thereupon entered dismissing the bill. On appeal the decree of dismissal was reversed by the circuit court of appeals (94 C. C. A. 118, 168 Fed. 654), and this appeal was then taken.

56 L. ed.

Mr. W. H. Sholes submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. Walter H. Kirk was on the brief:

The statutory or judicially determined rules of property of the state of Illinois control and determine the validity of such liens, if any, as the judgment creditors of the bankrupt obtained by their judgments and executions.

Collier, Bankr. 6th ed. 553; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Re First Nat. Bank, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180, 67 C. C. A. 536, 135 Fed. 62; Re Greenc, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504, 134 Fed. 137.

Under the laws and judicially determined rules of property in Illinois, the liens of the executions which had not been perfected and made absolute and effective by levy, were, on November 25, 1907, defeated and lost in consequence of the repossession of its goods then in the possession of the bankrupt, by the vendor, under conditional-sale contracts, and thereafter neither the sheriff nor the trustee of the bankrupt had the right to follow and take the same away from the conditional vendor.

People v. Johnson, 4 Ill. App. 346; Persels v. McConnell, 16 Ill. App. 526; Travers v. Cook, 42 Ill. App. 582; Minor v. Herri-ford, 25 Ill. 344; Davidson v. Waldron, 31 Ill. 120, 83 Am. Dec. 206; Chittenden v. Rogers, 42 Ill. 100; Powers v. Wheeler, 63 Ill. 29; Re Hopkins, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212; Mulheisen v. Lane, 82 Ill. 117.

The retaking of the goods by the conditional vendor did not amount to a voidable preference under the bankruptcy act.

Sabin v. Camp, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578, 98 Fed. 974.

Mr. Franklin L. Velde submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Ira J. Covey was on the brief:

The trustee stands in the position of an execution creditor.

First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 50 L. ed. 967, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; Re New York Economical Printing Co. 49 C. C. A. 133, 110 Fed. 514, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620; Re Merrow, 131 Fed. 993, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

There can be no question but what, under the law of Illinois, these goods which the Rock Island Plow Company received from the bankrupt two days before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, and while both of these executions were in the hands of the sheriff of Tazewell county, could have been levied upon by the sheriff under these executions.

Peoria Mfg. Co. v. Lyons, 153 Ill. 427, 38 N. E. 661; St. Louis Iron & Mach. Works v. Kimball, 53 Ill. App. 636.

When the trustee is appointed, his title goes back by relation to the date of the commencement of the proceeding.

Collier, Bankr. 6th ed. p. 588.

In Illinois, if a person agrees to sell to another a chattel on condition that the price should be paid within a certain time, retaining the title in himself in the meantime, and delivers the chattel to the vendee, so as to clothe him with apparent ownership, a bona fide purchaser or execution creditor of the latter is entitled to protection as against the claim of the original vendor.

Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 678, 30 L. ed. 290, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; Brundage v. Camp, 21 Ill. 330; McCormick v. Hadden, 37 Ill. 370; Murch v. Wright, 46 Ill. 487, 95 Am. Dec. 455; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Phillips, 60 Ill. 196; Lucas v. Campbell, 88 Ill. 447; Van Duzor v. Allen, 90 Ill. 499; Gilbert v. National Cash Register Co. 176 Ill. 294, 52 N. E. 22.

An execution is a lien upon the personal property of the debtor not exempt, from the time it comes to the officer's hands, and gives the officer the right to seize and sell the same for the satisfaction of the judgment upon which it has been issued.

Frink v. Pratt, 130 Ill. 331, 22 N. E. 819.

362] *Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The only question arising for decision is whether the facts set up in the plea of the plow company are sufficient to exempt that company from accountability to the trustee for receiving a preference within the terms of the bankrupt act. The consideration which this question received in the opinion delivered by the circuit court of appeals makes unnecessary and elaborate review of the subject.

We assume, for the sake of argument, as did the circuit court of appeals, that the contracts by virtue of which the plow company claimed it retook possession of the property in question were conditional-sale contracts, whereby the plow company retained in itself the title and right of possession of its goods until paid for by Brown, and that by virtue of such contracts the taking or retaking of the property in question was valid as between the plow company and the bankrupt. The inquiry, then, is whether the contracts and the possession taken thereunder of the property in controversy by the plow company are operative to bar the rights asserted by the trustee in and by force of the subrogation proceedings.

The claim of the trustee was in substance (1) that delivery to the sheriff of executions upon the Sechler and cordage judgments operated without levy to create liens upon the real and personal property of Brown, the judgment debtor, within the county; (2) that such liens were paramount to rights in the property possessed by a vendor under a contract of conditional sale; and (3) that the effect of the subrogation order was to render inoperative as a preference the liens obtained by the judgment creditors through their executions, and to preserve such liens as of the date of the filing of the proceedings in voluntary bankruptcy for the benefit of the estate in bankruptcy. *That the [363 circuit court of appeals rightly held the affirmative of these three propositions we entertain no doubt. Upon the first two propositions that court said:

"As the law of Illinois must govern the answer to both questions, and the rule there is well settled, as we believe, for an affirmative answer to each, no difficulty appears in the solution. Paragraph 9 of chapter 77, Rev. Stat. 1874 (2 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. 1896, p. 2336) provides: 'No execution shall bind the goods and chattels of the person against whom it is issued until it is delivered to the sheriff or other proper officer to be executed.' This is a modification of the rule at common law which created a lien from the issuance of the writ, and its effect to create a lien in favor of the execution creditor is recognized in numerous decisions noted in Starr & C. Anno. Stat. supra. See Frink v. Pratt, 130 Ill. 327, 331, 22 N. E. 819, one of the citations in appellee's brief. The cases cited contra, declaratory of the rule that an officer receiving the execution has 'no interest in the property itself' to maintain an action therefor 'until after a levy,' do not touch the present inquiry of lien in favor of the execution creditor, and are plainly inapplicable. Upon the second question, it is stated in Gilbert v. National Cash Register Co. 176 Ill. 288, 296, 52 N. E. 22, that 'whatever may be the rule in other jurisdictions,' this rule is established in Illinois: 'If a person agrees to sell to another a chattel on condition that the price shall be paid within a certain time, retaining the title in himself in the meantime, and delivers the chattel to the vendee so as to clothe him with an apparent ownership, a bona fide purchaser or execution creditor of the latter is entitled to protection as against the claim of the original vendor.' The authorities there cited for such rule are deemed sufficient reference; and we remark that no departure appears from the doctrine thus stated in any of the Illinois cases called to our attention."

364] *It is significant that in the argument at bar counsel for the plow company make no attempt to point out wherein the authorities cited by the court are not applicable and authoritative on the propositions which they were cited as supporting, and, indeed, entirely omit any reference to them.

The decision in First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 146, 50 L. ed. 967, 969, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580, is authoritative upon the last proposition. As the executions issued upon the judgments, which executions were held by the sheriffs for levy, operated to create liens upon the property in question, then in the possession of Brown, although held under conditional-sale contracts, and such liens were paramount to the rights of the vendor, the plow company, it is manifest that the right of the judgment creditors to resort to such property in satisfaction of their liens could not be destroyed by a mere transfer of possession from one party to the contract to the other party thereto. It also follows in reason, we think, that the liens of the execution creditors in the property as they existed when the petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed could not be subsequently destroyed by the acts of the creditors, the third parties, to the prejudice of the estate, and that if the rights of the bankrupt estate could be lost by the laches of the trustee, the record presents no evidence of such laches. The circumstance that the trustee, in ignorance, perhaps, of the existence of the conditional-sale contracts, first based the right to relief solely upon the claim that an unlawful preference was created through the payment by means of the transfer made by Brown, when insolvent, of an indebtedness to the plow company, did not operate to the prejudice of the plow company, and was plainly insufficient to bar the trustee from asserting an additional right to the relief prayed, viz., the right growing out of the subrogation order made prior to the commencement of the litigation.

Decree affirmed.

365] *CHARLES GRING, Plff. in Err.,
v.

LIZZIE IVES and Pat Ives, by their Father and Next Friend, P. H. Ives.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 365-370.)

Error to state court — frivolousness of Federal question — harbor lines.

The contention that a marine railway which projected beyond the harbor line established by the Secretary of War conformably to the act of March 3, 1899 (30
56 L. ed.

Stat. at L. 1151, chap. 425, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3541), § 10, is illegal and a public nuisance, which the owner of a vessel might wantonly injure or destroy, although such railway was constructed and had been in operation many years before the establishment of such harbor line, is so clearly unfounded as not to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review the judgment of a state court adverse to such contention.

(For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1110-1137, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.)

[No. 115.]

Submitted December 18, 1911. Decided
January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court for Pasquotank County in that state in favor of plaintiff in an action by the owner of a marine railway to recover for damages occasioned by a collision caused by a vessel. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 150 N. C. 137, 63 S. E. 609.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James A. Toomey submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

This court has jurisdiction.

Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 55 L. ed. 838, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 67, 43 L. ed. 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

The defendants in error claim damages upon allegations of ordinary negligence, while at the very moment of the collision in question they are guilty of maintaining a public nuisance in a navigable river of the United States, placing themselves in an unlawful and illegal position, outside of a duly established harbor line, where the captain navigating the tug had a right to assume, as a matter of law, at least, that there was no obstruction.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

As to necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court—see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 231.

Atlee v. Northwestern Union Packet Co. 21 Wall. 389, 22 L. ed. 619; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. A. Backus, Jr. & Son, 46 Fed. 216; Northern P. R. Co. v. United States, 59 L.R.A. 80, 44 C. C. A. 135, 44 C. C. A. 136; Albina Ferry Co. v. The Imperial, 3 L.R.A. 234, 13 Sawy. 639, 38 Fed. 614; Thompson v. Paterson & H. R. Co. 9 N. J. Eq. 526; People v. Vanderbilt, 28 N. Y. 396, 84 Am. Dec. 351; Dyer v. Curtis, 72 Me. 181; Morgan v. Kink, 18 Barb. 277; Wood v. Esson, 9 Can. S. C. 239; Hutton v. Webb, 59 L.R.A. L.R.A. 90, note 7.

Mr. Charles B. Aycock submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. E. F. Aydlett was on the brief:

The evidence shows this railway to have been constructed "some eighteen years ago;" that referring to harbor line tends to show an establishment, if any, in 1902, sixteen or eighteen years after the construction of the ways. Such an ordinance has no retroactive effect, and does not affect structures previously erected.

29 Cyc. 343, 344 (b); Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53.

In the absence of any specific legislation on the subject, riparian owners have a qualified property in the water frontage belonging by nature to their land, and a right to construct wharves, piers, landings, etc., subject to such general rules and regulations as the legislature, in the exercise of its power, may prescribe for the protection of public rights in rivers or navigable waters.

Bond v. Wool, 107 N. C. 148, 12 S. E. 281.

And this right extends to deep water or point of navigability.

Ibid.

And by point of navigability is meant such point as is necessary to make his property reasonably available for the purpose for which it was constructed.

29 Cyc. 343; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364, 95 Am. Dec. 644; 29 Cyc. 305, note 7.

Mere inconvenience is not an obstruction.

29 Cyc. 312, 313, 343, note 7.

The rights of navigation, while paramount, are not exclusive (Post v. Munn, 4 N. J. L. 61, 7 Am. Dec. 570), and even granting that the railways were absolutely without warrant of law, and therefore a nuisance, and subject to abatement, parties must yet exercise care, and cannot recklessly or wantonly injure them, for they are still private property, and entitled to this degree of protection.

29 Cyc. 305 note 7, 311 (h), 318; Bain- bridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364, 95 Am. Dec. 644; The Brinton, 13 C. C. A. 331, 26 U. S. App. 486, 66 Fed. 71.

*Mr. Chief Justice White delivered [368 the opinion of the court:

Gring, upon the theory that Federal questions were wrongly decided against him, seeks the reversal of a judgment for $300, damages occasioned by the running of a tugboat, of which he was the owner, against a marine railway, the property of the defendants in error, who were plaintiffs below. The railway was situated on the shore of the Pasquotank river in the harbor of Elizabeth City, North Carolina. The injury to the railway was committed on the night of December 24, 1905. The supreme court of North Carolina, in affirming the judgment of the trial court, rendered on the verdict of a jury, stated these facts:

The marine railway had been in existence for eighteen years prior to the injury complained of. The railway extended to the margin of the channel, and between the end of the railway and the opposite side of the channel, which was buoyed, there was a space of 540 feet, constituting the usual highway for navigation. The night upon which the tug collided with the bridge was "a bright moonlight night, and there was also a bonfire on shore and a line of electric lights which lighted up the harbor." The conduct which occasioned the running of the tug against the railway was thus stated: "The evidence is that the tugboat, which was bound down the river, instead of following the usual course, ran diagonally towards the shore, and, striking the marine railway of plaintiffs, damaged it. The captain of the tugboat testified that he knew the locality well, having passed it more than two hundred times. After the injury he offered to pay damages, but the parties could not agree upon the amount." [150 N. C. 138, 63 S. E. 609.] Commenting upon the facts thus stated, the court observed: "Clearly the proximate cause [of the injury] was the negligence of the tugboat in not proceeding upon its course in a channel 540 feet *wide, but going several hundred feet out of its way, and driving in-shore against the marine railway."

In disposing of a contention concerning an alleged harbor line established under the act of Congress of March 3, 1899, chap. 425, § 10, 30 Stat. at L. 1151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3541, and the proposition that the railway, because it projected beyond said assumed line, was a public nuisance, and therefore the complainant was entitled to negligently and wantonly injure it, the court said:

"Whether there was a harbor line or not, the marine railway was a necessity for the repair of vessels. It was not shown to be located there illegally, or that it was a public nuisance; and if it had been, the tugboat was not authorized to run into it unnecessarily and negligently, as the evidence tended to show."

The only one of the assignments of error filed at the time this writ of error was sued out which in the remotest way relates to a Federal question is the third, which is concerned with the reasoning of the court just referred to, and is based upon the assumption that there could be no recovery because of the asserted establishment by the Secretary of War, some time between 1900 and 1902, of a harbor line under the authority of the act above mentioned. In argument the proposition to which the assignment relates is, that the court erred in not deciding that any structure projecting into the river beyond the established harbor line was illegal and a public nuisance, which the plaintiff might wantonly injure or destroy. As we have seen, however, the court found as an undisputed fact that the railway in question was constructed and had been in operation many years before the establishment of the alleged harbor line. Under this condition the court was obviously right in holding that the railway had not been located in violation of the act of 1899, and was equally obviously right in deciding that the plaintiff had no right to recklessly injure it. The basis of the assumed Federal 370]*right rests upon the plainly erroneous assumption that the act of 1899 was intended to or did operate to paralyze all state power concerning structures of every character in navigable waters within their borders, and to destroy automatically all vested rights of property in such works, even although acquired prior to the act of 1899, under the sanction of state authority. Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472. See also Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

In view of the character of the case, the facts found by the court below, and the absolute want of merit in the Federal question relied upon, we are of opinion that the grounds relied upon for review are of so frivolous a nature as not to afford the basis for the exercise of jurisdiction, and our decree therefore will be,

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

58 L. ed.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WASHINGTON EX REL.
JOHN D. ATKINSON, Attorney General.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 370-380.)

Commerce — state regulation of hours of railway employees — congressional action.

1. Congress had so acted upon the subject of the hours of labor of interstate railway employees by enacting the hours of service act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1415, chap. 2939, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1170), as to preclude a state, during the period between the date of that act and the time when, by its express terms, it should go into effect, from making or enforcing as to such employees a local regulation limiting hours of labor.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — hours of labor.

2. The clause in the hours of service act of March 4, 1907, regulating the hours of labor of interstate railway employees, by which its operation is postponed for one year, precludes a state from making or enforcing during the interim a local regulation affecting the hours of labor of such employees.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 136.]

Submitted December 19, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court for Thurston County, in that state, enforcing a penalty for violation by a carrier of a state statute regulating the hours of labor of railway employees. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 53 Wash. 673, 102 Pac. 876, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1013.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—As to the power of states to regulate hours of labor as affected by the commerce clause—see notes to State v. Northern P. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 134, and People v. Erie R. Co. 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 240.

On the validity generally of regulations of hours of labor—see notes to People v. Orange County Road Constr. Co. 65 L.R.A. 33; Ex parte Martin, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 242; Withey v. Bloem, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 628, and Atkin v. Kansas, 48 L. ed. U. S. 148.

Mr. Charles W. Bunn submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Where Congress has undertaken to regulate a branch of interstate commerce, no additional regulation by a state, by virtue of its police power, is permissible.

Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat, 1, 21, 5 L. ed. 19, 24; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 617, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1089; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 13 How. 518, 14 L. ed. 249; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 16 L. ed. 243; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; State v. Missouri P. R. Co. 212 Mo. 658, 111 S. W. 500; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 136 Wis. 407, 19 L.R.A. (N.S.) 326, 117 N. W. 686.

Mr. W. V. Tanner, Attorney General of Washington, submitted the cause for defendant in error:

An act regulating the hours of labor of employees engaged in train service on railroads is within the police power of the state.

Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

In order to determine whether any particular act of Congress, passed in pursuance of its power to regulate commerce, operates to supersede state legislative action upon the same subject, regard must be had to the purpose of the Congressional enactment, and the object sought to be attained thereby. This court has repeatedly announced the rule that the question of conflict is to be determined by the ordinary rules of statutory construction, and that it should not be held that the state legislation has been superseded except in cases of manifest repugnancy.

Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137-148, 47 L. ed. 108-114, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 623, 42 L. ed. 878, 881, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

As a general rule, a statute speaks from the time it goes into effect, whether that time be the day of its enactment or some future day to which the power enacting the statute has postponed the time of its taking effect.

Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125; Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318; Grant v. Apena, 107 Mich. 335, 65 N. W. 230; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. State, 81 Tex. 573, 17 S. W. 67; Jackman v. Garland, 64 Me. 133; Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Barbee, 59 Ind. 592; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 565.

This question has been passed upon by the supreme courts of four of the states. In Montana and Washington it has been held that the act of Congress is not repugnant to acts theretofore adopted by the state legislatures. In Missouri and Michigan the courts have reached the contrary conclusion.

State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 136 Wis. 407, 19 L.R.A. (N.S.) 326, 117 N. W. 686; State v. Missouri P. R. Co. 212 Mo. 658, 111 S. W. 500; State v. Northern P. R. Co. 36 Mont. 591, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 134, 93 Pac. 945, 13 Ann. Cas. 144.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

On July 3 and 4, 1907, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, in operating a train on its road in the state of Washington, permitted some of the train crew to remain on duty more than sixteen consecutive hours. This being apparently contrary to the prohibition of the act of Congress known as the "hours of service" law, approved March 4, 1907, chap. 2939, 34 Stat. at L. 1415, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1170, if the railroad company, in the operation of the train, was subject to the power of Congress, and the prohibitions of the act were otherwise applicable, there was a violation of the act and a liability to its penalties.

The train, although moving from one point to another in the state of Washington, was hauling merchandise from points outside of the state, destined to points within the state, and from points within the state to points in British Columbia, as well as in carrying merchandise which had originated outside of the state, and was in transit through the state to a foreign destination. This transportation was interstate commerce, and the train was an interstate train, despite the fact that it may also have been carrying some local freight. In view of the unity and indivisibility of the service of the train crew and the paramount character of the authority of Congress to regulate commerce, the act of Congress was exclusively controlling. Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. [376] 20, ante, 2, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2. But, while thus governed by the act of Congress, the prohibitions of that act were not operative. This follows, by reason of the provisions of § 5 to the following effect: "That this act shall take effect and be in force one year after its passage."

About a month before the occurrences heretofore referred to, that is, on June 11th, 1907, a law of the state of Washington regulating the hours of service of railway employees became effective. Without going into detail it suffices to say that the provisions of that act greatly resembled those of the act of Congress, and prohibited the consecutive hours of service which had taken place on the train of the Northern Pacific road. The attorney general of the state commenced the proceeding now before us to recover penalties for the violation of the state law. The railroad answered, admitted the acts complained of, but denied any liability for the penalties imposed by the state law. The denial was based upon the assertion that the train was an interstate train, and was not subject to the control of the state because within the exclusive authority of Congress, manifested by the enactment of Congress on that subject. The trial court granted a motion for judgment upon the pleadings, and awarded $1,000 penalty, and it is to a judgment of the supreme court of the state, affirming such action, that this writ of error is prosecuted.

Considering the character of the transportation, the court below held that the train was an interstate train, and within the potentiality of the exercise by Congress of its power to regulate commerce. Despite this, it was held that the penalty had been rightly imposed, because, until Congress had acted upon the subject, it was competent for the state to make a regulation concerning the hours of service of employees on railroad trains moving within the state, and to apply such regulation to a train engaged in interstate commerce. 377] This, however, *was based not upon a supposed concurrent state and Federal power, but solely on the ground that Congress had not acted on the subject, and therefore the state regulation should be applied. Indeed, the court in express terms declared that if Congress had legislated, "its act supersedes any and all state legislation on that particular subject," and it was stated that the state in argument had so conceded.

The court said:

"On the other hand, it is conceded by the state that the power of the Congress to regulate interstate commerce is plenary; and that, as an incident to this power, the Congress may regulate by legislation the instrumentalities engaged in the business, and may prescribe the number of consecutive hours an employee of a carrier so engaged shall be required to remain on duty; and that when it does legislate upon the subject, its act supersedes any and all state legislation on that particular subject. In fact, these propositions can hardly be said to be debatable in the state courts, since the Federal courts, whose decisions are authoritative on questions of this character, have repeatedly announced them as governing principles in determining the validity of regulative legislation concerning carriers of interstate commerce. Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 27 L. ed. 442, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Board of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Nashville C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Erbe v. Morasch, 177 U. S. 584, 44 L. ed. 897, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819."

Thus, conceding the paramount power of Congress, the operative force of the state law was solely maintained over the interstate commerce in question because of the provision of the act of Congress providing that it should not take effect until one year after its passage. As a result, the act was treated as not existing until the expiration of a year from its passage. Copiously referring *to authorities as to when a legislative act was to be treated as taking effect, the court said:

"It seems clear that the Federal statute did not speak as a statute until after March 4, 1908, the date on which it went into effect; for if a law passed to take effect at a future day must be construed as if passed on that day, and if, prior to the time it goes into effect, no rights can be acquired under it and no one is bound to regulate his conduct according to its terms, it is idle to say that it has the effect of a statute between the time of its passage and the time of its taking effect. A statute cannot be both operative and inoperative at the same time. It is either a law or it is not a law; and, without special words of limitation, when it goes into effect for one purpose, it goes into effect for all purposes."

But we are of opinion that this view is not compatible with the paramount authority of Congress over interstate commerce. It is elementary, and such is the doctrine announced by the cases to which the court below referred, that the right of a state to apply its police power for the purpose of regulating interstate commerce, in a case like this, exists only from the silence of Congress on the subject, and ceases when Congress acts on the subject, or manifests its purpose to call into play its exclusive power. This being the conceded premise upon which alone the state law could have been made applicable, it results that as the enactment by Congress of the law in question was an assertion of its power, by the fact alone of such manifestation that subject was at once removed from the sphere of the operation of the authority of the state. To admit the fundamental principle and yet to reason that because Congress chose to make its prohibitions take effect only after a year, the matter with which Congress dealt remained subject to state power, is to cause the act of Congress to destroy itself; that is, to give effect to the will of Congress as embodied in the postponing *provision for the purpose of overriding and rendering ineffective the expression of the will of Congress to bring the subject within its control,—a manifestation arising from the mere fact of the enactment of the statute.

We do not pause to cite authorities additional to those referred to by the court below, but we observe in passing that the aspect in which we view the question was cogently stated by the supreme court of the state of Missouri in State v. Missouri P. R. Co. 212 Mo. 658, 111 S. W. 500, and has also been lucidly expounded by the supreme court of the state of Wisconsin in State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 136 Wis. 407, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 326, 117 N. W. 686.

But if we pass these considerations and consider the issue before us as one requiring merely an interpretation of the statute, we are of opinion that it becomes manifest that it would cause the statute to destroy itself to give to the clause postponing its operation for one year the meaning which must be affixed to it in order to hold that, during the year of postponement, state police laws applied. In the first place, no conceivable reason has been, or we think can be, suggested for the postponing provision, if it was contemplated that the prohibitions of state laws should apply in the meantime. This is true because if it be that it was contemplated that the subject dealt with should be controlled during the year by state laws, the postponement of the prohibitions of the act could accomplish no possible purpose. This is well illustrated by this case, where, by the ruling below, a state regulation substantially similar to that contained in the act of Congress is made applicable. In the second place, the obvious suggestion is that the purpose of Congress in giving time was to enable the necessary adjustments to be made by the railroads to meet the new conditions created by the act,—a purpose which would of course be frustrated by giving to the provision as to postponement a significance which would destroy the very 380]reason which *caused it to be enacted. Finally, the convictions which arise from the fact of the postponement are made plain by a report on the bill, made to the House of Representatives by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, wherein it was said (Report No. 7641, dated February 16, 1907, p. 6):

"Owing to the probable necessity of changing in some instances division points, entailing the removal of employees, and to permit ample time to readjust themselves to the requirements of the law, it is not to become operative for one year after its approval."

For the reasons stated, the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of Washington must be and it is reversed, and the cause will be remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

RED "C" OIL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,

v. .

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE OF NORTH CAROLINA, William A. Graham, H. C. Carter, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 380-395.)

Commerce — state regulation — inspection laws.

1. Subjecting all kerosene or other illuminating oils sold or offered for sale in the state to an inspection for the purpose of determining the safety and value of such oils for illuminating purposes, as is done by the North Carolina act of March 8, 1909, is a proper exercise of the police power, and does not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 524-547, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — inspection fees.

2. A charge of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon, made by the North Carolina oil inspection act of March 8, 1909, for the avowed purpose of defraying the expense connected with the inspection, cannot be said, in advance of the experience gained from the actual operation of the act, to be so seriously in excess of what is necessary as to justify the imputation that the real purpose of the statute was to raise a revenue, in violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 546, 547, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power.

3. Legislative powers are not unconstitutionally delegated to the board of agriculture by the provisions of the North Carolina oil inspection act of March 8, 1909, which requires that illuminating oils sold or offered for sale in the state be safe, pure, and afford a satisfactory light, leaving it to the board to determine what oils will measure up to these standards.

NOTE.—On inspection laws as regulations of commerce—see note to New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 78.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 159-166, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 141.]

Argued December 21 and 22, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of North Carolina to review a decree dismissing a suit to restrain the enforcement of the North Carolina oil inspection act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 172 Fed. 695.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice White:

In the year 1909, North Carolina passed an act for the inspection, under the control of the board of agriculture, of all kerosene or other illuminating oils sold, or offered for sale, in the state. The object of such inspection was declared to be in order to determine the safety and value of such oils for illuminating purposes. A charge of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon was fixed, which law declared should be paid to the commissioner of agriculture for the purpose of defraying expenses connected with the inspection, testing, and analyzing of oils in this state. It was provided that the act should 382]go into effect on July 1, 1909. *Two days after, viz., on July 3, 1909, this suit was commenced by the appellant, the Red "C" Oil Manufacturing Company, a corporation of the state of Maryland. The defendants named were the board of agriculture of North Carolina and the members of the board, and the object of the bill was to restrain the enforcement of the act referred to because it was charged to be not a proper exertion of the police power of the state, and, besides, was asserted to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

The bill averred that the complainant was a large shipper of illuminating oils from the state of Maryland into the state of North Carolina, and that it did an extensive business in North Carolina in dealing in such oil. The provisions of the assailed act were set out in extenso, as also the terms of an act of the general assembly approved on March 9, 1909, which forbade the collection of a tax upon dealers in oils, authorized by § 58 of the revenue act, passed at the same session, "from any persons, dealers, or corporations paying the taxes imposed under the inspection law enacted at the present session of the general assembly, entitled, 'An Act to Provide for the Inspection of Illuminating Oils and Fluids;' Provided, however, if the said oil inspection act should be held invalid, § 58, revenue act, shall remain in full effect." In the preamble of this latter act it was recited that the "inspection tax" was much greater than the "tax" imposed under § 58 of the revenue act, and that "it is not the purpose of the general assembly that the said tax shall be cumulative." In addition to averring the appointment of inspectors by the board of agriculture, and the purpose of the board to enforce the collection of the inspection taxes, there were set forth the regulations adopted by the board under the authority of the statute.

*The particulars by which it was as-383serted the statutory charge was shown to be unlawful may be thus summarized: The charge or "tax" was not for the purpose of defraying the cost of the inspection of oil, but was imposed for revenue upon the goods of complainant shipped into the state of North Carolina from the state of Maryland, and was hence in conflict with the commerce clause and the 14th Amendment. The law, it was charged, was not a police regulation, since an inspection of oil "for value and luminosity" was not within the competency of legislative action, and the public safety was not concerned, since illuminating oils, as the result of modern methods of manufacture, were no longer explosive. The charge or tax, it was averred, was more than double the amount necessary for the inspection proposed, and would realize annually a surplus for the state treasury of more than $20,000. It was further charged that the act fixed no standard for the guidance of the board of agriculture, but in effect arbitrary powers were conferred upon the board, and, indeed, legislative authority had been delegated to it. The power thus conferred, it was also alleged, had been exerted in an arbitrary manner, and tests prescribed which were not necessary "in order to procure the safety of oil, to protect the people from the sale of oils which are dangerous." Certain of the regulations promulgated by the board were also assailed as being uncertain, unreasonable, illegal, and oppressive.

On the filing of the bill an order was entered temporarily restraining the defendants from enforcing, as against the complainant, the statute and the rules and regulations of the board thereunder. The restraining order was subsequently amended by requiring the complainant, "pending the final determination of this cause," to "pay the $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon upon all illuminating oils sold by it in the state, as prescribed in said act." The defendants jointly and severally answered the bill, and took *issue upon all the matters384 alleged in the complaint. As regards the allegation that the inspection fee was unnecessarily high and would yield a large surplus over the expenses, the defendants said:

"Defendants say that they have made no estimate that any excess may be left after paying all the proper and necessary expenses of inspection, and these defendants say that they have no means of actually approximating the amount that the tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon will yield, or the expenses of equipping and maintaining a competent inspection force and department. That the legislature thought that $\frac{1}{2}$ cent a gallon would be necessary to pay the expenses of inspection, and these defendants are informed and believe, and therefore aver, that this is as low an inspection tax as there is to be found in any state having oil inspection laws, and lower than the taxes in a great many of the states. In some states there is a graduated scale of taxation of more than $\frac{1}{2}$ cent for small quantities and less than $\frac{1}{2}$ cent for large quantities. The said act expressly provides, in § 6, that the commission of agriculture shall include in his report to the general assembly an account of the expenses under this act. The said act also provides that all money paid for inspection taxes shall be kept by the state treasurer as a distinct fund, to be styled, 'The Oil Inspection Fund.' At the end of one year, it can be seen exactly what the inspection costs and how much is paid for it by dealers in oil, and until it shall appear that said tax is excessive, a charge to that effect, by complaint, is premature and ill-considered."

Both parties filed affidavits in support of their respective claims. The matter was heard upon a motion for an injunction upon the bulk, answer, and affidavits just referred to. Elaborately examining all the contentions, the court (172 Fed. 695) concluded that the complainant was not entitled to relief by injunction, and that, 385]*as respects the other relief asked, the bill should be dismissed. A final decree was thereupon entered and this appeal was then taken.

Mr. Robert W. Winston argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles B. Aycock, filed a brief for appellant:

If there was any one object riding over every other in the adoption of the Constitution, it was to keep the commercial intercourse among the states free from all invidious or partial restraint.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 9, 6 L. ed. 25.

By whatever name called, the attempt by a state to tax interstate commerce is void.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 160, 55 L. ed. 417, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

An habitual and continual levying and collecting of taxes for inspection purposes, far in excess of the amount necessary, and the covering of such taxes into a state treasury, is quite conclusive that the law was passed to raise revenue, and not for inspection purposes.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. New Hope, 192 U. S. 55, 48 L. ed. 338, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204.

If the legislature can handicap commerce between the states by imposing excessive inspection taxes, the police power would not only be a formidable rival, but in a struggle must necessarily triumph over the commercial power.

Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

Under the guise of inspection laws, a system of interstate tariff taxation has arisen, and states have acted under a misconception of the opinion of this court in the Patapseo Guano Case, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, to such an extent that state governments are largely operated upon funds derived from illegal and unjust inspection laws.

Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

That the act does not on its face discriminate against oil from sister states makes no difference. Interstate commerce cannot be taxed at all.

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Campen, 135 N. C. 520, 47 S. E. 658.

All statutes which relate to the same subject-matter must be taken to be one system, and so construed.

Lord Bacon, 3d rule, vol. 6, 382; State v. Bell, 25 N. C. (3 Ired. L.) 509; State v. Melton, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 49.

A disproportionate inspection tax is strong evidence of the unconstitutionality of the act.

Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 79, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 610; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

This court will look at the substance of such acts, and while it acts on the presumption that the statute was enacted in good faith for the purposes for which the power can be exercised, yet its operation and validity must be determined by its natural and reasonable effect; and this presumption cannot control the final determination of the question whether it is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

Calvert, Regulation of Commerce, p. 97; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 439, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

Legislative power cannot be delegated.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; United States v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 45 Fed. 178; Freund, Pol. Power, ¶ 649; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Com. v. Maletsky, 203 Mass. 241, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1172, 89 N. E. 245; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 99; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738; State ex rel. Adams v. Burdge, 95 Wis. 390, 37 L.R.A. 157, 60 Am. St. Rep. 123, 70 N. W. 347; O'Neil v. American F. Ins. Co. 166 Pa. 72, 26 L.R.A. 715, 45 Am. St. Rep. 650, 30 Atl. 943; Anderson v. Manchester F. Assur. Co. 59 Minn. 182, 28 L.R.A. 609, 50 Am. St. Rep. 400, 60 N. W. 1095, 63 N. W. 241; State ex rel. Hahn v. Young, 29 Minn. 551, 9 N. W. 737; Ex parte Cox, 63 Cal. 21; Harbor Comrs. v. Excelsior Redwood Co. 88 Cal. 491, 22 Am. St. Rep. 321, 26 Pac. 375; State, Marshall, Prosecutor, v. Cadwalader, 36 N. J. L. 283; State v. Armstrong, 3 Sneed, 635; Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483, 59 Am. Dec. 506; Kosciuszko v. Slomberg, 68 Miss. 469, 12 L.R.A. 528, 24 Am. St. Rep. 281, 9 So. 297; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; People ex rel. Copcutt v. Board of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 23 L.R.A. 481, 37 Am. St. Rep. 522, 35 N. E. 320; Re Smith, 146 N. Y. 68, 28 L.R.A. 820, 48 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. E. 497; State v. Speyer, 67 Vt. 502, 29 L.R.A. 573, 48 Am. St. Rep. 832, 32 Atl. 476; State ex rel. Bowe v. Board of Education, 63 Wis. 234, 53 Am. Rep. 282, 23 N. W. 102.

The legislature itself ought to lay down the test, which ought to be defined by general rules.

Freund, Pol. Power, ¶ 649; Harmon v. State, 66 Ohio St. 249, 58 L.R.A. 618, 64 N. E. 117; Matthews v. Murphy, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 750, 54 L.R.A. 415, 63 S. W. 785; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; 56 L. ed.

Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444.

Mr. T. W. Bickett Attorney General of North Carolina, argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. H. Battle, filed a brief for appellees:

The suggestion that, under the guise of doing one thing, the general assembly is attempting to do another, will not be considered by this court. The courts are not disposed, neither are they at liberty, to impute improper motives to the lawmaking power of the government.

Black, Const. Law, § 41; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 471, 46 L. ed. 283, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Ellis v. United States, 206 U. S. 246, 51 L. ed. 1047, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, 11 Ann. Cas. 589; Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 32 L. ed. 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623.

The complainant seems to concede that if the act is intended in good faith to protect the public from danger, or from being imposed upon, and is reasonably calculated to afford such protection, it is well within the police power of the state.

Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 257, 52 L. ed. 781, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. ed. 754, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Deselms, 212 U. S. 159, 53 L. ed. 453, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 270.

Oil inspection laws have three times been before this court, and none of them have been condemned.

Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. ed. 754, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Deselms, 212 U. S. 159, 53 L. ed. 453, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 270.

The inspection tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon is not so excessive upon its face as to warrant the court in declaring it unconstitutional and void.

Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 354, 43 L. ed. 194, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

The line between powers strictly and exclusively legislative, and those which are merely administrative, is vague and shadowy; and the undoubted tendency, born of the necessities of the times, is to place all doubtful powers on the administrative side of the line.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1021; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. 491, 13 Am. Rep. 720; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 253.

In the oil inspection act there is no delegation of legislative powers.

Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. 491, 13 Am. Rep. 720; Isenhour v. State, 157 Ind. 517, 87 Am. St. Rep. 228, 62 N. E. 40; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 492, 48 L. ed. 534, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In view of the full reference to and the review of decided cases made by the dissenting judge in the opinion by *him delivered, we content ourselves with a comparatively brief discussion of the questions pressed at bar.

These all come to two propositions, which are thus stated by counsel:

"1. That the North Carolina oil inspection act is unconstitutional and void in that, under the guise of exercising a police power, the general assembly of North Carolina is really attempting to impose a revenue tax upon interstate commerce.

"2. That the said inspection act is unconstitutional, in that the general assembly of North Carolina has attempted to delegate to the board of agriculture legislative powers."

As to the first proposition, we append in the margin a clear and adequate summary of the act, made by the judge below:†

†The act provides:

Sec. 1. "That all kerosene or other illuminating oils sold or offered for sale in this state shall be subject to inspection and test to determine the safety and value for illuminating purposes." All manufacturers, wholesalers, and jobbers, before selling or offering for sale, in this state, any kerosene or other oil, for illuminating purposes, are required to file with the commissioner of agriculture a statement showing that they desire to do business in the state, and to furnish the name or brand of the oil or oils which they desire to sell, with the names and address of the manufacturer, and that such oil will comply with the requirements of the law.

244

*The bill, as we have stated, was filed[391 when the statute had been in force but two days, and when, of necessity, the result of its operations was conjectural. We are asked now to hold that, although the general assembly declared in the statute that the charge or tax authorized to be imposed was made "for the purpose of defraying the expenses connected with the inspection, testing, and analyzing of oils in this state," the real purpose of the legislature was to levy a tax for revenue, in violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution. Reading the statute as an entirety, or in connection with the supplemental legislation of March 9, 1909, we find no adequate reason for imputing to the general assembly of North Carolina an attempt to do one thing under the guise or pretense of doing another. The mere designation of the exaction as a tax is not sufficient to warrant the deduction *that the charge authorized[392 for the inspection was not one really for such purpose. We cannot lightly attribute improper motives to the lawmaking power. Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 183 U. S. 471, 46 L. ed. 283, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Ellis v. United States, 206 U. S. 246, 51 L. ed. 1047, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 589. Putting out of view, therefore, questions of motive, two subsidiary contentions remain; viz: (a) that oil is not a proper subject of inspection; and (b) that the tax in question is so excessive on its face as to be unconstitutional. The conceded fact that in thirty-five states of the Union oil inspection laws are in force is sufficient to adversely dispose of the first of these contentions. As stated by the court below:

"While there is much diversity of opinion in respect to the danger of explosion from the use of kerosene oil, and of the power to ascertain its illuminating capacity, it is evident that the question has not so far passed beyond the domain of debate, that the legislature may not subject it *to reasonable inspection before per-[393

Sec. 2. Power is conferred upon the commissioner of agriculture to collect samples of any illuminating oil offered for sale in this state, and have the same analyzed. The inspection of oil, as authorized by the act, is to be made under the direction of the board of agriculture, which is authorized "to make all necessary rules and regulations for the inspection of such oil, and to adopt standards of safety, purity, or absence from objectionable substances, and luminosity, when not in conflict with this act, and which they may deem necessary to provide the people of the state with satisfactory illuminating oil."

The board of agriculture is required to appoint oil inspectors not exceeding in mitting its sale in the state. The court cannot say that such a law has no reasonable relation to the public safety or welfare."

222 U. S.

The contention that the tax is so excessive on its face as to conclusively evidence the unconstitutionality of the burden, if imposed as a mere inspection charge, is, we think, also without merit. Prima facie the charge must be deemed to be reasonable. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, 47 L. ed. 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204. Again, as said by the court below:

"It appears from an examination of the various oil inspection laws in force in the United States that the charges for inspection vary from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per gallon, and that in states wherein population and other conditions are similar to those in this state the charge is about the same as that fixed by the act."

Looking at the elements which may have possibly entered into the calculation of the general assembly as to what would be a reasonable inspection charge, we cannot, to quote from the opinion in the Patapsco Guano Case, 171 U. S. 354, 43 L. ed. 194, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892, "conclude that the charge is so seriously in excess of what is necessary for the objects designed to be effected as to justify the imputation of bad faith, and change the character of the act."

In disposing of the contention just stated we are not at liberty to travel outside of the record and take judicial notice of the operation of the act since the transcript of record was filed in this court. We here reiterate what was said in the case last cited: "If the receipts are found to average largely more than enough to pay the expenses, the presumption would be that the legislature would moderate the charge." If the trial made of the act establishes the fact to be as asserted, that the exaction in question is excessive, the presumption is that, in the *orderly conduct of the public[394 business of the state, the necessary correction will be made to cause the act to conform to the authority possessed, which is to impose a fee solely to recompense the state for the expenses properly incurred in enforcing the authorized inspection. What relief should be awarded in the event the legislature of North Carolina failed in its positive duty in this particular is not a question open for consideration upon this record, as no such failure of duty on the part of the legislature had occurred or could possibly have happened when this number one from each congressional district, whose compensation shall not exceed $1,000 a year and expenses. They are given power to examine all barrels, tanks, or other vessels containing kerosene or other illuminating oils, to see that they are properly tagged, and shall, as directed, collect and test samples of oil offered for sale in different sections of the state, and when instructed, collect and send samples to the Department of Agriculture for examination.

Sec. 3. "For the purpose of defraying the expenses connected with the inspection, testing, and analyzing oils in this state, there shall be paid to the commissioner a charge of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per gallon, which payment shall be made before delivery to agents, dealers, or consumers in this state." Provision is made for attaching to each barrel, tank car, and other containers, "a tag or stamp to be furnished by the commissioner of agriculture, showing that the tax has been paid. When oil is shipped in tank cars or other large containers, the manufacturer or jobber shall give notice to the commissioner of agriculture of every shipment, with the name and address of the person, company, or corporation to whom it is sent, and the number of gallons, on the day the shipment is made.

Sec. 4. "All moneys received under the provisions of this act shall be paid into the state treasury and kept as a distinct fund to be styled 'The Oil Inspection Fund.' All checks or orders in payment for tags or stamps shall be made payable 56 L. ed.

to the state treasurer. The commissioner of agriculture is authorized to draw out of said fund, upon his warrant, such sums as may be necessary to pay all expenses incurred in connection with this act, including salary to oil chemist, or chemists, cost of inspection, blanks," etc.

Sec. 5. "The state treasurer shall, on the first day of June and December of each year, turn into the general fund of the state all moneys of the oil fund in his hands in excess of the amount drawn out by the commissioner of agriculture for expenses."

Sec. 6. The commissioner of agriculture is required to include in his report to the general assembly an account of the operations and expenses under the act.

Sec. 7. Provides: That, whenever complaint is made to the Department of Agriculture in regard to the illuminating qualities of any oil sold in this state, the commissioner shall cause a sample of said oil or oils complained of to be procured, and have the same thoroughly analyzed and tested as to safety and illuminating qualities. If such analysis or other tests shall show that the oil is either unsafe or of inferior illuminating quality, its sale shall be forbidden, and report of the result or results shall be sent to the party making the complaint and to the manufacturer of such oil.

The remaining sections prescribe penalties for violation of the provisions of the law. The act went into effect July 1, 1909.

suit was commenced, a few days after the passage of the act.

The remaining contention is that the act is repugnant to the state Constitution because it attempts to delegate to the board of agriculture the exercise of legislative powers. The legislative requirement was that the illuminating oils furnished in North Carolina should be safe, pure, and afford a satisfactory light, and it was left to the board of agriculture to determine what oils would measure up to these standards. We think a sufficient primary standard was established, and that the claim that legislative powers were delegated is untenable. Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 492, 48 L. ed. 534, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

We have not attempted to enumerate the objections urged against the rules and regulations adopted by the board of agriculture. The court below was clearly right when it observed that if, as the complainant alleged, the standard of safety fixed by the board was unreasonably high, or the method of testing oil unsatisfactory, and not such as was in general use, or the regulations in other respects were unjust or oppressive, it should seek relief by applying to the board of agriculture to modify them. A law cannot be declared 395] invalid because, in the opinion *of the court, it does not accord with sound policy. The appeal for redress in such case must be to the lawmaking power.

Decree affirmed without prejudice.

ALCIDES ARAN† and Francis Dexter,
Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CAMILO ZURRINACH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 395-400.)

Error to district court of Porto Rico — denial of Federal right — objections to jury panel.

General objections to the jury panel, based upon the political status of the clerk of the court and of the jury commissioner, or upon the political opinions of the jurors, are too frivolous and wanting in merit to afford any support for the contention that the court, in overruling a motion to quash the panel on those grounds, denied a right claimed under an act of Congress, within the meaning of the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 191) § 35, governing the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1036-1043a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 146.]

Submitted December 22, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action against the principal and surety on a written contract. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill and Frederick L. Cornwell submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Zurrinach sued Aran and Dexter, the one as principal and the other as surety, on a written contract, and recovered judgment, the court having instructed a verdict for the amount claimed, viz., $1,565.72.

When our jurisdiction to review the court below depends upon amount, $5,000 is the criterion. We have hence no jurisdiction on this writ unless there be some basis for it other than the amount involved. Act of April 12, 1900, 31 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 191. The basis relied upon to establish that we have jurisdiction is the action of the court upon certain motions concerning the qualifications of the jury commissioners, and an alleged failure of such commissioners, in making up the panel, to comply with the law of the United States. The proceedings thus relied on are as follows: At the opening of the trial the defendants thus moved:

"Defendants move the court to quash the panel of the jury drawn for service at this term for the reason that the said panel was not drawn from a box containing the names of three hundred qualified jurors; and for the further reason that the present panel was not drawn and the names of the jurors constituting the same were not placed therein as required by the act of Congress, 398] . . . *in this: to wit, that the clerk of this court, John L. Gay, is a member of the Democratic party of the United States, but is not a member of any political party of Porto Rico or of the district, nor is he a registered voter in Porto Rico. The jury commissioner of this court, who, together with the said clerk, placed the names of jurors in the jury box, is not a member of any political party of the United States, and is not an American citizen, but is a member of the so-called Republican party of Porto Rico. The principal or majority party in this district is, and was at the time the names of jurors were placed in the said box and drawn therefrom by the said clerk and jury commissioner, the so-called Unionist party, all to the prejudice of defendants."

†Death of Alcides Aran suggested December 19, 1911, and appearance of Pedro Aran, Ascuncion Aran, Carlos Aran, Francisco Aran, Emilio Aran, Gonzalo Aran, Rafael Aran, Gilbert Aran, Natalia Aran, and Patria Aran filed and entered.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rico courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369

On making this motion, the counsel stating that he desired to offer proof, the clerk of the court was called to the stand, but the court refused to hear his testimony, and overruled the motion forthwith, stating "that it had personal knowledge of the mode and manner in which the jury was drawn and the law with reference to the manner, and regards the same as having been strictly in accordance with the law, and does not regard the question in Porto Rico of the politics of the parties as being applicable to the same extent as it would be in the states." The motion was "also denied on the ground that it was not filed within the time required by law, and no five days' notice was given to the other party."

It is settled that the provisions of the 35th section of the act of April 12, 1900, previously referred to, which give a right to bring to this court from the district court of Porto Rico, by writs of error or appeal, all final decisions of such court in all cases where "an act of Congress is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied," do not contemplate that the right to review thus conferred should be confined solely to cases where the validity of an act of Congress is called in 399] in question *or its interpretation is necessarily involved, but also give power to review where a right under an act of Congress was asserted and denied in the court below. Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 466, 48 L. ed. 1078, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617. In the Crowley Case the accused, by a plea in abatement, questioned the competency of certain grand jurors, who participated in the finding of the indictment, on the ground that the grand jury had been selected without any reference to the qualifications prescribed by the local law, when, as the result of an act of Congress, the local law should have been respected and applied. The plea was specific, and set up accurately the particular persons whose qualifications were challenged. Without going into detail in the Rodriguez Case, it is true also to say that the legality of both the grand and petty jury was drawn in question because of a failure to apply the law of the United States governing the same.

But neither the principle which the cases referred to maintain nor the reasoning by which they were controlled supports the proposition that any and every mere question of irregularity in applying the law of the United States which arises in a case in the court below confers a right to review on this court which otherwise would not exist. Moreover, neither the rule announced in the cases nor the reasoning which controlled them gives support to the further assumption that the right to a review by this court of the whole case, which otherwise would not exist, can be brought about by raising in the court below questions concerning the application or methods of enforcement of the applicable laws of the United States when, from the manner in which they are raised,—that is, their generality of statement and the absence of all specification to sustain them,—the conclusion is justified that they are of a frivolous character.

Putting out of view the ruling of the court based on the delay in making the motion assailing the capacity of the *jury[400 commissioner and the qualifications of the panel, which, it is urged, establish the right to review by this court, we are of opinion that the questions raised in the motion, either inherently or because of the manner in which they were raised, come within the propositions just stated, and therefore are not controlled by the ruling in the Crowley or Rodriguez Case. In the first place, in so far as the motion was addressed to the qualifications of the jury commissioners, it was, on its face, so wanting in merit and wholly frivolous as to afford no support whatever to the contention that the court, in overruling it, denied a right claimed under an act of Congress. In the second place, that is, as far as the challenge to the panel is concerned, if it be that the concluding sentence of the motion referring to the alleged political opinions of some of the jurors selected by the commissioners was an enumeration of the disqualification relied upon as the basis of the motion to quash the panel, its frivolousness was equally manifest. If, on the other hand, this view be not taken, then the mere general statement in the motion to quash, without any specification whatever of the ground relied upon, renders a like conclusion inevitable.

As the amount involved is not adequate to give jurisdiction, and the alleged claims of right under the act of Congress relied upon for that purpose are inadequate to form the basis of the exertion of jurisdiction, because of their unsubstantial and wholly frivolous character, it results that our order will be, writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

401]*TITLE GUARANTY & SURETY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES TO THE USE OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 401-403.)

Error to circuit court of appeals — supersedeas — time.

1. The general provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1007, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 714, limiting the time within which a writ of error must be allowed and lodged in the clerk's office if a supersedeas is desired, would govern writs of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the circuit courts of appeals, even under the mistaken hypothesis that writs of error from the circuit courts of appeals to inferior courts, and appeals from such courts to the circuit courts of appeals, were all that were within the purview of the provision of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 829, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 552). § 11, that "all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and systems of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error."

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2559-2570, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to circuit court of appeals — supersedeas — time.

2. The time fixed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1007, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 714, within which a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court of appeals must be allowed and lodged in the clerk's office if a supersedeas is desired, cannot be extended by a stay granted to afford an opportunity to apply for a writ of certiorari, since there is no power in the Federal Supreme Court to allow a certiorari under the act of March 3, 1891, in a case where there is authority to review the action of the lower court by writ of error or appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2959-2970, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 856.]

Motion submitted November 20, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in favor of plaintiff in an action on the bond of a public contractor. A motion was made to vacate the supersedeas. Motion granted.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 106, 187 Fed. 98.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. B. Gill and Louis Bancroft Runk in support of the motion.

Messrs. Russell H. Robbins and James F. Campbell opposed.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The motion to vacate the supersedeas must prevail.

Although the writ of error was allowed and was lodged in the office of the clerk more than six months after the entry of the judgment, the bond was approved to operate as a supersedeas. Under these circumstances it is apparent *that the[402 order for supersedeas was improvidently granted. No other conclusion is possible in view of § 1007, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 714, making the allowance of a writ and the lodgment of the same in the office of the clerk within sixty days after the date of a judgment an essential prerequisite to the granting of a supersedeas. Western Air Line Constr. Co. v. McGillis, 127 U. S. 776, 32 L. ed. 324, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1390; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 121 U. S. 248, 30 L. ed. 914, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Sage v. Central R. Co. 93 U. S. 412, 23 L. ed. 933; Kitchen v. Randolph, 93 U. S. 86, 23 L. ed. 810.

It is nevertheless, insisted, first, that this case is not within the rule, because, as the judiciary act of 1891 by the 6th section [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549] allows one year for the prosecution of error from this court to the judgments of the circuit courts of appeals, and in express terms fixes no period for the allowance of a supersedeas, therefore as the supersedeas was allowed within the year, it was in time. This, however, ignores the provision of § 11 of the act of 1891 as follows: "And all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error, . . . " Hudson v. Parker, 156 U. S. 282, 39 L. ed. 425, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 91. Nor would a different result arise from the concession argumentatively that from a consideration of the context of § 11 of the act of 1891, the passage which we have quoted should be restricted to writs of error from the circuit courts of appeals to inferior courts, and to appeals from such courts to the circuit courts of appeals. Nothing is contained in the act of 1891 regulating the time when an appeal from a circuit court of appeals to this court or a writ of error from this court to such courts must be taken in order to operate as a 403]persedeas. The general provision *of Rev. Stat. § 1007, under the hypothesis stated, would therefore be applicable. It thus results that the mistake in allowing the supersedeas in the case which is before us is equally demonstrated by the correct application of the act of 1891, as well as by yielding to the erroneous construction of that act which is pressed in argument. Second. After the entry of the judgment in the circuit court of appeals a stay order was entered in that court to afford an opportunity of applying to this court for a writ of certiorari, and such application was made and refused. Upon this premise the argument is that, as the writ of error was allowed and lodged with the clerk within sixty days after the refusal by this court of the petition for certiorari, therefore, even under the assumption that § 1007 applied, there was power to allow the supersedeas. But no power in this court to allow a certiorari under the act of 1891 exists in a case where there is authority to review the action of the lower court by error or appeal. This being true, it follows that the contention is that the granting of the stay order to enable a certiorari to be applied for operated to change the statutory time fixed for allowing a supersedeas on error or appeal, although such subject could not have been lawfully contemplated as being within the scope of the stay order. In other words, the argument comes to this,—that the stay order embraced and controlled a subject to which it could not lawfully extend. And this consideration at once serves to mark the distinction between the operation of a stay order granted for the purposes of a pending application for rehearing, since the pending of a rehearing operates to prevent the judgment or decree from becoming final, for the purpose of error or appeal, until the application is disposed of.

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

As it results that the supersedeas was improvidently allowed, our order must be and is,

Supersedeas vacated.

*FREDERICK H. VOGT, Appt., [404
v.

CHARLES GRAFF, Frederick C. Giesecking, and Matilda S. Vogt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 404-415.)

Wills — rule in Shelley's Case.

1. The testator must be deemed to have used the words of inheritance as mere descriptio personarum, and not in their full legal sense, thus defeating the application of the rule in Shelley's Case, where, after giving outright to his other children their respective shares of his estate, he directed that the share of a specified son should be paid over to certain designated trustees, the income therefrom to be paid over to such son, "the principal to be paid to his heirs after his death."

[For other cases, see Wills, 137-143, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Real property — rule in Shelley's Case — legal and equitable estate.

2. The rule in Shelley's Case does not apply where the particular estate is equitable, and the estate in remainder legal.

[For other cases, see Real Property, 33-39; Wills, 137-143, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 73.]

Argued November 17, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

APPPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree, which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, refusing to apply the rule in Shelley's Case in a suit to construe a will. Affirmed.

See same case below on first appeal, 26 App. D. C. 46; on second appeal, 33 App. D. C. 356.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Gittings argued the cause, and, with Mr. Justin Morrill Chamberlin, filed a brief for appellant:

The rule in Shelley's Case was a positive rule of law, and not one of construction.

Grimes v. Shirk, 169 Pa. 74, 32 Atl. 113; McCann v. Barclay, 204 Pa. 214, 53 Atl. 767; Shapley v. Diehl, 203 Pa. 569, 53 Atl. 374; Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro. Ch. 206.

NOTE.—As to the rule in Shelley's Case—see note to Hamilton v. Sidwell, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 963.

If technical words are used, they must be given their primary legal meaning, unless there is something on the face of the will that shows that they were not so used by the testator, but will clearly show in what sense they were used.

Daniel v. Whartenby, 17 Wall. 643, 21 L. ed. 663; Van Grutten v. Foxwell [1897] A. C. 658, 66 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 745, 77 L. T. N. S. 170.

Under the tenth paragraph of the will, the ancestor, Fred H. Vogt and heirs, take the same quality of estates.

Hill, Trustees, p. 288; Perry, Tr. § 311; Denton v. Denton, 17 Md. 403; Warner v. Sprigg, 62 Md. 14; Long v. Long, 62 Md. 68; Glover v. Condell, 163 Ill. 566, 35 L.R.A. 360, 45 N. E. 173.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and Leon Tobriner argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The word "heirs," as used in the will, should be construed as designatio personarum, descriptive of the persons who were to take upon the death of the life tenant.

Hargrave, Law Tracts, 574-576, Bennett v. Bennett, 217 Ill. 444, 4 L.R.A. (N.S.) 470, 75 N. E. 339; Taylor v. Lindsay, 14 R. I. 520; Gross v. Sheeler, 7 Houst. (Del.) 280, 31 Atl. 812; De La Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 222, 37 L. ed. 138, 142, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 283; Howell v. Ackerman, 89 Ky. 28, 11 S. W. 819; Haley v. Boston, 108 Mass. 579; Jones v. Lloyd, 33 Ohio St. 578; Albert v. Albert, 68 Md. 368, 12 Atl. 11; De Beauvoir v. De Beauvoir, 3 H. L. Cas. 557, 16 Jur. 1147; Martling v. Martling, 55 N. J. Eq. 771, 39 Atl. 203; Monast v. Letourneau, 87 Ill. App. 300; Jones v. Rees, 6 Penn. (Del.) 504, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 734, 69 Atl. 785; Low v. Smith, 2 Jur. N. S. 344, 4 Week. Rep. 429; Smith v. Butcher, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 113, 48 L. J. Ch. N. S. 136, 27 Week. Rep. 281; Sands v. Old Colony Trust Co. 195 Mass. 579, 81 N. E. 300, 12 Ann. Cas. 837; Clarke v. Cordis, 4 Allen, 480.

It being beyond dispute that, where it first occurs, the testator used the word "heirs" in a nontechnical sense, not as a word of limitation, but to designate the members of his family among whom the proceeds of his real estate should be divided, the authorities are overwhelming to the effect that the word is to be taken in the same sense, in the absence of any manifestation of a contrary intent, where it is again used in the same instrument.

Elliot v. Carter, 12 Pick. 443; Bundy v. Bundy, 38 N. Y. 421; Kiah v. Grenier, 56 N. Y. 224; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 105 Pa. 341; Brearley v. Brearley, 9 N. J. Eq. 27; Chew v. Chew, 1 Md. 168; Van Nostrand v.

Moore, 52 N. Y. 12; VanKleeck v. Dutch Church, 20 Wend. 471; Tucker v. Tucker, 5 N. Y. 418; Tucker v. Ball, 1 Barb. 94; Hoppock v. Tucker, 59 N. Y. 208; Carnagy v. Woodstock, 2 Munf. 234, 5 Am. Dec. 470; Feltham v. Butts, 8 Bush, 119; Moore v. Moore, 12 B. Mon. 656; Ferry v. Langley, 1 Mackey, 140; Butler v. Butler, 2 Mackey, 104; White v. Crenshaw, 5 Mackey, 118, 60 Am. Rep. 370.

Even where the word occurs in different instruments, as in two statutes, enacted at different times, but in pari materia, the like rule prevails.

United States v. Central P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 235, 240, 30 L. ed. 173, 175, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038.

The limitation to the ancestor and his heirs must both be of the same nature or quality, either both legal or both equitable, and not one legal and the other equitable.

1 Preston, Estates, 321; Green v. Green, 23 Wall. 486, 489, 23 L. ed. 75, 76; Sims v. Georgetown College, 1 App. D. C. 79; Handy v. McKim, 64 Md. 573, 4 Atl. 125; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 268, 282, 19 L. ed. 572, 577; Bacon's Appeal, 57 Pa. 505; Westcott v. Edmunds, 68 Pa. 34; Mannerback's Estate, 133 Pa. 342, 19 Atl. 552; Harbster's Estate, 133 Pa. 351, 19 Atl. 558; Eshbach's Estate, 197 Pa. 153, 46 Atl. 905.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Bill in equity filed in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by the children of John L. Vogt, to determine the meaning of a clause in the latter's will.

*The defendants in the case, appel-[409] lees here, were Charles Graff and Frederick C. Giesecking, executors and trustees named in the will, and Matilda S. Vogt, infant daughter of one of the complainants, appellant here, Frederick H. Vogt.

The part of the will to be construed is as follows:

"All the rest and residue of my real estate shall, when my youngest surviving child attains the age of twenty-one years, or one year thereafter, in the discretion of my executors, be sold by my executors at public auction, after due notice in the newspapers of this city. The proceeds of said sales shall be then divided among my heirs, share and share alike, and paid over to them respectively at once, except the share coming to my son, Fred H. Vogt. Said share shall be paid to Charles Graff and Frederick C. Giesecking, as trustees, by them invested, the income therefrom to be paid said Fred H. Vogt, the principal to be paid to his heirs after his death."

Regarding this provision as a simple composition of English words, we should have no difficulty in deciding that the testator intended to give to Frederick H. Vogt a life estate in the designated share. But it is contended that the meaning of the testator is determined otherwise by the rule in Shelley's Case. The rule is thus laid down: Where "the ancestor, by any gift or conveyance, takes an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance, an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately to his heirs in fee or in tail, . . . 'the heirs' are words of limitation of the estate, and not words of purchase." 1 Coke, 104; Daniel v. Whartenby, 17 Wall. 639, 641, 21 L. ed. 661, 663; Green v. Green, 23 Wall. 486, 488, 23 L. ed. 75, 76.

It will be observed that, under the rule, by a technical circumlocution, one estate only is created, though two parts are expressed,—a particular estate for life, with a remainder to the heirs of him who takes the particular estate. The rule, therefore, [410] has been a fruitful source *of controversy. On the one hand it has been praised as having a substantial foundation and necessarily expressing and enforcing essential legal distinctions in the transfer of property; to be, indeed, the very opposite of a technical rule, and one "established through a long course of decisions extending over a great many generations," and declared therefore to be a rule of substance in order to give effect to the intention of the grantor or testator. On the other hand, it is attacked as oftener defeating intention than executing it, being applied as an absolute and peremptory obligation to convey or devise an estate in fee simple even against an express declaration to the contrary. Inveective, therefore, has been employed against it, and even ridicule; and English and American judges, while yielding to it, have pronounced it unjust. We, however, need not enter into the field of controversy. Whether it had a legal and substantial foundation when first pronounced, or yet has, whether it is a useful rule of property or part of the débris of an ancient system, having now only the mischievous vitality of frustrating the intention of a grantor or testator, we need not consider.

It is conceded to be a rule of property in the District of Columbia, and we are brought to the question whether, consistently with it, the intention which we have seen Vogt has expressed may be executed?

The statement of the rule we have given. There are certain conditions attached to it which give precision to its application. One of these is that the remainder after the particular estate must be to heirs of the whole line of inheritable blood, designating those who are to take from generation to generation. And they must be heirs of him who takes the particular estate, and by devolution from him.

This is important to be observed. The heirs must take from the first taker, and not be a description of a class taking from the testator, becoming themselves "the[411 root of a new succession." Guthrie's Appeal, 37 Pa. 9. Hargrave, in his Law Tracts, states the test to be "whether the party entailing means to build a succession of heirs on the estate of the tenant for life." If he does not, but intends to describe a class taking from him, the rule does not apply. We proceed to illustrate this.

Kemp v. Reinhard, 228 Pa. 143, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 958, 77 Atl. 436, expresses the principle, and its facts bring it into close similarity to the case at bar. In that case the testatrix gave to her son, Jacob E. Kemp, the use and income of seven enumerated properties "for and during his lifetime." Then followed this clause: "And immediately after the decease of the said Jacob E. Kemp, I give and devise the above-described seven tractz or pieces of land devised to him herein for life to his issue in fee. Should he, however, die without leaving issue living, I give and devise the same unto my son Pierce G. S. Kemp, his heirs and assigns in fee." The court said:

"Though the intention of the testatrix may have been to give only a life estate to the appellant, if in the devise there was a limitation of the estate to his heirs, to take by devolution from him at his death, her intention is overridden by the rule in Shelley's Case; but in every case in which the application of that rule is involved, the first question is whether the deviser or grantor intended a limitation of the remainder in fee or in tail, as such, to the heirs of the first taker or that there should be the root of a new succession taking directly from the deviser or grantor as purchasers. When the latter intention appears, the rule has no place, and the intention must be given effect."

And further:

"It is very carefully to be noted that, in searching for the intention of the donor or testator, the inquiry is not whether the remaindermen are the persons who *would have been heirs had the fee been[412 limited directly to the ancestor. The thing to be sought for is not the persons who are directed to take the remainder, but the character in which the donor intended they should take. In the very many cases in which the question has arisen whether the rule was applicable, the difficulty has been in determining whether the intention was that the remaindermen should take as heirs of the first taker, or originally, as the stock of a new inheritance.' Guthrie's Appeal, supra."

Hall v. Gradwohl (1910) 113 Md. 293, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954, 77 Atl. 480, is also somewhat similar to the case at bar, and we quote the more readily since it is said that the rule in Shelley's Case prevails in the District of Columbia because it prevailed in the law of Maryland. After discussing the rule, the court said that "it is not a favored" one "in the law of Maryland, although the court will never refuse to apply it in a proper case." And it was decided that where the particular intention of the testator is not to use the words of inheritance in their full legal sense, but "as mere descriptio personarum or a particular designation of individuals who were to take as purchasers at his death," the rule should not prevail. The will passed on made certain bequests and devises and then provided: "The balance of my estate to be equally divided among my five children or their heirs, share and share alike," with this proviso: "That the portion to which my daughter Sarah [Gradwohl] may be entitled shall be invested in some safe stocks or other securities, the said Sarah [Gradwohl] to receive the income from the same during the term of her natural life, and at her death to be equally divided among her children or legal heirs." The court refused to apply the rule. To apply the rule it was said that the words "children or legal heirs" would have to be treated as words of limitation; that is, as "marking out the extent and duration of her interest." This construction the 413] court rejected as consonant with "neither reason, policy, justice, nor equity," and could only be supported by giving to the words "legal heirs," which are superadded to the word 'children,' the arbitrary meaning placed upon them 'by an artificial rule of law.'" The court, after an analysis of the will, decided that it plainly manifested a particular intention to use those words as mere descriptio personarum, as a particular designation of individuals who were to take as purchasers at the death of the testatrix.

The conclusion of the court was based upon the special provision of the will which directed that the portion given to the testatrix's daughter Sarah should be invested in some safe stocks or securities, and that Sarah should "receive the income from the same during the term of her natural life," and should be at her death "equally divided among her children or legal heirs." This language, the court added, manifested a particular intention on the part of the testatrix "to use the words as mere descriptio personarum. . . . In such cases, under all of the authorities, the rule in Shelley's Case does not apply."

A like intention is expressed in Vogt's will. His real estate, after satisfying particular devises, is directed to be sold when his youngest surviving child shall attain the age of twenty-one years. The proceeds he directs "shall be then divided among my heirs, share and share alike, and paid over to them, respectively, at once, except the share coming to my son, Fred H. Vogt. Said share shall be paid to Charles Graff and Frederick C. Giesecking, as trustees, by them invested, the income therefrom to be paid to said Fred H. Vogt, the principal to be paid to his heirs after his death." If the rule in Shelley's Case be applied, it will destroy all of the distinctions that the testator has expressed. The distinctions are radical, and must be looked to in ascertaining his intention. And this was done, as we have seen, in Hall v. Gradwohl, supra, and it was done, to, we may say in Kemp v. Reinhard, *supra. The latter case has[414 not the infirmity that counsel for appellant ascribes to some of the earlier Pennsylvania cases, of regarding the rule as one of construction, yielding to and not overriding the intention, as, it is contended, its unflinching and dominating character requires.

The intention of the testator, therefore, may have some sway. We may inquire, at least, as to his intention in the use of the word "heirs," whether as taking from him or as taking from the life tenant. The rule "is silent until the intention of the grantor or deviser is ascertained." Kemp v. Reinhard, supra.

Of Vogt's intention we have no doubt. It is made clear by the distinctions to which we have adverted. To his other children their shares are to be delivered immediately upon the sale of the real estate. To appellant there is nothing of his share to be delivered at all. It is to be delivered to others for him, he to receive, not the body of the share, but only the revenue from it. He is separated from it completely. He does not handle it or direct its investment, and after his death, the testator, through trustees he has selected, directs it to be delivered to persons designated by him; or, to use the language of the cases, described by him as taking from him. Opposing reasoning, it is true, might be brought forward, but this court, while asserting and recognizing the peremptory force of the technical terms of the rule, has said: "But if there are explanatory and qualifying expressions, from which it appears that the import of the technical language is contrary to the clear and plain intention of the testator, the former must yield and the latter will prevail." Daniel

v. Whartenby, 17 Wall. 639, 643, 21 L. ed. 661, 663.

Another condition of the application of the rule is that the particular estate and the estate in remainder must be of the same quality,—both legal or both equitable. The court of appeals decided that such condition did not exist, and on that ground, as well as on that which we have discussed, held adversely to appellant. In other words, 415]the *court decided that the estate given to appellant was equitable and the estate devised to the daughter legal, and that therefore the estates did not merge. It is admitted that the estate taken by appellant is equitable; the contentions of the parties turn upon the character of the estate given to his daughter. We will not consider the contentions, nor whether the rule is applicable to personal property. We rest our decision on the ground discussed by us.

Judgment affirmed.

J. H. WILLIAMS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

J. E. WALSH, Sheriff and Ex Officio Jailer of the County of Crawford, Kansas.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 415-424.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — discrimination — regulating sale of explosive.

1. The exception in favor of existing contracts, contained in Kan. Laws 1907, chap. 250, making it criminal to sell or deliver black powder for use in any coal mines in the state except in original sealed packages containing 12½ pounds of powder, does not make such statute repugnant to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as denying the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a. 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — questions not involved in record.

2. The question whether the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution is violated by the provisions of Kan. Laws 1907, chap. 250, making it unlawful to sell or deliver black powder for use in any coal mines in the state except in original sealed packages containing 12½ pounds of powder, is not open on a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of the state court refusing a writ of habeas corpus to one convicted of a violation of the state statute, where the latter court refused to consider the contention because the fact of the importation of the package sold from outside the state did not appear at the trial.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2164-2174, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — sale of explosive.

3. The use of the words "original packages" in Kan. Laws 1907, chap. 250, making it unlawful to sell, offer for sale, or deliver black powder for use in any coal mines in the state except in original sealed packages containing 12½ pounds of powder, does not necessitate the conclusion that the statute prohibits the importation of black powder from other states in other than 12½-pound packages.

[For other cases, see Commerce, IV. b. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may assail validity.

4. One who does not appear to have imported black powder from outside the state cannot raise the question of the validity under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution of the provisions of Kan. Laws 1907, chap. 250, making it unlawful to sell, offer for sale, or deliver black powder for use in any coal mines in the state except in original sealed packages containing 12½ pounds of powder.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 79.]

Argued and submitted December 5, 1911.
Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review an order refusing a writ of habeas corpus to one convicted of a violation of the statute regulating sales of black powder. Affirmed.

See same case below, 79 Kan. 212, 98 Pac. 777.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles Blood Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. D. B. Holmes, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Kansas black-powder act is repugnant to the clause of U. S. Const. 14th Amendment, which prohibits a state denying to any citizen the equal protection of the laws.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On what questions the Federal Supreme
56 L. ed.

Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The act is in direct conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Sawrie v. Tennessee, 82 Fed. 615; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 423, 42 L. ed. 1095, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

Messrs. John S. Dawson and Fred S. Jackson submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. S. N. Hawkes and O. D. Boaz were on the brief:

This law clearly operates on all persons similarly situated and upon all property similarly situated. Consequently, it cannot be said that any person is denied equal protection under this law.

Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 615, 29 L. ed. 232, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 382, 38 L. ed. 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 88, 41 L. ed. 80, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031.

The courts have clearly and sufficiently accorded to the legislatures the right, under the police power retained by them, to regulate both the subject of the handling of black powder and of carrying on the business of mining for coal.

Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 206, 28 L. ed. 697, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 97; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Jamieson v. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. 128 Ind. 555, 12 L.R.A. 652, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 613, 28 N. E. 76.

Unless the black-powder act is, upon its face, absolutely void, and void even as relating to offenses committed entirely within the state, and in which no question of interstate commerce is concerned, then clearly the supreme court of Kansas had no jurisdiction, under the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, to review the evidence before the justice of the peace, or to release the defendant upon the ground that additional evidence, if it had been introduced, would have resulted in his acquittal.

Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 382, 38 L. ed. 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

Errors and irregularities which do not render the proceedings void are not ground for relief by habeas corpus.

Franklin v. Westfall, 27 Kan. 618.

The court will not listen to an objection made to the constitutionality of an act by a party whose rights it does not affect, and who has therefore no interest in defeating it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 232.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

A statute of Kansas provides as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any individual, firm, or corporation to sell, offer for sale, or deliver for use at any coal mine or mines in the state of Kansas, black powder in any manner except in original packages containing 12½ pounds of powder, said package to be securely sealed; said powder to be delivered by the company to the miner at its powder house, not more than 300 feet from pit head, unless hereafter [419 otherwise provided by contract; provided, however, this act shall not be construed as in any manner conflicting with any existing contract of sale of black powder."

Plaintiff in error was convicted of violating the statute by selling and delivering to one John Thomas black powder which was not in an original package of 12½ pounds, securely sealed, there being no existing contract to sell between the parties. He was condemned to pay a fine of $50 and the costs of the case, and stand committed to the county jail until he should pay the fine or be discharged by law.

In a petition to the supreme court of the state in habeas corpus to be discharged from custody, he alleged the illegality of his conviction, and that the statute was null and void because in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and the commerce clause, and also with the Constitution of the state of Kansas.

His contentions were not sustained, and he was remanded to custody. 79 Kan. 212, 98 Pac. 777.

Some of the contentions which were made in the state court are abandoned here. "We admit," counsel say, "that the Kansas legislature had the right to determine that the local conditions in the state required that black powder should not be sold and delivered for use in any coal mines in the state except in packages containing exactly 12½ pounds, no more nor less; that precisely that amount of powder was required to be sold to protect the miners that are employed in the coal mines of the state, and that the mere fact that courts or judges may differ as to the wisdom of such legislation would afford no ground for judicial interference, unless the question was in excess of legislative power." It is, however, insisted that there is a limitation of the power of the state, and that the law in question transcends the power of the

We shall consider these objections in their order:

(1) The discriminatory effect of the statute comes, it is urged, from its 1st section, which directs that it shall not be construed to conflict with existing contracts. "The act thus recognizes," it is said, "the fact at the time it took effect, May 27, 1907, of the existence of contracts" for the delivery of powder in other than the described packages. "It is thus made unlawful," it is said, "for some persons to sell or buy black powder otherwise than in 12½ pounds in original sealed packages, while others may lawfully do the same thing."

We might, indeed, hesitate to assume, as counsel does, from the possibility of the existence of a fact, its actual existence, if by doing so we should have to regard a state law as unconstitutional, but as we do not think the result will follow, we shall assume the existence of the fact. The purpose of the statute is to provide for the safety of coal mining operations, and if it may be said that whatever danger can come from packages of powder will come from them regardless of the date of the contract under which they may be delivered, there are nevertheless other considerations to be taken into account. The statute is criminal. A retrospective operation of it was to be avoided,—might, indeed, be illegal. At any rate, it was a matter properly to be considered by the legislature in distinguishing between contracts made before the passage of the law and those made after its passage. The former might not be numerous, their evil would be temporary; and certainly legislation which makes acts criminal which are done after they are forbidden, and assigns no penalties to acts done in pursuance of obligations legally incurred, is not arbitrary classification. It is not necessary to do more than *re-[421] peat what we have said many times, that a classification which is not arbitrary is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. We may add that "the 14th Amendment does not forbid statutes and statutory changes to have a beginning, and thus discriminate between the rights of an earlier and later time." Sperry & H. Co. v. Rhodes, 220 U. S. 502, 505, 55 L. ed. 561, 562, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

(2) To make good the contention that the statute of Kansas offends the commerce clause of the Constitution, plaintiff in error refers to an amendment to his petition that the powder sold and delivered by him was inclosed in an original unbroken package, containing 25 pounds of powder, imported from the state of Missouri by the Central Coal & Coke Company, of which company he was the agent and representative in selling and delivering. And it is further alleged that black powder has been and is put up by manufacturers thereof, and sold and transported among the states in original packages containing 25 pounds.

It is, however, admitted that proof of such facts was not attempted to be made in the justice's court. The case was submitted in that court upon a stipulation that the powder, at the time of its sale and delivery, was not "in an original package, containing 12½ pounds, securely sealed, and that then and there, there was not an existing contract for the sale of black powder, to be used in said mine."

Plaintiff in error insists that the absence of proof of the facts which he alleges is immaterial, because, as he urges, "this court will take judicial notice of the matter of common knowledge that black powder is a subject of interstate commerce." But plaintiff in error invokes a broader knowledge, or, rather, a broader knowledge is necessary to sustain his allegations. We must not only take notice that black powder is a subject of interstate commerce in packages of 25 pounds, but of the more particular *facts that[422] he was the agent and representative of the Central Coal & Coke Company in selling and delivering the powder, and that the company had imported it in the package in which it was sold. What sources of knowledge have we of such facts? It is true that the stipulation recited that Thomas's purchase of the powder was voluntary, and that it was sold to him "in the usual and ordinary course of business." Of what business, and whose? It will be observed that the stipulation merely negatives the requirements of the statute. It follows the complaint, and states that the powder was not sold in an original package containing 12½ pounds, and that there was not an existing contract. How it was sold is not stated. It is true the supreme court supplied the omission as to quantity. In answering an objection (the objection is not made here) that the law was invalid on account of its rigid requirement that a package should contain 12½ pounds, neither more nor less, the court stated that the sale in this case was of 25 pounds. The court went no farther, and of the contention that the statute was repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution, said: "The final claim of the petitioner, that the act is in violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, may not be presented in this record, since the fact of the importation of the package from Missouri did not appear at the trial before the justice." It was certainly within the competency of the court to refuse to consider the contention. The validity of the judgment against plaintiff in error could only be determined by the defense he made, not by the defense he might have made, and which he did not even offer to make. We have often said that the writ of habeas corpus cannot be made to perform the office of a writ of error. It certainly cannot be made the means of obtaining a new trial.

It may, however, be said that the supreme court expressed its views of the validity of the Kansas statute under the commerce clause of the Constitution, and thereby ruled on the contention of plaintiff in error, based on that clause. We do not so understand the opinion of the court. It in no way, nor to any extent, modified its view that the contention was not available to plaintiff in error, or intimated that such view was not the basis of its decision.

Plaintiff in error, apprehending this, declares that it is immaterial whether the package of powder sold by him was imported, and insists that the act must be held to be void because it must be considered "as applicable to importations of black powder from other states." The words "original packages," used in § 1 of the statute, had, it is said, "a technical meaning well known to the members of the Kansas legislature." In definition of the meaning of those words, plaintiff in error cites certain familiar decisions of this court, and, from the definition given in them of "original packages," deduces the conclusion that the words were used in the same sense in the Kansas statute, and hence, that the statute must be held as designed to prohibit importations of black powder in other than 12½ pound packages. We are not impressed by the reasoning. The act does not deal with importations, special or general, but only with sales within the state at a specified place, and the delivery at such place of the powder sold in other than a prescribed quantity and in a prescribed package. It may be that powder is imported or put up in the state in such packages. If so, it makes compliance with the law all the easier. Or it may be that the seller may compose the package securing its integrity in the manner provided by the statute. What the supreme court of the state may decide in that regard we do not know, for the point was not made in that court, and the interpretation of the statute invoked.

There is another answer to the contention. A law cannot be declared invalid at the instance of one not affected by it[424 and, as we have seen, there was no proof before the justice of the peace that plaintiff in error was an importer of powder. We do not wish to be understood as intimating that if such proof had been made, it would have been a defense. Powder is an explosive, dangerous to handle, the degree of danger corresponding to its quantity. It is subject, therefore, to a measure of regulation from which harmless articles of commerce may be exempt. It is said by this court in Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 100, 32 L. ed. 352, 354, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28: "Indeed, it is a principle fully recognized by decisions of state and Federal courts, that wherever there is any business in which, either from the products created or the instrumentalities used, there is danger to life or property, it is not only within the power of the states, but it is among their plain duties, to make provision against accidents likely to follow in such business, so that the dangers attending it may be guarded against so far as is practicable." See further on the same principle, Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 206, 28 L. ed. 697, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1101.

Judgment affirmed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

D. L. REID and Etta C. Reid, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 424-444.)

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations.

1. Inhibitive congressional legislation is not essential to exclude state legislation upon incidental matters relating to interstate commerce with respect to which the states and Congress have a concurrent power. It is sufficient if the congressional legislation occupies the field of regulation. [For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation of carrier — conflicting Federal regulation.

2. Congress has so completely taken control of the subject of rate making and charging by the provisions of the act to regulate commerce and the amendments thereof as to invalidate the provisions of N. C. Code 1905, § 2631, so far as they penalize the refusal of a carrier to receive a tender of freight for transportation to a point on the line of another carrier outside the state where no rate for such shipment has been established, filed, or published.

[For other cases see Commerce, I. c; III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 487.]

Argued December 6, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Mechenburg County, in that state, enforcing a state statute penalizing the refusal of a carrier to accept a tender of an interstate shipment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 153 N. C. 490, 69 S. E. 618.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom argued the cause, and, with Mr. John K. Graves, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The receiving by a carrier of goods tendered at a point in one state for transportation to a point in another state, and the duties of the carrier with respect thereto, are matters of interstate commerce, and therefore within the power of Congress.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 56 L. ed.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 189, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 68, 73; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 150, 54 L. ed. 698, 705, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

The decisions of this court clearly lay down the principles to be applied in the determination of whether a statute of the sort here involved does or does not contravene the Federal Constitution. Among others, the following may be cited as showing where the line is to be drawn:

Statutes upheld:

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Statutes condemned:

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26st Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

No duty at common law rests upon a carrier, in the absence of contract or custom, either to receive freight at, or deliver to, an industrial siding or nonagency station.

Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 122; Louisville N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Flanagan, 113 Ind.

579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

488, 3 Am. St. Rep. 676, 14 N. E. 370; Charnock v. Texas & P. R. Co. 194 U. S. 436, 48 L. ed. 1059, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; State ex rel. Kellogg v. Suffolk & C. R. Co. 100 N. C. 158, 5 S. E. 379.

The common-law duty of the carrier in respect to the receiving of goods for transportation is to receive them "upon reasonable request therefor" (see Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Swift, 12 Wall. 262, 270, 20 L. ed. 423, 428); and this is likewise the national policy in respect to the regulation of interstate commerce, as shown by the language of the interstate commerce act.

Would not the conflict and confusion necessarily resulting from the administration of the state law by the state courts and the Federal law by the Federal tribunals, as to the same subject-matter, so deplored by this court in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 440, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075, be inherent in the situation here referred to.

See also Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

Even if the statute should be construed to impose the same affirmative duties upon the carrier as are prescribed by Congress in the "reasonable request" clause, the state statute would be invalid as invading the field of which Congress has taken control; and that, too, in a matter of national scope and importance, admitting of but one uniform system of regulations.

Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 573, 30 L. ed. 249, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in the case is the validity of an act of the state of North Carolina which requires the agents and officers of railroads and other transportation companies to receive freight for transportation whenever tendered at a regular station, and every loaded car tendered at a side track or any warehouse connected with the railroad by a siding, and forward the same by a route selected by the person tendering the same, under penalty of forfeiting $50 a day to the aggrieved party for each day of refusal to receive such freight, and all damages actually sustained.†

*Defendants in error brought suit[432 against plaintiff in error, herein called the railway company, in one of the courts of North Carolina, to recover penalties and damages for the failure of the railway company, in violation of the statute, on dates from September 17 to September 23, 1907, to receive goods tendered to it by Etta C. Reid, defendant in error, at Charlotte, North Carolina, for transportation to a point in the state of West Virginia.

The material facts, as stipulated, are as follows: The railway company is a Virginia corporation, and is a common carrier, and operates a line of railroad from the city of Charlotte to the city of Alexandria, Virginia, and another line to the city of Richmond. Davis is a town in West Virginia, and a terminus of a branch road of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, 6 miles long, running from a point on the railroad, known as Thomas, to Davis.

The railway company operates no line of railroad or other means of conveyance to Davis, nor does it connect with the Western Maryland Railroad's line.

On the 17th of September, 1907, Etta C. Reid tendered to the railway company at its depot in Charlotte, where it usually accepts freight, a lot of household goods *and kitchen furniture, and offered to[433 pay the freight charges thereon. She demanded that the company issue to her a bill of lading "reading from Charlotte, in the state of North Carolina, to Davis, in the state of West Virginia, consignee to be Samuel Hammock." The railway company declined to name a rate to be charged for †Agents or other officers of railroads and other transportation companies whose duty it is to receive freights shall receive all articles of the nature and kind received by such company for transportation whenever tendered at a regular depot, station, wharf, or boat landing, and every loaded car tendered at a side track, or any warehouse connected with the railroad by a siding, and shall forward the same by the route selected by the person tendering the freight under existing laws; and the transportation company represented by any person refusing to receive such freight shall forfeit and pay to the party aggrieved the sum of $50 for each day said company refuses to receive said shipment of freight, and all damages actually sustained by reason of the refusal to receive freight. If such loaded car be tendered at any siding or workhouse [warehouse] at which there is no agent, notice shall be given to an agent at the nearest regular station at which there is an agent that such car is loaded and ready for shipment. Code of North Carolina, 1905, § 2631.

transportation of the goods, declined to permit her to prepay the freight charges from Charlotte to Davis, declined to receive the goods for shipment, and declined to issue a bill of lading therefor.

She renewed her request on four successive days, and, with each demand, the company refused to comply. On September 23, 1907, the company named the sum of $34.08 as the amount necessary to prepay the freight charges on the shipment from Charlotte to Davis, and thereupon she paid the said sum and the company issued a bill of lading to her.

On September 17, 1907, no through and joint rate of freight had been established by the railway company and the Western Maryland Railroad Company and other roads which the shipment would have to pass over going from Charlotte to Davis, "and no such rates had been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and no rate of freight had been established or filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, or published, covering shipments between said points." On that day, when Etta C. Reid made her demand of the railway company, the company's agent advised her that there was no established rate for the shipment, that no rate had been filed or published, that he did not know the rate, that he had no authority to receive the goods or the freight charges thereon to destination, and no authority to issue a bill of lading reading "final destination, Davis, in the state of West Virginia."

The agent wired the officer having charge of such matters to obtain authority to 434] name a through and joint rate, *to receive the shipment and issue a bill of lading. Immediately thereafter the officers of the company took up with the officers of the companies over whose lines the shipment of freight would have to move the establishment of a rate, with the result that a rate was established. On Monday, September 23, 1907, the local agent was informed of such rate and given authority to receive the shipment and to issue a bill of lading. Thereupon the company received the shipment, accepted the amount of freight in accordance with the joint and through rate, and issued the bill of lading.

There is, and was, at the date of the tender of the goods, a telegraph office at Davis. Mrs. Reid remained at Charlotte for the time mentioned, awaiting the establishment of the rate.

It is stipulated that she was damaged in the sum of $25, for the recovery of which and the penalties prescribed by the statute she asked the court to adjudge.

The railway company resisted the demand and contended that to hold that the act was applicable to it would violate the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Judgment was awarded to defendants in error as prayed, and it was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, two members of the court dissenting. 153 N. C. 490, 69 S. E. 618.

This statement indicates the questions which are presented for solution and the principles upon which the solution of them depends. It hardly needs to be stated that transportation of property between the states is interstate commerce, and may be of Federal rather than of state jurisdiction. We say may be of Federal jurisdiction, for interstate commerce in its practical conduct has many incidents having varying degrees of connection with it and effect upon it over which the state may have some power. As to the extent of the power and the occasions for its exercise, controversies have arisen, and in deciding which *the power of the state over the gen-[435] eral subject of commerce has been divided into three classes: First, those in which the power of the state is exclusive; second, those in which the states may act in the absence of legislation by Congress; third, those in which the action of Congress is exclusive and the state cannot act at all. Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 209, 38 L. ed. 965, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 655, 40 L. ed. 1105, 1106, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

These divisions, however, express but the extreme boundaries of the subject. Something more definite is necessary for the decision of the opposing contentions in the case at bar. The supreme court of the state was of the view that the statute simply regulated a duty which preceded the entry of the goods in interstate commerce, and concluded, therefore, that the statute was "neither an interference with nor a burden upon interstate commerce." And it decided that the execution of this duty was not precluded by the provision of the interstate commerce act [24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154] requiring a schedule of tariffs to be established and charged. It was said by the court that it was the duty of the railway company to file such schedule, and that the company could not justify the violation of its common-law duty by the neglect of its statutory duty.

The case, however, is not quite in such narrow compass. There is something more to be considered than the accumulation of defaults, if there be defaults. It is undoubtedly the duty of a railway company to receive freight when tendered for transportation. It may, besides, have other obligations, but it does not follow that it is within the power of the state to enforce them. There may be a Federal exertion of authority which takes from a state the power to regulate the duties of interstate carriers or to provide remedies for their violation. This is realized by defendants in error, and they assert that the state statute is in aid of commerce, and not an interference with or burden upon it, and therefore must be 436] sustained as a valid exercise *of the state's power, citing Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

In those cases, and in the later case of Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, the principle is expressed that "there are many occasions where the police power of the state can be properly exercised to insure a faithful and prompt performance of duty within the limits of the state upon the part of those engaged in interstate commerce." Such exercise of power, it was further said, was in aid of interstate commerce, and, although incidentally affecting it, did not burden it. But the facts of those cases distinguish them from the case at bar, and make their principle inapplicable. In the Telegraph Company Cases there was a failure to transmit or deliver telegrams, in violation of the duty so to do imposed by the particular state statutes. In the Railroad Case a statute of the state of South Carolina which required carriers to settle within a specified time claims for loss of or damage to freight while in their possession within the state was sustained against the objection that it was an interference with interstate commerce. In none of the cases, however, was there any Federal legislation upon the subject involved, and in all of them such circumstance was stated as an element of decision. The circumstance is important, and we are brought to the inquiry whether it exists in the present case.

It is well settled that if the state and Congress have a concurrent power, that of the state is superseded when the power of Congress is exercised. The question occurs: To what extent and how directly must it be exercised to have such effect? It was decided in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, that the mere creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the grant to it of a large measure of control over interstate commerce does not, in the absence of action by it, 437] change the rule *that Congress by non-action leaves power in the states over merely incidental matters. "In other words," and we quote from the opinion, "the mere grant by Congress to the Commission of certain national powers in respect to interstate commerce does not of itself, and in the absence of action by the Commission, interfere with the authority of the state to make those regulations conducive to the welfare and convenience of its citizens. . . . Until specific action by Congress or the Commission, the control of the state over those incidental matters remains undisturbed." The duty which was enforced in the state court was the duty of a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce to afford equal local switching service to its shippers, notwithstanding the cars concerning which the service was claimed were eventually to be engaged in interstate commerce. This duty was declared to be a common-law duty which the state might, "at least, in the absence of congressional action, compel a carrier to discharge."

The principle of that case, therefore, requires us to find specific action either by Congress in the interstate commerce act, or by the Commission, covering the matters which the statute of North Carolina attempts to regulate. There is no contention that the Commission has acted, so we must look to the act. Does it, as contended by plaintiff in error, take control of the subject-matter and impose affirmative duties upon the carriers which the state cannot even supplement? In other words, has Congress taken possession of the field?

It is not possible to epitomize the act by giving a more particular designation than that it was designed to regulate interstate commerce. Something more was certainly intended by it than the mere ordaining or the supervision of the movement of goods. In a certain general way traffic would be regulated by railroad and shipper, but their powers were not equal. The railroads had the *greater power, and [438] might and did exercise it in unreasonable charges and in discriminations. The potent instrument for this was the difference in the rate charged for transportation, or by secret rebates if the charge was not discriminating in the first instance. Hence we said, in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 437, 51 L. ed. 553, 557, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075: "The act made it the duty of carriers subject to its provisions to charge only just and reasonable rates." To that end, it was further said, schedules of rates were required to be established and published, and departure from the rates established, except in the manner authorized by the act, was forbidden under criminal penalties, and any injury to persons was provided to be redressed through application to the Commission or to the courts. And it is provided that "if no joint rate over a through route has been established the several carriers in such through route shall file, print, and keep open to public inspection, as aforesaid, the separately established rates, fares, and charges applies to the through transportation." [34 Stat. at L. 586, chap. 3591, § 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1153.]

The Commission is given the power to determine and prescribe the manner in which the schedules required by the act are to be kept. And it is enacted that unless otherwise provided, no carrier "shall engage or participate in the transportation of passengers or property, as defined in this act, unless the rates, fares, and charges upon which the same are transported by said carrier have been filed and published in accordance with the provisions of this act."

It is evident, therefore, that Congress has taken control of the subject of rate making and charging. All of the particular details we cannot set forth without extensive quotation from the act, which it is quite inconvenient to make. The provisions of the act are directed at the abuses most to be feared,—unreasonableness in the rates, and discriminations, including in the latter discriminations in service, in the acceptance and delivery of freight, and in [439] facilities furnished. "The power which has been given to the Commission to secure those results we have set forth in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. supra, and in Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164. In the first case it was said: "It is apparent that the means by which these great purposes were to be accomplished was the placing upon all carriers the positive duty to establish schedules of reasonable rates which should have a uniform application to all, and which should not be departed from so long as the established schedule remained unaltered in the manner provided by law." After citing cases, it was further said: "When the general scope of the act is enlightened by the considerations just stated, it becomes manifest that there is not only a relation, but an indissoluble unity between the provision for the establishment and maintenance of rates until corrected in accordance with the statute, and prohibitions against preferences and discrimination." In that case it was decided that a shipper could not maintain an action at common law in a state court on the ground that a rate established in accordance with the interstate commerce act was unreasonable. In the second case was considered the power of the Commission under the amendments of 1906, and it was decided that, on the principles announced in the Abilene Case, and from a consideration of the amendments and their purpose to supply the defects of the act and enlarge the powers of the Commission, the distribution of coal cars by the railroad company among shippers was a matter involving preference and discrimination, and within the competency of the Interstate Commerce Commission to consider, and that the courts could not interfere with such distribution until after action by the Commission. This was resolved notwithstanding § 23 of the act gave jurisdiction to the circuit and district courts of the United States to command, at the suit of one aggrieved, a common carrier "to move and transport *the traffic, or to furnish cars or other[440] facilities for transportation." And transportation means not only the physical instrumentalities, but all services in connection with receipt, delivery, and handling of property transported, and such transportation the carrier must "provide and furnish upon reasonable request therefor." (Section 1, paragraph 2, of the act, as amended June 29, 1906, by the Hepburn act.) Section 7 of the latter act requires the carrier to issue a bill of lading for an interstate shipment, and makes the carrier liable for the loss of or damage to property while on its own line, and also while on the lines over which the property may pass.
56 L. ed.

There is scarcely a detail of regulation which is omitted to secure the purpose to which the interstate commerce act is aimed. It is true that words directly inhibitive of the exercise of state authority are not employed, but the subject is taken possession of. We are therefore brought to consider what the statute of North Carolina provides. Leaving out qualifications with which we are not concerned, the act requires railroad companies to receive freight for transportation whenever tendered at a regular station, and forward the same over the route selected by the person offering the shipment. Fifty dollars a day is the penalty prescribed for refusal, and all the damages incurred.

The particular act which was held to violate the statute was refusing the tender of goods for shipment from Charlotte, North Carolina, to Davis, West Virginia; that is, a tender for interstate shipment, and a demand coincidentally for a bill of lading covering the shipment, explicitly stating the origin of the shipment at Charlotte and its destination at Davis. The supreme court of the state decided, as we have seen, that the statute deals with a common-law duty simply, one which attaches before freight enters into interstate commerce, and hence 441]concluded as *follows: "The statutory enforcement under penalty of the common-law duty to accept freight 'whenever tendered' is not within the scope or terms of any act of Congress. It is neither an interference with nor a burden upon interstate commerce." We are unable to agree with the conclusion. It would destroy absolutely Federal control until the freight was in the possession of the carrier, and is directly contradictory of the provision of the interstate commerce act which we have quoted. See, in this connection, Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491. In the term "transportation," we have seen, Congress has included "all services in connection with the receipt . . . of property transported." And this certainly imposes the obligation to receive the property as well as to carry it,—one of the obligations the carrier must perform "upon reasonable request therefor." Other provisions of the same import and direction might be quoted. Conditions put on the receipt of articles at the railroad station may be conditions upon the traffic, and necessarily are within the regulating power of Congress. Their inducement and aim may be to secure a prompter performance of duty by the carrier, and so far beneficent. But that is not the question. The question is, Where is the control, in the state or Congress, and has Congress acted? That the control is in Congress we have seen; that it has acted is demonstrated by the provisions of the interstate commerce act to which we have referred. As we have seen, schedules of rates, whether the road be single or forms with another a "through route," must be established, filed, and published, designating the places. They cannot be changed without permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and no carrier is permitted to engage or participate in the transportation of passengers or property unless the rates for the same have been so filed and published. Criminal punishments are imposed for violations of these requirements, and civil redress of injuries 442]*received by shippers is given through the Interstate Commerce Commission. See Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 222 U. S. 506, post, 288, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114. By these provisions Congress has taken possession of the field of regulation, with the purpose, which we have already pointed out, to keep under the eye and control of the Commission the rates charged and the action of the railroad in regard to them, to secure their reasonableness and to secure their impartial application. The statute of North Carolina conflicts with these requirements. What they forbid the carrier to do the statute requires him to do, and punishes disobedience by successive daily penalties.

We cannot assume that it was without consideration of its necessity that Congress enacted § 2 of the Hepburn act. It was no doubt the adaptation of experience to the exigencies of a practical problem,—Congress coming to believe that the most effective way to prevent preferences in charges by carriers was to forbid them to "engage or participate in the transportation of passengers or property" until they had fixed and proclaimed the rate to be charged therefor,—a rate that would be not only for one shipper or shipment, but for all shippers and shipments; not for one time only, but for all times. The power of Congress to so provide cannot be doubted. If the regulation be not exclusive, this situation is presented: If the carrier obey the state law, he incurs the penalties of the Federal law; if he obey the Federal law, he incurs the penalties of the state law. Manifestly one authority must be paramount, and when it speaks the other must be silent. We can see no middle ground. In so deciding we take no essential power from the states. The balances of the Constitution are only preserved, and there is given to the states the power which is the states' and to Congress the power which belongs to Congress.

But if there be a middle ground, it certainly can be argued that the cases establish that it is passed when the *state[443 regulation burdens interstate commerce; and whether a regulation has such effect may be determined by its sanctions. If a penalty of $50 for refusing to receive freight "when tendered" be no burden on interstate commerce beyond the power of a state to impose, would a penalty of $100 or $1,000 likewise be no burden? May not the power which is competent to impose a penalty select its amount? The penalty of the North Carolina statute, it is to be remembered, is independent of the damage received, and what excuses or defenses may be offered the decisions of the court leave in doubt. The statute seems to permit none. The case at bar illustrates somewhat its peremptory character, and the case which was argued with this (Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32

Sup. Ct. Rep. 145) still more so. The plaintiffs in that action sued for $750 for refusal to receive and forward a carload of shingles, and recovered $350, although one of them testified that they "never lost a cent." The circumstance was declared by the court, citing a prior case, to be immaterial, as the penalties were "not given solely on the idea of making pecuniary compensation to the person injured, but usually for the more important purpose of enforcing the performance of a duty required by public policy or positive statutory enactment." [150 N. C. 765, 64 S. E. 874, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 247.] The policy of the statute, then, is to require the acceptance of freight "when tendered," with daily accumulating penalties upon refusal to do so. If such power be conceded, what is the limit of its exercise, either as to conditions or penalties?

One other contention remains to be noticed. It is said that there is not presented in the case the dilemma of alternative penalties, for the Hepburn act, it is pointed out, requires a schedule of rates to be filed only "when the through route and joint rate have been established;" and that none were established in the case at bar, and that therefore the railway company was not put to a choice of obligations, and subjected to punishment however it 444] might *choose. But it is also provided that "if no joint rate over the through route has been established, the several carriers in such through route shall file, print, and keep open to public inspection as aforesaid, the separately established rates, fares, and charges applied to the through transportation." There is nothing in the record to show that there were such established separate rates, and that separately established rates were published and kept open for inspection. Indeed, the record shows that a through rate had to be fixed by the several carriers in the through route.

It was only because of the obligation imposed by the Hepburn act that the railway company refused to receive the goods tendered to it, and the agent of the company informed defendant in error that he was without power to comply with her demand. He promptly acted in the matter when the lines over which the freight had to pass established a joint rate. He then received the goods, issued a bill of lading therefor, "and the shipment went forward to its destination."

The judgment is reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

56 L. ed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

C. C. REID and Edward Beam, Copartners under the Firm Name of Reid & Beam.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 444-448.)

This case is governed by the decision in Southern R. Co. v. Reid, ante, 257.

[No. 80.]

Argued December 6, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Rutherford County, in that state, enforcing a state statute penalizing the refusal of a carrier to accept a tender of an interstate shipment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 150 N. C. 753, 64 S. E. 874, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 247.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom argued the cause, and, with Mr. John K. Graves, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions, see their brief as reported in Southern R. Co. v. Reid, ante, 257.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves a consideration of the statute of North Carolina passed on in No. 487 [222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140], and was argued and submitted with the latter case. The question, then, only is whether the principles there expressed apply to it.

The action was brought by defendants in error, a copartnership, against the plaintiff in error, a railway company and a common carrier, for penalties under the statute, which is set out in the opinion in No. 487, to recover the sum of $50 a day for fifteen days for failing and refusing for such time to receive a carload of shingles tendered to the company at Rutherfordton, North Carolina, for shipment to one James Haddox, at Scottsville, Tennessee.

The case was tried before a jury, which rendered a verdict for the plaintiff firm (defendants in error) for the sum of $350, upon which judgment was duly entered. It was *affirmed by the supreme court, [446 two of the members of the court dissenting as in No. 487. 150 N. C. 753, 64 S. E. 874, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 247.

The statute is attacked on the same ground as in case No. 487. The facts, as recited by the supreme court, are as follows: Defendants in error having received an order for a carload of shingles from Haddox at Scottsville, Tennessee, applied at Rutherfordton to the railway company for a car. It was furnished and loaded, shipping instructions given, prepayment of the freight tendered, and a bill of lading demanded. The agent of the company refused to give the bill of lading or ship the goods, assigning as a reason that he did not know where Scottsville was nor the road to it. Defendants in error demanded that the goods be shipped, and told the agent that they would pay any additional amount found to be due, and requested that when the agent got ready to ship to telephone them, and they would come over and pay the freight due. Another agent "came to take over the agency, and being told, on inquiry of plaintiffs (defendants in error), about the carload of shingles and what the trouble was," he asked for instructions, which were given him, and on July 19th the freight was paid, the bill of lading given, and the shingles shipped as directed, "arriving at their destination without further let or hindrance." Defendants in error testified that they had received no pecuniary injury by reason of the delay, and that the first agent "still had charge of the depot when the shingles were shipped."

There was evidence offered on the part of the railway company that Scottsville was an industrial siding on the Knoxville & Augusta Road, 8 or 10 miles out of Knoxville, established for the convenience of persons shipping brick from that point, and that bills of lading for goods shipped to and from that point were made out at Rockford, a regular station, 2 miles distant. It was testified that since the consolidation of the East Tennessee & Virginia Railroad with the old Richmond & Danville, the 447]*railway company (plaintiff in error) had paid all of the employees of the Knoxville & Augusta Road their salaries.

The statute was attacked by the railway company in its requests for certain instructions, the refusal to give which was sustained by the supreme court. The court intimated that, as had been held in a former opinion, the commerce clause of the Constitution was not involved in the case, on the ground "that the penalty [under the statute] accrues before the 'freight is accepted for transportation,' and on the principle applied in the case of Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 475." But the court, conceding, arguendo, "that the goods when tendered for transportation to another state, as to matters involved in such transportation, and in reference to these penalty statutes, should be considered and dealt with as interstate commerce," was of opinion that the contention of the railway company could not be sustained, and concluded, after a careful discussion of cases in this court and in the state court, that the statute did not burden interstate commerce, and that, "in the absence of inhibitive congressional legislation, or of interfering action on the part of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the statute in question is a valid regulation in direct and reasonable enforcement of the duties incumbent on . . . [the railway company] as a common carrier."

We have shown in the opinion in No. 487 that there need not be directly "inhibitive congressional legislation," but congressional legislation which occupies the field of regulation and thereby excludes action by the state. Southern R. Co. v. Reid [222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140].

The facts in this case are somewhat different from those in No. 487, and require to be noticed. The majority of the court found that it did not appear from the testimony that the railway company had not filed its schedule of rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission to Scottsville, Tennessee, the court observing that it could "hardly be *seriously contended[443 that the difference between Scottsville, Tennessee, and Scottsville, Tennessee, is of the substance." The court further said: "The presumption is that the company has complied with the law. And if it were otherwise, we are of opinion that the act of Congress, and the orders of the Commission, made thereunder, requiring the publication of rates, was made for an entirely different purpose from that involved in this inquiry, and does not constitute such interfering action. See Harrill Bros. v. Southern R. Co. 144 N. C., pp. 540-541, 57 S. E. 383."

We have set forth in No. 487 our reasons for holding otherwise.

Judgment reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Lurton does not agree with the court as to the facts of this case, and for that reason does not think that it falls under No. 487. He therefore dissents.

J. R. TREAT, as Treasurer and Ex Officio
Tax Collector of the County of Coconino, Territory of Arizona, et al., Appts.,
v.

GRAND CANYON RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 448-452.)

Appeal — review of territorial decision — statutory construction — exemption from taxation.

The decision of the Arizona supreme court that a railway company organized in 1901 under Ariz. Laws 1897, act No. 3, for the purpose of buying the property of a railroad sold on foreclosure, may claim the benefit of the provision of Ariz. Laws 1899, No. 68, that property used or necessary in the construction and operation of railroads thereafter constructed, whether owned or operated by a person, association, or railway corporation, their successors or assigns, shall be exempt from all manner of taxation for ten years from the date of the act, although by § 8 of the earlier act it was provided that that act should not be construed to give to any corporation created under it any exemption from taxation created by any existing or future exemption laws,—is not so clearly erroneous as to require reversal in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4994, 4995; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 86.]

Argued December 8 and 11, 1911. Decided
January 9, 1912.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the District Court of Coconino County, in that territory, enjoining the collection of taxes on the property of a railway company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 117, 100 Pac. 438; on prior appeal, 12 Ariz. 69, 95 Pac. 187.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Elias S. Clark and William C. Prentiss argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry F. Ashurst, filed a brief for appellants:

Laws encouraging the construction of new railroads by exempting them from taxation for a period of years do not amount to a contract protected by the constitutional guaranty.

Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107.

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

56 L. ed.

Even if these acts amounted to contracts with the constructing companies, the constitutional guaranty would extend only to those companies, and whether or not the exemption would pass to a successor or assign would likewise depend on the legislative intent, to be determined in the same manner.

Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 51 L. ed. 784, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

And in determining whether the transfer of an exemption was authorized, directed, or intended, every doubt is resolved in favor of the governmental power of taxation, and clear and unmistakable evidence of intent to part with it is required.

Ibid.

Mr. Robert Dunlap argued the cause, and, with Messrs. T. J. Norton and Gardiner Lathrop, filed a brief for appellee:

A contract between the state and individuals is as obligatory as any other contract. Until a state is lost to all sense of justice and propriety, she will scrupulously abide by her contracts, more scrupulously than she will exact their fulfilment by the opposite contracting party.

Piqua State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 382, 14 L. ed. 982. See also New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303.

The intention was that the exemption should attach to the railroad in whosoever hands or possession the same might be during the period specified.

The word "successors," used in the statute, plainly refers to successors in interest or ownership.

International & G. N. R. Co. v. Smith County, 65 Tex. 21; International & G. N. R. Co. v. State, 75 Tex. 356, 12 S. W. 685.

The word "assigns," used in connection with "successors," is even broader.

Baily v. De Crespigny, L. R. 4 Q. B. 186, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 98, 19 L. T. N. S. 681, 17 Week. Rep. 494, 15 Eng. Rul. Cas. 799; Brown v. Crookston Agri. Asso. 34 Minn. 545, 26 N. W. 907.

Rules of construction should not be resorted to merely for the purpose of creating some doubt.

Citizens' Bank v. Parker, 192 U. S. 73, 48 L. ed. 346, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181.

If the Arizona legislature intended by Laws 1897, No. 3, § 8, to prevent a subsequent legislature from giving or granting an exemption from taxation, such section would have been nugatory and void.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 758; 1 Bl. Com. 90; Horton v. Newport, 27 R. I. 283, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 512, 61 Atl. 759, 8 Ann. Cas. 1097; Gunther v. Huneke, 58

265

Wash. 494, 108 Pac. 1079; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 181.

It is the duty of the courts to ascertain the legislative intent, and to give effect to such intent, however the same may be ascertained.

Friend v. Levy, 76 Ohio St. 26, 80 N. E. 1036; Gunther v. Huneke, 58 Wash. 494, 108 Pac. 1079.

If Laws 1897, No. 3, § 8, were construed to prevent the attaching of the exemption from taxation in the hands of the successors or assigns of the original constructor of the railroad in question, yet, as that railroad was constructed under the subsequent law of 1899, which law very plainly attached the exemption to the property in the hands of "successors and assigns," then § 8, so construed, would be in direct conflict with the provisions of the subsequent law, and would therefore be pro tanto repealed. The two provisions could not stand. The one would be directly opposed to the other, and the later statute would prevail.

Thomas v. Evans, 73 Ohio St. 140, 76 N. E. 862; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 136.

If there was any doubt as to the meaning of the respective acts of 1897 and 1899, this court would lean to the construction placed upon the same by the supreme court of the territory.

English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 53 L. ed. 1030, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 51 L. ed. 1143, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Crary v. Dye, 208 U. S. 515, 52 L. ed. 595, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Albright v. Sandoval, 216 U. S. 331, 54 L. ed. 502, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the railway company, the appellee, to restrain the collection of taxes from which it says that it is exempt. The facts in brief are these: A predecessor of the appellee, the Santa Fé & Grand Canyon Railroad Company, between August, 1899, and October, 1900, built over 56 miles of the road concerned. In July, 1901, this road was sold on foreclosure sale 451] to purchasers *who organized the appellee and in August conveyed the road to it. The new company finished the road to the edge of the Grand Canyon and laid out stations and hotel grounds at the end. In 1906 the territorial board undertook to levy the tax complained of. The supreme court held that the appellee was exempt. 12 Ariz. 69, 95 Pac. 187. 12 Ariz. 117, 100 Pac. 438.

The railroad company was organized under act No. 3, February 8, 1897, of the territory, which authorized such corporations to be formed for the purpose of buying the property of railroads sold on foreclosure, and to buy and exercise "all the rights, privileges, franchises, immunities, and powers" of their predecessors. By § 7 such corporations were to have all rights, immunities, etc., then or thereafter given to any railroad organized under the general laws; but by § 8 it was provided that the act should not be construed "to give to any corporation created under it, any exemption from taxation created by any existing or future exemption laws of the territory of Arizona." The question does not stand on this act alone, however, and the cases discussed in Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester, 205 U. S. 236, 51 L. ed. 784, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469, for, by a later statute of March 16, 1899, No. 68, "for the purpose of inducing and encouraging the construction of railroads," it was provided that the "property used or necessary in the construction and operation of railroads," of road thereafter constructed, "whether owned or operated by a person or persons, association or railway corporation, his, their, or its successors or assigns," should be exempt from all manner of taxation for ten years from the date of the act. The supreme court held that this exemption was in rem, so to speak, went with the land, and extended to the assigns of the first road.

No doubt a strong argument can be made and was made for a different view, based on the passage before and on the date of the act of 1897 of statutes like that of 1899. *But the considerations that prevailed[452 also are cogent and so obvious as not to need statement. Moreover, the question is not whether the later statute constituted a contract (Damon v. Hawaii, 194 U. S. 154, 160, 48 L. ed. 916, 917, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107). The courts of the territory have given to the railroad the rights that it claims, as against the territory authorities seeking to levy the tax. The only question is whether any sufficient reason appears for not following the construction given to a local statute by the territorial court, when that construction is inherently reasonable, is at least the first to strike the mind, and is one that protects private rights. It is enough to answer that, on the principle followed so far as may be by this court, there is no such manifest error as to warrant us in reversing the decision below. Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 361, 363, 53 L. ed. 1030, 1033, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

Judgment affirmed.

MANUEL ZENO GANDIA, Plff. in Err.,
v.

N. B. K. PETTINGILL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 452-459.)

Libel — privileged communications — comment on official acts.

1. Anything bearing upon the acts of a public officer connected with his office is a legitimate subject of statement and comment, at least in the absence of express malice.

[For other cases, see Libel and Slander, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — refusal to instruct — libel.

2. The refusal to instruct the jury in an action for libel in publishing newspaper articles charging the United States attorney for Porto Rico with carrying on a private practice and acting as lawyer on behalf of persons bringing suit against the local government, which the articles characterize as a monstrous immorality, a scandal, etc., that so far as the publication of facts disapproved by the community was concerned, the plaintiff could not recover, however technically lawful his conduct might have been, unless there was express malice, or the comment went beyond reasonable limits, is reversible error where there is evidence that the people of Porto Rico considered the acts charged as immoral, and where, had the plaintiff been a local officer, such conduct would have been forbidden by the local law.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5127-5141, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — noting exceptions to charge — absence of jury.

3. Sending the jury out before counsel had stated all of his exceptions to the charge is not reversible error, where the judge allowed all the exceptions to be noted in open court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5149-5169, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 97.]

Argued December 14, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a judgment for plaintiff in an action for libel. Reversed.

See same case below, 4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 383.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Spalding Flannery, William Hitz, and H. H. Scoville, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

It was error in law on the part of the trial judge to refuse to permit counsel to state, while the jury was yet at the bar, his exceptions to such portions of the court's instructions to the jury as seemed to him to be objectionable, either in matter of law or in matter of fact.
56 L. ed.

United States v. Breitling, 20 How. 252, 15 L. ed. 900; Phelps v. Mayer, 15 How. 160, 14 L. ed. 643; Dredge v. Forsyth, 2 Black, 563, 568, 17 L. ed. 253, 254; Brain v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 571, 42 L. ed. 568, 583, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Stone v. United States, 12 C. C. A. 451, 29 U. S. App. 32, 64 Fed. 667; Little Rock Granite Co. v. Dallas County, 13 C. C. A. 620, 30 U. S. App. 55, 66 Fed. 523; Johnson v. Garber, 19 C. C. A. 556, 43 U. S. App. 107, 73 Fed. 523; Merchants' Exch. Bank v. McGraw, 22 C. C. A. 622, 48 U. S. App. 55, 76 Fed. 930; New England Furniture & Carpet Co. v. Catholicon Co. 24 C. C. A. 595, 49 U. S. App. 78, 79 Fed. 294; Western U. Tele. Co. v. Baker, 29 C. C. A. 392, 56 U. S. App. 601, 85 Fed. 690; Greene v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 251, 154 Fed. 412; Commercial Travelers' Mut. Acci. Asso. v. Fulton, 24 C. C. A. 654, 45 U. S. App. 578, 79 Fed. 423; Dalton v. Moore, 72 C. C. A. 459, 141 Fed. 311; Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Firment, 95 C. C. A. 1, 170 Fed. 153; Mann v. Dempster, 103 C. C. A. 325, 179 Fed. 837.

The learned trial judge in the administration of this cause did not confine himself to the administration of, or feel himself bound by the provisions of, the local law of Porto Rico, which local law, under the statutes of the United States, as interpreted in the case of Perez v. Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 91, 50 L. ed. 942, 945, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561, he was bound to consider to the exclusion of all other laws.

Messrs. George H. Lamar and Willis Sweet argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The complaint set forth a publication which was libelous per se.

White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 266, 285, 291, 11 L. ed. 591, 600, 602; Peck v. Tribune Co. 214 U. S. 185, 53 L. ed. 960, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, 16 Ann. Cas. 1075; Tillotson v. Cheetham, 3 Johns. 56, 3 Am. Dec. 459; Tawney v. Simonson, W. & H. Co. 109 Minn. 341, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1035, 124 N. W. 229; Lathrop v. Sundberg, 55 Wash. 144, 25 L.R.A. (N.S.) 381, 104 Pac. 176; Kidder v. Bacon, 74 Vt. 263, 52 Atl. 322; Wofford v. Meeks, 129 Ala. 349, 55 L.R.A. 214, 87 Am. St. Rep. 66, 30 So. 625; Burt v. Advertiser Newspaper Co. 154 Mass. 238, 13 L.R.A. 97, 28 N. E. 1; Culmer v. Canby, 41 C. C. A. 302, 101 Fed. 195; Davis v. Shepstone, L. R. 11 App. Cas. 187, 55 L. J. P. C. N. S. 51, 55 L. T. N. S. 1, 34 Week. Rep. 722, 50 J. P. 709.

Error without prejudice will not warrant reversal.

Holloway v. Dunham, 170 U. S. 615, 620, 42 L. ed. 1165, 1167, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; San Juan v. St. John's Gas Co. 195 U. S. 510, 520, 49 L. ed. 299, 304, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108, 1 Ann. Cas. 796; Cunningham v. Springer, 204 U. S. 647, 655, 51 L. ed. 662, 665, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 9 Ann. Cas. 897; Mann v. Dempster, 103 C. C. A. 325, 179 Fed. 839; W. B. Grimes Dry Goods Co. v. Malcolm, 164 U. S. 483, 41 L. ed. 524, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Drumm-Flato Commission Co. v. Edmison, 208 U. S. 534, 52 L. ed. 606, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Volk, 151 U. S. 73, 38 L. ed. 78, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Hartford Life Annuity Ins. Co. v. Unsell, 144 U. S. 439, 36 L. ed. 496, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Madison, 123 U. S. 524, 31 L. ed. 258, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis, Hay & Grain Co. 82 C. C. A. 614, 153 Fed. 728; Gilmore v. McBride, 84 C. C. A. 274, 156 Fed. 464.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for libels and comes here upon a bill of exceptions after a verdict for the plaintiff. The alleged libels consist of a series of articles in a Porto Rican newspaper, La Correspondencia*. These articles stated that the plaintiff, Pettingill, while United States Attorney for Porto Rico, carried on a private practice also, and even acted as a lawyer on behalf of persons bringing suit against the government of Porto Rico. It seems that, if the plaintiff had been an officer of the local government, he would have been forbidden the practice by the local law, and the articles convey the idea that if the practice is not prohibited also by the law for United States officials, it ought to be, especially as the island is charged with a salary for the attorney. The conduct of Mr. Pettingill in the above particulars is described as a monstrous immorality, a scandal, etc., etc. In the view that we take it is not necessary to state the charges here in detail, but it should be observed that in the declaration the plaintiff alleged that while United States Attorney he had a large private practice, and implied, as in his evidence he stated, that a part of this practice consisted of suits against the local government. So there was no issue on the matter of fact.

So far as the facts were concerned, the publication of them alone was not libelous. For, apart from the question whether attributing to the plaintiff conduct that was lawful, as the plaintiff says, could be a libel (Homer v. Engelhardt, 117 Mass. 539), he was a public officer in whose course of action connected with his office the citizens of Porto Rico had a serious interest, and anything bearing on such action was a legitimate subject of statement and comment. It was so, at least, in the absence of express malice,—a phrase needing further analysis, although not for the purposes of this case. Therefore the only questions open for consideration were the motives of the publication and whether the comment went beyond reasonable limits, which, of course, the defendant denied. But so far as we see from reading the charge, the judge did not approach the case from this point of view. For after saying to the jury *that fair com-[458]ment upon the actions of public officials was privileged, he went on: "But you are instructed that in this case . . . [the articles] are what is known in law as libelous per se. . . . Therefore, in any event you must find for the plaintiff upon that issue, and give him such damages as you may believe, from all the facts and circumstances in the case, he is entitled to;" and after that proceeded to direct them only as to the conditions for finding punitive damages also. It is at least doubtful whether this instruction meant that the comments were excessive as matter of law. It rather would seem from the previous explanations given to the jury of the independence of United States officials notwithstanding the source of their salaries, and the instructions that the plaintiff's acts were lawful, that the defendant, in order to justify himself, would have to prove that they were wrong in law, and that his inability to do so might be considered as aggravation of the damages to be allowed, that the latter considerations alone were the ground for what we have quoted from the charge.

However this may be, what we have said is enough to show that the mind of the jury was not directed to what was the point of the case. We do not see how, making reasonable allowance for the somewhat more exuberant expressions of meridional speech, it could be said as matter of law that the comments set out in the declaration went beyond the permitted line, and we think it at least doubtful whether the plaintiff would not have got all if not more than all that he could ask if he had been allowed to go to the jury on that issue. In the absence of express malice or excess the defendant was not liable at all, and in the case of mere excess without express malice, the damages, if any, to which he was entitled, were at most only such as could be attributed to the supposed excess. But what really hurt the plaintiff was not the comment, but the fact. The witnesses for the plaintiff said that the people of Porto *Rico considered the[459] acts charged immoral, and the statute referred to showed that such was their conception of public duty. It was peculiarly necessary therefore to instruct the jury that so far as the publication of facts disapproved by the community was concerned, the plaintiff could not recover for it, however technically lawful his conduct might have been, except as we have stated above. Instructions were requested on the point, and the refusal to give them was excepted to, as also was the corresponding charge. Without nice criticism of the form of the requests, it is enough to say that they were so nearly correct as to call the judge's attention to the matter, and to require a different explanation of the defendant's rights.

An exception was taken to the judge's sending the jury out before the counsel for the defendant had stated all of his exceptions to the charge. The judge had told the counsel that he would not instruct the jury otherwise than as he had, and he allowed all the exceptions to be taken in open court after the jury had retired. No doubt it is the stricter practice to note the exceptions before the jury retires (the judge, of course, having power to prevent counsel from making it an opportunity for a last word to them). Phelps v. Mayer, 15 How. 160, 14 L. ed. 643. But in this case they were noted at the trial, in open court (United States v. Breitling, 20 How. 252, 15 L. ed. 900), and in the circumstances stated the defendant suffered no wrong, so that we should not sustain an exception upon this ground.

Judgment reversed.

460] *UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err., v.

JOHN McMULLEN and Joseph A. Stulz, as Administrator with the Will Annexed of the Estate of R. Percy Wright, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 460-472.)

Principal and surety — discharge of surety — extension of time.

1. The sureties on the bond of a public contractor, conditioned upon the faithful performance of a contract for dredging a channel, were not discharged by an extension of the time fixed for performance, accorded by the government to the contractor, where the contract definitely contemplated, what the nature of the work made manifest, that it might be necessary or very convenient to extend the time, and expressly provided for a per diem deduction from the contract price for a delay beyond the time prescribed for the completion of the work.

[For other cases, see Principal and Surety, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Principal and surety — discharge of surety — change in plans or specifications.

2. Provisions in a contract for a public work requiring that changes in the plans or specifications, deemed desirable by the government, be agreed to in writing by the parties to the contract before the work contemplated by such changes is begun, do not require the assent of the sureties in order not to work their discharge.

[For other cases, see Principal and Surety, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — breach — reletting.

3. The obligations of a contract for a public work, so far as applicable to a case of the contractor's default, including the right reserved to the government to secure someone else to complete the work, and charge the original contractor with the reasonable difference in cost, remained in force after the government, exercising its option, declared the contract null and void for the contractor's failure to perform, without prejudice to its right to recover for defaults therein or violations thereof. [For other cases, see Contracts, VIII.; United States, VI. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — breach — reletting.

4. The right of the government under a contract for a public work to charge the contractor with the reasonable difference in cost in case of a reletting after his default is not defeated because the second contract does not appear to have completed the work intended to be accomplished by the first, where the work done under the new contract was work which the first contractor had agreed to perform.

[For other cases, see Contracts, VIII.; United States, VI. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — certainty — mutuality.

5. The power to change details, reserved by the government in a contract for a public work, does not make the contract unenforceable for want of certainty and mutuality, there being full provisions for ascertaining a change in the compensation where any such change is proper.

[For other cases, see Contracts, 72-77, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — signature.

6. A contract for a public work must be regarded as signed by the United States where it recites that it is made by the United States by a specified officer described as Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and is signed by such officer, with his official title appended.

[Government Contracts, see United States, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 100.]

NOTE.—As to release or discharge of surety—see notes to Griswold v. Hazard, 35 L. ed. U. S. 679; Bank of Uniontown v. Mackey, 35 L. ed. U. S. 486; and Miller v. Stewart, 6 L. ed. U. S. 190.

56 L. ed.

Argued December 13 and 14, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California, in favor of the government in an action on a contract for a public work and the bond made a part of such contract. Reversed, and the judgment of the Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 96, 167 Fed. 460.

The contract provided, inter alia, "And it is further agreed that if, during the progress of the work, it shall be deemed by the government necessary or desirable to make any changes or modifications in the plans and specifications, affecting the cost, said changes or modifications and the increased or diminished compensation to be paid the contractor must be agreed to in writing by the parties to the contract before the same is begun; and such increased or diminished compensation based upon the actual cost, and when exceeding $300, shall be assessed by a board of naval officers appointed for the purpose."

The contract was terminated by the following letter from the Navy Department: "Gentlemen:—It appearing that you have failed on your part to perform the contract between yourselves, as parties of the first part, and the United States, by E. C. Matthews (Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks), acting under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, party of the second part, dated October 25, 1897, for dredging at the Naval Station, Port Royal, South Carolina, which dredging was to have been completed within sixteen calendar months from the date of said contract, the party of the second part, exercising the option reserved to them, declare said contract null and void, without prejudice to their right to recover for defaults therein or violation thereof.

"Please take notice that an advertisement will be prepared and issued inviting proposals to complete the work under the aforesaid contract, and that said work will be completed at your expense."

Other facts appear in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The extension of time did not discharge the sureties.

United States v. Hodge, 6 How. 279, 12 L. ed. 437; Cambridge Sav. Bank v. Hyde, 131 Mass. 77, 41 Am. Rep. 193; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 44 L. ed. 284, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228.

If the contract authorized an extension of time, the surety assented to it in advance, and is bound by it.

United States v. Freel, 92 Fed. 299, 39 C. C. A. 491, 99 Fed. 237, 186 U. S. 309, 270

46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; United States v. Stone, Sand & Gravel Co. 100 C. C. A. 651, 177 Fed. 321.

The damage necessarily sustained by the United States because of the breach of the contract could not be less than the lowest price obtainable, after proper effort, for the completion of the work by the cheapest mode of doing it.

New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 102 N. Y. 572, 55 Am. Rep. 839, 7 N. E. 905; Kidd v. McCormick, 83 N. Y. 397; Baer v. Sleicher, 82 C. C. A. 281, 153 Fed. 129.

Mr. Burke Corbet argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John R. Selby and Edward J. Lynch, filed a brief for defendants in error:

A change in the time of performance of a contract is a material change, and will release sureties.

Earnshaw v. Boyer, 60 Fed. 528; Rowan v. Sharps's Rifle Mfg. Co. 33 Conn. 1; United States v. Freel, 92 Fed. 299, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; United States v. Howell, 4 Wash. C. C. 620, Fed. Cas. No. 15,405; Lane v. Scott, 57 Tex. 367; United States v. De Visser, 10 Fed. 642; Whitcher v. Hall, 5 Barn. & C. 269, 8 Dowl. & R. 22, 4 L. J. K. B. 167, 29 Revised Rep. 244; Samuell v. Howarth, 3 Meriv. 272, 17 Revised Rep. 81; Todd v. School Dist. No. 1, 40 Mich. 294; Judah v. Zimmerman, 22 Ind. 388; Barber v. Burrows, 51 Cal. 404; Fidelity & D. Co. v. United States, 70 C. C. A. 204, 137 Fed. 866; Victor Sewing Mach. Co. v. Scheffler, 61 Cal. 532.

The courts construe very strictly language claimed to be a consent in advance by the sureties to changes in the contract.

1 Brandt, Suretyship & Guaranty, 3d ed. § 423, note; Miller v. Spain, 41 Ohio St. 376; United States v. Freel, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; Plunkett v. Davis Sewing Mach. Co. 84 Md. 529, 36 Atl. 115; Northern Light Lodge No. 1, 1 I. O. O. F. v. Kennedy, 7 N. D. 146, 73 N. W. 524.

The change of time of performance amounted to a new contract on that point.

Earnshaw v. Boyer, 60 Fed. 528; Rowan v. Sharps's Rifle Mfg. Co. 33 Conn. 1; United States v. Freel, 92 Fed. 299, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; United States v. Howell, 4 Wash. C. C. 620, Fed. Cas. No. 15,405.

By signing the contract, as surety, no rights are lost which might have been preserved by merely signing the bond.

Beers v. Wolf, 116 Mo. 179, 22 S. W. 620.

The original contract does not provide for extensions of time.

Reese v. United States, 9 Wall. 13, 19 L. ed. 541.

If the contract be construed to provide for changes as to time and other points, such changes could only be made by agreement, signed by the sureties.
222 U. S.

Beers v. Wolf, 116 Mo. 179, 22 S. W. 620; Northern Light Lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F. v. Kennedy, 7 N. D. 146, 73 N. W. 524; Lonergan v. San Antonio Loan & T. Co. 101 Tex. 63, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 364, 130 Am. St. Rep. 803, 104 S. W. 1061, 106 S. W. 876; Eldridge v. Fuhr, 59 Mo. App. 44; Killoren v. Meehan, 55 Mo. App. 427.

The extension was granted not according to the terms of the specifications, and this discharged the sureties; assuming, for the sake of argument, that they would not have been discharged by an extension granted under proper circumstances.

Beers v. Wolf, 116 Mo. 179, 22 S. W. 620; Northern Light Lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F. v. Kennedy, 7 N. D. 146, 73 N. W. 524; Eldridge v. Fuhr, 59 Mo. App. 44; Killoren v. Meehan, 55 Mo. App. 427.

Very slight changes in the requirements of contracts have been held to release the sureties.

United States v. Corwine, 1 Bond, 339, Fed. Cas. No. 14,871; United States v. Tillotson, 1 Paine, 305, Fed. Cas. No. 16, 524; United States v. Case, Fed. Cas. No. 14,743; Zeigler v. Hallahan, 66 C. C. A. 1, 131 Fed. 205; Chesapeake Transit Co. v. Walker & Son, 158 Fed. 850.

When a contract proper and specifications attached thereto are in conflict, the contract proper, or signed portion of the whole, governs.

Meyer v. Berlandi, 53 Minn. 59, 54 N. W. 937; Palladino v. New York, 56 Hun, 565, 10 N. Y. Supp. 66; Demarest v. Haide, 20 Jones & S. 398.

The recovery for a breach of contract, and the recovery of sums expended under a contract, are not one and the same thing.

Lowell v. Allen, 14 Allen, 130; Quinn v. United States, 99 U. S. 30, 25 L. ed. 269.

Viewing the action as for damages for breach of contract, the United States has failed to show the amount of damages.

13 Cyc. 162, 192; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 556; Insley v. Shepard, 31 Fed. 869; Goldsboro v. Moffett, 49 Fed. 213, reversed in 3 C. C. A. 202, 8 U. S. App. 160, 52 Fed. 560; Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. v. Phelps, 130 U. S. 520, 32 L. ed. 1035, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Von Dorn v. Mengedolt, 41 Neb. 525, 59 N. W. 800; Savage v. Glenn, 10 Or. 440; Anderson v. Nordstrom, 60 Minn. 231, 61 N. W. 1132; State v. Ingram, 27 N. C. (5 Ired. L.) 441; Cincinnati & S. R. Co. v. Carthage, 36 Ohio St. 631; Fletcher v. Milburn Mfg. Co. 35 Mo. App. 321.

It has not been shown here whether or not the United States ever completed this work of construction.

Chesapeake Transit Co. v. Walker & Son, 158 Fed. 850; United States v. Corwine, 1 56 L. ed.

Bond, 339, Fed. Cas. No. 14,871; United States v. Case, Fed. Cas. No. 14,743.

The contract with the New York Dredging Company was unenforceable against it for uncertainty and want of mutuality.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 114, 116; 9 Cyc. 248, 327, 328; Pulliam v. Schimpf, 109 Ala. 179, 19 So. 428; Davie v. Lumberman's Min. Co. 93 Mich. 491, 24 L.R.A. 357, 53 N. W. 625; Dorsey v. Packwood, 12 How. 126, 13 L. ed. 921; Morrow v. Southern Exp. Co. 101 Ga. 810, 28 S. E. 998; Jordan v. Indianapolis Water Co. — Ind. App. —, 61 N. E. 12; Crane v. C. Crane & Co. 45 C. C. A. 96, 105 Fed. 869; Harvester King Co. v. Mitchell, L. & S. Co. 89 Fed. 173; American Cotton Oil Co. v. Kirk, 15 C. C. A. 540, 34 U. S. App. 60, 68 Fed. 791; Dennis v. Slyfield, 54 C. C. A. 520, 117 Fed. 474; Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. 57 L.R.A. 696, 52 C. C. A. 25, 114 Fed. 81; Vogel v. Pekoe, 157 Ill. 339, 30 L.R.A. 491, 42 N. E. 386.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the [467 opinion of the court:

This is a suit upon a contract for dredging and a bond made part of the contract, both executed by the New York Dredging Company as principal and by the defendants in error as sureties. The plaintiff got judgment in the circuit court, but in the circuit court of appeals the judgment was reversed on the ground that the time for performance had been extended, and was ordered to be entered for the defendants. 93 C. C. A. 96, 167 Fed. 460. The contract provided that if, during the progress of the work, any changes in the plans or specifications should be deemed desirable by the government, the changes in compensation should be ascertained in stated ways. The work was to begin within thirty days from the date of the contract, October 25, 1897, and to be completed in sixteen calendar months from the same date. In case of unavoidable delays, through accident, storm, or other act of Providence, the contractor was to notify the officer in charge of the occurrence, etc., to provide for an investigation. In case of avoidable delays no extension of time would be recommended except on condition that the contractor bear specified costs and other expenses, to be deducted from the money coming due to it under the contract. No extension of time was to be granted except upon the authority of the Secretary of the Navy. In case of delay beyond the period fixed by the contract, deductions of $50 per day might be made, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy, as liquidated damages. In case of the contractor's failure in any respect to perform the contract, the United States reserved the option to declare it void without prejudice to its right "to recover for defaults herein or violations hereof," and might recover as liquidated damages a sum equal to the penalty of the bond (30,000).

The contractor began its preparations on 468]the spot on *November 26, 1897, and began actual dredging in the following March. It was bound to finish by February 25, 1899. In January, 1899, it asked for an extension of time on account of storms, accidents, unforeseen hardness of material, and other difficulties. On February 15 the time was extended by the Secretary of the Navy to December 30, 1899. But in about two months the contractor stopped work and asked leave to dump in deep water instead of on shore. This was refused. There was another application and refusal and further correspondence, and finally leave was granted on February 21, 1900. The contractor, however, did no more work after April, 1899. On May 25, 1901, the Navy Department declared the contract void, and a new contract was made, after advertisement in the required way, by which a third party was employed to complete the work at the lowest rate that the government could get by such a bid. The damages allowed in the circuit court were the difference in cost between the old contract and the new; viz., $25,588.02, with interest, or $33,389.52 in all.

The defense is rested mainly on the extension of time, it not appearing that the sureties assented to the change otherwise than by the contract, which, it is said, merely recognizes what was true without it,—that the contractor might ask for more time, and the government grant it, if so minded. It is argued that the expression of the obvious does not alter the general rule of law. But the question is not what was possible, but what was contemplated as not improbable, and we are of opinion that the sureties were not discharged. There is no sacrosanct prohibition of change against them; the law has no objection to it if they assent. Whether they have done so or not is simply a question of construction and good sense, taking words and circumstances into account. If we should assume in their favor that in this case there could be no change without mutual agreement, still, in our 469]opinion, this contract so *definitely contemplated what the nature of the work made manifest, that it might be necessary or very convenient to extend the time, that the sureties must be taken to have contemplated it also as permissible against themselves. In United States v. Freely, 186 U.

S. 309, 317, 46 L. ed. 1177, 1181, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875, it was recognized that a clause similar to the one to which we have referred concerning the case of the United States deeming changes desirable would authorize some changes of plan without discharging the sureties. It is true that that contract contained a proviso that no change of the kind should affect the validity of the contract, which, of course, it would not in any event if the contractor agreed to it. But the sureties, so far as appears, signed the bond only and were sued upon that. The proviso did not affect their case. See also United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed Brick & Fire Co. 191 U. S. 416, 424, 48 L. ed. 242, 245, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

It is urged that the last-mentioned section, dealing with changes deemed desirable by the government, requires that they, as well as the increased or diminished compensation, must be agreed to in writing by the parties to the contract before they are begun; and it is suggested that this requires the consent of the sureties. We do not read it so. We think that so far as this clause goes it contemplates an imperative right on the part of the government to make a change, but requires a writing as a condition of going on. See Rev. Stat. § 3744, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2510. The same motion is repeated in the specifications with even more definite assumption that the government may make changes if it sees fit. "Should it be to the interest of the government to make any changes in the plans . . . the . . . compensation is to be determined," etc. So again, the government reserves an unqualified right to change the limits of the dredging and the points of deposit. Moreover, comparing the clause with the specifications, which more or less repeat the provisions, as we have said, and deal with the contractor eo nomine, we should be inclined to construe *the word "parties" as[470 meaning the contractor and the United States. But we do not delay upon this, as the case must be decided on the provisions dealing expressly with extension of time; and we have referred to the other clauses simply to show that in other particulars, as well as time, the sureties were going into an undertaking which was subject to contingencies of several sorts. It was limited by the appropriations available. It might be modified in plan. The limits of dredging might be changed. Necessity or convenience might require an extension of time.

We should be inclined to suppose that the extension was allowed as an unavoidable delay. But if it was allowed as an avoidable one, it does not appear that the government did not enforce the condition as to the costs to be borne by the contractor, and if it took no steps to collect them, the sureties were not concerned. The contract was not altered, and insistence by the United States would have done them no good.

The construction that we adopt is fortified by the provision for deductions of $50 per day for delay beyond the period fixed for the end of the work. For even though this fell only on the contractor, it created a necessity for extension in possible cases, to which the sureties must be deemed to have assented rather than expose their principal to such a risk. Manifestly, if the construction now contended for by them had been written in, it would have created a strong motive against relaxations that would have let them off. We deem what we had said sufficient to justify our conclusions without considering the argument of the Solicitor General, that the contractor was given a right to the extension of time if the Secretary of the Navy decided for it, and that the Secretary of the Navy is to be regarded as a third party and stranger to the contract, rather than as representing the United States. See United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 44 L. ed. 284, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228. Of 471]course, if the Secretary *be so regarded, the contractor's right is made out, as the extension would be independent of the will of the other party to the contract, the United States.

The next argument that seems to us to need a word is on the effect of the election of the United States to annul the contract, as it was said. The infelicity of the word "annul" has been adverted to and its meaning explained heretofore. If notice had been given before the final breach and abandonment, it would have meant simply that the United States would proceed no further with the contractor under the contract, not that it rescinded or avoided it. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Howard, 13 How. 307, 340, 14 L. ed. 157, 171; United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 328, 55 L. ed. 481, 484, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406. At the time when the notice was given, it was merely a ceremony to mark the point of default as a preliminary to employing someone else. The obligations of the contract, so far as applicable to a case of default, remained in full force. The United States had a right to get someone else to complete the work, and to charge the defendants with the reasonable difference in cost. Indeed, this right was expressly stipulated in the specifications, if, during the progress of the work, a board should recommend that the contract be "annulled" on the ground that it would not be completed in time. The cost to the United States was the least for which it could get the work done under the conditions upon which the government was bound to contract, and must be assumed to have been reasonable, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary. New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 102 N. Y. 572, 55 Am. Rep. 839, 7 N. E. 905; Baer v. Sleicher, 82 C. C. A. 281, 153 Fed. 129. It was less than the sum stipulated as liquidated damages. Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. Moore, 183 U. S. 642, 46 L. ed. 366, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240. United States v. Bethlehem Steel Co. 205 U. S. 105, 119, 51 L. ed. 731, 736, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450.

The objection that the second contract does not appear to have completed the work intended to be accomplished *by the[472 first, that is, to have made a channel of a certain depth, does not impress us. The first contract was for certain work for a certain object, but limited and subject to change as the appropriations might require. The second was for the same on the same plans and specifications, the only difference being in the parties, the price, and the liberty given to the second contractor to dump in deep water, which diminished the cost. In the first contract the government reserved an absolute right of choice in this regard. Whether the object of the contract was attained is immaterial, so long as the work done towards it was work that the first contractor had agreed to perform.

As little need be said in answer to the argument that there was no enforceable contract for want of certainty and mutuality. The power to change details, reserved by the United States, did not make the contract any the worse, and there were full provisions for ascertaining a change in compensation where any such change was proper. There was nothing warranting an enlargement of the plan beyond the channel of Beaufort river, or the purpose indicated. The contract estimated the amount of material to be removed, and as there were different prices per yard for earth and rock, this amount was expressly made subject to the appropriations, as without expression would have been implied. See Rev. Stat. § 3733, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2505. There was some suggestion at the bar that the contract was not signed by the United States. The answer does not deny it, but by implication admits it. The contract says that it is made by the United States by E. O. Matthews, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and it is signed by E. O. Matthews, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, which is enough. The matter does not seem to us to need discussion at greater length.

Judgment of Circuit Court of Appeals reversed.

Judgment of Circuit Court affirmed.

473]*CUBA RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner,

v.

WALTER E. CROSBY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 473-482.)

Evidence — presumptions — foreign laws.

The Federal courts cannot assume without proof that, under the law of Cuba, like that of the forum, a promise to repair or replace defective machinery, when notified by an employee of the defect, throws upon the master the risk of injury to such employee from such defect until the time for performance has expired, or that it does away with or leaves to the jury what otherwise would be negligence as a matter of law.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. a; Conflict of Laws, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 124.]

Argued December 18, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey in favor of plaintiff in an action by an employee against his employer to recover damages for injuries alleged to have been caused by a defective machine. Reversed.

See same case below, 95 C. C. A. 539, 170 Fed. 369.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Howard Mansfield argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The courts of the United States should not take cognizance of an alleged cause of action for a foreign tort where the rights of the parties under the foreign law cannot be certainly and definitely ascertained, and where the foreign tribunal is equally available to both parties.

Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 129, 48 L. ed. 900, 904, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

The rule is that the lex loci delicti determines whether or not there is a cause of action.

NOTE.—As to determination of case properly governed by law of foreign country which is not proved—see note to Parrot v. Michigan C. R. Co. 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 261.

Machado v. Fontes [1897] 2 Q. B. 231, 66 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 542, 76 L. T. N. S. 588, 45 Week. Rep. 565; Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 6 Q. B. 1, 10 Best & S. 1004, 40 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 28; Coyne v. Southern P. Co. 155 Fed. 683; Minor, Conf. L. § 202; Dicey, Conf. L. Am. Notes by J. B. Moore, pp. 659, 667; Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. p. 900; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Chantry, 69 C. C. A. 454, 136 Fed. 316; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 205 U. S. 538, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791.

There can be no presumption that the common law extends to Cuba.

Davison v. Gibson, 5 C. C. A. 543, 12 U. S. App. 362, 56 Fed. 443; Savage v. O'Neil, 44 N. Y. 298; Aslanian v. Dostumian, 174 Mass. 328, 47 L.R.A. 495, 75 Am. St. Rep. 348, 54 N. E. 845; Crashley v. Press Pub. Co. 179 N. Y. 27, 71 N. E. 258, 1 Ann. Cas. 196; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Chantry, 69 C. C. A. 454, 136 Fed. 316.

There can be no presumption, nor any ruling, in the absence of pleading of proof, that the act alleged gave rise to a cause of action.

Mexican C. R. Co. v. Chantry, 69 C. C. A. 454, 136 Fed. 316; Farrell v. Farrell, 142 App. Div. 605, 127 N. Y. Supp. 764; McLeod v. Connecticut & P. River R. Co. 58 Vt. 727, 6 Atl. 648; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 205 U. S. 538, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791; Chouquette v. Mexican C. R. Co. 84 C. C. A. 678, 156 Fed. 1022; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 84 C. C. A. 679, 156 Fed. 1023; Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 48 L. ed. 900, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Parrot v. Mexican C. R. Co. 207 Mass. 184, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 261, 93 N. E. 590; Story, Conf. L. 8th ed. § 637.

Where the act complained of happened in a foreign jurisdiction, and a right of action is alleged to have arisen therefrom, the law of the forum and the remedy of the forum must in some degree resemble the law of the wrong and its remedy.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 38 L. ed. 958, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978; Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 31 Minn. 11, 47 Am. Rep. 771, 16 N. W. 413.

The precise presumptions requisite to sustain the judgments below have no proper legal basis.

Labatt, Mast. & S. § 428, p. 1210; District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884; Roccia v. Black Diamond Coal Min. Co. 57 C. C. A. 567, 121 Fed. 451; Showalter v. Fairbanks, M. & Co. 88 Wis. 376, 60 N. W. 257; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Robertson, 71 C. C. A. 335, 139 Fed. 519; Crookston Lumber Co. v. Boutin, 79 C. C. A. 368, 149 Fed. 680; H. D. Williams Cooper-age Co. v. Headrick, 86 C. C. A. 548, 159 Fed. 680.

Mr. Benjamin M. Weinberg argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin Kalish, filed a brief for respondent:

In the absence of proof of the foreign law, the law of the forum must furnish the rule of decision.

Jones, Ev. 2d ed. § 84; Wharton, Confli. L. § 778, p. 1531; 13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1060, 1061; Monroe v. Douglass, 5 N. Y. 447; Lloyd v. Guibert, L. R. 1 Q. B. 129, 6 Best & S. 100, 35 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 74, 12 Week. Rep. 953, 5 Eng. Rul. Cas. 870; Savage v. O'Neil, 44 N. Y. 298; Sokel v. People, 212 Ill. 238, 72 N. E. 382; The Scotland (National Steam Nav. Co. v. Dyer) 105 U. S. 24, 26 L. ed. 1001; Brown v. Gracey, Dowl. & R. N. P. 41, note; Linton v. Moorhead, 209 Pa. 646, 59 Atl. 264; Scott v. Seymour, 1 Hurlst. & C. 219, 1 New Reports, 129, 32 L. J. Exch. N. S. 61, 9 Jur. N. S. 522, 8 L. T. N. S. 511, 11 Week. Rep. 169, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 533; The Halley, L. R. 2 P. C. 193, 7 Moore, P. C. C. N. S. 263, 37 L. J. Prob. N. S. 33, 18 L. T. N. S. 879, 16 Week. Rep. 998; Whitford v. Panama R. Co. 23 N. Y. 465; Hynes v. McDermott, 82 N. Y. 41, 37 Am. Rep. 538; Mackey v. Mexican C. R. Co. 78 N. Y. Supp. 966; Pratt v. Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, 20 App. Div. 352, 46 N. Y. Supp. 1035, affirmed in 166 N. Y. 593, 59 N. E. 1120; Carpenter v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 72 Me. 388, 39 Am. Rep. 340; Woodrow v. O'Connor, 23 Vt. 776; McLeod v. Connecticut & P. River R. Co. 58 Vt. 727, 6 Atl. 648; State v. Morrill, 68 Vt. 60, 54 Am. St. Rep. 870, 33 Atl. 1070; Loaiza v. Superior Ct. 85 Cal. 11, 9 L.R.A. 376, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707; Wickersham v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 407, 43 Am. St. Rep. 118, 38 Pac. 89; Chase v. Alliance Ins. Co. 9 Allen, 311; Aslanian v. Dostumian, 174 Mass. 328, 47 L.R.A. 495, 75 Am. St. Rep. 348, 54 N. E. 845; Mittenthal v. Mascagni, 183 Mass. 19, 60 L.R.A. 812, 97 Am. St. Rep. 404, 66 N. E. 425; Dainese v. Hale, 91 U. S. 13, 23 L. ed. 190; Davison v. Gibson, 5 C. C. A. 543, 12 U. S. App. 362, 56 Fed. 443; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Marshall, 34 C. C. A. 133, 91 Fed. 933; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Glover, 46 C. C. A. 334, 107 Fed. 356; Crashley v. Press Pub. Co. 179 N. Y. 27, 71 N. E. 258, 1 Ann. Cas. 196; Mexican C. D. Co. v. Chantry, 69 C. C. A. 454, 136 Fed. 316; Chouquette v. Mexican C. R. Co. 84 C. C. A. 678, 156 Fed. 1022; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 84 C. C. A. 679, 156 Fed. 1023; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 205 U. S. 538, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791; Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 48 L. ed. 900, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; The M. Moxham, L. R. 1 Prob. Div. 107, 46 L. J. 56 L. ed.

Prob. N. S. 17, 24 L. T. N. S. 559, 24 Week. Rep. 650; Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 4 Q. B. 225, 9 Best & S. 343, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 113, 19 L. T. N. S. 770, 17 Week. Rep. 375, L. R. 6 Q. B. 1, 10 Best & S. 1004, 40 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 28, 22 L. T. N. S. 869; Machado v. Fontes, 66 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 542 [1897] 2 Q. B. 233, 76 L. T. N. S. 588, 45 Week. Rep. 565; Parrot v. Mexican C. R. Co. 207 Mass. 184, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 261, 93 N. E. 590.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for the loss of a hand through a defect in machinery, in connection with which the defendant in error, the plaintiff, was employed. The plaintiff had noticed the defect and reported it, and, according to his testimony, had been promised that it should be repaired or replaced as soon as they had time, and he had been told to go on in the meanwhile. The jury was instructed that if that was what took place, the defendant company assumed the risk for a reasonable time, and, in effect, that if that time had not expired, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The jury found for the plaintiff. The accident took place in Cuba, and no evidence was given as to the Cuban law, but the judge held that if that law was different from the lex fori, it was for the defendant to allege and prove it, and that as it had pleaded only the general issue, the verdict must stand. 158 Fed. 144. The judgment was affirmed by a majority of the circuit court of appeals. 95 C. C. A. 539, 170 Fed. 369.

The court below went on the ground that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it would "apply the law as it conceives it to be, according to its idea of right and justice; or, in other words, according to the law of the forum." We regard this statement as too broad, and as having been wrongly applied to this case.

*It may be that, in dealing with rudimentary contracts or torts made or committed abroad, such as promises to pay money for goods or services, or battery of the person, or conversion of goods, courts would assume a liability to exist if nothing to the contrary appeared. Parrot v. Mexican C. R. Co. 207 Mass. 184, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 261, 93 N. E. 590. Such matters are likely to impose an obligation in all civilized countries. But when an action is brought upon a cause arising outside of the jurisdiction, it always should be borne in mind that the duty of the court is not to administer its notion of justice, but to enforce an obligation that has been created by a different law. Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 126, 48 L. ed. 900, 902, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. The law of the forum is material only as setting a limit of policy beyond which such obligations will not be enforced there. With very rare exceptions the liabilities of parties to each other are fixed by the law of the territorial jurisdiction within which the wrong is done and the parties are at the time of doing it. American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 347, 356, 53 L. ed. 826, 832, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1047. See Bean v. Morris, 221 U. S. 485, 486, 487, 55 L. ed. 821, 823, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703. That, and that alone, is the foundation of their rights.

The language of Mr. Justice Bradley in The Scotland (National Steam Nav. Co. v. Dyer), 105 U. S. 24, 26 L. ed. 1001, with regard to the application of the lex fori to a case of collision between vessels belonging to different nations, and so subject to no common law, referred to that class of cases and no others, and was used only in coming to the conclusion that foreign vessels might take advantage of our limited liability act. See also The Chattahoochee, 173 U. S. 540, 550, 43 L. ed. 801, 806, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491. Other exceptional cases are referred to in American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. ubi supra, such as those arising in regions having no law that civilized countries would recognize as adequate. But as to causes of action arising in a civilized country, the disregard of the foreign law occasionally indicated by some English judges before the theory to be applied was quite worked out must be disregarded in its turn. The principle adopted by the decisions of this court is clear. See also Dicey, Conf. L. 2 ed. 647 et seq.

We repeat that the only justification for allowing a party to recover when the cause of action arose in another civilized jurisdiction is a well-founded belief that it was a cause of action in that place. The right to recover stands upon that as its necessary foundation. It is part of the plaintiff's case, and if there is reason for doubt, he must allege and prove it. The extension of the hospitality of our courts to foreign suitors must not be made a cover for injustice to the defendants of whom they happen to be able to lay hold.

In the case at bar the court was dealing with the law of Cuba, a country inheriting the law of Spain, and, we may presume, continuing it with such modifications as later years may have brought. There is no general presumption that that law is the same as the common law. We properly may say that we all know the fact to be otherwise. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. 164

Fed. 869. Whatever presumption there is is purely one of fact, that may be corrected by proof. Therefore the presumption should be limited to cases in which it reasonably may be believed to express the fact. Generally speaking, as between two common-law countries, the common law of one reasonably may be presumed to be what it is decided to be in the other, in a case tried in the latter state. But a statute of one would not be presumed to correspond to a statute in the other, and when we leave common-law territory for that where a different system prevails, obviously the limits must be narrower still. Savage v. O'Neil, 44 N. Y. 298; Crashley v. Press Pub. Co. 179 N. Y. 27, 32, 33, 71 N. E. 258, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 196; Aslanian v. Dostumian, 174 Mass. 328, 331, 47 L.R.A. 495, 75 Am. St. Rep. 348, 54 N. E. 845.

Even if we should presume that an employee could recover in Cuba if injured by machinery left defective through the negligence of his employer's servants, which *would be going far, that would not be[480 enough. The plaintiff recovered, or, under the instructions stated at the beginning of this decision, at least may have recovered, notwithstanding his knowledge and appreciation of the danger, on the strength of a doctrine the peculiarity and difficulties of which are elaborately displayed in the treatise of Mr. Labatt. 1 Labatt, Mast. & S. chap. 22, esp. § 424. To say that a promise to repair or replace throws the risk on the master until the time for performance has gone by, or that it does away with or leaves to the jury what otherwise would be negligence as matter of law, is evidence of the great consideration with which workmen are treated here, but cannot be deemed a necessary incident of all civilized codes. It could not be assumed without proof that the defendant was subject to such a rule.

There was some suggestion below that there would be hardship in requiring the plaintiff to prove his case. But it should be remembered that parties do not enter into civil relations in foreign jurisdictions in reliance upon our courts. They could not complain if our courts refused to meddle with their affairs, and remitted them to the place that established and would enforce their rights. A discretion is asserted in some cases even when the policy of our law is not opposed to the claim. The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. 435, 19 L. ed. 772. The only just ground for complaint would be if their rights and liabilities, when enforced by our courts, should be measured by a different rule from that under which the parties dealt.

Judgment reversed.

481]*PORTO RICO SUGAR COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.

BAUTISTA VISO LORENZO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 481, 482.)

Parol evidence — explaining terms — grinding season.

1. A contract to grind all the sugar cane raised by a lessee upon certain specified plantations leased to him for a certain number of grinding seasons is a contract to grind in the grinding season, and parol evidence is admissible to show what that season is.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 1610-1626, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — delay in performance — excuse.

2. Failure to perform an absolute undertaking to grind sugar cane during the grinding season is not excused by the repeated breaking down of the machinery.

[For other cases, see Contracts, 523-535, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 154.]

Argued December 22, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action for breach of a contract to grind sugar cane. Affirmed.

See same case below, 5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 96.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hannis Taylor argued the cause, and with Mr. C. M. Boerman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Parol evidence is never admissible to vary the conditions of a contract, or to add to them, or to explain them, where there is no latent ambiguity, or where there is only a patent ambiguity; that is to say, where the parties knowingly left the matter undefined, because it is supposed that they did not care to make it more specific, and the so-called ambiguity, if there is any, was intentional.

Hearne v. New England Mut. M. Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 397; Shore v. Wilson, 9 Clark & F. 565, 5 Scott, N. R. 958; Mallan v. May, 13 Mees. & W. 517; 14 L. J. Exch. N. S. 48, 9 Jur. 19; Moran v. Prather, 90 U. S. 501, 23 L. ed. 123; Garrison v. Memphis Ins. Co. 19 How. 316, 317, 15 L. ed. 657, 658, 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, NOTE.—On excuses for nonperformance of contract—see notes to United States v. Peck. 26 L. ed. U. S. 46; Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 40 L. ed. U. S. 515; and Stewart v. Stone, 14 L.R.A. 215.

56 L. ed.

2d ed. 391, note 1; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action upon notarial contracts to grind all the plaintiff's sugar cane raised upon specified plantations let to him for a certain number of zafras or grinding seasons, ending in 1912. The breaches alleged are failure to grind the cane, "during the months of January to June," 1908, and to furnish the necessary cars and men to handle the cane, as agreed. At the trial it was proved that the cane was ready to be ground and should have been ground between the months of January and the first weeks of June, but that a large part of the crop was ground in the latter part of June, and through July, *to the great dam-[482 age of the plaintiff. A failure to furnish the proper number of cars for a part of the time also was established. The contract did not fix a period within which the grinding should be done otherwise than by reference to the zafras to which it extended, and it was objected by demurrer, requests for rulings, and exceptions to evidence, that, as the written agreement was silent, it could not be made more definite by parol. But the court ruled the other way and sustained a verdict of $15,000 for the plaintiff, whereupon the case was brought to this court.

It appears to us not to need extended argument to show that the court was right. A contract to grind sugar cane implies on its face, if read with any knowledge of the business, that it has reference to seasons, and that it is more definite than a simple grammatical interpretation of the words would express. An illustration suggested at the argument brings it home to those of us whose experience has been in the North. A contract to reap a field of wheat, with no mention of time, would not leave the contractor free to choose his own time. The grinding of cane must be done in the grinding season, and a contract to grind is a contract to grind in the grinding season. Parol evidence may be necessary to show what that season is in a given place, as it constantly is in order to translate the words and the implications of words into things; but the season, when ascertained, is the limit by the very meaning of the words used, when used in a business contract made with regard to one of the great industries of the world.

A part of the delay seems to have been caused by the repeated breaking down of the machinery, but nothing appears to take the case out of the ordinary rule that performance of an absolute undertaking is not excused by facts of that sort. Nothing else, in the case seems to us to call for remark. The trial was conducted fairly and intelligently, and the defendant must bear the loss. Judgment affirmed.

483]*RICHARD G. PETERS, Appt.,
v.

ALBERT W. GILCHRIST† et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 483-495.)

Statutes — expression of subject in title.

1. A statute entitled "an act to incorporate" a particular railway company does not, under the decisions of the Florida courts, bear a title sufficiently broad to embrace a grant of public land in aid of the construction of the authorized railway. [For other cases, see Statutes, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — entitling — legislative journals.

2. The legislative journal title must, under the decisions of the Florida courts, control, where there is a variance between such title and the title of the bill as enrolled and promulgated.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — following decisions of state courts — validity of statute under state Constitution.

3. Federal courts must follow the adjudications of the courts of a state upon the question as to whether a particular law of that state has been passed in such a manner as to become a valid law under the state Constitution.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. c, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — following decisions of state courts — existing rights.

4. An independent judgment upon the question of the validity of a grant of lands by a state statute which the highest court of the state has held invalid because the title of the act, as shown in the legislative journals, differing in this respect from the published session laws, was not broad enough to include such grant, cannot be exercised by the Federal courts, upon the theory that such decision was rendered after rights under such grant had arisen, where the state court, long before the statute was passed, had laid down the rule that if the legislative journals should show that a law had not been validly enacted, this fact would be fatal.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. c, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

†Albert W. Gilchrist and Park Trammel substituted November 6, 1911, for Napoleon B. Broward and W. B. Lamar as parties appellees herein.

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Over-

[No. 49.]

Argued November 8, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida to review a decree dismissing, upon demurrer, a bill seeking to enforce a trust in certain lands. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John Stevens Maxwell argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas F. McGarry, filed a brief for appellant:

Even if plaintiff's rights are to be determined entirely by the validity or invalidity of the act of May 24, 1893, and the journals of the legislature are to control or furnish the evidence of its title and the regularity of its enactment, or otherwise, it is clear that proof must be taken as to what constitutes the journals and the entries required to be made therein by the Constitution of the state; and we submit that any errors or mistakes may be shown in order to conform the journals to the exact facts.

State ex rel. Morris v. Mason, 43 La. Ann. 590, 9 So. 776; Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa, 543, 14 N. W. 742, 15 N. W. 609.

We believe, under the facts stated in the bill and admitted by the demurrers, that the rule announced by this court in the case of Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649-700, 36 L. ed. 294-312, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495, should be declared the law, and control this case.

In those jurisdictions where resort may be had to the legislative journals, and where enrolled bills signed by the presiding officers and governor are not conclusive when it appears from the journals that some constitutional requirement was not observed, which was not required to be entered on the journal, it will be presumed that what was commanded to be done was in fact done.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 541; State ex rel. Turner v. Hocker, 36 Fla. 358, 18 So. 767; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Potter v. Lainhart, 44 Fla. 647, 33 So. 257; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 168.

The Constitution does not require any legislative proceeding to be entered on the jourman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

nal except the yeas and nays on the final passage of every bill or joint resolution.

Potter v. Lainhart, 44 Fla. 663, 33 So. 251.

If the former judgment is neither pleaded nor put in evidence, the court or jury must find according to the very truth of the issue, uninfluenced by the proceedings in the former suit.

1 Freeman, Judgm. §§ 283, 284.

To go outside of the record of the case before the court, to see if it can find something to establish that the facts alleged and admitted to be true in this record are not true, would certainly be an anomalous proceeding.

Story, Eq. Pl. 10th ed. § 452, note 3, p. 414; Barber v. Barber, 4 Drew. 666, 29 L. J. Ch. N. S. 49, 5 Jur. N. S. 1197, 1 L. T. N. S. 21, 8 Week. Rep. 16; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 457, 35 L. ed. 219, 223, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; People ex rel. Scott v. Chenango, 8 N. Y. 324; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 268, 24 L. ed. 157.

If defendants could plead res judicata in respect to the act having been constitutionally passed, but, for reasons of their own, prefer not to rely upon that judgment, but desire or are willing to reopen the question on the real merits, certainly it cannot be the duty of this court to prevent them from so doing if it could.

1 Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. § 284, pp. 517, 518; Bryar v. Campbell, 177 U. S. 654, 44 L. ed. 928, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794.

Indeed, defendants in the present suit may lose absolutely all their rights, if any, gained in the former suit, if they fail to set them up by plea in this suit.

1 Freeman, Judgm. § 332; Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 49 C. C. A. 455, 111 Fed. 561; United States v. Bliss, 172 U. S. 321, 326, 43 L. ed. 463, 465, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

It is competent also for plaintiff to prove that the short abbreviated title to the bill was the result of a mistake or omission.

Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683-692, 26 L. ed. 526-529.

A judgment or decree upon demurrer is an adjudication only of the rights of the parties upon the allegations of the pleading demurred to, and will not preclude the assertion of the right under other material allegations not appearing in the former suit.

Gilman v. Rives, 10 Pet. 301, 9 L. ed. 433; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 142 U. S. 410, 35 L. ed. 1060, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188; 3 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 572; 8 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 719; 12 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 87; Florida Southern R. Co. v. Brown, 23 Fla. 104, 1 So. 512.

This court is not bound by the finding of the supreme court in the Atlantic Lumber Company Case, that the act was not in fact validly passed.

State ex rel. Morris v. Mason, 43 La. Ann. 590, 9 So. 776.

The journals cannot be held conclusive evidence of the title of the bill as introduced, without depriving us of the opportunity of showing the real facts.

Cooley, Taxn. 356; Black, Tax. Titles, § 253; Kelly v. Herrall, 10 Sawy. 161, 20 Fed. 365; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 162; Bannon v. Burnes, 39 Fed. 895; Ewart v. Davis, 76 Mo. 129; McCreedy v. Sexton, 29 Iowa, 356, 4 Am. Rep. 214.

Where the title of an act provides for the incorporation of a railroad company, the construction of a railroad is to be deemed the object of the act, and any provision therein for granting state, municipal, or county aid is germane to the object of the act.

State ex rel. Lamar v. Jacksonville Terminal Co. 41 Fla. 363, 27 So. 221; Hope v. Gainesville, 72 Ga. 246; Connor v. Green Pond, W. & B. R. Co. 23 S. C. 427; Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 183; Mahomet v. Quackenbush, 117 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 983, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; Firemen's Benev. Asso. v. Lounsbury, 21 Ill. 511, 74 Am. Dec. 115; People ex rel. Drake v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Cooley, Const. Lim. 205, 206; State v. Arnold, 140 Ind. 628, 38 N. E. 820.

Every reasonable doubt should be resolved in favor of the constitutionality of the act.

Holton v. State, 28 Fla. 308, 9 So. 716; Duval County v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. 196, 29 L.R.A. 416, 18 So. 339; State ex rel. Turner v. Hocker, 36 Fla. 358, 18 So. 767.

The state and trustees are equitably estopped, under the circumstances set out in the bill, and admitted by the demurrers.

Pleasant Twp. v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 138 U. S. 67, 72, 73, 34 L. ed. 864, 866, 867, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20-23, 27 L. ed. 359-361, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

Where there had been no decision at all of a state court as to the constitutionality of an act before rights had been acquired thereunder, the Federal court will exercise its own independent judgment as to the validity and obligation of contracts made under the act before the state court held it unconstitutional.

Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp. 116 U. S. 356-362, 29 L. ed. 633-635, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413.

This court will respect the decisions of state courts, but will not give them a retroactive effect, and allow them to render invalid contracts which, in the judgment of this court, were lawfully made.

Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pet. 449, 10 L. ed. 800; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16

How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520; State ex rel. Burlington & M. River R. Co. v. Wapello County, 13 Iowa, 388; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. ed. 968; Cass County v. Johnston, 95 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 416.

This court will not follow decisions of a state if thereby contracts which have accrued under earlier rulings will be injuriously affected.

Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645, 24 L. ed. 302; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806, 26 L. ed. 612; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60, 26 L. ed. 1008.

Where contracts have been entered into on the basis of a certain construction of the law of the state, justly supposed settled, whether from judicial decisions, or action of the state authorities, or long usage, United States courts will hold them valid, notwithstanding the decisions by the courts of the state, made subsequent to the making of the contracts, settling the law of the state to the contrary.

M'Keen v. Delaney, 5 Cranch, 22, 3 L. ed. 25; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 85, 7 L. ed. 356; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. 230, 7 L. ed. 407; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, p. 290.

This court has refused to follow the decisions of the supreme court of a state upon construction of the validity of a statute of the state where there was no contrary decision inconsistent therewith, basing this refusal upon a general construction of the statute by the state authorities and by the people, on the faith of which contracts, whose validity they were to determine, had been entered into.

Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pet. 449, 10 L. ed. 800; Truly v. Wanzer, 5 How. 141, 12 L. ed. 88; Sims v. Hundley, 6 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 319; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. 595, 15 L. ed. 518; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. ed. 38; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 490; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 678, 22 L. ed. 233; Pleasant Twp. v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 138 U. S. 67, 34 L. ed. 864, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 76 Fed. 296; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. ed. 968.

Mr. W. S. Jennings argued the cause and filed a brief for the trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund:

Only such portions of a bill as were included in the subject as expressed in the title when it passed the two houses, and when approved by the governor, will acquire the force of law.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 126; Binn v. Weber, 81 Ill. 288; Stein v. Leeper, 78 Ala. 517; Re Executive Communication, 23 Fla. 297, 6 So. 925; State ex rel. Boyd v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293, 12 Am. St. Rep. 204, 4 So. 899; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Green, 36 Fla. 154, 18 So. 334.

The granting of title to lands is not a matter properly connected with the subject of the creation of a corporation in a legislative enactment. A land grant from the state requires an act of the legislature, and, in the nature of things, cannot be a matter of, germane to, or properly connected with, a subject of statutory incorporation.

Carr v. Thomas, 18 Fla. 747; Ex parte Wells, 21 Fla. 280; State ex rel. McQuaid v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 483, 3 So. 193; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Knowles, 16 Fla. 577; Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 633, 41 So. 72, 51 Fla. 638, 41 So. 75.

"Subject," as used in a constitutional requirement that laws shall contain but one subject, which shall be plainly expressed in their title, is a very indefinite word. A phrase may state a subject in a general or indefinite manner or with minute particularity, yet it would nevertheless be true that the subject is described in the title.

Ex parte Thomas, 113 Ala. 1, 21 So. 369; State v. Ferguson, 104 La. 249, 81 Am. St. Rep. 123, 28 So. 917.

If an act embraces two or more subjects, and two or more of the same are expressed in the title, the whole act is void.

1 Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 250; Ballentyne v. Wickersham, 75 Ala. 539; Builders' & P. Supply Co. v. Lucas, 119 Ala. 202, 24 So. 416; Pennington v. Woolfolk, 79 Ky. 13; State v. Ferguson, 104 La. 249, 81 Am. St. Rep. 123, 28 So. 917; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151, 61 Am. Dec. 331; Skinner v. Wilhelm, 63 Mich. 568, 30 N. W. 311; State ex rel. Miller v. Lancaster County, 17 Neb. 87, 22 N. W. 228; Re Elizabeth, 49 N. J. L. 488, 10 Atl. 363; Ragio v. State, 86 Tenn. 272, 6 S. W. 401; Cooley, Const. Lim. 147.

The journals of the house and of the senate, both of which showed that the title of the bill as introduced and passed by them was merely, "An Act to Incorporate the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf R. Co.," are conclusive evidence of the real title of the bill, and the fact that the bill, as ingrossed, enrolled, and signed by the presiding officers of both branches of the legislature, and by the governor, bore the longer and broader title, does not in the least operate to constitute such longer title the true and legal title of the bill.

Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 633, 41 So. 72; Happel v. Brethauer, 70 Ill. 166, 22 Am. Rep. 70; Atty. Gen. v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385, 31 N. W. 203; White v. Hinton, 3 Wyo. 753, 17 L.R.A. 66, 30 Pac. 953; Detroit v. Board of Assessors (Detroit v. Rentz) 91 Mich. 78, 16 L.R.A. 59, 51 N. W. 787.

The decision of the supreme court upon the construction of a state statute is binding upon the Federal courts.

Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 143, 22 L. ed. 334; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 497, 22 L. ed. 598; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 604, 23 L. ed. 670; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 704, 28 L. ed. 570, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Johnson, 151 U. S. 99, 38 L. ed. 87, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 52, 25 L. ed. 546; Mason v. Missouri, 179 U. S. 334, 45 L. ed. 219, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Wiley v. Sinkler, 179 U. S. 66, 45 L. ed. 89, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 1049, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 177, 43 L. ed. 939, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 283, 46 L. ed. 200, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 372, 41 L. ed. 473, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 387, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Montana Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 152 U. S. 165, 38 L. ed. 398, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 144, 25 L. ed. 901; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 583, 31 L. ed. 798, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Gormly v. Clark, 134 U. S. 348, 33 L. ed. 913, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 306, 35 L. ed. 1022, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 322, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 372, 41 L. ed. 473, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

The doctrine of the Florida courts was announced long prior to the enactment of complainant's land grant.

State ex rel. Markens v. Brown, 20 Fla. 407; State ex rel. Boyd v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293, 12 Am. St. Rep. 204, 4 So. 899; Mathis v. State, 31 Fla. 303, 12 So. 681.

Mr. William A. Blount argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. C. Blount, Jr., filed a brief for appellees Wade and Southern Timber & Naval Stores Company:

There was no grant by the legislature of Florida to the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & G. R. Co. of any lands, or of the right to earn any.

Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 632, 640, 41 So. 72, 75.
56 L. ed.

This court is bound by the decision of the Florida supreme court as to whether a bill was so passed as to conform to the constitutional requirements and thus become a law.

South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 268, 24 L. ed. 157; Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 519, 524, 533, 45 L. ed. 650, 652, 655, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 455, 35 L. ed. 222, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

The supreme court of Florida has decided that even though the Constitution may not require the statement in the journals of certain facts connected with the passage of a bill, yet, when the journals do affirmatively show such facts, the statement of the journals is indisputable and uncontrollable.

Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 632, 640, 41 So. 72, 75; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Green, 36 Fla. 172, 18 So. 334; State ex rel. Markens v. Brown, 20 Fla. 421.

United States courts will take judicial notice of the decisions of the highest state court, holding an act of the legislature to have been passed in accordance with the requirements of the Constitution of the state, or the contrary, and of the legislative journals of the state, whose courts take such notice, and will follow such decisions, and will give to the journals the effect given by the state courts to them, and both the state courts of Florida and this court will take such notice upon demurrer.

South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, 267, 268, 24 L. ed. 154, 157, 158; State ex rel. Markens v. Brown, 20 Fla. 420; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Green, 36 Fla. 168, 18 So. 334; Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 628, 638, 41 So. 72, 75.

The Constitution of the United States does not prevent a state from declaring its legislative journals conclusive of the manner of the passage of an act of the legislature.

South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 269, 24 L. ed. 158; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

There can be no estoppel in the way of ascertaining the existence of a law. That which purports to be a law of a state is a law, or it is not a law, according as the truth of the fact may be, and not according to the shifting circumstances of parties.

South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 267, 24 L. ed. 157; Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506-520, 45 L. ed. 642-650, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The complainant, Richard G. Peters, through mesne conveyances, asserts an equitable title to some 200,000 acres of swamp or overflowed lands in the state of Florida, being a part of the congressional grant of September 28, 1850 [9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1586], to the state of Florida. By state legislation the title to the lands so granted was vested in the governor of the state and four other state officials and their successors in office, as trustees, for the purposes set forth in an act of June 6, 1855, entitled, "An Act to Provide for and Encourage a Liberal System of Internal Improvement in This State."

The title asserted is based upon a grant in 488]aid of the *construction of a railroad, found in a legislative act of May 24, 1893, printed in the Session Laws of Florida for 1893. That act purports to incorporate the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railway Company, and authorizes it to construct and operate a railway between certain points within the state. The 9th and 10th sections read as follows:

"Sec. 9. That the state of Florida, for the purpose of aiding the construction of said railroad, its branches and extensions, hereby grants unto said company 10,000 acres of land for each mile of railroad it may construct, of the lands granted to the state of Florida, under the act of Congress of September 28th, 1850, and which are commonly known as the swamp and overflowed lands, said lands to be deeded to the said company by the trustees of the internal improvement fund, as fast as each 5 miles of said road or any of its branches are graded, cross-tied, and rails laid thereon.

"Sec. 10. That upon the filing of a certificate of the completion of any 5 miles of said road or any of its branches, signed by the engineer and president of the said company, it shall be the duty of the trustees of the internal improvement fund to require the state engineer or such other competent person to examine and inspect each 5 miles of road so completed; and on such person's or the state engineer's report that the 5 miles are completed as certified, it shall be the duty of the trustees of the internal improvement fund to issue deeds to the said corporation, as required in the foregoing section; Provided, That the said corporation, its successors and assigns, shall have the privilege of requiring and having from the trustees of the internal improvement fund a certificate authorizing and entitling it to locate the lands which it may at any time have earned and become entitled to as aforesaid; and whenever and as often as the said corporation shall file with the trustees of the internal improvement *fund a plot and survey[489 of the lands located by it in pursuance of a certificate given it by the trustees, as herein provided, the said trustees shall set apart and upon demand execute unto said corporation, its successors and assigns, a deed conveying unto it the lands described in said plot and survey, from the swamp and overflowed lands granted to the state of Florida by the act of Congress of September 28, 1850; Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall make the state of Florida liable by reason of any deficiency there may exist in the public lands belonging to the state under and by virtue of the act of Congress of September 28, 1850."

By the 18th section of said act it was provided that the railway company should receive the same quota of land on account of the construction of any part of the projected line by the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railroad Company, theretofore incorporated for the same general purpose, upon receiving a conveyance of such constructed railroad.

The bill avers that the said railway company constructed 20 miles of railway, including about 5 miles conveyed to it by the predecessor company above referred to, which had been inspected and certified to the trustees of the internal improvement fund by the state engineer, and that the company, in the exercise of the privileges conferred by the 10th section of the act, had demanded and received from said trustees certificates "authorizing and entitling it to locate lands" so earned, and to receive from the said trustees a deed conveying to it, its successors or assigns, the lands so located. It is then averred that the certificates, together with survey and map of locations, had been regularly filed with the trustees, and a deed demanded, but that the trustees refused to make such deed, and later conveyed the lands so located, or the greater part thereof, to the defendant Neil G. Wade, who had full notice of appellant's title, and who *sub-[490 sequently conveyed the same to the defendant the Southern Timber & Naval Stores Company, who, it is alleged, also had full notice of the prior right of the said Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railway Company, and its assigns, including the present complainant.

The prayer of the bill is that the Southern Timber & Naval Stores Company be adjudged to hold same in trust for complainant, and required to convey same to him. In the alternative, the bill asks a decree against the trustees of the internal improvement fund for the value of said lands, or for the money received by the trustees for said lands, and for general relief.

The bill was dismissed upon demurrer.

It is evident from the facts stated that the origin and foundation of the title asserted by the bill to the state lands now held by the Southern Timber & Naval Stores Company is the land grant made or proposed in the Florida act of May 24, 1893. But that act, in another litigation between different parties, was held null and void in so far as its land grant clauses are concerned. Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 628, 41 So. 72. The ground of this holding was that the title of the act, as shown by the journals of the two houses, was not broad enough to include a grant of public lands. The Constitution of the state includes a provision against more than one subject in the same bill, that subject to be indicated by the title. Thus, the 16th section of article 3 of the Florida Constitution reads as follows:

"Each law enacted in the legislature shall embrace but one subject and matter properly connected therewith, which subject shall be briefly expressed in the title."

The title of the act in question, as it is found in the published Session Acts of 1893, is as follows:

"An act to incorporate the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railway, to grant such corporation certain privileges, and to aid the construction thereof."

491] *The title, as shown by the journals of both houses, was in these words:

"A bill to be entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railway Company.'"

Thus, the title, as shown by the journals, gives no notice that the bill grants public lands as an aid to construction, but purports to be no more than an incorporating act, while the act, as officially promulgated, bears a title expressing its contents.

But when there is a variance between the title of a bill as enrolled and promulgated and the title of the act as shown by the journals, the latter will control, under the express decision of the highest court of the state of Florida. Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. supra.

In that case the Atlantic Lumber Company asserted title to certain swamp lands located under certificates issued to the Atlantic, Suwanee River, & Gulf Railway Company, by authority of this act of May 24, 1893, which lands had been deeded to the defendant Neil G. Wade by the trustees of the internal improvement fund. The defendant Wade demurred to the bill upon the ground that the act of May 24, 1893, the sole source of the superior title asserted by the Atlantic Lumber Company, was invalid in so far as it included a land grant, because the title of the act did not express that purpose of the bill.

The Florida court took judicial notice of the journals of the Florida legislature, and finding the journal title to be as set out above, held the title of the act insufficient under the Constitution to embrace a grant of public lands in aid of the company incorporated.

We shall pass by the suggestion that the judgment in the case referred to is an adjudication binding upon the parties to this suit as to the title or equities here in litigation, it not sufficiently appearing that the parties or the lands in suit are the same. Neither shall we stop to consider the effect of that decision and opinion as absolutely *determining the invalidity[492 of the act of May 24, 1893, as against parties not then before the court. It is enough for the purposes of this case that we shall hold that case to be an authoritative announcement of the law of Florida in these respects: first, that under the Constitution of that state, an act entitled an act to incorporate a particular railway company does not bear a title sufficiently broad to embrace a grant of public land in aid of the construction of the authorized railway; and, second, that when the journals speak and show a variance between the journal title and the title of a bill as enrolled and promulgated, the journal title must control.

The question as to whether a particular law has been passed in such manner as to become a valid law under the Constitution of the state is a state, and not a Federal, question. Courts of the United States are therefore under obligation to follow the adjudications of the courts of the state whose law is in question. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, 24 L. ed. 154; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Wilkes County v. Coler, 189 U. S. 511, 47 L. ed. 923, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

The only authority which the trustees of the internal improvement fund had for the issuance of the certificates now held by the appellant, or for their location upon the public land of the state, or the execution of a deed to the locator, proceeds from this act. If that enactment be invalid, the trustees had no authority to issue such certificates, and no authority to make the deed which was demanded for lands located by means of such certificates. Yet this very enactment has been declared invalid by the highest court of the state upon an examination by that court of the journals of the legislature, showing a variance between the title of the bill as enrolled and the title shown by the journal. It would be a most remarkable occurrence if now, upon the same journals, we should hold that the bill had a sufficient title and was a valid law.

It is true that the issues in the case of 493] Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. were raised by demurrer. But the question of whether the enactment was a valid law is a judicial question. In the case of the State ex rel. Markens v. Brown, 20 Fla. 407, a case decided ten years before this act was passed, it was held that the courts would examine the journals of the legislature, and would hold a law invalid if, from such journals, it appeared that the law in question had not been constitutionally enacted. See also State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Green, 36 Fla. 154, 18 So. 334. In view of the cases cited, we find the Florida court saying, in Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. that "this court is firmly committed to the holding that when the journals speak, they control."

The suggestion that the rights of the appellant, or his assignors, arose before the decision in Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. and that the case is therefore one in which this court should exercise an independent judgment under the authority of such cases as Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10, is without merit.

The rule appealed to is not applicable, because the highest court of the state had, before the acquirement of any rights, laid down the rule that if the journals of the legislature should show that a law had not been validly enacted, the fact would be fatal. It was therefore incumbent upon persons proposing to rely upon the act of May 24, 1893, to examine the journals. Indulgence cannot be claimed because they did not know the law or did not make such examination. There is, therefore, no reason for declining to follow the case of Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. In South Ottawa v. Perkins, cited above, Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for this court upon a similar question, said:

"But the law under consideration has been passed upon by the supreme court of Illinois and held to be invalid. This ought to have been sufficient to have governed the action of the court below. In our judgment it was not necessary to have raised an issue 494] on the subject, except *by demurrer to the declaration. This court is bound to know the law without taking the advice of a jury on the subject. When once it became the settled construction of the Constitution of Illinois that no act can be deemed a valid law unless, by the journals of the legislature, it appears to have been regularly passed by both houses, it became the duty of the courts to take judicial notice of the journal entries in that regard. The courts of Illinois may decline to take that trouble, unless parties bring the matter to their attention; but, on general principles, the question as to the existence of a law is a judicial one, and must be so regarded by the courts of the United States."

But appellant says that the bill alleges that the title of the bill when introduced was that shown by the enrolled bill, and that it retained that title throughout each legislative stage, and that the other title indorsed on the bill and spread upon the journals was one made through inadvertence or mistake. He further says that the demurrer admits this to be true. But in point of law, evidence of the facts stated would not help the matter. The Florida court, in Wade v. Atlantic Lumber Co. 51 Fla. 638, 41 So. 75, denied a rehearing of the original case, sought for the purpose of inducing a modification of the opinion and decree, to enable the complainant, Wade, to show the very facts now averred in the present bill. To this that court said:

"The appellee also asks that the decree be modified to enable the petitioner to show that the title to the bill as actually introduced into the House and at all subsequent stages was in the form as now published, and that the fact of the shorter form appearing in the journals was due to the mistake or carelessness of the clerks. To grant this request would be to permit uncertain parol evidence to countervail the legislative journals, and would produce overwhelming uncertainty as to the validity, force, or effect of every law upon the statute books; if admitted *for the purpose of sustain-[495] ing an act, it would be equally admissible to overthrow an act, and cannot be permitted."

We need not deal with the argument that the grant operated to pass the title to the lands located, without more, since the invalidity of the act disposes of every right which might otherwise proceed from it.

Neither does the bill state any facts which authorize us to hold that the trustees of the internal improvement fund made any contract in reference to granting aid in the construction of the Atlantic, Suwannee River, & Gulf Railway by virtue of their general power under the act of September 28, 1850, vesting title to the state swamp lands in them. Every act averred to have been done by them was but a step in pursuance of the power which was sought to be conferred by the act of May 24, 1893. Their subsequent conveyance of the lands upon which the certificates issued by them to the railway company was in pursuance of a sale made by them to Neil G. Wade, and their refusal to make a deed of the same lands to the railway company, or its assigns, was based upon the invalidity of the enactment under which such deed was claimed. They incurred, neither personally nor officially, any responsibility for their conduct in the matter.

The case of the railway company and their assigns is a hard one. They went forward under an enactment which was invalid, and have made large expenditures upon the faith of a law which they assumed was valid. But the consequences are not remediable save by an appeal to the legislative power. The proceeds of the sale of the lands located under the void certificates to Wade are not charged with any lien or equity by any of the facts stated in the bill.

The decree of the Circuit Court must be in all things affirmed.

496] *JESSE B. HUSE, Appt.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 496-505.)

Postoffice — screen-wagon mail service.

1. The service contemplated by a screen-wagon mail service contract for carriage between the postoffice and railway mail stations at Omaha must be deemed to include the mails to and from all the railroads using the union station at that point, although some of such railroads were not specifically named in the contract, where it had long been been the practice of the government and the screen-wagon contractors to regard such service as a part of the contract, and the public advertisement for proposals, expressly made a part of the contract, warned bidders to familiarize themselves with the situation by personal investigation and inquiry.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — objections not raised below — pleading.

2. A contractor for screen-wagon mail service whose petition for compensation from the government has been dismissed by the court of claims cannot avail himself of the objection, first raised on appeal, to the absence of any pleading setting up as a counterclaim or set-off the difference between the cost of the service under a reletting and the entire contract price for the full term under his contract.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 74.]

Argued November 17, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

56 L. ed.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing the petition of a contractor for screen-wagon mail service for compensation from the government. Affirmed.

See same case below, 44 Ct. Cl. 19.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. C. Brandenburg argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Clarence A. Brandenburg and F. Walter Brandenburg, filed a brief for appellant:

Additional service is merely an increase in the particular service covered by the contract. Thus, if a greater number of trips should have been necessary to carry the mails arriving over the four roads specifically mentioned, the Postmaster General might require such service as additional service, without compensation.

Woolverton v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 292; Knox v. United States, 30 Ct. Cl. 59; Woolverton v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 247.

Even where the services required are precisely of the same nature as those contemplated by the contract, and between the same points, and therefore might justly be considered "additional services," yet, where the amount of such additional service increases unreasonably the burden assumed, such services are treated as extra services, for which compensation has been allowed.

Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. v. United States, 39 Ct. Cl. 420, affirmed in 199 U. S. 422, 50 L. ed. 254, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69.

At the time the Postmaster General annulled this contract, the government itself was in default in respect of the only obligation it assumed; to wit, the payment of the stipulated compensation; and being in default, it had no right to annul the contract.

Mason v. Edward Thompson Co. 94 Minn. 472, 103 N. W. 507; Graf v. Self, 109 N. Y. 372, 16 N. E. 551; Hatton v. Johnson, 83 Pa. 222; Myers v. Gross, 59 Ill. 439.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. George M. Anderson, filed a brief for appellee:

Whenever an act is done or statement made by a party, which cannot be contradicted without fraud on his part and injury to others, whose conduct has been influenced by the act or admission, the character of an estoppel will attach to what otherwise would be mere matter of evidence.

Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 580, 25 L. ed. 618, 619.

The service required of the appellant in carrying mails to and from the three roads, cannot be considered either as new, extra, or additional service.

Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. v. United States,

39 Ct. Cl. 435; Proffit v. United States, 42 Ct. Cl. 248.

The Postmaster General was made the judge of the proper equipment to be furnished by appellant before commencing the services, and, in the absence of bad faith, his right to annul the contract upon appellant's refusal to provide suitable equipment cannot now be assailed.

United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. ed. 547; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 354, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant had a four-year contract, 500]commencing *July 1, 1902, for screen-wagon mail service between the postoffice and railway mail stations at Omaha, Nebraska. On May 20, 1903, the Postmaster General canceled the contract and relet it to other parties. Thereupon appellant brought this suit in the court of claims, asserting that he had faithfully performed his agreement, but that he had been required to carry mails to and from three railway companies not included in his contract. That his equipment was ample for the service he contracted to render, but that he had been ordered to provide equipment adequate to the excessive service demanded, and that the cancelation of his contract was therefore unauthorized. His suit was to recover, first, the balance due under the contract as construed by the Department; second, the reasonable value of the excess service he had, under protest, been compelled to render; third, the loss of profit resulting from the wrongful annulment of his contract; and, finally, the loss sustained in disposing of equipment which had been bought for the purpose of carrying out his contract.

As is the case with mail contracts, the manner and means of performance were carefully prescribed, and power was reserved to the Postmaster General to require other and further facilities if it should be found necessary for the good of the service. The power of the Postmaster General to supervise and the duty of the contractor to conform to his regulations were plainly written down. That vigilant and prompt service might be enforced, he was given the right to make deductions, by way of fines, from compensation earned, for defects in equipment or negligence in the performance of the service. For repeated failures in performance, or acts of neglect, or disobedience to orders, he was given power to annul the contract without impairing the right of the government to recover damages for nonperformance.

The findings of the court below as to the repeated *failures of the appellant in[501 the performance of his contract, the inadequacy of his equipment, and his disobedience to the requirements that he should enlarge and improve his facilities, make it clear that the Postmaster General did not act arbitrarily, nor exceed the power reserved, by the inflicting of fines or the final cancelation of the agreement on May 20, 1903. When the contract was canceled, it was directed that compensation due should be withheld and the contract relet at the contractor's expense. This reletting was at a price of some $14,-000 in excess of what the cost would have been if appellant had performed his agreement. The court below found that when the contract was annulled there was due appellant $2,984.72. For this a judgment was asked, but denied, the court below finding that the loss to the government as a result of reletting the contract was greatly in excess of the amount due to appellant. His petition was therefore dismissed.

If the contract, fairly construed, exacted the amount of service which the Department claimed, the case of appellant must fail, in view of the facts found as to his insufficient performance, and the loss resulting to the government from the necessity of reletting the unfinished term of the agreement.

The Postmaster General construed the contract as requiring appellant to receive from and deliver to all railroads using the Union Station at Omaha. This construction required him to receive from and deliver to three railroad companies not specified in the contract; namely, the Wabash, the Chicago & Northwestern, and the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul. The case must therefore turn upon the question as to whether the service contemplated by his contract included mails to and from the railways mentioned.

Coming, then, to the service required by the contract. The proposal for the Omaha mail-wagon service and its acceptance were according to a printed official form. This *proposal and acceptance,[502 making the contract proper, refer to and make the public advertisement of the Postmaster General for proposals a part of the agreement, and from it the service contemplated is discovered. That advertisement included certain "instructions to bidders," of which they were required to take notice. Among other things, these "instructions" included the following provision:

"The foregoing schedules show approximately the service as performed during the week named in the statement of service for each route. Bidders, however, must personally inform themselves of the amount and character of the service that will be required during the contract term, beginning with July 1, 1902. Bidders and their sureties are warned that they should familiarize themselves with the terms of the contract, schedules of service, and instructions contained herein before they shall assume any liabilities as such bidders or sureties, to prevent misapprehension or cause of complaint thereafter."

Under the heading "Union Station," in the schedule referred to, there appear the names of four railroad companies opposite the words "Union Station," applicable to each of the named companies, thus:

"Union Station:

Illinois Central R. R. Co. (143,077).

Union Pacific R. R. Co. (157,001).

Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Rwy. Co. (157,064).

Missouri Pacific Rwy. Co. (157,075)."

It will be noticed that the named railroads bringing mail into the Union Station do not include the Wabash, the Chicago & Northwestern, or the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul. Notwithstanding this omission, appellant was required to carry to and from the Union Station the mails delivered there by these three companies, and to be delivered there from the post-office, to be carried by the same companies. This appellant did under protest, and upon this his suit is grounded.

But the explanation and answer is simple: Originally, *the contract routes of these companies terminated at the Union Pacific transfer at Council Bluffs, Iowa, where the mail was transferred to the Union Pacific Railway and carried into Omaha. After the construction of the Union Station, each of these companies procured the right to carry their mail over the Union Pacific Railway into the Union Station. This saved delay in transfer. The court below found that "the trains so performing said service were known and treated by the Postoffice Department as mail trains of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, route No. 157,001, and were operated under the rules of said Union Pacific Railroad Company, and payment was made therefor to the said Union Pacific Company. All weights of mail carried by said three roads were credited to the Union Pacific Railroad route and weighed thereon. The screen-wagon contractor under the preceding advertisement and contract, which were similar to the one in this case, carried mails to and from the trains of said three roads as part of his contract, and these facts were known to persons having knowledge of the service."

This had for many years been the method of handling the mails carried by the three companies referred to when appellant made his proposal. True, he says he did not know it; but the advertisement warned him of the necessity of making himself familiar with the "terms of the contract, schedule of services and instruction herein, before they should assume any liabilities as such bidders or sureties, to prevent misapprehension." Among the facts found is this:

"Prior to submitting said proposal the claimant carefully read the advertisement and instructions to bidders, and familiarized himself with their terms, and knew that the trains of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railroad, and the Wabash Railroad entered the Union Station at Omaha, and to further inform himself as to the amount and character *of the service[504 to be performed he consulted the postmaster and superintendent of mails at Omaha, who called his attention to the Instructions to Bidders; also a Mr. Anderson, who had been in charge of the work under a former contract, who explained to him the three depots, including the Union Station, and the mail to be taken from them, and the number of wagons it would take to perform the service."

Knowing of the manner in which the mails carried by the three railroads in question were handled, acquired after the contract was signed, is not, of course, fatal to his contention that the contract did not include that mail matter. It does, however, appear that after his proposal had been accepted, and before the beginning of performance, he actually took a temporary contract for the carriage of the identical mails, so that when he entered upon his own regular contract he was fully aware of the conditions. This must, at least, weaken the force of his going forward under protest. But aside from this information, the advertisement and instructions warned him to familiarize himself with the situation by personal investigation and inquiry. This he asserted he had done, for in his printed proposal he stated that "this proposal is made after due inquiry into and with full knowledge of all particulars in reference to the service, and also after careful examination of the conditions attached to said advertisement, and with intent to be governed thereby."

But it is urged that appellant is at least entitled to a judgment for $2,984.72, which the court below found to be the amount due when the contract was terminated. This contention is based upon the absence of any pleading setting up as a counterclaim or set-off the difference between the cost of the service under the reletting and the entire contract price for the full term under appellant's contract. But no such objection seems to have been made in the court of claims. That court 505] had all the facts before *it. It found that there was due on May 20, 1903, for services under the contract prior thereto, $2,984.72. But it found, on the other hand, that at that date the contract had been lawfully annulled, and that the necessary reletting had resulted in a loss to the government of a very much larger sum. Upon this showing it properly concluded that the amount due was more than offset by the loss resulting from reletting at a higher price. How it might be if this objection had been seasonably made, it is not an error for which this court will reverse when not made until upon appeal. In Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. United States, 164 U. S. 190, 212, 41 L. ed. 399, 407, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45, a like objection was made as to claims coming from the court of claims, and this court said:

"The petition sets forth, among other things, that the Postmaster General wrongfully and unlawfully withheld the $12,532.43 out of moneys due petitioner, which was therefore entitled to recover the full amount; and to each and every allegation of the petition the government interposed a general traverse. It is now said that a counterclaim or set-off should have been pleaded, but the record does not disclosed that this objection was raised below, while the findings of fact show that the entire matter was before the court for, and received, adjudication. Moreover, it has been repeatedly held that the forms of pleading in the court of claims are not of so strict a character as to require omissions of this kind to be held fatal to the rendition of such judgment as the facts demand."

Judgment affirmed.

506]*CLARENCE D. ROBINSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 506-512.)

Carriers — remedy for discrimination in rates — necessity of action by Interstate Commerce Commission.

1. Investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission and an appropriate finding and order are prerequisite to the right of a shipper to maintain an action to recover from a carrier the excess which he claims to have paid under a regularly established and published rate which is attacked as unjustly discriminatory, notwithstanding the provisions of the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 22, that nothing therein contained "shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies."

[For other cases, see Carriers, 241, 242, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judicial notice — decision of Interstate Commerce Commission.

2. Judicial notice of a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, authoritatively published in its reports, need not be taken by a state court because of the provision of the act of February 4, 1887, § 14, making the authorized publications of the Commission competent evidence without further proof or authentication, where such decision was not mentioned in the pleadings nor in the agreed statement of facts, since the purpose of the statute is to relieve litigants from the inconvenience and expense of obtaining certified copies of the decisions, and it does not otherwise change the rules of evidence.

[For other cases, see Evidence, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 17.]

Submitted April 28, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Marion County, in that state, dismissing an action by a shipper to recover from a carrier the excess which he claims to have paid under a rate attacked as unjustly discriminatory. Affirmed.

See same case below, 64 W. Va. 406, 63 S. E. 323.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Leeds submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Hugh L. Bond, Jr., and W. Irvine Cross submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. A. Hunter Boyd, Jr., was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

In February, March, and May, 1903, Robinson, the plaintiff in error, shipped NOTE.—As to jurisdiction of courts pending proceedings before Interstate Commerce Commission—see note to Sandusky-Portland Cement Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 111 C. C. A. 443.

On judicial notice—see note to Olive v. State, 4 L.R.A. 33.

eleven carloads of coal from Fairmont, West Virginia, to points in other states, over the railroad of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, the defendant in error, and paid the rate thereon which was prescribed in a schedule published and filed conformably to the act to regulate interstate commerce, and then in full force. By this schedule the rate was 50 cents more per ton when the coal was loaded into the car from wagons than when the loading was from a tippie. Robinson's shipments came under the higher rate, and the charges paid by him were $150 in excess of what would have been exacted if his coal had been loaded from a tippie. Conceiving that the schedule unjustly discriminated between shipments loaded from tipples and those loaded from wagons, he brought, in the circuit court of Marion county, West Virginia, on April 19, 1906, an action against the railroad company to recover the excess so paid. The case was heard upon an agreed statement of facts, which set forth, with some detail, the matters just stated, and recited that it embodied "all the facts and evidence in the cause." But the statement did not disclose, or even suggest, that the schedule had been the subject of a complaint to the Interstate Commerce Commission, or had been found by the Commission to be unjustly discriminatory, or that the railroad company had been ordered by the Commission to desist from giving effect to the schedule, or to make reparation to Robinson or any other shipper because of prior exactions thereunder. Being of opinion that, upon the agreed statement, Robinson was not entitled *to recover, the court entered a judgment dismissing his action, and that judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of the state. 64 W. Va. 406, 63 S. E. 323. He then sued out this writ of error upon the ground that, by the judgment of affirmance, he was denied rights specially set up under the act to regulate interstate commerce.

The first question to be considered is whether, consistently with the provisions of that act, Robinson could maintain his action for reparation in the absence of an order by the Interstate Commerce Commission finding that the established schedule whereby the additional 50 cents per ton was exacted was unjustly discriminatory, determining what reparation should be made because of prior exactions thereunder, and directing the carrier to desist from such discrimination in the future, and to make the reparation indicated. It was contended by him in the supreme court of appeals of the state, and is contended now, that the question should be answered in the affirmative because of the provision in § 22 56 L. ed.

that "nothing in this act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies." But it must be ruled otherwise, and for these reasons:

The act, chap. 104, 24 Stat. at L. 379, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154; chap. 382, 25 Stat. at L. 855, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3158; chap. 61, 28 Stat. at L. 643, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3171; chap. 708, 32 Stat. at L. 847, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1138, whilst prohibiting unreasonable charges, unjust discriminations, and undue preferences by carriers subject to its provisions, also prescribed the manner in which that prohibition should be enforced; that is to say, the act laid upon every such carrier the duty of publishing and filing, in a prescribed mode, schedules of the rates to be charged for the transportation of property over its road, declared that the rates named in schedules so established should be conclusively deemed to be the legal rates until changed as provided in the act, forbade any deviation from them *while they remained in effect, invest-[509] ed the Interstate Commerce Commission with authority to receive complaints against rates so established, and to inquire and find whether they were in any wise violative of the prohibitions of the act, and, if so, what, if any, injury had been done thereby to the person complaining or to others, and further authorized the Commission to direct the carrier to desist from any violation found to exist, and to make reparation for any injury found to have been done. Provision was also made for the enforcement of the order for reparation by an action in the circuit court of the United States if the carrier failed to comply with it.

Thus, for the purpose of preventing unreasonable charges, unjust discriminations, and undue preferences, a system of establishing, maintaining, and altering rate schedules and of redressing injuries resulting from their enforcement was adopted whereby publicity would be given to the rates, their application would be obligatory and uniform while they remained in effect, and the matter of their conformity to prescribed standards would be committed primarily to a single tribunal clothed with authority to investigate complaints and to order the correction of any nonconformity to those standards by an appropriate change in schedules and by due reparation to injured persons.

When the purpose of the act and the means selected for the accomplishment of that purpose are understood, it is altogether plain that the act contemplated that such an investigation and order by the designated tribunal, the Interstate Commerce Commission, should be a prerequisite to the right to seek reparation in the courts because of exactions under an established schedule alleged to be violative of the prescribed standards. And this is so, because the existence and exercise of a right to maintain an action of that character, in the absence of such an investigation and order, would be repugnant to the declared 510]*rule that a rate established in the mode prescribed should be deemed the legal rate, and obligatory alike upon carrier and shipper until changed in the manner provided, would be in derogation of the power expressly delegated to the Commission, and would be destructive of the uniformity and equality which the act was designed to secure.

In the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 440, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075, where such a right was asserted and denied, it was said by this court:

"Indeed, the recognition of such a right is wholly inconsistent with the administrative power conferred upon the Commission, and with the duty which the statute casts upon that body, of seeing to it that the statutory requirement as to uniformity and equality of rates is observed. Equally obvious is it that the existence of such a power in the courts, independent of prior action by the Commission, would lead to favoritism, to the enforcement of one rate in one jurisdiction and a different one in another, would destroy the prohibitions against preferences and discrimination, and afford, moreover, a ready means by which, through collusive proceedings, the wrongs which the statute was intended to remedy could be successfully inflicted. Indeed, no reason can be perceived for the enactment of the provision endowing the administrative tribunal which the act created with the power, on due proof, not only to award reparation to a particular shipper, but to command the carrier to desist from violation of the act in the future, thus compelling the alteration of the old or the filing of a new schedule, conformably to the action of the Commission, if the power was left in courts to grant relief on complaint of any shipper, upon the theory that the established rate could be disregarded and be treated as unreasonable, without reference to previous action by the Commission in the premises. This must be, because, if the power existed in both courts and the Commission to originally hear complaints on 511]*this subject, there might *be divergence between the action of the Commission and the decision of a court. In other words, the established schedule might be found reasonable by the Commission in the first instance, and unreasonable by a court acting originally, and thus a conflict would arise which would render the enforcement of the act impossible."

It is true, as was urged in argument, that in that case the complaint against the established rate was that it was unreasonable, while here the complaint is that the rate was unjustly discriminatory. But the distinction is not material. The power of the Commission over the two complaints is the same,—one is as likely to become the subject of diverging opinions and conflicting decisions as is the other; and if a court, acting originally upon either, were to sustain it and award reparation, the confusing anomaly would be presented of a rate being adjudged to be violative of the prescribed standards, and yet continuing to be the legal rate, obligatory upon both carrier and shipper.

Of course, the provision in § 22, as also the provision in § 9, must be read in connection with other parts of the act, and be interpreted with due regard to its manifest purpose; and, when that is done, it is apparent that neither provision recognizes or implies that an action for reparation, such as is here sought, may be maintained in any court, Federal or state, in the absence of an appropriate finding and order of the Commission. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. supra, pp. 442, 446.

The next question to be considered is whether judicial notice should have been taken of the decision of the Commission in Glade Coal Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. wherein, as it is said, the rate here in question was found to be unjustly discriminatory and the railroad company was directed to desist from its enforcement. The decision was rendered April 28, 1904, and authoritatively published in 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 226, but was not mentioned in the pleadings or in the agreed statement of facts. In the supreme *court of appeals of [512 the state it was contended that the decision should have been judicially noticed by the trial court, but the contention was rejected, and that ruling is now challenged as contravening the provision in § 14 of the act, which reads: "The Commission may provide for the publication of its reports and decisions in such form and manner as may be best adapted for public information and use, and such authorized publications shall be competent evidence of the reports and decisions of the Commission contained therein, in all courts of the United States and of the several states, without any further proof or authentication thereof."

Undoubtedly, this provision makes the decisions of the Commission, as so published, admissible in evidence without other proof of their genuineness, but it does not require that they be judicially noticed, or relieve litigants from offering them in evidence as they would any other competent evidence intended to be relied upon. Its purpose is to relieve litigants from the inconvenience and expense of obtaining certified copies of the decisions by authorizing the use of the published copies, but it does not otherwise change the rules of evidence. The ruling, therefore, was not in contravention of the statute.

The result, however, would have been the same had the decision been properly before the court. An examination of it discloses that it did not contain any finding or direction as to what, if any, reparation should be made because of prior exactions of the rate which it condemned. It did find that the complaining party in that proceeding had been injured by the refusal of the railroad company to furnish cars on certain occasions for the shipment of coal, and did direct that reparation therefor be made, but that is without bearing here.

It follows that the judgment must be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

513]*UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

B. H. BARNES and F. D. Barnes.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 513-522.)

Internal revenue — oleomargarin act — expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

1. The express extension of the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3232-3241, and 3243, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2091, 2095, which deal with special taxes, to the special tax on oleomargarin, made by § 3 of the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), imposing such tax, and not purporting to be complete in itself, is not an implied exclusion of the general provisions of § 3177 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2069), for the entry by revenue officers of any building or place where any articles or objects subject to tax are made, produced, or kept, for the purpose of examining such articles or objects.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III. k, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — repeal by implication.

2. Subsequent legislation upon a general subject covered by a code or systematic collection of general rules dealing with such subject in a comprehensive way carries with it an implication that the general rules are not superseded, but are to be applied in its enforcement, save as the contrary clearly appears.

NOTE.—On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L.R.A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235. 56 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 565.]

Argued October 24, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for forcibly obstructing the entrance by revenue officers of a building where oleomargarin is kept. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where great inconvenience will result from a particular construction, that construction is to be avoided, unless the meaning of the legislature be plain.

United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 386, 2 L. ed. 313.

Upon principle, as well as because of the untoward consequence referred to, the oleomargarin act of 1886, being a revenue act (Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 536, 41 L. ed. 813, 816, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444), should be construed together with the general statutes relating to collection of and the prevention of frauds upon the revenue; especially as it contains no adequate provisions on that subject, and would be practically inoperative otherwise.

Saxonville Mills v. Russell, 116 U. S. 13, 21, 29 L. ed. 554, 556, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

The departmental construction is in accordance with the contention that general internal-revenue statutes apply in oleomargarin cases.

Treasury Decisions, Internal Revenue, No. 1266; 26 Ops. Atty. Gen. 282.

There are authorities holding general internal-revenue statutes apply in oleomargarin cases.

United States v. Fitzsimmons (1909; D. C. E. D. Mich.); Hastings v. Herold, 184 Fed. 759.

Mr. Henry M. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

Congress did not intend the machinery of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3173-3177, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2065-2069, to apply to the oleomargarin law, for if it had, it would have unmistakably indicated its intention.

Re Archer, 9 Ben. 428, Fed. Cas. No.

506; Wright v. Blakeslee, 101 U. S. 174, 25 L. ed. 1048; Re Kearns, 64 Fed. 481; Re Kinney, 102 Fed. 468; Schafer v. Craft, 144 Fed. 908, 82 C. C. A. 349, 153 Fed. 176, 83 C. C. A. 677, 154 Fed. 1002; Grier v. Tucker, 150 Fed. 658, 87 C. C. A. 513, 160 Fed. 611.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue cannot, by a construction which he places upon an act, extend a penal statute by implication. Penalties are never extended by implication.

United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Elliott v. East Pennsylvania R. Co. 99 U. S. 573, 25 L. ed. 292; Erskine v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 94 U. S. 619, 24 L. ed. 133; The Ben R. 67 C. C. A. 290, 134 Fed. 785; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764.

No mere omission or failure to provide for contingencies will justify judicial addition to a statute.

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Glover v. United States, 164 U. S. 295, 41 L. ed. 440, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 41 L. ed. 437, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

The construction of the tariff act by the Treasury Department was not conclusive upon either party, and the collector was not justified by such instructions in imposing duties not warranted by law.

Lennig v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 8,243; Balfour v. Sullivan, 17 Fed. 233.

The construction given to the internal revenue act by commissioners of internal revenue, even though published, is not a construction of so much dignity that the re-enactment of the statute, subsequent to the construction having been made and published, is to be regarded as a legislative adoption of that construction.

Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 22 L. ed. 80.

Nor is there any force in the argument that "in case of ambiguity in a statute, contemporaneous and uniform executive construction is regarded as decisive." There is no ambiguity in the oleomargarin law, and the Supreme Court of the United States made summary disposition of the ruling placed by the Treasury Department on the applicability of § 3176 to the succession tax law, which it held provided a specific penalty, necessarily exclusive.

Wright v. Blakeslee, 101 U. S. 174, 25 L. ed. 1048.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question presented for decision by this writ of error is whether Rev. Stat. § 3177, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2069, is applicable to the collection *or en-[517]forcement of the specific tax imposed on oleomargarin by the act of August 2, 1886, chap. 840, 24 Stat. at L. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228. In the district court a negative answer to the question was given, and an indictment drawn and returned upon the contrary view was held bad upon demurrer. To a right appreciation of the question it is essential that a brief outline be given of the internal revenue laws, of which § 3177 is a part, and of the later oleomargarin act.

Title 35 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2038) is a codification and consolidation, according to an orderly arrangement, of all the then-existing laws relating to internal revenue. It is subdivided into chapters, each embracing cognate sections bearing upon a particular branch of the general subject. The first two chapters, one dealing with the officers of internal revenue and the other with assessments and collections, are, with minor exceptions, general in their terms and application. The third chapter deals with "special taxes" exacted of those who engage in designated classes of business, such as rectifying or selling distilled spirits and manufacturing or selling cigars; other chapters deal separately with specific taxes imposed upon particular articles or objects, such as distilled spirits and cigars, and the final chapter comprises provisions common to several objects of taxation. Section 3177 is a part of the second chapter, dealing with assessments and collections, and reads:

"Any collector, deputy collector, or inspector may enter, in the daytime, any building or place where any articles or objects subject to tax are made, produced, or kept, within his district, so far as it may be necessary, for the purpose of examining said articles or objects. And any owner of such building or place, or person having the agency or superintendence of the same, who refuses to admit such officer, or to suffer him to examine such article or articles, shall, for every such refusal, forfeit five hundred dollars. And when such premises are open at night, such officers *may enter[518] them while so open, in the performance of their official duties. And if any person shall forcibly obstruct or hinder any collector, deputy collector, or inspector, in the execution of any power and authority vested in him by law, or shall forcibly rescue or cause to be rescued any property, articles, or objects after the same shall have been seized by him, or shall attempt or endeavor so to do, the person so offending, excepting in cases otherwise provided for, shall, for every such offense, forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred dollars, or double the value of the property so rescued, or be imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the court."

It will be perceived that the section is comprehensive in its terms and evidently designed to promote the enforcement of the revenue laws as to "any articles or objects subject to tax."

The act of August 2, 1886, is a revenue law of the same class as those embodied in title 35 of the Revised Statutes. It imposes a specific tax on oleomargarin and "special taxes" on those who engage in its manufacture or sale, and contains several administrative and penal provisions. But it does not purport to be independent of other legislation or complete in itself. On the contrary, it plainly contemplates the existence of an established system of revenue laws to which resort shall be had in carrying it into effect. Section 3, which imposes the special taxes, declares that §§ 3232 to 3241, and 3243, of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2091 to 2094, and 2095), "are, so far as applicable, made to extend to . . . the special taxes imposed by this section and to the persons upon whom they are imposed."

It is the express extension of those sections to the special taxes imposed by the oleomargarin act which gives rise to the question before stated. The position taken by the defendants in error, and sustained by the district court, is, that that extension of particular sections is an implied exclusion of all others. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

519] *We are unable to assent to that position. The maxim invoked expresses a rule of construction, not of substantive law, and serves only as an aid in discovering the legislative intent when that is not otherwise manifest. In such instances it is of deciding importance; in others, not. In the instance now before us too much is claimed for it. The sections named in § 3 of the oleomargarin act are a part of chapter 3 of title 35 of the Revised Statutes. They relate exclusively to special taxes, and are so restricted in their terms that it is at least doubtful that they could be applied to any special taxes not imposed by that chapter, unless expressly extended to them. To illustrate, § 3232, which precedes the others and is more or less a key to their meaning, declares: "No person shall be engaged in or carry on any trade or business hereinafter mentioned until he has paid a special tax therefor in the manner hereinafter provided." On the other hand, the sections in chapters 1 and 2 are, with minor exceptions, so general in their terms as to leave no doubt of their applicability to taxes imposed by subsequent legislation containing no provision to the contrary. In other words, the difference between the sections named and those in chapters 1 and 2 discloses an occasion for affirmatively extending the operation of the former, and no occasion for mentioning the latter. It also is apparent that the oleomargarin act will measurably fail of its purpose if the general provisions of chapters 1 and 2 are not applicable to the taxes which it imposes; for, as before indicated, it does not in itself provide a complete or effective scheme for their enforcement. Neither does it contain any provision for the redress of those from whom such taxes are erroneously or illegally exacted, although the settled policy of the government long has been to afford relief from all such exactions, as is shown by §§ 3220, 3226, 3227, and 3228 in chapter 2 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2086, 2088, 2089). These omissions are cogent evidence that it is intended that recourse shall be had to the "general provisions of[520 chapters 1 and 2, save as, in the oleomargarin act, it may be provided otherwise.

Much of our national legislation is embodied in codes, or systematic collections of general rules, each dealing in a comprehensive way with some general subject, such as the customs, internal revenue, public lands, Indians, and patents for inventions; and it is the settled rule of decision in this court that where there is subsequent legislation upon such a subject, it carries with it an implication that the general rules are not superseded, but are to be applied in its enforcement, save as the contrary clearly appears. Thus, in Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 363, 10 L. ed. 987, 995, where a question arose as to what effect should be given a general provision of an early customs law in view of a later enactment upon that subject, it was said: "And it may be added that, in the interpretation of all laws for the collection of revenue, whose provisions are often very complicated and numerous to guard against frauds by importers, it would be a strong ground to assert that the main provisions of any such laws sedulously introduced to meet the case of a palpable fraud should be deemed repealed, merely because in subsequent laws other powers and authorities are given to the customhouse officers, and other modes of proceeding are allowed to be had by them before the goods have passed from their custody, in order to ascertain whether there has been any fraud attempted upon the government. The more natural, if not the necessary, inference in all such cases is, that the legislature intend the new laws to be auxiliary to and in aid of the purposes of the old law, even when some of the cases provided for may equally be within the reach of each. There certainly, under such circumstances, ought to be a manifest and total repugnancy in the provisions to lead to the conclusion that the latter laws abrogated, and were designated to abrogate, the former." In Saxonville Mills v. Russell, 116 U. S. 13, 21, 29 L. ed. 554, 556, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237, it was said, in disposing of a 521]like *question: "It would be an unsound and unsafe rule of construction which would separate from the tariff revenue system, consisting of numerous and diverse enactments, each new act altering it, in any of its details, or prescribing new duties in lieu of existing ones on particular articles. The whole system must be regarded in each alteration, and no disturbance allowed of existing legislative rules of general application beyond the clear intention of Congress." And in Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 167, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, where the question was whether general statutes defining the powers of the officers of the Land Department were applicable to a grant of public lands by a subsequent act of Congress, it was said: "While there may be no specific reference in the act of 1848 [9 Stat. at L. 323, chap. 177] of questions arising under this grant to the Land Department, yet its administration comes within the scope of the general powers vested in that Department. . . . It may be laid down as a general rule that, in the absence of some specific provision to the contrary in respect to any particular grant of public land, its administration falls wholly and absolutely within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. It is not necessary that with each grant there shall go a direction that its administration shall be under the authority of the Land Department. It falls there unless there is express direction to the contrary."

We conclude that, while the express extension of particular sections in chapter 3, dealing with special taxes, to the like taxes imposed by § 3 of the oleomargarin act, may operate as an implied exclusion of the other sections in that chapter, it does not in any wise restrict or affect the operation of any of the general sections in chapters 1 and 2. And as § 3177 is a part of chapter 2, is general in its terms, and does not appear to be repugnant to any provision in the oleomargarin act, we think the question 522]*first above stated must be answered in the affirmative.

The cases of Craft v. Schafer, 83 C. C. A. 677, 154 Fed. 1002; Tucker v. Grier, 87

C. C. A. 513, 160 Fed. 611, and Hastings v. Herold, 184 Fed. 759, although not involving § 3177, disclose some contrariety of opinion in the lower Federal courts upon the matter principally discussed herein, and we deem it appropriate to observe that our conclusion has been reached only after a careful consideration of those cases.

Reversed.

M. E. SOLIAH, W. H. M. Lyche, and J. O. Staupé, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

SVEN HESKIN, K. T. Petersen, and Hans Kringlen, Constituting the Board of County Drain Commissioners in and for Traill County, North Dakota.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 522-524.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — local officers.

1. The power of a state to determine what duties may be performed by local officers, and whether they shall be appointed or elected by the people, was not taken away by the due-process-of-law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — public improvements.

2. A state statute authorizing an appointed drainage board to determine whether a proposed drain will be a public benefit, and to create a drainage district consisting of land which it decides will be benefited by such drain, and to make special assessments accordingly, is not invalidated by the due-process-of-law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, if notice is given, and an opportunity to be heard is afforded the landowner before the assessment becomes a lien against his property. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 559-581, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — taxation.

3. The power of a state to compel a township, as one of its political subdivisions, to levy and collect taxes for the purpose of paying the amount assessed against such township for the public benefits accruing from the construction of a drain, was not taken away by the due-process-of-law clause

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On due process of law in revenue proceedings—see note to Read v. Dingess, 8 C. C. A. 398.

of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 523-553, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 76.]

Argued December 5, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of Traill County, in the State of North Dakota, to review a decree affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the complaint in a suit to enjoin a drainage board from making and collecting special assessments for benefits conferred by a drain. Affirmed.

See same case below in supreme court, 17 N. D. 393, 117 N. W. 125.

Mr. Edward Engerud argued the cause, and, with Mr. P. G. Swenson, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The establishment of a local improvement, such as a drain, and the laying of the tax or assessment therefor, are acts pertaining and belonging to the legislative department of the government.

Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

The exercise of this legislative power, however, obviously involves in its exercise acts of an administrative and quasi judicial nature. These administrative and quasi judicial acts involved in the exercise of this legislative power include the adoption of the plan for the work, the letting of contracts for construction, and the equalization or apportionment of the burden of the cost amongst the lands or persons affected according to the relative benefits received, etc. All these administrative or quasi judicial powers which are necessary incidents to the exercise of the legislative power may be delegated to such officers or tribunals as the legislature may deem fit.

Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

The only limitation upon such delegation of power with respect to acts of this character is that the officer or board or tribunal to whom such power is delegated must afford a hearing upon adequate notice to those affected.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 711, 28 L. ed. 573, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521.

But as to those features of the legislative power to authorize or require a local improvement payable by tax or special assessment, which are not administrative or judicial in character, and which require the exercise of what may be termed purely legislative judgment, different considerations apply. The duty and the right to exercise such purely legislative judgment is, in our form of government, exclusively intrusted to the legislative department, and the legislature cannot rightfully surrender it to others, or refuse to exercise that power itself. It cannot be delegated to any other officer, board, or tribunal. The only exception to the principle mentioned is that the full legislative power in this respect may be delegated to local representative bodies with respect to matters of local concern. This exception is one that is necessarily implied as necessary to local self-government which is essential to our form of government.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 95-101; Bradshaw v. Lankford, 73 Md. 428, 11 L.R.A. 582, 25 Am. St. Rep. 602, 21 Atl. 66; State v. Armstrong, 3 Sneed, 654; Bernards Twp. v. Allen, 61 N. J. L. 228, 39 Atl. 716.

Nowhere has this principle been more fully recognized and firmly adhered to than in North Dakota.

State ex rel. Rusk v. Budge, 14 N. D. 532, 105 N. W. 724; Valletly v. Park Comrs. 16 N. D. 25, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 61, 111 N. W. 615; Morton v. Holes, 17 N. D. 154, 115 N. W. 256.

In a republican form of government there can be no taxation without representation.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 85-101; Bradshaw v. Lankford, 73 Md. 428, 11 L.R.A. 582, 25 Am. St. Rep. 602, 21 Atl. 66; State v. Armstrong, 3 Sneed, 654; People ex rel. Le Roy v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 103; People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Lothrop, 24 Mich. 235; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; People ex rel. Atty. Gen.

v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 108; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 344; Schultes v. Eberly, 82 Ala. 242, 2 So. 345; State, Gaines, Prosecutor, v. Hudson County, 37 N. J. L. 12; People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624; Houghton v. Austin, 47 Cal. 646; Harward v. St. Claire & M. Levee & Drainage Co. 51 Ill. 130; People ex rel. McCogg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406; Wyandotte County v. Abbott, 52 Kan. 148, 34 Pac. 416; Parks v. Wyandotte County, 61 Fed. 436; State ex rel. Howe v. Des Moines, 103 Iowa, 76, 39 L.R.A. 285, 64 Am. St. Rep. 157, 72 N. W. 639; Barnes v. Dyer, 56 Vt. 469; Bernards Twp. v. Allen, 61 N. J. L. 228, 39 Atl. 716.

The legislature cannot levy a special assessment unless the probable benefit equals or exceeds the probable cost.

Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 311, 42 L. ed. 1047, 1049, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Schaefer v. Werling, 188 U. S. 516, 47 L. ed. 570, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Walsh v. Barron, 61 Ohio St. 15, 76 Am. St. Rep. 354, 55 N. E. 164; State, Agens, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 18 Am. Rep. 729, 37 N. J. L. 415.

The act deprives those affected by the proceedings of the drain commissioners of the only protection which the law of the land affords against the oppressive exercise of such power.

Schultes v. Eberly, 82 Ala. 242, 2 So. 348; Vallely v. Park Comrs. 16 N. D. 25, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 61, 111 N. W. 615; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428, 4 L. ed. 579, 606; Lovington v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302.

The principle that purely legislative power cannot be delegated is just as true of the police power or any other form of legislative power as it is of the power of taxation.

State ex rel. Rusk v. Budge, 14 N. D. 532, 105 N. W. 724; Bradshaw v. Lankford, 73 Md. 428, 11 L.R.A. 582, 25 Am. St. Rep. 602, 21 Atl. 66; Owensboro & N. R. Co. v. Todd, 91 Ky. 175, 11 L.R.A. 285, 15 S. W. 56; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; Schaezlein v. Cabaniss, 135 Cal. 466, 56 L.R.A. 733, 87 Am. St. Rep. 122, 67 Pac. 755; Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483, 59 Am. Dec. 506; State ex rel. Luley v. Simons, 32 Minn. 540, 21 N. W. 750.

Special assessments for local improvements are an exercise of the taxing power.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 1181; Hamilton, Special Assessments, p. 38, § 49; Desty, Taxn. p. 1117, 1265, 1266; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 752; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 213-216; Burroughs, Taxn. pp. 458-463; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 458-468.

The provision of this act for notice and hearing is not sufficient to make the proceedings comply with the requirements of "due process."

Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 173, 41 L. ed. 393, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521.

A perusal of the cases sustaining statutes providing for taxation or assessment for local improvements will disclose that they all reserve to some competent representative body the decision of the question as to whether a local improvement shall or shall not be constructed; so that only powers of an administrative or judicial nature are delegated to the officer or board created to execute the work.

Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Holt v. Somerville, 127 Mass. 408; Maddux v. Newport, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 657, 14 S. W. 957; Davis v. Lynchburg, 84 Va. 861, 6 S. E. 230; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; People ex rel. Scott v. Pitt, 169 N. Y. 521, 58 L.R.A. 372, 62 N. E. 662; Voigt v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376, 85 N. W. 292; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 711, 28 L. ed. 573, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Re Banta, 60 N. Y. 165; Dennison v. Kansas, 95 Mo. 416, 8 S. W. 429; Covington v. Nelson, 35 Ind. 532; Corry v. Gaynor, 22 Ohio St. 584; Rogers v. St. Paul, 22 Minn. 494; State ex rel. Utick v. Polk County, 87 Minn. 325, 60 L.R.A. 161, 92 N. W. 216;

Hyde Park v. Spencer, 118 Ill. 446, 8 N. E. 846; Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504.

The decisions of the United States Supreme Court establish: (1) That the apportionment of a tax or assessment for a local improvement may be committed for final decision to any board, tribunal, or officer which the legislature may see fit to designate for such purpose; (2) that if the apportionment or any other administrative or quasi judicial function is committed to an administrative board or officer, its decision cannot be made final unless there is a hearing provided for upon adequate notice, which hearing may be either before the administrative officer or board itself, or before some other tribunal; (3) the question as to the necessity or propriety of any given work, to be paid for either by general taxation or special assessment, is a purely legislative question; (4) a purely legislative question of that character may be finally decided without notice or hearing.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Wurtz v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 37, 37 L. ed. 640, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 167, 41 L. ed. 391, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 308, 42 L. ed. 1048, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 50, 42 L. ed. 945, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 553, 42 L. ed. 275, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Voigt v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Goodrich v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 432, 46 L. ed. 627, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Schaefer v. Werling, 188 U. S. 516, 47 L. ed. 570, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

None of these cases hold that purely legislative power, as distinguished from administrative and quasi judicial power, may be committed to a nonrepresentative administrative officer or board.

None of these cases are authority for the broad statements made by the court below, to the effect that the power to make local improvements and levy assessments therefor may be delegated by the legislature to any agency it sees fit to select, provided only a hearing upon notice is provided for as to the apportionment of the assessment.

The following are cases where the principle we invoke was violated in acts delegating the taxing power, and the statute in each instance held void as an infraction of the law of the land:

Vallelly v. Park Comrs. 16 N. D. 25, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 61, 111 N. W. 615; Schultes v. Eberly, 82 Ala. 242, 2 So. 345; Marr v. Enloe, 1 Yerg. 452; Hope v. Deaderick, 8 Humph. 1, 47 Am. Dec. 597; Waterhouse v. Cleveland Public Schools, 8 Heisk. 857; Lipscomb v. Dean, 1 Lea, 546; People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Lothrop, 24 Mich. 235; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; People v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 108; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 343; State, Gaines, Prosecutor, v. Hudson County, 37 N. J. L. 12; Bernards Twp. v. Allen, 61 N. J. L. 228, 39 Atl. 716; People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624; Houghton v. Austin, 47 Cal. 646; People ex rel. McCogg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; Harward v. St. Clair & M. Levee & Drainage Co. 51 Ill. 130; Hessler v. Drainage Comrs. 53 Ill. 105; Lovington v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302; Foss v. Chicago, 56 Ill. 354; Leveeing Wabash River v. Huston, 71 Ill. 318; Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406; State ex rel. Howe v. Des Moines, 103 Iowa, 76, 39 L.R.A. 285, 64 Am. St. Rep. 157, 72 N. W. 639; Wyandotte County v. Abbott, 52 Kan. 148, 34 Pac. 416; Parks v. Wyandotte County, 61 Fed. 436.

The court declined to hear Mr. J. S. Watson for defendants in error:

Although referable to the taxing power, local assessments are not, strictly speaking, taxes.

Independence v. Gates, 110 Mo. 374, 19 S. W. 728; Martin v. Tyler, 4 N. D. 303, 25 L.R.A. 838, 60 N. W. 392.

The legislature may confer upon local boards or officers, whether elective or appointive, the functions of assessing and apportioning the benefits for local improvements.

Martin v. Tyler, 4 N. D. 303, 25 L.R.A. 838, 60 N. W. 392; Bryant v. Robbins, 70 Wis. 258, 35 N. W. 545; Sheboygan County v. Parker, 3 Wall. 93, 18 L. ed. 33; Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494, 92 N. W. 841; Turnquist v. Cass County Drain Comrs. 11 N. D. 514, 92 N. W. 852; State ex rel. Dorgan v. Fisk, 15 N. D. 219, 107 N. W. 191; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 42 L. ed. 270, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; People ex rel. Hardy v. Drainage Comrs. 143 Ill. 417, 32 N. E. 688; 2 Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. pp. 1237, 1241; Foster v. Rowe, 128 Wis. 326, 107 N. W. 635, 8 Ann. Cas. 595; Hamilton, Special Assessments, § 553; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1219, 1220; O'Brien v. Baltimore County, 51 Md. 15; Crawford v. People, 82 Ill. 557; People ex rel. Cook v. Nearing, 27 N. Y. 306; Egyptian Levee Co. v. Hardin, 27 Mo. 495, 72 Am. Dec. 276; Territory ex rel. Smith v. Scott, 3 Dak. 357, 20 N. W. 401; Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 60 L.R.A. 190, 94 Am. St. Rep. 727, 70 S. W. 721; Turner v. Detroit, 104 Mich. 326, 62 N. W. 405; State ex rel. Jonason v. Crosby, 92 Minn. 176, 99 N. W. 636; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Arnold v. Knoxville, 115 Tenn. 195, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 837, 90 S. W. 469, 5 Ann. Cas. 881.

Where, by the construction of a drain, an entire city, town, or township receives special benefit therefrom, we see no valid reason why such corporation cannot be required, as such, to contribute its share toward the cost of such local improvement.

Bryant v. Robbins, 70 Wis. 258, 35 N. W. 545; Muskego v. Drainage Comrs, 78 Wis. 40, 47 N. W. 11; Re Kingman, 153 Mass. 566, 12 L.R.A. 417, 27 N. E. 778.

The act in question does not take property without due process of law.

Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494, 92 N. W. 841; State ex rel. Dorgan v. Fisk, 15 N. D. 219, 107 N. W. 191; Turnquist v. Cass County Drain Comrs. 11 N. D. 514, 92 N. W. 852; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 24, 25, 49 L. ed. 643, 649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 22, 28 L. ed. 889, 894, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 460, 49 L. ed. 831, 834, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 584, 587, 592, 50 L. ed. 596, 605, 607, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 355, 356, 31 L. ed. 763, 767, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 582, 32 L. ed. 544, 546, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 328, 35 L. ed. 419, 425, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 198, 199, 37 L. ed. 132, 134, 135, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 157, 158, 41 L. ed. 369, 388, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56.

Counsel for plaintiffs in error have failed to recognize the distinction between general taxes and special assessments.

Rolph v. Fargo, 7 N. D. 640, 42 L.R.A. 646, 76 N. W. 242; Webster v. Fargo, 9 N. D. 208, 56 L.R.A. 156, 82 N. W. 732, affirmed in 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Arnold v. Knoxville, 115 Tenn. 195, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 837, 90 S. W. 469, 5 Ann. Cas. 881; Kilgour v. Drainage Comrs. 111 Ill. 342, 350; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 107, 24 L. ed. 616, 621; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 589, 591, 593, 42 L. ed. 270, 288, 289, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; People ex rel. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Buffalo, 147 N. Y. 675, 42 N. E. 344.

Whether the estimate of damages and the assessment of benefits shall be intrusted to the same or to different commissioners is a matter wholly within the decision of the legislature, as justice and convenience may appear to it to require. And there are many precedents for intrusting the performance of both duties to the same persons.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 32, 28 L. ed. 923, 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; New Iberia v. New Iberia & B. C. Drainage Dist. 106 La. 651, 31 So. 308; People ex rel. Sels v. Reclamation Dist. No. 551, 117 Cal. 114, 48 Pac. 1018.

The legislature must designate the rule of taxation, but the method of executing the law in accordance with the rule is administration, and not legislation.

State, King, Prosecutor, v. Reed, 43 N. J. L. 186; Cooley, Taxn. 50.

This court has recognized and sustained the right to impose special assessments against municipalities, as well as the determination of the amounts, through appointive agents.

Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 42 L. ed. 270, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238.

The legislature may delegate power to determine facts upon which the law makes or intends to make its operation depend.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. v. Clinton County, 1 Ohio St. 77; Slack v. Maysville & L. R. Co. 13 B. Mon. 1; San Antonio v. Jones, 28 Tex. 19; Johnson v. Martin, 75 Tex. 33, 12 S. W. 321; State ex rel. Dome v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458; Picton v. Cass County, 13 N. D. 242, 100 N. W. 711, 3 Ann. Cas. 345; State ex rel. Baltzell v.

Stewart, 74 Wis. 620, 6 L.R.A. 394, 43 N. W. 947; Huston v. Clark, 112 Ill. 344; Owners of Lands v. People, 113 Ill. 307; Hyde Park v. Spencer, 118 Ill. 446, 8 N. E. 846; National Docks R. Co. v. Central R. Co. 32 N. J. Eq. 763; Bryant v. Robbins, 70 Wis. 258, 35 N. W. 545; State ex rel. Utick v. Polk County, 87 Minn. 325, 60 L.R.A. 161, 92 N. W. 216.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. Mr. Justice Lamar:

Under the North Dakota statute the county commissions are authorized to appoint a drainage board in each county. On the petition of six persons, owning land to be affected, or of a sufficient number to show a public demand where the drain is intended to benefit a township, the board makes a preliminary examination. If it finds that the drain is for the public good and will cost less than the benefits, "notice containing a copy of the petition is published and an opportunity to be heard upon the matters pertaining thereto afforded the owners of all lands to be affected." "If it shall appear that there was sufficient cause for making the petition, and that the proposed drain will not cost more than the amount of the benefits," the board shall establish the drain. Their assessment of benefits is subject to review, but, when confirmed, is final, and is then extended on the tax list and collected as other taxes,—the amount assessed to any township is required to be included in its first general tax levy thereafter.

The plaintiffs in error, owning land in Mayville and Morgan townships, North Dakota, brought proceedings to enjoin a drainage board appointed by county commissioners from making and collecting special assessments against plaintiffs in error and the townships, for their proportion of the cost of a drain ordered to be constructed.

The supreme court of the state held that, while taxes could only be levied by elected 524] officers, special assessments *for benefits conferred by such drains might be imposed by appointed officers, and that the statute afforded due process of law. So far as the Federal questions are concerned, the judgment must be affirmed. For—

1. The 14th Amendment does not deprive a state of the power to determine what duties may be performed by local officers, nor whether they shall be appointed, or elected by the people. Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 72, (2) 83, 47 L. ed. 79, 85, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 253; Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 706, 26 L. ed. 242; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 56 L. ed.

U. S. 112, 167, 41 L. ed. 369, 391, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56.

2. Neither does that amendment invalidate an act authorizing an appointed board to determine whether a proposed drain will be of public benefit, and to create a drainage district consisting of land which it decides will be benefited by such drain, and to make special assessments accordingly, if, as here, notice is given and an opportunity to be heard afforded the landowner before the assessment becomes a lien against his property. Ibid.

3. Nor does that amendment deprive a state of the power to compel a township, as one of its political subdivisions, to levy and collect taxes for the purpose of paying the amount assessed against such township for the public benefits accruing for the construction of the drain. Ibid.; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 589-593, 42 L. ed. 270, 288, 289, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966. Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 703, 704, 26 L. ed. 241, 242.

Affirmed.

*FRED C. KEENEY, Individually and[525 as Administrator of the Estate of Susan A. Keeney, Deceased, Seth A. Keeney and Angie Keeney Schwegel, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

COMPTROLLER OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 525-537.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — inheritance tax — transfers inter vivos.

1. Property is not taken without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by the imposition of the tax authorized by N. Y. Laws 1896, chap. 908, when property is transferred by deed intended to take effect upon the death of the grantor.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 554-556, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — inheritance tax — transfers inter vivos.

2. The tax measured by the value of the property, authorized by N. Y. Laws 1896, chap. 908, when property is transferred by deed intended to take effect upon the death of the grantor, is one in the nature of an excise tax on the transfer, and is not void as denying the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., because lacking in the elements of uniformity and equality required in the assessment of property taxes.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 328-335, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L.R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A.

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — taxing transfers inter vivos.

3. Subjecting to the tax authorized by N. Y. Laws 1896, chap. 908, a transfer of property by deed intended to take effect at the death of the grantor, without taxing transfers intended to take effect upon the death of some person other than the grantor, or upon the happening of a certain or contingent event, does not involve such a discrimination as to deny the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 328-335, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may question validity.

4. Children of a decedent, who, because of their relationship, are assessed at the lowest rate fixed by N. Y. Laws 1896, chap. 908, imposing a tax when property is transferred by deed intended to take effect at the death of the grantor, cannot urge that such statute operates to deny the equal protection of the laws because transfers to collaterals and strangers in blood are taxed a higher rate.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 53-60, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxation — inheritance tax — transfers inter vivos — situs.

5. The transfer tax authorized by N. Y. Laws 1896, chap. 908, when personal property is transferred by a resident of the state by deed intended to take effect at her death, may validly be imposed, although, at the time of the grantor's death, when the payment of the tax is required, the property is in another state, in the hands of a trustee holding the title and possession by virtue of such deed.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 733-736, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 81.]

Argued December 6, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Surrogate's Court of the County of Kings, in the state of New York, to review a judgment imposing a transfer tax, entered in pursuance of the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which affirmed an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, which had, in turn, affirmed a decree of the Surrogate's Court. Affirmed.

See same case below in Court of Appeals, 194 N. Y. 281, 87 N. E. 428.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

On June 13, 1903, Susan A. Keeney, a resident of New York, being in good health, executed in Kings county a deed, whereby she conveyed a cattle ranch in Texas and certain stocks and bonds to the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, New Jersey, in trust, to hold the same during her lifetime, and to divide the net income equally between herself and her three children, two of whom reside out of the state of New York. The deed further provided that after her death the trustees should pay the entire income, or transfer the property, to her children, or their issue, on terms and limitations not material to this investigation. In the deed she "reserved the right to revoke or alter the whole or any part of the trust conveyance, at any time after six months' notice in writing." She died March 29, 1907, being at the time a resident of Kings county, leaving an estate of the value of $25,000 and the three children as sole heirs at law.

In tax proceedings the proper officers found that the stocks and bonds were of the then value of $773,600, one fourth ($193,400) being for the use of Mrs. Keeney for life, and the remainder to her children, being intended to take effect at her death. It was held that their interest was subject to the tax imposed by the [527] New York statute of 1896, which provides:

"A tax shall be and is hereby imposed upon the transfer of any property, real or personal . . . or of any interest therein or income therefrom, in trust or otherwise. . . . 3. When the transfer is of property made by a resident, or by a nonresident, when such nonresident's property is within this state, by deed, grant, bargain, sale, or gift made in contemplation of the death of the grantor, vendor, or donor, or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after such death." [Laws of 1896, chap. 908, § 220.]

Mrs. Keeney's administrator and chil-

171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Romaine, 12 L.R.A. 401; and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

As to the constitutionality of such taxes—see note to Rodman v. Com. 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 592.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 300

24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 954.

dren appealed on the ground that the taxable transfer act of New York, in so far as it imposes a tax upon property transferred inter vivos, violated the 14th Amendment, in that it took the property without due process of law, and the different rates of taxation and classification were of such discriminatory a character as to deny the equal protection of the law.

The judgment was affirmed. The case is here on writ of error from the final order of the surrogate court, entered in pursuance of the mandate of the court of appeals. 194 N. Y. 281, 87 N. E. 428.

Mr. George F. Canfield argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl T. Frederick, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Assuming for the purpose of argument, that the court of appeals was right in saying that the state was taxing a transfer of property (an assumption contrary to fact, as hereinafter contended), the transfer in this case was strictly a conveyance inter vivos, and was in no sense testamentary. The tax must therefore be sharply distinguished from an inheritance tax.

Ridden v. Thrall, 125 N. Y. 572, 11 L.R.A. 684, 21 Am. St. Rep. 758, 26 N. E. 627; Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 27 L. ed. 500, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Re Brandreth, 169 N. Y. 437, 58 L.R.A. 148, 62 N. E. 563; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 47 L. ed. 400, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789.

The tax in this case upon all remainders limited to take effect in possession after the death of the grantor is not imposed under the taxing power proper of the state, and cannot be upheld as an exercise thereof, because it is based upon a classification which has no reasonable relation to taxation.

Fraser v. McConway & T. Co. 82 Fed. 257; People ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 184 N. Y. 431, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 314, 112 Am. St. Rep. 628, 77 N. E. 970, 6 Ann. Cas. 515, 204 U. S. 152, 51 L. ed. 415, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; People ex rel. Farrington v. Mensching, 187 N. Y. 8, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 625, 79 N. E. 884, 10 Ann. Cas. 101; Re Brandreth, 169 N. Y. 437, 58 L.R.A. 148, 62 N. E. 563.

The tax cannot be upheld under the general regulative or police power of the state, because it is not imposed for the purpose of regulating or promoting any of those interests of society which may be regulated or promoted under the police power.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. 56 L. ed.

ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Re Graves, 52 Misc. 433, 103 N. Y. Supp. 571; Re Edgerton, 35 App. Div. 125, 54 N. Y. Supp. 700, affirmed in 158 N. Y. 671, 52 N. E. 1124.

The assumption so far made, that the tax herein complained of is a tax upon the transfer of property, is contrary to fact. No such tax was imposed in this case, and the section of law under which the tax was imposed does not in effect provide for a tax upon "a transfer" of property, but only upon "a coming into possession" of property previously transferred.

Re Gould, 156 N. Y. 423, 51 N. E. 287; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Re Seaman, 147 N. Y. 69, 41 N. E. 401; People ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 184 N. Y. 431, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 314, 112 Am. St. Rep. 628, 77 N. E. 970, 6 Ann. Cas. 515; People ex rel. Farrington v. Mensching, 187 N. Y. 8, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 625, 79 N. E. 884, 10 Ann. Cas. 101; Re Brandreth, 169 N. Y. 437, 58 L.R.A. 148, 62 N. E. 563.

A tax upon the coming into possession of property is unconstitutional because it deprives appellants of their property without due process of law, and denies to them the equal protection of the laws.

Re Pell, 71 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789.

The tax upon the coming into possession of the property in this case is also bad, because the property was situated, and the coming into possession took place, in the state of New Jersey; and of the three persons beneficially interested in the property, two were nonresidents of the state of New York, one, Seth A. Keeney, being a resident of California, and the other, Angie Schwegel, being a resident of Austria. The state, therefore, had no jurisdiction over such property.

Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Re Pell, supra.

Mr. William Law Stout argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The enactment of rules, regulations, and principles governing the transmission of property by will, intestacy, or other conveyances testamentary in character and effect, is within the exclusive province of the state. The Supreme Court of the United States will look to the statutes of the state for the rules governing the descent and testamentary transfer, alienation, and succession of property. This court will not only adopt, but is bound by, the decisions of the highest courts of the states as to the effect and interpretation of wills and instruments of title.

Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 283, 290, 46 L. ed. 196, 200, 202, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; De Vaughan v. Hutchinson, 165 U. S. 566-570, 41 L. ed. 827-829, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186-190, 44 L. ed. 1028-1031, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 181 U. S. 580-583, 45 L. ed. 1011, 1012, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114-132, 46 L. ed. 830-841, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, — L.R.A.(N.S.)—, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599-603, 17 L. ed. 261, 262; Randall v. Brigham, 7 Wall. 523-541, 19 L. ed. 285-293; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 163, 167, 36 L. ed. 925, 927, 928, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Moffitt v. Kelly, 218 U. S. 400-405, 54 L. ed. 1086-1088, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1179, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79.

This court will also be bound by the decision of the highest court of the state that there is nothing in the statute or its enforcement in conflict with the Constitution of the state, and that the proceedings taken therein for its ascertainment did not deprive the plaintiffs in error of their property without due process of law, within the meaning of the state Constitution.

New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1-47, 50 L. ed. 65-79, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 Ann. Cas. 381; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278-283, 46 L. ed. 196-200, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456, 15 L. ed. 127; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171, 38 Fed. 184; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 181 U. S. 580-583, 45 L. ed. 1011, 1012, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

The interpretation and construction placed by the highest court of the state upon its statutes is conclusive upon this court.

Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 48 L. ed. 195, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173-175, 54 L. ed. 987-989, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140-151, 55 L. ed. 137-154, 31 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 171; Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 43-56, 52 L. ed. 95-101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114-122, 46 L. ed. 830-834, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Moffitt v. Kelly, 218 U. S. 400-405, 54 L. ed. 1086-1088, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1179, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 477, 51 L. ed. 888, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Cahen v. Brewster, 203 U. S. 551, 51 L. ed. 313, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 8 Ann. Cas. 215.

In a long line of decisions of the courts of New York it will be seen that the intention of the grantor, vendor, or donor must be found. This is the test of the alleged gift. The enjoyment for life of the former owner is a determining feature; necessarily the character of the gift is determined by the acts of the owner; the withholding of this possession and enjoyment of the corpus or any determinate part thereof determines how much thereof is applicable to the statute.

Re Brandreth, 169 N. Y. 437, 58 L.R.A. 148, 62 N. E. 563; Re Green, 153 N. Y. 223, 47 N. E. 292; Re Cruger, 54 App. Div. 405, 66 N. Y. Supp. 636; Re Cornell, 170 N. Y. 423, 63 N. E. 445; Re Patterson, 130 N. Y. Supp. 970; Re Skinner, 106 App. Div. 217, 94 N. Y. Supp. 144; Re Palmer, 117 App. Div. 360, 102 N. Y. Supp. 236; Re Bullard, 76 App. Div. 207, 78 N. Y. Supp. 491; Re Bostwick, 160 N. Y. 489, 55 N. E. 208; Re Keeney, 194 N. Y. 281, 87 N. E. 428.

As to findings of fact and conclusions of law, the determination of the state court raises no question of error under the Constitution of the United States.

Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114, 46 L. ed. 830, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

The 14th Amendment does not affect or control the states in the exercise of their sovereign authority to regulate inheritances and to determine the persons or objects upon which an inheritance tax shall be imposed.

Campbell v. California, 200 U. S. 94, 50 L. ed. 387, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

The tax upon the right to testamentary successions is not in contravention or in violation of any provision of the Constitution of the United States.

Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456, 15 L. ed. 127; Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Nagoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189-201, 47 L. ed. 439-443, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep.

277; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97-104, 47 L. ed. 400-403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 L. ed. 882, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Moffitt v. Kelly, 218 U. S. 400-405, 54 L. ed. 1086-1088, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1179, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79.

The right to take property by devise or descent is a creature of the law, and not a natural gift; since it is a privilege granted and conferred by the state, the state may confer particular rights of succession, but with them impose conditions, limitations, classifications, and impositions upon the right of each particular succession granted.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283-288, 42 L. ed. 1037-1041, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625-628, 41 L. ed. 287, 288, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 L. ed. 882, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171, 38 Fed. 184; Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 331, 38 N. E. 311; Re Cullum, 145 N. Y. 593, 40 N. E. 163.

The court of appeals of the state of New York has construed the statute imposing this tax as a tax upon the right to particular successions, and not upon the property.

Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L.R.A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Re Merriam, 141 N. Y. 480, 36 N. E. 505; Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 329, 38 N. E. 311; Re Cullum, 145 N. Y. 593, 40 N. E. 163; Re Sherman, 153 N. Y. 1, 46 N. E. 1032; Re Dows, 167 N. Y. 232, 52 L.R.A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 509, 60 N. E. 439; Re Vanderbilt, 172 N. Y. 72, 64 N. E. 782.

This interpretation of the tax as a tax upon the right of testamentary successions has been uniformly recognized by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171, 38 Fed. 184; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 628, 630, 41 L. ed. 287-289, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 55, 57, 59, 44 L. ed. 969, 975-977, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 203, 47 L. ed. 439, 444, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 119, 121, 122, 44 L. ed. 998, 1002, 1003, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 L. ed. 882, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97-104, 47 L. ed. 400-403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 L. ed. 192.

And this court will take it to have been found that the possession or enjoyment of the property passed to the plaintiffs in error at the death of Susan A. Keeney, and that the statute was applicable to the right of succession of the plaintiffs in error to the remainders therein, which vested in possession and enjoyment at her death.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189-203, 47 L. ed. 439-444, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Board of Education v. Illinois, 203 U. S. 553-563, 51 L. ed. 314-319, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171, 8 Ann. Cas. 157; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283-296, 42 L. ed. 1037-1044, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 55, 83, 44 L. ed. 969, 975, 986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Cohen v. Brewster, 203 U. S. 552, 51 L. ed. 314, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 8 Ann. Cas. 215; Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 195, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97-104, 47 L. ed. 400-403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The classification of remainders which take effect in possession and enjoyment at or after the death of the grantor, donor, or vendor, wherein the beneficial enjoyment of the property is reserved to the grantor, donor, or vendor, is not unreasonable, unjust, or arbitrary.

Moffitt v. Kelly, 218 U. S. 400, 403, 54 L. ed. 1086, 1087, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1179, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Cahen v. Brewster, 203 U. S. 543-549, 51 L. ed. 310-313, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 8 Ann. Cas. 215; Board of Education v. Illinois, 203 U. S. 553-563, 51 L. ed. 314-319, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171, 8 Ann. Cas. 157; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 37, 54 L. ed. 921, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173-178, 54 L. ed. 987-990, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 195, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 296, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 287, 46 L. ed. 196, 201, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 55, 83, 44 L. ed. 969, 975, 986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 104, 47 L. ed. 400, 403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Provident Inst. for Sav. v. Malone, 221 U. S. 661-666, 55 L. ed. 900-903, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1129, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661.

The statute imposing a tax upon the transfer of this class of remainders, limited to vest in possession and enjoyment at the death of the donor, the former owner of the property, and which cannot vest at any other time or upon any other contingency, does not deprive the plaintiffs in error of any of their rights or any of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, nor does it violate the 14th Amendment or any provision of the Constitution of the United States.

Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456, 15 L. ed. 127; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97-104, 47 L. ed. 400-403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 L. ed. 882, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

So much of the New York statute as imposes an inheritance tax was sustained in Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829, and in several decisions of the court of appeals of that state. But the plaintiffs insist that there is a radical difference between an inheritance tax and one on transfers inter vivos. The first, they say, is an excise imposed on a privilege; while that complained of here is really on property, though called a tax on a transfer. They argue that inheritance taxes have been sustained on the ground (United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073) that no one has the natural right to acquire property by will or descent, and if the state permits such acquisition, it may require the payment of a tax as a condition precedent to the right of using that privilege. On the other hand, they contend that the right to convey or come into possession does not depend upon a statutory or taxable privilege, but is a right incident to the ownership of property, and that the tax imposed by this statute on that right is in effect a tax on the property itself, and void because lacking in the elements of uniformity and equality required in the assessment of property taxes.

But, if any such distinction could be made between taxing a right and taxing a privilege, it would not avail plaintiffs in the present case. There is no natural right to create artificial and technical estates with limitations over, nor has the remainderman any more right to succeed to the possession of property under such deeds than legatees and devisees under a will. The privilege of acquiring property by such an instrument is as much dependent upon the law as that of acquiring property by inheritance, and transfers by deed to take effect at death have frequently been classed with death duties, legacy and inheritance taxes. Some statutes go further than that of New York, and tax gratuitous acquisitions under marriage settlements, trust conveyances, or other instruments where the transfer of property takes effect upon the death, not merely of the grantor, but of any person whomsoever.

This was true under the internal revenue act of 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 223, chap. 173]. It imposed a succession tax on "all dispositions of real estate, taking effect upon the death of any person." It was not apportioned, and would have been void if a tax on property. But it was held that "it was not a tax on land," since "the succession or devolution of the real estate is the subject-matter of the tax . . . whether . . . effected by will, deed, or law of descent." Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 347, 23 L. ed. 101, cited and followed, Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 78-81, 44 L. ed. 984-986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

Wherever the amount of a tax is, as here, to be measured by the value of property, it has been earnestly argued that it was to tax the property itself, and that to ignore that feature is to put the name above the fact. But when the state decides to impose such a tax, the amount must be determined by some standard. To require the same amount to be paid on all transfers is not so fair as to impose the burden in proportion to the value of the property. An excise on transfers, therefore, does not lose that character because the amount to be paid is determined by the values conveyed. In view of the decisions in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, and the other cases already cited, it is unnecessary to review the arguments pro and con, and again point out the distinction which has been made and sustained between excises and ad valorem taxes. We therefore accept the conclusion of the court of appeals of New York, that the statute of *that state imposing a tax on the transfers of property "intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after the death of grantor" is "not a property tax, but in the nature of an excise tax on the transfer of property." 194 N. Y. 281, 87 N. E. 428.

The validity of the tax must be determined by the laws of New York. The 14th Amendment does not diminish the taxing power of the state, but only requires that, in its exercise, the citizen must be afforded an opportunity to be heard on all questions of liability and value, and shall not, by arbitrary and discriminatory provisions, be denied equal protection. It does not deprive the state of the power to select the subjects of taxation. But it does not follow that because it can tax any transfer (New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 159, 51 L. ed. 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188), that it must tax all transfers, or that all must be treated alike.

It is true that in New York it is as lawful to create an estate for life, with remainder after the death of grantor, as it is to convey in fee, or with remainder after the death of a third person, or on the happening of a particular event. But there is a difference in law as well as in practical effect between these various estates. Every encouragement is given to making conveyances in fee. But, from an early date, public policy has been opposed to the private interest which impelled men to withdraw property from the channels of trade and tie it up with limitations, intended, among other things, to secure to the beneficiary the use of the property, while at the same time removing it, to some extent, from liability for his debts. The favored transfers in fee need not be taxed with the latter, even though the law permits their creation. These latter estates also differ among themselves. Where the grantor makes a transfer of property to take effect on the death of a third person, it might, under the ruling in Scholey v. Rew, supra, be taxed as a devolution or succession. But under such an instrument the grantor does not retain the use and power 536] during *his own lifetime, the remainder does fall in at his death, and such conveyances would not be so often resorted to as a means of evading the inheritance tax. 194 N. Y. 287, 87 N. E. 428. They are not so testamentary in effect as those transfers wherein the grantor provides that the property shall go to his children, or other beneficiary, at and after his death.

The New York statute recognizes this difference. It imposes a tax on transfers by descent, or will, which take effect at the death of the testator; and then a tax upon transfers made in contemplation of death. It was but logical to take the next step, and tax transfers intended to take effect at or after the death of the grantor, even though that event was not actually impending when the deed was signed.

There can be no arbitrary and unreasonable discrimination. But when there is a difference, it need not be great or conspicuous in order to warrant classification. In the present instance, and so far as the 14th Amendment is concerned, the state could put transfers intended to take effect at the death of the grantor in a class with transfers by descent, will, or gifts in contemplation of the death of the donor, without, at the same time, taxing transfers intended to take effect on the death of some person other than the grantor, or on the happening of a certain or contingent event.

As to the other discriminatory features which, it is alleged, operate to deny the equal protection of the law, it is sufficient to say that it is now well settled that the state may impose a graduated tax in this class of cases. Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 298, 42 L. ed. 1044, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. The plaintiffs in error, being children of the grantor, were assessed at the lowest rate. They are therefore not in a position to take advantage of the fact that transfers to collaterals and strangers in blood are, by this act, taxed at a higher rate. The entire statute would not be invalidated *even if that feature should ultimately 537] be held to be discriminatory and void. 194 N. Y. 286, 87 N. E. 428.

The real estate and tangible property in Texas were not within the taxing jurisdiction of the state of New York, and there was no effort to tax the transfer of that property. St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 21 Wall. 430, 20 L. ed. 194; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 319, 21 L. ed. 186. It is urged that, on the same principle, the stocks and bonds could not be taxed because they were in New Jersey, in the hands of a trustee, holding title and possession by virtue of a deed made three years before the grantor died.

But the statute does not impose a tax on the property, but on the transfer. The validity of that burden must be determined by the situation as it existed in 1903, when the deed was made. At that time the grantor was a resident of the state of New York. This personal property there had its situs. She there made a transfer, which was taxable, regardless of the residence of the trustee or beneficiary. The fact that the assessment and payment were postponed until the death of the grantor would be a benefit to the remainderman in the many instances in which values decreased. But where the power to tax exists, it is for the state to fix the rate and to say when and how the amount shall be ascertained and paid. The fact that the liability was imposed when the transfer was made, in 1903, and that payment was not required until the death of grantor, in 1907, does not present any Federal question.

Affirmed.

538] *M. B. JOHNSON and William Chandler, Pliffs in Err.,
v.
B. T. COLLIER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 538-540.)

Bankruptcy — collection of assets — suit by bankrupt.

A voluntary bankrupt has sufficient title, prior to the election of the trustee, to the personal property included in his schedule of assets, to enable him to bring, and in case the trustee neither sues nor intervenes, to prosecute to judgment, a suit for damages occasioned by the alleged unlawful judicial sale of a portion of such property after he had filed a claim of exemption.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 104.]

Argued December 14, 15, 1911. Decided
January 9, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the City Court of Gadsden, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action by a bankrupt for damages occasioned by the alleged unlawful judicial sale of a portion of the property included in his schedule of assets after he had filed a claim of exemption. Affirmed.

See same case below, 161 Ala. 204, 49 So. 761.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

M. B. Johnson, as executor, recovered judgment against B. T. Collier, in the city court of Gadsden, Alabama. Execution thereon was levied July 20, 1906, on certain personal property.

Under a provision of the Alabama statute, Collier immediately filed with the sheriff a claim of exemption. On the same day he filed, in the proper district court of the United States, a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, including this property in his schedule of assets. Notwithstanding the claim of exemption, the sheriff sold the property at public outcry on July 30, 1906.

Thereafter, on a date not shown by the record, Collier was adjudicated a bankrupt. On August 8, 1906, before a trustee was elected, he brought suit against both Johnson and the sheriff for damages, on the theory that the sale of the property after the filing of the claim of exemption made them trespassers ab initio. The defendants filed a plea, in which they set up the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings, and alleged that Collier had no title to the cause of action, which was in gremio legis until the election of the trustee, and for that reason he could not maintain a suit *for dam- [539] ages occasioned by the unlawful sale of property included in the schedule of assets. A demurrer to this plea was sustained. The jury found a verdict in favor of Collier, which the trial court refused to set aside. This ruling was affirmed, and the case is here on writ of error from that judgment of the supreme court of Alabama.

Mr. George D. Mottley argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The adjudication of bankruptcy by a court of competent jurisdiction, declaring the defendant in error a bankrupt, eo instanti put the title in a trustee thereafter to be appointed. The bankruptcy of defendant in error and the scheduling in the bankrupt court of the property alleged to have been converted put the property in custodia legis. The property having been placed in the bankrupt court, it was in gremio legis. The property was in the possession, control, and custody of the bankrupt court.

Collier, Bankr. 6th ed. 588; Keegan v. King, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

The bankrupt himself has no standing in court after adjudication in regard to his property or estate.

Pickens v. Roy, 187 U. S. 177-180, 47 L. ed. 128-130, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

The assignment related back to the commencement of the proceedings, which was by filing the petition, and the title of the assignee to all the property and effects of the bankrupt became vested as of that date.

International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403-405, 25 L. ed. 866, 867.

Upon the adjudication of a bankrupt, title to his property passes from him at once, and is conditionally vested in the court, pending the appointment of a trustee, or until the estate is finally closed or abandoned by the creditors.

Rand v. Sage, 94 Minn. 344, 102 N. W. 864.

The filing of a petition in bankruptcy, followed by an adjudication, is a seizure of the property by the law, which is equal in rank to seizure on attachment or execution.

Re Rodgers, 60 C. C. A. 567, 125 Fed. 169.

Mr. Amos E. Goodhue argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

If this court finds that a Federal question is presented by this record, it will find little difficulty in deciding that question adversely to plaintiffs in error.

Rand v. Iowa C. R. Co. 186 N. Y. 58, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 78 N. E. 574, 9 Ann. Cas. 542; 1 Remington, Bankr. §§ 1, 113; Gordon v. Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co. 120 La. 441, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 827, 124 Am. St. Rep. 434, 45 So. 384, 14 Ann. Cas. 886; Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 468, 26 L. ed. 950.

The title to exempt property did not pass to the trustee.

Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 1061, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 751.

The creditors and the bankrupt court have not seen fit to accept this suit as assets of the estate, subject to the administration of the court of bankruptcy, but have allowed the bankrupt to press this suit either for his own benefit, or as a quasi trustee for the benefit of his creditors.

3 Remington, Bankr. pp. 228, 229, §§ 933-935; Dushane v. Beal, 161 U. S. 513, 40 L. ed. 791, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; Rand v. Iowa, C. R. Co. 186 N. Y. 58, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 78 N. E. 574, 9 Ann. Cas. 542; Gordon v. Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co. 120 La. Ann. 441, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 827, 124 Am. St. Rep. 434, 45 So. 384, 14 Ann. Cas. 886.

Until an assignee is appointed and qualified, and the conveyance or assignment is made to him, the title to the property, whatever it may be, remains in the bankrupt.

Hampton v. Rouse, 22 Wall. 263, 22 L. ed. 755; Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228, 26 L. ed. 723; Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 47 C. C. A. 43, 107 Fed. 891.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The trustee, with the approval of the court, may prosecute any suit commenced by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication. (§ 11c.) But the statute is otherwise silent as to the right of the bankrupt himself to begin a suit in the time which intervenes between the filing of the petition and the election of the trustee. There is a conflict in the conclusions reached in the few cases dealing with this question. Rand v. Sage, 94 Minn. 344, 102 N. W. 864; Rand v. Iowa C. R. Co., 186 N. Y. 58, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 78 N. E. 574, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 542; Gordon v. Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co., 120 La. 444, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 827, 124 Am. St. Rep. 434, 45 So. 384, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 886.
56 L. ed.

While for many purposes the filing of the petition operates in the nature of an attachment upon closes in action and other property of the bankrupt, yet his title is not thereby divested. He is still the owner, though holding in trust until the appointment and qualification of the trustee, who thereupon becomes "vested by operation of law with the title of the bankrupt" as of the date of adjudication. (§ 70.)

Until such election the bankrupt has title, —defeasible, but sufficient to authorize the institution and maintenance of a suit on any cause of action otherwise possessed by him. It is to the interest of all concerned that this should be so. *There must[540 always some time elapse between the filing of the petition and the meeting of the creditors. During that period it may frequently be important that action should be commenced, attachments and garnishments issued, and proceedings taken to recover what would be lost if it were necessary to wait until the trustee was elected. The institution of such suit will result in no harm to the estate. For if the trustee prefers to begin a new action in the same or another court, in his own name, the one previously brought can be abated. If, however, he is of opinion that it would be to the benefit of the creditors, he may intervene in the suit commenced by the bankrupt, and avail himself of rights and priorities thereby acquired. Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 469, 26 L. ed. 950.

If, because of the disproportionate expense, or uncertainty as to the result, the trustee neither sues nor intervenes, there is no reason why the bankrupt himself should not continue the litigation. He has an interest in making the dividend for creditors as large as possible, and in some states the more direct interest of creating a fund which may be set apart to him as an exemption. If the trustee will not sue and the bankrupt cannot sue, it might result in the bankrupt's debtor being discharged of an actual liability. The statute indicates no such purpose, and if money or property is finally recovered, it will be for the benefit of the estate. Nor is there any merit in the suggestion that this might involve a liability to pay both the bankrupt and the trustee. The defendant in any such suit can, by order of the bankrupt court, be amply protected against any danger of being made to pay twice. Rand v. Iowa C. R. Co. 186 N. Y. 58, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 78 N. E. 574, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 542; Southern Exp. Co. v. Connor, 49 Ga. 415.

There was no error in holding that the bankrupt had title to the cause of action and could institute and maintain suit thereon.

Affirmed.

541]*INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,

v.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY et al. (No. 451.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,

v.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al. (No. 452.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,

v.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. (No. 453.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 541-555.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — review of order fixing rates — facts.

1. The courts will not examine the facts on which the Interstate Commerce Commission based its order reducing rates further than to determine whether there was substantial evidence to sustain the order.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, 8-14, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — review of order fixing rates — facts.

2. An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission reducing rates cannot be said to have been made without substantial evidence to support it, where, although there is no direct testimony that the old rate was unreasonably high, there were facts in evidence from which experts could have named a rate.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, 8-14, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — review of order fixing rates — mistake of law.

3. The Interstate Commerce Commission cannot be said to have based its order reducing rates upon a mistake of law in regarding the long maintenance by the carriers of a lower rate while earning dividends as raising a presumption of reasonableness, where the reduced rate fixed by the Commission was higher than such earlier rate.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, 8-14, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — fixing rates — short and long hauls.

4. Fixing rates under substantially similar traffic conditions so as to allow a higher rate for a shorter route is not so palpably unjust and unreasonable as to be beyond the substance, if not beyond the form, of the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, where the Commission was simply maintaining the same ratio of difference as that made by the carriers themselves.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, 15-19, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — fixing rates — considering effect on business.

5. The Interstate Commerce Commission cannot be said to have ordered a reduction in the rates on lumber because of the effect upon the lumber industry of the carriers' action in advancing the rates, where, although the Commission considered that subject, its opinion, taken as a whole, affirmatively shows that it confined itself to the exercise of its statutory power to condemn unjust and unreasonable rates and fix reasonable ones.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, 15-19, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 451, 452, 453.]

Argued October 18 and 19, 1911. Decided January 9, 1912.

THREE APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, reducing rates. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

These three appeals are brought by the Interstate Commerce Commission from a decree enjoining a reduction of lumber rates named in tariffs filed by the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Union Pacific Railroads.

The tariffs under consideration involve rates on lumber from the coast, Spokane district, and Montana-Oregon points to St. Paul, Omaha, and Chicago. It is admitted that the rates on shingles, hemlock, cedar, and other forest products have a fixed relation to those on fir lumber, and that the differentials from Spokane and the Montana-Oregon territory have a like fixed relation to those from the coast.

The summary of these very lengthy records will therefore be limited to a statement of those facts bearing directly on the pivotal question as to the validity of the order fixing a rate of 45 cents per hundred pounds on fir lumber from the coast to St. Paul.

In 1893 the rate, from the coast, on fir lumber, over the two northern lines to St. Paul, was fixed at 40 cents, and since 1901 the rate to Omaha at 50 cents.

In 1907 the three carriers concurrently filed new tariffs, making the rate from the coast to St. Paul 60 cents, to Omaha 55 cents, and to Chicago 60 cents. Thereupon 543] various corporations filed complaints before the Commission, alleging that the proposed rates were unreasonable and would seriously affect the lumber industry. The carriers emphatically denied both of these allegations, and, in explanation of the causes leading up to the advance, showed that when the Great Northern was completed to the coast, about 1893, almost all of the freight shipped over its line went from the East to the West,—cars being hauled back empty to St. Paul, its eastern terminus. In order to correct this expensive and unremunerative situation, the Great Northern decided to put in a rate on lumber so low that mill men on the Pacific coast might compete with dealers in white and yellow pine, in the Chicago market, 2,500 miles distant. It thereupon reduced the existing rate to 40 cents. That cut was met by the Northern Pacific, which also reached St. Paul, but the Union Pacific at that time made no change in its rate. The reduction opened up new markets, and was soon followed by heavy shipments of lumber to the East. The business grew steadily, and prior to the filing of the tariffs in 1907, the empty-car movement had been completely reversed,—many cars being hauled empty from St. Paul to the coast, and returning to the East loaded with lumber.

Traffic increased to such an extent that it became necessary to open up new tunnels, construct additional passing tracks, and reduce grades and curves. There was a constant increase in gross earnings, but the carriers contended that there had been such an enormous and disproportionate increase in the cost of operation, that it was absolutely necessary to discontinue the unremunerative 40-cent rate and advance it to 50 cents, which they insisted was just and reasonable.

There was no finding as to the effect on gross earnings which would result from the proposed advance of 10 cents. But, as the Great Northern, in one year, hauled 1,765,095,997 tons one mile, equivalent to 544] about 30,000 *cars, of the average load of 58,000 pounds, transported 2,000 miles from the coast to St. Paul, the advance of 10 cents per hundred, or $58 per car, would represent a gross annual increase, for that company alone, of $1,740,000.

An immense amount of evidence was offered by both parties in support of their respective contentions. The Commission rendered an elaborate opinion (14 Inters. Com. Rep. 1), and concluded by finding that the old rates were just and reasonable and should be restored to all points on and west of the Pembina line, which ran from the Canadian line almost due south through Fargo, Omaha, to Port Arthur, Texas. As Omaha was on this line, the effect of that part of the order was to prohibit the 55-cent advance, and to restore the old rate of 50 cents to Omaha, which had been in force since 1901. As to rates east of the Pembina line, the Commission held that "they might reasonably be somewhat increased, but not more than 5 cents per hundred, to be graded up so as to reach the maximum increase at . . . St. Paul; . . . the rate from the Missouri river crossing should be graded up, the maximum increase of 5 cents reached at the Mississippi river. Chicago rates should apply to all points between the Mississippi . . . and Chicago."

The carriers thereupon filed separate bills to enjoin this order, and repeated therein the contentions made before the Commission; averred that the old 40-cent rate to St. Paul and the 50-cent rate to Omaha were not only unremunerative, but proportionately so much lower than rates on other merchandise as to amount to an unjust discrimination; alleged that the prosperous condition of the lumber business did not require or justify a further maintenance of this low rate; and, among other things, insisted (1) that the order was beyond the power of the Commission, because entered without any evidence, or finding, that the rates fixed by the carriers were unjust or unreasonable; and (2) was void because the Commission *erroneously held, as a matter of law, that the long continuance of the old rate, during a period when the carriers' total income was sufficient to pay dividends, raised the presumption that the old rates were reasonable.

The Commission demurred, and, in its answer, averred that evidence was introduced showing, and tending to show, that the advanced rates were unreasonable; and that, after a full hearing, it was of opinion that the rates complained of were unreasonable, and entered its order accordingly; that the determination of that question involved the exercise of a discretion committed solely to the Commission, and that the "courts ought not and could not review its judgment and finding, unless it be made clearly to appear that the orders complained of transcend the pale of legitimate regulation."

The cases were referred to a master, who reported that the allegations of discrimination were not only too general, but that there was no evidence upon which any ruling could be predicated on that subject; that the substance of the bill was that the rates put in by the Commission were confiscatory, and, as to that, held that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant the court in setting aside so much of the order as restored the rates to, and west of, the Pembina line. There was some evidence that the cost of hauling freight over the Union Pacific was greater than over the Northern lines, because it crossed the mountains at a point 2,000 feet higher than they did. But the master found, as a fact, that the traffic conditions were substantially the same over the three roads, and that the distance from the coast to Omaha was 1,800 miles and to St. Paul 2,052 miles. He thereupon held, as a matter of law, that when the Commission fixed 50 cents as a reasonable rate to Omaha over the shorter route, it necessarily followed that the lower rate of 45 cents, over the longer route to St. Paul, was not only unreasonable, but unjust.

And even "though the rate might not be 546]confiscatory, *yet an order which, on its face, is inherently inconsistent with the fundamental principles of rational justice, and perverts the spirit and intent of the interstate commerce act, though in form within the limits of delegated power, is, in fact, beyond those limits and is an unlawful order, and one which results in the taking of property without due process of law." He recommended that the court should enjoin so much of the order as permitted an advance of only 5 cents to points east of that line.

The Commission, and each of the carriers, filed many exceptions to the report, as to which the circuit court passed the following order: "All the exceptions to the report of the master must be overruled. Those which challenge his finding that the reduction, by the Interstate Commerce Commission, of the 50-cent rate on lumber to St. Paul and other points east of the Pembina line, was arbitrary, and so palpably unjust and unreasonable, and so discriminatory, that it was beyond the power of the Commission, are overruled; on the ground that this action of the Commission was beyond its power, or so palpably and gravely unjust and unreasonable as to be beyond the substance, if not beyond the form, of its power."

Mr. Luthur M. Walter, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, and Mr. Jesse C. Adkins, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Whenever the Commission shall be of the opinion that the carriers' rates are unreasonable, it is their duty to fix reasonable rates. Whether those rates so fixed by the Commission are, as between the carrier and shipper, fair and reasonable,—that is, whether the court upon the same testimony would have fixed the same rates,—is not the question.

Regan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The rates must stand unless the court can say that they are confiscatory, or that it was impossible for a fair-minded board to have established them.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

Whether a particular rate is reasonable or a particular discrimination is unjust is a question of fact.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

Matters of fact are within the exclusive competency of the Commission, and its decision thereon is final.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

In determining such questions, the Commission should consider any fact proper to be considered by the carrier in fixing the rate.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 219, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The presumption is that the action of the Commission was correct (Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336), and the court will not interfere unless it is impossible to say that a fair-minded Commission could not have reached that conclusion (San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571).

Mr. Hale Holden argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles Donnelly and F. C. Dillard, filed a brief for appellees:

There is no presumption that an advance in rates is wrongful, unjust, or unreasonable. The carrier in such case is required upon proper inquiry, however, to explain its reasons for the advance, and support its explanation by proof.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 52 L. ed. 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Memphis Cotton Oil Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 313.

There can be no other conclusion from the record in these cases, taking into consideration the character of the competition the Pacific coast lumber had to meet as a new and untried product, and the low prices then prevailing, that the 40-cent rate then put into effect was considered by both carrier and lumbermen as an abnormally low rate.

Schumacher Mill. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 378; Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 69.

Conditions have been reversed; expense has enormously increased, and the excuse for the rate in previous years no longer holds good.

Tift v. Southern R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 586.

The entire financial situation and operations of a carrier should not be taken into consideration in passing upon a single rate.

Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 539.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

These appeals raise the single question as to whether, in making the 45-cent rate, the Commission acted within or beyond its power. As the statute makes its finding prima facie correct (Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 154, 51 L. ed. 1000, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648), it will be more convenient 547] *to consider the case from the standpoint of the carriers, who first insist that the order was void because made without evidence or finding that the 50-cent rate was unreasonable.

There has been no attempt to make an exhaustive statement of the principle involved, but in cases thus far decided, it has been settled that the orders of the Commission are final unless (1) beyond the power which it could constitutionally exercise; or (2) beyond its statutory power; or (3) based upon a mistake of law. But questions of fact may be involved in the determination of questions of law, so that an or- 56 L. ed.

der, regular on its face, may be set aside if it appears that (4) the rate is so low as to be confiscatory and in violation of the constitutional prohibition against taking property without due process of law; or (5) if the Commission acted so arbitrarily and unjustly as to fix rates contrary to evidence, or without evidence to support it; or (6) if the authority therein involved has been exercised in such an unreasonable manner as to cause it to be within the elementary rule that the substance, and not the shadow, determines the validity of the exercise of the power. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215, U. S. 470, 54 L. ed. 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 544, 54 L. ed. 609, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 163 U. S. 146, 174, 42 L. ed. 414, 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

In determining these mixed questions of law and fact, the court confines itself to the ultimate question as to whether the Commission acted within its power. It will not consider the expediency or wisdom of the order, or whether, on like testimony, it would have made a similar ruling. "The findings of the Commission are made by law prima facie true, and this court has ascribed to them the strength due to the judgments of a tribunal appointed by law and informed by experience." Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700. Its conclusion, of course, is subject to review, but, when supported by evidence, is accepted as final; *not that its[548 decision, involving, as it does, so many and such vast public interests, can be supported by a mere scintilla of proof, but the courts will not examine the facts further than to determine whether there was substantial evidence to sustain the order.

2. We proceed, then, to a consideration of the carriers' contention that the order was void because made without any testimony that the 50-cent rate of 1907, to St. Paul, was unreasonable. We find that, as far back as 1893, the rate on fir lumber was reduced to 40 cents, on the theory that after a carrier had been paid for transporting a carload of freight from the East to the West, it was better to haul it back loaded with lumber at 40 cents, thereby earning something, than to take it back empty and get nothing. But if, after the empty-car movement had been reversed, the carrier had to be at the expense of hauling cars empty to the West for the purpose of returning them loaded with lumber at the unremunerative rate of 40 cents, there would be a double loss,—it got nothing for hauling the empty car from St. Paul to the coast, and it derived no profit for hauling it back at the low rate. They contend that this situation, in connection with the enormous increase in the cost of operation, not only justified, but required, an advance over the 40-cent rate. And this view of the testimony seems to have been taken by the two commissioners who dissented. If there was no other evidence, the Commission's order could not be sustained.

But these facts do not stand alone. In the first place there was no appeal from the master's finding that:

"The carriers concede that they are unable to determine the cost of this traffic, in and of itself; and that they are unable to say, with any satisfactory accuracy, whether or not they make a profit upon it; but they have all conceded that, in their judgment, speaking as experts, the lumber traffic has not been confiscatory, and has not been performed for less than cost."

549] *This concession, of course, does not cover the question at issue, but it does fix a starting point. It establishes an important fact in dealing with the difficult question of determining what is a reasonable rate on a particular article. Where the rates as a whole are under consideration, there is a possibility of deciding, with more or less certainty, whether the total earnings afford a reasonable return. But whether the carrier earned dividends or not sheds little light on the question as to whether the rate on a particular article is reasonable. For, if the carrier's total income enables it to declare a dividend, that would not justify an order requiring it to haul one class of goods for nothing, or for less than a reasonable rate. On the other hand, if the carrier earned no dividend, it would not have warranted an order fixing an unreasonably high rate on such article. But the absence of direct testimony that the 50-cent rate was unreasonably high is unimportant. Neither can any specific effect be given to the statement of witnesses that the 40-cent rate was low. The reasonableness of rates cannot be proved by categorical answers, like those given, where a witness may, in terms, testify that the goods were worth so much per pound, or the services worth so much a day. Too many elements are involved in fixing a rate on a particular article, over a particular road, to warrant reliance on such method of proof. The matter has to be determined by a consideration of many facts.

In this case the Commission had before it many witnesses and volumes of reports, statistics, and estimates, including the rates on lumber charged by other roads, and those charged by these carriers on other classes of freight. There was evidence that during the fourteen years when the forty-cent rate was in force, the carriers had, by proper management and without wasteful economics, kept their properties in a high state of efficiency, and after paying all the costs of operation, maintenance, depreciation, fixed charges, and sinking funds, had been able to pay reasonable dividends.

There was evidence as to the value of the road, the amounts expended in betterments and paid out in dividends, ratio between the increased earnings and increased expenses, with many tables and estimates tending to show the cost of hauling empty cars, fully loaded cars, and those carrying an average load.

With that sort of evidence before them, rate experts of acknowledged ability and fairness, and each acting independently of the other, may not have reached identically the same conclusion. We do not know whether the results would have been approximately the same. For there is no possibility of solving the question as though it were a mathematical problem to which there could only be one correct answer. Still there was in this mass of facts that out of which experts could have named a rate. The law makes the Commission's finding on such facts conclusive. There was then, under the statute, nothing for the companies to do except to comply with the order, or act on the suggestion thrown out in the Commission's answer, and apply for a rehearing, in reliance upon its power and duty to modify its order if the new evidence warranted such change.

3. When the bills were filed, the carriers insisted that the order was the result of a mistake of law, in that the Commission held that the long maintenance of the 40-cent rate raised a presumption that it was reasonable, because the carriers had been earning a reasonable profit. But we need not consider whether, under such circumstances, the maintenance of the admittedly low rate raised any presumption of reasonableness; or, if so, whether it is not neutralized by the presumption of right conduct by the carrier as primary rate maker (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 52 L. ed. 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493). For whatever influenced the Commission in restoring the rates to the Pembina line,— 551]*as to which there is now no appeal,—it is evident that, as to points east of that line, they did not act on any presumption that the old 40-cent rate was reasonable. On the contrary, they acted directly contrary to any such presumption, and instead of maintaining the old rate, allowed a new and higher rate to St. Paul, permitting an advance of 5 cents per hundred, or 12½ per cent, or between $500,000 and $1,000,000 per annum, to the Great Northern road alone.

4. And this brings us to a consideration of the master's finding, approved by the circuit court, that in fixing a rate of 45 cents to St. Paul, the order on its face was void, because, with traffic conditions over the three roads practically the same, the Commission allowed the high rate of 50 cents to the short road and the low rate of 45 cents to the long route. It was argued that when the Commission had adjudged that a rate of 50 cents for 1,800 miles was reasonable, it was manifestly unreasonable to allow a rate of 45 cents for 2,052 miles, and that such order was so palpably unjust and unreasonable as to be beyond the substance, if not beyond the form, of the Commission's power.

It does not follow, as a matter of law, that rates should be the same for the same distance over two different roads, and this would be especially true if the cost of transportation was greater over the Union Pacific than over the Northern lines, because it crossed the mountains 2,000 feet higher than they.

But, with the master's finding that traffic conditions were practically the same, it might be that the order would appear unreasonable on its face, if it fixed the high rate over the short route, and the low rate, with less revenue per ton, per mile, over the long route. But the order cannot be considered by itself alone. It must be read in the light of the entire record, including the important fact that the carriers themselves, in making their rates, made a similar difference between the long and the 552]short line. *By their own tariffs they clearly show that they did not consider mere distance a controlling factor in fixing the rates now under attack. And this is not exceptional, for it appears that they make rates from basing points to common points, with the result that two cars of lumber, of the same weight, may be shipped from the same place, over the same line, at the same rate, to different points, although the distance one car is hauled may be several hundred miles greater than the other.

But the fact that the carriers themselves, in 1893, 1901, and 1907, charged more to Omaha than to St. Paul, is a much weightier fact in considering this attack on the order. In making the difference between these two cities the Commission only did what the carriers themselves had done, under their old and new rates. After 1901, the rate to Omaha was 50 cents and the rate to St. Paul, over the longer route, was 40 cents. In the 1907 tariff, now under consideration, the rate to Omaha, over the short route, was fixed by them at 55 cents; and that to St. Paul, for the longer route, was fixed at 50 cents. This was a difference of 5 cents in favor of the short route. The Commission made the same difference in favor of the same road.

This difference is supported by what the record shows as to rates to points on the Pembina line. Inasmuch as no appeal was taken from the refusal to enjoin their restoration, we may assume that all parties admit these rates to be reasonable. But there was a difference as to rates to points on this line which shows that the per mile ratio cannot be regarded as a necessary standard. For example, the rate to Omaha, on the lower part of this line, was 50 cents, while the rate to points on the northern end was 40 cents. This was a difference of 20 per cent in favor of Omaha, although there was no such difference in the distance. Again, timber shipped from the coast to St. Paul passed through this 40-cent point on the northern end of *the[553 Pembina line. The distance from the coast to St. Paul was one-eighth greater, and the advance allowed was one eighth, or 5 cents, over the 40-cent rate.

It is quite true that the carriers may do what they could not be compelled to do. But it is not to be assumed that they made and continued these different rates between these two cities arbitrarily and without reason. It was proper for the Commission to consider the weight and the character of these reasons and the causes which prompted and justified the carriers in charging these different rates. When the Commission maintained the same ratio of difference as that made by the carriers themselves, it cannot be fairly said that such an order was so arbitrary as to be palpably and gravely unjust, and beyond the substance, if not the form, of its power.

5. A final point remains to be considered, although it involves an issue not presented by the pleadings, not included in the master's report, and not passed on by the circuit court. It is, however, argued that on this appeal the record may be searched and the decree affirmed because, in making its order, the Commission was influenced solely by a consideration of the effect of the advance in rates on the lumber industry.

It does appear that the lumber men, in their complaints before the Commission, alleged that the advanced rates were unreasonable; and, approved on the theory that the injurious effect on their business would sustain that contention, they alleged that the new rate would destroy the lumber industry. In the Willamette Case joined on both propositions, and there were mutual criminations and recriminations of prosperity,—the lumber men insisting that the railroads had made large profits under the old rate, and did not need the advance, which would destroy the ability of the lumber men to ship lumber to the East.

The carriers, on the other hand, contended that the 40-cent rate had opened up new [554]markets and developed the *lumber business to a point where it had become enormously profitable, and would continue so under the advanced rates, because white pine had practically disappeared from the market, and that the increased price of lumber more than made up for the increased cost of timber and labor.

It is true, also, that the Commission examined into the effect of the old and the new rate on carrier and lumber men alike. But we do not find that it made the order because of the effect on the lumber industry. In the Willamette Case (219 U. S. 445, 55 L. ed. 287, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288), counsel for the mill men admitted that the rate there under attack was reasonable in and of itself, but insisted that statements of officers and action of the carrier operated to estop the road from raising a low rate up to a reasonable rate.

Nothing of the sort is found here. The rates were attacked as unreasonable, and, on evidence already referred to, the Commission found that the old rates to the Pembina line were reasonable and could not be changed, but that there might be a reasonable increase to points east of that line, not to exceed 5 cents.

While there is language in the opinion which, looked at alone, might suggest that the Commission was attempting to decide more than the single question as to what was a reasonable rate, yet, taking the opinion as a whole, it affirmatively appears that the Commission confined itself to the exercise of its statutory powers to fix rates. In its opinion it did discuss the issue of prosperity presented by mill men and carriers alike, but held that—

“ . . . This controversy cannot be determined wholly upon the ground that complainants have enjoyed the lower rate for many years, and that interests have been built up thereunder, and that loss of business investments, profits, and markets will result under the increased rates. It must be determined on the justness or reasonableness of the rates in controversy. . . . If the old *rates were too low [555 to be just and reasonable, complainants [mill men] cannot urge their loss as a ground for maintaining them; if the old rates were just and reasonable, the defendants cannot justify the advance on the ground of the prosperity of the lumber business.”

Considering the case as a whole, we cannot say that the order was made because of the effect of the advance on the lumber industry; nor because of a mistake of law as to presumption arising from the long continuance of the low rate, when the carrier was earning dividends; nor that there was no evidence to support the finding. If so, the Commission acted within its power, and, in view of the statute, its lawful orders cannot be enjoined. The decree, therefore, must be reversed.

GERALD PURCELL FITZ GERALD, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

JOSIAH V. THOMPSON, as Trustee for Lida Eleanor Purcell Fitz Gerald et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 555-557.)

Error to state court — frivolousness of Federal question.

No real Federal question which will support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court is raised by the contention that the state court denied a Federal right in overruling an application to remove the cause to a Federal circuit court, where the granting of such application would have necessitated the aligning on the side of the plaintiff, in a suit founded on an express trust, a trustee who was charged with a repudiation of his obligations as trustee by a refusal to apply the trust funds as required by the trust

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

As to necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court—see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 231.

agreement, and as to whom not only was an accounting asked and an injunction prayed to prevent him from disposing of the trust property, but his removal as trustee was also sought.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1110-1137, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 849.]

Submitted December 18, 1911. Decided January 15, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of Fayette County in that state refusing an application to remove the cause to a Federal circuit court. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

See same case below, — Pa. —, 82 Atl. 212.

Mr. William A. Stone submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Michael J. Ryan and James Gay Gordon were on the brief.

Mr. Samuel Untermeyer submitted the cause for defendants in error. Messrs. William J. Sturgis and Irwin Untermeyer were on the brief.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

The object of this suit was to enforce a trust created by the plaintiff in error for the benefit of his wife and three minor children, to declare a lien on certain property dedicated to the purposes of the trust for the removal of two trustees, etc. Josiah V. Thompson, one of the trustees, was a plaintiff, and joined with him were the wife and minor children of Fitz Gerald, the latter represented by their guardian ad litem. The remaining trustees were made defendants, individually and in their capacity as trustee and as partners.

All the plaintiffs except the minor children were citizens of Pennsylvania. The minor children were aliens and resided in Ireland. Lenhart, one of the defendants, was a citizen of Pennsylvania, while Fitz Gerald, his codefendant, was an alien and a British subject. Fitz Gerald applied to remove to the United States court on the ground that, on properly aligning the parties to the controversy, his codefendant Lenhart was a plaintiff, and that, as the residence of the guardian ad litem was controlling so far as the interest of the minors was concerned, the controversy was one between citizens of Pennsylvania on the one hand and Fitz Gerald, an alien, on the other. The further contention was urged that the cause was embraced in the clause of § 1 of the removal acts of 1887-88 [24 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 373, 25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509], conferring original jurisdiction *upon circuit courts of controver-[557 sies "between citizens of a state and foreign states, citizens, or subjects," and that the following clause of the 2d section of the act was applicable:

"Any other suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given jurisdiction by the preceding section, and which are now pending, or which may hereafter be brought, in any state court, may be removed into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district by the defendant or defendants therein, being nonresidents of that state."

The trial court denied the application, and subsequently granted the relief prayed by the bill. On appeal the supreme court of the state of Pennsylvania affirmed the decree, and in the opinion delivered held that no error was committed in denying the application to remove. Because of this latter ruling the cause was brought here. The defendants in error now move to dismiss the writ.

The right to remove from the state court which was asserted had no legal foundation. Lenhart was charged with a repudiation of his obligations as trustee by a refusal to apply the trust funds as required by the trust agreement. Not only was an accounting by him asked and an injunction prayed to prevent him from disposing of the partnership property which was dedicated to the trust, but his removal as trustee was also sought. Under these circumstances it is plain on the face of the record that no possible rearrangement of the parties could have been made converting Lenhart into a party plaintiff which would be consistent with the relief which it was the object of the suit to obtain. In this state of the case the assertion that there was a denial of a Federal right by the overruling of the application to remove is so manifestly frivolous and devoid of merit as not to form the basis of jurisdiction, and to render it necessary to grant the motion to dismiss.

Writ of error dismissed.

558]*COSME BLANCO HERRERA and José Blanco Herrera, Doing Business under the Firm Name of Herrera Nephews, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 558-574.)

Prize — enemy's property — liability to capture.

1. Neither the capitulation of Santiago and the cessation of active military operations in the Santiago district, nor the President's proclamation of July 13, 1898, with reference to the rights of private property, changed the character of a Spanish merchant vessel lying in the harbor as enemy's property, nor exempted it from liability to capture by the military authorities for military purposes.

[For other cases, see Prize and Capture, 145-151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Claims — against the United States — contract or tort.

2. The United States is not suable in the court of claims upon a claim for the value of the use by the military authorities of a Spanish merchant vessel captured in the harbor of Santiago, since, even under the mistaken assumption that the vessel was immune from capture because of the prior capitulation of Santiago, and the President's proclamation of July 13, 1898, with respect to the rights of private property, the claim would be one "sounding in tort" within the meaning of the Tucker act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752), excluding cases of that character from the jurisdiction of the court of claims.

[For other cases, see Claims, 128-144, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 89.]

Argued December 11 and 12, 1911. Decided January 15, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a claim for the value of the use by the military authorities of a Spanish merchant vessel captured in the harbor of Santiago. Affirmed.

See same case below, 43 Ct. Cl. 430.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Howard Thayer Kingsbury and Crammond Kennedy argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank D. Pavey, filed a brief for appellants:

The words of the Tucker act—"not sounding in tort"—do not limit the jurisdiction of the court of claims except as to "damages liquidated and unliquidated."

United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 474-476, 47 L. ed. 550, 551, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

Where a part of the country which has been the scene of war has been reduced to subjection, the general rule respecting the appropriation of property and payment for it prevails.

Philippine Sugar Estates Development Co. v. United States, 40 Ct. Cl. 33; Re Ships, 4 C. Rob. 388; The Venice (United States v. Cooke) 2 Wall. 258, 17 L. ed. 866; The Baigorri, 2 Wall. 481, 17 L. ed. 881; The Reform, 3 Wall. 617, 18 L. ed. 105; The Peterhoff, 5 Wall. 60, 18 L. ed. 571; The Ouachita Cotton (Withenbury v. United States) 6 Wall. 531, 18 L. ed. 939; The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. 131, 19 L. ed. 653; United States v. Padelford, 9 Wall. 541, 19 L. ed. 791; Levy v. Stewart, 11 Wall. 253, 20 L. ed. 89; New Orleans Mail Co. v. Flanders (New Orleans & B. S. Mail Co. v. Fernandez) 12 Wall. 134, 20 L. ed. 250; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 495, 21 L. ed. 478; Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wall. 94, 22 L. ed. 533; Desmare v. United States, 93 U. S. 611, 23 L. ed. 960; Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 301, 24 L. ed. 726; Clark v. United States, 99 U. S. 496, 25 L. ed. 482.

The whole modern development of the laws of war has been in the direction of greater immunities for noncombatants generally, and particularly for the inhabitants of occupied territory.

Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 21 L. ed. 473; Les Requisitions Militaires du Temps de Guerre, Ch. Pont, pp. 85, 86; Latif, Effect of War on Property, 1909, p. 30; Bernier, De l'Occupation Militaire, p. 108; Holland, Law of War on Land, London 1908, arts. 92, 106, 112, 113; 1 Kent, Com. 14th ed. p. 92; 3 Grotius, De Jure Belli ac Pacis, chap. 20, §§ 7, 50, ¶ 1.

Nothing can be clearer than the necessity of applying the doctrine of relation in determining the commencement of government and citizenship in times of revolution and political changes, such as have characterized the history of Cuba since 1895, in order to do justice and prevent the most absurd and iniquitous conclusions.

2 Bouvier's Dict. Rawle's Rev. p. 864; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 275; Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 24 L. ed. 716; Harcourt v. Gaillard, 12 Wheat. 524, 527, 6 L. ed. 716, 717; M'Ilvaine v. Coxe, 4 Cranch, 209, 212, 2 L. ed. 598, 599; Underhill v. Hernandez, 168 U. S. 250, 253, 42 L. ed. 456, 457, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; United States v. Rice, 4 Wheat. 246, 4 L. ed. 562; Fleming v. Page, 9 How. 603, 13 L. ed. 276; Thoring-

NOTE.—As to what claims constitute valid demands against a state—see note to Northwestern & P. Hypotheek Bank v. State, 42 L.R.A. 33.

ton v. Smith, 8 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 361; Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. 594, 24 L. ed. 1018; Dow v. Johnson, 100 U. S. 158, 25 L. ed. 632; Inglis v. Sailor's Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. 99, 7 L. ed. 617; Heny's Case, Ralston, Rep. 1903, p. 17; Puerto Cabello & V. R. Co. Case, Ralston, Rep. 1903, p. 458; Bovallins & H. Cases, Ralston, Rep. 1903, p. 952; 4 Moore, International Arbitration p. 4330; United States v. Trumbull, 48 Fed. 94; Dix's Case, Ralston, Rep. 1903, p. 8; Moore, Arbitration, 3712.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Franklin W. Collins, filed a brief for appellee:

If the reasons for dismissing the petition in the court below require further support, it may be found in the case of Juragua Iron Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 520, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

The President had not the power nor the authority, without being specially authorized by Congress, to create an obligation which is not recognized by the well-known principles of law. Nothing less than an act of Congress can be relied upon to change the rules and impose an obligation for the payment of captured property by the invading army. Therefore no protection is afforded by orders of the President, except in so far as such orders are warranted by law.

Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 246.

The capture of the vessel is in the nature of a tort.

Langford v. United States, 101 U. S. 341, 25 L. ed. 1010.

563] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Petition in the court of claims for the recovery of $88,200 for the value of the use and profits of which claimants were deprived, as it is alleged, by the taking and detention of a certain steamship by the United States during the war with Spain, and for the loss of certain property belonging to and a part of such steamship, alleged to be "fairly worth" the sum of $5,000, amounting in all to the sum of $93,200.

Claimants base their right to recover upon an implied contract arising from the facts which we shall presently detail. Opposing this view, the government contends that the property was enemy property seized for military uses, and that, besides, the record does not show a "convention between the parties" or circumstances from which a contract could be implied, and that therefore the case is one sounding in tort, and claimants have no right of recovery.

The court found as a conclusion of law from the facts, "on the authority of the case of J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, 194 U. S. 315, 48 L. ed. 994, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727, that the claim herein is one arising from the capture and use of a vessel as an act of war, and the court is therefore without jurisdiction, and the petition is dismissed."

The claimants, at the time the steamship was taken, composed a commercial partnership, doing business under the firm name of Herrera Nephews. They were born in Spain, and, under the Spanish régime in Cuba, were Spanish subjects residing in Havana. After the treaty they did not, in accordance with its terms, preserve their allegiance to Spain.

On the 16th day of July, 1898, the Spanish forces then occupying the territory constituting the division of Santiago, including the city and port of that name, capitulated to the United States in accordance with the terms of a military convention which provided that all hostilities between the American and the Spanish forces in that district should cease, and that the Spanish forces should be returned, at the expense of the United States, to Spain. Actual hostilities ceased with the surrender of Santiago.

The United States military authorities seized and captured the steamer San Juan on the 17th of July, 1898, she having been held in the harbor by its blockade by the United States naval authorities. Prior to that date she had been used to transport Spanish troops, munitions of war, and supplies for the Spanish troops from place to place. After her capture she was used for like service for American troops and indigent Cubans until November, 1898,—a period of 115 days. The reasonable value of her use was $150 per day, amounting to the sum of $17,250, no part of which has been paid to claimants.

After the surrender of Santiago and the seizure of the steamship, the Secretary of War, on July 18, 1898, in pursuance of the proclamation of the President of July 13, 1898, issued general order No. 101, which, among other things, provided that "private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected, and can be confiscated only for cause. Means of transportation, such as telegraph lines and cables, railways and boats, may, although they belong to private individuals or corporations, be seized by the military occupant, but unless destroyed under military necessity, are not to be retained. . . .

"Private property taken for the use of the Army is to be paid for, when possible, in cash, at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not possible, receipts are to be given."

This order was promulgated in Cuba, July 20, 1898.

On November 8, 1898, the Quartermaster General of the Army telegraphed to R. A. C. 565]Smith, the representative *and attorney-in-fact of claimants, that it was proposed to return the "captured steamer" to owners, and asked him to wire their names. Smith answered on the 12th "that claimants agreed to accept the vessel, reserving their right to make claim." On the 15th the War Department notified Smith that the government was ready to deliver the vessel to her owners upon condition that a receipt be given showing that she was accepted with full knowledge and understanding that the Secretary of War did not consider that any allowance was due the owners on account of her use, she being captured property, or for any damage sustained by her while she was in the possession of the United States, and that any claim subsequently made should be a matter for future consideration by the War Department. The terms were rejected, and she remained in the possession of the United States.

On April 25, 1899, the quartermaster at Santiago, on instructions from the War Department, wrote claimants' agent that if they did not receive the steamer "in accordance with the conditions hereinafter expressed," she would be delivered to the Department of the Quartermaster of the Army and retained as property of the United States.

On the 17th claimants accepted her and gave the following receipt:

"Received this 17th day of May, 1899, at Santiago, Cuba, from Maj. John T. Knight, quartermaster, U. S. Army, chief quartermaster Department of Santiago, the steamship San Juan, which vessel is accepted with the full knowledge and understanding that the Secretary of War does not consider that any allowance is due the owners on account of the use of the vessel, she being captured property, or for any damages sustained while the vessel has been in possession of the United States government, the return of the vessel being a generous act on the part of the United States government, and that any claim 566]subsequently *made for such use and damages shall be a matter for future consideration of the War Department.

"And we name and authorize our agents in Santiago de Cuba—Messrs. Gallego, Mesa, & Company, of said city—to receive and take possession of said steamship San Juan."

They also executed a paper which recited that it was given in consideration of the prompt return of the vessel to claimants, and that released the government and its officers and agents "from all manner of actions, damages, claims, and demands whatsoever" on account of her seizure, detention, and use.

From the time that the Quartermaster General of the Army proposed to return the vessel until May 17, 1899, a period of 190 days, the vessel, though retained by the United States, was not used. During said period the United States kept a watchman on board, who was paid $45 per month. The compensation claimants are entitled to, if any, for such period, taking into account that the vessel was not used, would be $125 per day, or $23,750.

Upon the return of the vessel to claimants, tools and implements of the value of $232.50 were missing, but it is not shown by whom they were taken. No other property is shown to have been taken possession of by the United States. The steamer, when returned, appeared to have been in as good condition as when taken into possession, ordinary wear and tear excepted.

As we have seen, the court of claims rested its decision on the case of J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, and that case also is the main reliance of the government's argument. Claimants, however, contend that the J. Ribas y Hijo Case is distinguishable from that at bar.

The action there was brought to recover the value of the use of a vessel belonging to Spanish subjects and taken by the United States in the port of Ponce, Porto Rico, when that city was captured by the United States Army and *Navy on July 28, 567 1898. The vessel was used by the quartermaster until some time in April, 1899, when she was ordered to be returned to the owner, if all claims for damages for use or detention should be waived. The condition was refused, and the vessel was subsequently abandoned, and was wrecked in a hurricane. We quote the following from the statement of facts in the opinion: "The vessel was never in naval custody nor condemned as prize. When seized it was a Spanish vessel, carried the Spanish flag, and its owner, captain, and crew were all Spanish subjects. It did not come within any of the declared exemptions from seizure set forth in the proclamation of the President of April 26, 1898. 30 Stat. at L. 1770. A claim filed in the War Department in February, 1900, for its use, was rejected."

The court of claims dismissed the petition on the ground that the vessel was properly seized as enemy property, and its use was by the war power, for war purposes. This court sustained the judgment and the principles upon which it was based.

A question of jurisdiction became prominent in the case. The action was brought in the district court of Porto Rico, and the court could only have had jurisdiction under the Tucker act, so-called, which provides for the bringing of suits against the United States. 24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752. In other words, as expressed in the act, omitting grounds of action with which the case was not concerned, that court was given jurisdiction of suits "upon any contract, express or implied, with the government of the United States, or for damages, liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort." Considering whether the action was of that nature, this court said that there was no element of contract in the case, for nothing was done or said by the officers of the United States from which could be implied an agreement or obligation to pay for the use of the vessel; and de- 568]clared, further, that, according to *established principles of law, its owners, being Spanish subjects, were to be deemed enemies, although not directly connected with military operations, and that therefore the vessel was to be deemed enemy's property. "It was seized," it was said, "as property of that kind, for purposes of war, and not for any purposes of gain." In further emphasis of this conclusion, it was added: "The seizure, which occurred while the war was flagrant, was an act of war occurring within the limits of military operations. The action, in its essence, is for the recovery of damages, but as the case is one sounding in tort, no suit for damages can be maintained under the statute against the United States."

It was also decided that the claim of the plaintiff in the action was embraced in the stipulation in the treaty of peace between Spain and the United States, by which they "mutually relinquished all claims for indemnity, national and individual, of every kind, of either government, or of its citizens or subjects, against the other government, that may have arisen since the beginning of the late insurrection in Cuba, and prior to the exchange of ratifications of the present treaty, including all claims for indemnity for the cost of the war. . . ." [30 Stat. at L. 1757.] That effect, it was declared, must be given to the treaty, even though the Tucker act could have been construed to authorize the suit, upon the ground that each being equally the supreme law of the land, the last in date must prevail in the courts.

Before comparing that case with the case 56 L. ed.

at bar we may take a glance at Juragua Iron Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 520, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385, where it was decided that, Cuba being "enemy's country," even "an American corporation doing business in Cuba was, during the war with Spain, to be deemed an enemy to the United States with respect of its property found and then used in that country, and such property could be regarded as enemy's property, liable to *be[569 seized and confiscated by the United States in the progress of the war then being prosecuted."

The action in that case was in the court of claims to recover from the United States the alleged value of certain property destroyed in Cuba during the war with Spain, by order of the officer commanding the United States troops operating in the locality of the property, the purpose of the order being "to destroy all places of occupation or habitation which might contain fever germs." The buildings destroyed were sixty-six in number, and were used in connection with mining operations and the manufacture of iron and steel products.

The destruction of the buildings was considered as an act of war and sustained as such. It was also decided that, even on the supposition that such destruction was wrongful and unnecessary, a tort was committed, and though committed in the interest of the United States, there was no element of contract, and the action was not one of which the court of claims could "take cognizance, whatever other redress was open to the plaintiff."

We have, then, these propositions established: Cuba was enemy's country, and all persons residing there pending the war, whether Spanish subjects or Americans, were to be deemed enemies of the United States, their property enemy's property, and subject to seizure, confiscation, and destruction. It would seem necessarily to follow that the claimants in this case were enemies of the United States, and their property subject to the necessities of war. And this is but the application of the rule which declares that war makes of the citizens or subjects of one belligerent enemies of the government, and of the citizens or subjects of the other. The Venice (United States v. Cooke) 2 Wall. 258, 274, 17 L. ed. 866, 867; White v. Burnley, 20 How. 235, 249, 15 L. ed. 886, 889.

These consequences, it is insisted, are averted in the case at bar by two important circumstances: that Santiago, unlike Porto Rico, was not captured, but capitulated, *and by the explicit direction of[570 the proclamation of the President of July 13, 1898, promulgated in Cuba on the 20th.

The argument is that those circumstances modified the general rule, and that the property of claimant ceased to be "hostile," and passed "under the sovereignty" of the United States, and as inviolable as other property under the jurisdiction of the United States, and, if taken for public use, an obligation to make compensation would be implied. The Venice (United States v. Cooke) 2 Wall. 258, 17 L. ed. 866, and other cases are adduced to support the contention. It was decided in The Venice that after the surrender of New Orleans, its military occupation by the Federal forces "drew after it the full measure of protection to persons and property consistent with a necessary subjection to military government." The limitation is important. The case is not as broad as the contention which it is cited to support. It was concerned with the restoration of the authority of the United States over a part of the United States which had been in a state of insurrection, and in such case, that is, in districts occupied by national troops, it was "the policy of the government not to regard such districts as in actual insurrection, or their inhabitants as subject in most respects to treatment as enemies." Such occupation, it was said, did not "restore peace, or, in all respects, former relations;" but it replaced "rebel by national authority," and recognized, "to some extent, the conditions and the responsibility of national citizenship." In emphasis of the same view, it was said: "As far as possible the people of such parts of the insurgent states as came under national occupation and control were treated as if their relations to the national government had never been interrupted."

The Ouachita Cotton (Withembury v. United States) 6 Wall. 521, 18 L. ed. 935, does not change the ruling in The Venice from an expression of the special policy of the government indicated by its legislation to a declaration of law necessarily following from the military occupation of even enemy country. It was an obvious

320

Venice in United States v. Padelford, 9 Wall. 531, 19 L. ed. 788.

The case of The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. 129, 19 L. ed. 651, is also cited by claimants, and some of its language demands notice. The question involved was the legality of a provisional court for the state of Louisiana, established by the President after New Orleans and parts of the state had been occupied by the national troops. Expressing the purpose of the national government the court said that it was "neither conquest nor subjugation, but the overthrow of the insurgent organization, the suppression of insurrection, and the re-establishment of legitimate authority." It was further said that it was the duty of the government, "wherever the insurgent power was overturned, and the territory which had been dominated by it was occupied by the national forces, to provide as far as possible, so long as the war continued, for the security of persons and property, and for the administration of justice." To this was added the following: "The duty of the national government, in this respect, was no other than that which devolves upon the government of a regular belligerent occupying, during war, the territory of another belligerent. It was a military duty, to be performed by the President as Commander-in-Chief, and intrusted as such with the direction of the military force by which the occupation was held."

But it was not intended to express a limitation upon "the undoubted belligerent[572] right to use and confiscate all property of an enemy and to dispose of it at will. Miller v. United States (Page v. United States) 11 Wall. 268, 305, 20 L. ed. 135, 144, The Venice, and cases like it, expressed and enforced limitations to a certain extent upon such right growing out of the policy of the government. It may be, as said by Kent (1 Kent, Com. 92), that "the general usage now is not to touch private property upon land, without making compensation, unless in special cases, dictated by the necessary operations of war, or when captured in places carried by storm, and which repelled all the overtures for a capitulation." It may also be, as further said by the learned commentator, that "if the conqueror goes beyond these limits wantonly, or when it is not clearly indispensable to the just purposes of war, and seizes private property of pacific persons for the sake of gain, . . . he violates the modern usages of war." Id. 92 and 93.

If the record presented such a case, the question could be raised whether it presented one for judicial cognizance, even if a court could share the indignation which the learned commentator says all mankind would feel. It is certain that the court's power cannot be enlarged by its emotions. Besides, we must regard the seizure of the San Juan as an exertion of the war power, and by this we do not mean as mere "booty of war," and the comments made in Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall. 483, 495, 21 L. ed. 473, 478, in regard to an attempt by the commander at New Orleans, fifteen months after the occupation of the city by the national government, to confiscate the indebtedness of one of the banks to the other, do not apply. We only mean that the seizure was for the immediate use of the Army,—a right recognized in that case, for we do not accept the view contended for by claimants, that, with the surrender of Santiago and the cessation of active operations in the Santiago district, enemy property lost such character and was not subject to such right of capture. The war 573]*was flagrant elsewhere, and in such case Planters' Bank v. Union Bank is authority for the right, not against it. It was there decided that the military commander at New Orleans "had power to do all that the laws of war permitted, except so far as he was restrained by the pledged faith of the government, or the effect of congressional action." Such pledge and effect existed, it was held, citing the case of The Venice. It may be said the indebtedness was not absolutely exempt from confiscation as enemy's property, but only that it was not, under the particular circumstances, "subject to military seizure as booty of war." And "booty of war" was distinguished from "a seizure for immediate use of the Army." This is a distinction important to observe, and is recognized explicitly or implicitly in all of the cases and references contained in the able argument of counsel. It accommodates, when its full range is properly understood, the necessities of the conqueror and the personal and property rights, if they may be called such, of the conquered. And there is nothing in the President's proclamation of July 13, 1898, which militates against it. But suppose we should grant the contrary. Suppose we should grant to the San Juan the broadest immunity from seizure or detention. We are then brought to consider the quality of the act of the officers of the Army who seized and used her. It would seem easy to describe. If it was done in violation of the President's proclamation, if it was done in violation of the laws of war and the conditions arising from the capitulation of Santiago, it was done in wrong, and claimants encounter the prohibitions of the Tucker act against the jurisdiction of the court of 56 L. ed.

222 U. S.

claims. They are in the situation of the claimant in J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, and Juragua Iron Co. v. United States. A tort was committed against them, and though committed in the interest of the United States, there is no element of contract, and the action is one of which the court of claims could not take jurisdiction, whatever *other redress is[574 open to claimants. Indeed, we might have rested this branch of the case on those cases, both for the requirements of the Tucker act and the rights and powers of belligerents, conqueror or conquered. We have restated the propositions declared only in deference to the earnestness and force of the argument of claimants' counsel. And we rest the case on those propositions, and do not enter into a consideration of the citizenship or claimants, whether born in Spain and Spanish subjects when their vessel was seized, or Cuban by relation to the time either of the declaration of Cuban independence or of its recognition by Congress, as contended. If Spanish subjects, under the authority of J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, their right of indemnity for the seizure and use of their vessel was taken away by the treaty between Spain and the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

PASCASIO DIAZ, Enrique De Messa, and Robert Scott Douglas, Trading under the Firm Name of Gallego, Messa, & Company, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 574-578.)

This case is governed by the decision in Herrera v. United States, ante, 316.

[No. 90.]

Argued December 11 and 12, 1911. Decided January 15, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a claim for the value of the use by the military authorities of a Spanish merchant vessel captured in the harbor of Santiago. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Howard Thayer Kingsbury and Crammond Kennedy argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank D. Pavey, filed a brief for appellants.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Franklin W. Collins, filed a brief for appellee.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Herrera v. United States, ante, 316.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was argued and submitted with No. 89, Herrera v. United States, just decided. [222 U. S. 558, ante, 316, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.] As in that case the findings of fact recite the pendency of the war between the United States and Spain, the capitulation of Santiago and the cessation of hostilities in that district between the contending forces, the seizure and capture by the military authorities of the United States of the steamer Thomas Brooks, among other vessels and lighters, on the 17th day of July, 1898, she then being owned by claimants, and her use for the transportation of troops and munitions of war until September 6th of the same year, a period of fifty-seven days, the United States paying the cost of operating the steamer. Prior to her seizure she had been used to transport Spanish troops and munitions of war. The full and reasonable value of her use was $125 per day, amounting to the sum of $6,375, no part of which has been paid.

The other vessels seized and captured were small vessels and lighters, which were used for a time and later returned on the advice or opinion of the Judge Advocate General of the Army. Their use was paid 576]for by government on *some amicable terms. Also, after September 6, 1898, the claimants were, by some amicable agreement between them and the quartermaster in charge at Santiago, permitted to use and operate the Thomas Brooks at their own expense, they agreeing to transport in her troops and munitions of war and other supplies at one half the transportation rates. This was done, and the claimants were paid for the service.

On the 18th of January, 1899, after the vessel had been turned over to claimants, they executed a receipt and released all claims in the form set out in Herrera v. United States.

It was also found by the court as follows, being No. 5 of the findings:

"At the same time, to wit, July 17, 1898, the military forces of the United States took possession of two wharves, the Muelle Lus and the San José, with their warehouses and sheds, belonging to claimants, and used the same for the purpose of loading, unloading, and storing government supplies, and in facilitating the movements of troops from July 17, 1898, to March 1, 1899, a period of seven and one-half months, for which use no rental was paid, though the claimants presented bills therefor monthly; and after the government had surrendered the possession of said wharves, the chief quartermaster, Department of Santiago, offered the claimants $4,000 in full payment for the use thereof during said period, which was refused; and later payment was denied on the ground that the claim was for unliquidated damages (see opinion Judge Advocate General, Dec. 23, 1901, page 83, Senate Doc. 318, 57th Congress, 1st Sess.). During said period said wharves were not used exclusively by the United States, but commercial steamers were permitted to land there, and they were used by the merchants of the city of Santiago when such use did not interfere with the handling of government stores. It does not appear that claimants received any *compensation from commercial[577 steamers or merchants of the city for such use during said period.

"From time to time said wharves and warehouses were repaired by the United States, and claimant company was employed by the United States at $32 per day to dredge alongside of same for about three months. Said wharves were returned to claimants in nearly as good condition as when the United States took possession of them.

"The reasonable value of the use of said wharves and warehouses for the period they were used by the United States forces, together with any damage caused thereto by reason of said use, was $7,300."

The President's proclamation of July 18, 1898, is found as in the Herrera Case.

The court of claims dismissed the petition on the authority of J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, 194 U. S. 315, 48 L. ed. 994, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727, and the Herrera Case.

Claimants urge nothing in this case because one of them is a British subject, except on the principles expressed in The Venice (United States v. Cooke) 2 Wall. 258, 17 L. ed. 866, and of those principles we have commented in the Herrera Case. Nor can much be urged on account of the settlement made by the officers of the United States with claimants for the services rendered after the surrender of the vessel, and the settlement made for some smaller vessels and lighters, or the tender of payment of $4,000 by the quartermaster at Santiago for the use of the wharves, as set out in finding V. Indeed, counsel say that "the intention to pay must be the officially declared intention of the government, evidenced in the cases at bar by the rules and regulations prescribed by the President and promulgated by the Secretary of War in general orders No. 101, and not the mere temporary mental processes of this or that subordinate officer who happened to be quartermaster at the time and on the spot, and ignorant or disregarding of the law of the case as laid down by the President." The necessities of 578] the case required claimants to *take that position; but we need not repeat what we said in No. 89 of those orders or of the proclamation. It is not possible to hold that the proclamation of the President was intended to supersede the laws of war, and attach to every appropriation by the military officers conducting operations of war the obligations and remedies of contracts. It could not have been the intention of the President to prevent the seizure of property when necessary for military uses, or to prevent its confiscation or destruction. For the reasons for this conclusion we refer to the opinion in the Herrera Case. Judgment affirmed.

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION OF THE LEAF TOBACCO BOARD OF TRADE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 578-581.)

Mandamus — prohibition — certiorari.

[No. —, Original.]

Submitted December 4, 1911. Decided December 11, 1911.

(ORIGINAL APPLICATION for leave to file petition, praying:

That a writ of mandamus issue to the judges of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, directing them to vacate and set aside a decree entered pursuant to the mandate of the United States Supreme Court in United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, and to enter a decree in conformity with the opinion and mandate of the Supreme Court.

That a writ of prohibition issue directed to the said Judges, prohibiting them from proceeding to put the said decree into effect, and from granting the further and supplemental remedies and relief therein provided for.

56 L. ed.

That a writ of certiorari issue requiring the said judges to return and certify to this court all the proceedings had before them in the said cause since the filing of the mandate of this court in the court below, with all documents and evidence on which they may have acted in determining the form of their said decree.

That a writ of mandamus issue requiring the said *judges to permit your petitioner to intervene in said cause, and to be joined as a party thereto, with the right to appeal from said decree, or otherwise proceed in said cause as such party.

That pending the hearing and decision of said petition, and of the return thereto, all proceedings by the defendants or any of them looking to the execution of the plan of dissolution described in said decree be stayed.

That your petitioner have such other and further relief as may be proper.

Messrs. Felix H. Levy and Benjamin N. Cordozo for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham in opposition.

Per Curiam:

Leave to file petition denied.

1. One who is not a party to a record and judgment is not entitled to appeal therefrom. Bayard v. Lombard, 9 How. 530, 13 L. ed. 245; Indiana Southern R. Co. v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 168, 27 L. ed. 895, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Ex parte Cockcroft, 104 U. S. 578, 26 L. ed. 856.

2. The action of the court below in refusing to permit the movers to become parties to the record is not susceptible of being reviewed by this court on appeal, or indirectly, under the circumstances here disclosed, by the writ of mandamus. Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 15, 24 L. ed. 49; and see Credits Commutation Co. v. United States, 177 U. S. 311, 44 L. ed. 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636.

3. The merely general nature and character of the interest which the movers allege they have in the papers here filed is not, in any event, of such a character as to authorize them in this proceeding to assail the action of the court below. This is more obvious in this case since the act of the court which is assailed has been accepted by those who are parties to the record. United States v. Union P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 1021; Elwell v. Fosdick, 134 U. S. 500, 33 L. ed. 998, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

582]OMAHA & COUNCIL BLUFFS
STREET RAILWAY COMPANY et al.,
Appts.,

v.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 582, 583.)

Appeal — from commerce court — preserving status quo.

[No. 846.]

Submitted October 30, 1911. Decided November 6, 1911.

A PPEAL from the Commerce Court to review a judgment sustaining an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission.
On motion of the appellants the enforcement of such order restrained pending the appeal.

Mr. John Lee Webster for appellants.

Attorney General Wickersham, and Messrs. Blackburn Esterline and C. W.
Needham for appellees.

Per Curiam: Upon the authority of U.
S. Rev. Stat. § 716, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901,
p. 580; Ex parte Milwaukee & M. R. Co. 5
Wall. 188, 18 L. ed. 676; Leonard v. Ozark

324

Land Co. 115 U. S. 465, 468, 29 L. ed. 445,
446, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Re Claasen, 140
U. S. 200, 207, 35 L. ed. 409, 412, 11 Sup.
Ct. Rep. 735; Re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536,
549, 45 L. ed. 657, 662, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep.
468; United States v. Shipp, 203 U. S. 563,
573, 51 L. ed. 319, 323, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep.
165, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 265; and upon full consideration of the facts bearing upon the propriety of the appellant's motion for an order to maintain the status quo pending this appeal, it is ordered that the enforcement of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission entered November 27, 1909, and drawn in question in this case, be,
and it is, suspended and enjoined during the pendency of this appeal, upon condition that within ten days herefrom the appellants execute unto the Interstate Commerce Commission and file in this cause a good and sufficient bond in the sum of $10, 000, with sureties to be approved by the clerk of this court, and conditioned that the appellants will promptly pay any and all damages which may be suffered by their several passengers and intended passengers by reason of the granting or continuance of this order if it is adjudged ultimately that the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, drawn in question in this case, is a valid one.

222 U. S.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

Vol. 223.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 223,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.)	327	136-137	Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon	380
3-6	" "	329	137-140	" "	381
6-9	" "	330	140-142	" "	382
9-10	" "	331	142-145	" "	383
46	" "	344	145-147	" "	384
46-49	" "	345	147-150	" "	385
49-51	" "	346	150-151	" "	386
51-54	" "	347	151	Kiernan v. Portland	386
54-56	" "	348	159-161	" "	387
56-58	" "	349	161-164	" "	388
58-59	" "	350	164-166	" "	389
59	Quong Wing v. Kirkendall	350	166	" "	390
62	" "	351		The Abby Dodge (The Abby Dodge v. United States)	390
62-65	" "	352		" "	391
65-67	de Noble v. Gallardo y Scary	353	172	" "	392
67	" "	354	172-174	" "	393
67-69	United States v. Wong You	354	174-177	" "	394
69-70	" "	355	177-178	" "	394
70-71	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. F. W. Cook Brewing Co.	355	178	Hendricks v. United States	394
71-72	" "	356	180-184	" "	396
80-81	" "	357	184	" "	397
81-83	" "	358	184	" "	398
83-84	" "	359	185	Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Tremblay	398
85	Waskey v. Hammer	359	188-189	" "	398
89-90	" "	362	189-190	" "	399
90-93	" "	363	191	United States v. Baruch	399
93-95	" "	364	191-194	" "	402
95	United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher	364	194-196	" "	403
96-98	" "	366	196-199	" "	404
98-100	" "	367	199-200	" "	405
100-103	" "	368	200	Jacobs v. Prichard	405
103-106	" "	369	207-209	" "	407
106-107	" "	370	209-212	" "	408
108	Cherokee Nation v. Whitmire	370	212-214	" "	409
109	" "	373	215	Fairbanks v. United States	409
109-111	" "	374	216	" "	410
111-114	" "	375	216-219	" "	411
114-117	" "	376	219-221	" "	412
117	" "	377	221-224	" "	413
118	Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon	377	224-226	" "	414
133-136	" "	379	227	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Sandoval	415
			227-228	" "	416
			228-231	" "	417

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
231-233	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Sandoval	418	389-390	Cuebas y Arredondo v. Cuebas y Arredondo	481
234	Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. McCue	419	390	Cincinnati v. Louisville & N. R. Co.	481
243-244	" "	422	398-400	" "	483
244-247	" "	423	400-403	" "	484
247-249	" "	424	403-405	" "	485
249-252	" "	425	405-407	" "	486
252	" "	426	407	United States v. Citroen	486
253-255	New York Continental Jewell Filtration Co. v. District of Columbia	413	413	" "	487
		413-415	413-415	" "	488
255-257	" "	426	415-418	" "	489
257-260	" "	427	418-421	" "	490
260-261	" "	428	421-423	" "	491
261	Jacob v. Roberts	429	423-424	" "	492
263	" "	429	424	Ferris v. Frohman	492
263-266	" "	430	429-430	" "	494
266-267	" "	431	430-432	" "	495
268	Ker & C. v. Couden	432	432-435	" "	496
275-276	" "	432	435-437	" "	497
276-279	" "	434	437	Reitler v. Harris	497
279	" "	435	438-441	" "	499
		436	441-442	" "	500
280	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor	442	442	Diaz v. United States	500
285-287	" "	436	444-445	" "	501
287	" "	438	448-451	" "	503
288	Collins v. Texas	439	451-453	" "	504
294-295	" "	439	453-456	" "	505
295-297	" "	443	456-458	" "	506
297-298	" "	444	458-461	" "	507
298	Meyer v. Wells, Fargo, & Co.	445	461-463	" "	508
		445	463-466	" "	509
299-301	" "	447	466-467	" "	510
301-302	" "	447	468	Gaar, Scott, & Co. v. Shan-non	510
303	Powers v. United States	448	468-469	" "	511
310-311	" "	448	470-472	" "	512
311-314	" "	451	472-473	" "	513
314-316	" "	452	473-474	New Marshall Engine Co. v. Marshall Engine Co.	513
317	Rocca v. Thompson	453	474-475	" "	514
324-325	" "	453	478-479	" "	515
325-328	" "	455	479-480	" "	516
328-330	" "	456	481	Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Wallace	516
330-333	" "	457	488-490	" "	522
333-334	" "	458	490-492	" "	523
335	United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota	459	493	McCarthy v. First Nat. Bank	523
338-339	" "	462	493-494	" "	524
339-342	" "	463	497-499	" "	525
342-344	" "	464	499-500	" "	526
344-346	" "	465	501	Latimer v. United States	526
346-348	" "	466	503-504	" "	527
349	Lincoln Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Lincoln	466	504	" "	528
356-357	" "	469	505	Miller v. King	528
357-359	" "	470	509-511	" "	530
359-362	" "	471	511	" "	531
362-365	" "	472	512-514	United States v. Nord Deutscher Lloyd	531
365	Metropolitan Red Wood Lumber Co. v. Doe	473	516-517	" "	532
370-372	" "	474	517-519	" "	533
372-374	" "	475	519	Metropolitan Water Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist.	533
374-376	" "	476	519-522	" "	534
376	Cuebas y Arredondo v. Cuebas y Arredondo	476	522-524	" "	535
377-379	" "	477	524	United States v. Ellicott	535
379-381	" "	478	531-534	" "	539
385-387	" "	479	534-535	" "	540
387-389	" "	480

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
535-538	United States v. Ellicott	541	629-632	Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson	581
538-541	" "	542	632-634	" "	582
541-543	" "	543	634-637	" "	583
543	Ontario Land Co. v. Wil-		637-638	" "	584
	fong	544	639	Re Merchants' Stock &
547	" "	546		Grain Co.	584
547-550	" "	547	640-641	" "	585
550-552	" "	548	641-642	" "	586
552-555	" "	549	643	Graham v. Gill	586
555-558	" "	550	643-644	" "	587
558-559	" "	551	644-645	" "	588
560	Southern P. R. Co. v. Unit-		646	Clason v. Matko	588
	ed States	551	647-648	" "	591
563-565	" "	552	648-651	" "	592
565	United States v. Southern		651-653	" "	593
	P. R. Co.	553	653-655	" "	594
569	" "	554	655	Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co.
569-571	" "	555		v. Cedar Rapids	594
571-572	" "	556	666-667	" "	603
573	Kansas City S. R. Co. v. C.		667-670	" "	604
	H. Albers Commission		670	" "	605
	Co.	556	670-672	Wingert v. First Nat. Bank	605
584	" "	562	672	" "	606
584-586	" "	563	673	Tang Tun v. Edsell	606
586-588	" "	564	674-675	" "	607
588-591	" "	565	675-678	" "	608
591-593	" "	566	678-680	" "	609
593-596	" "	567	680-682	" "	610
596-598	" "	568	683	United States ex rel. Ness
599	United States v. Miller	568		v. Fisher	610
602-603	" "	569	688-689	" "	611
603-605	" "	570	689-691	" "	612
605	Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson	570	691-694	" "	613
613-615	" "	574	694	" "	614
615-618	" "	575	695	Ripley v. United States	614
618-620	" "	576	695-697	" "	615
620-622	" "	577	697-700	" "	616
622-624	" "	578	700-701	" "	617
624-627	" "	579	701-703	" "	618
627-629	" "	580	703-704	" "	619
			705-749	Memorandum Decisions	621-641

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

1]*EDGAR G. MONDOU, Plff. in Err.,
v.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN, & HART-
FORD RAILROAD CO. (No. 120.)

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.,
Plff. in Err.,
v.

BESSIE BABCOCK, Administratrix. (No.
170.)

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN, & HART-FORD RAILROAD CO., Plff. in Err.,
v.

MARY AGNES WALSH, Administratrix.
(No. 289.) And

MARY AGNES WALSH, Administratrix,
Plff. in Err.,
v.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN, & HART-
FORD RAILROAD CO. (No. 290.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-59.)

Commerce — power of Congress — employers' liability.

1. Congress, in the exercise of its power over interstate commerce, may regulate the relations of railway carriers and their employees while both are engaged in such commerce, subject always to the limitations prescribed in the Federal Constitution, and to the qualification that the particulars in which those relations are regulated must have a real or substantial connection with the interstate commerce in which the carriers and employees are engaged.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — power of Congress — employers' liability.

2. Congress did not exceed its power to regulate the relations of interstate railway carriers and their employees engaged in interstate commerce by enacting the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1171), which abrogates the fellow-servant rule, extends the carrier's liability to cases of death, and restricts the defenses of contributory negligence and assumption of risk, since no one has any vested right in any rule of the common law, and the natural tendency of such changes is to promote the safety of the employees and to advance the commerce in which they are engaged.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — power of Congress — employers' liability — fellow servants.

3. The power of Congress, under the commerce clause, to regulate the liability of an interstate railway carrier for the death or injury of an employee engaged in inter-

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On the validity of statute abrogating fellow-servant rule—see note to Bradford.

low-servant rule—see note to Bradford. Constr. Co. v. Heflin, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1040.

As to constitutionality of statute rendering master liable for injuries to servant, irrespective of negligence—see note to Ives v. South Buffalo R. Co. 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 162.

On concurrent jurisdiction of Federal and state courts—see notes to Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 12 L.R.A. 725; and Smith v. M'Iver, 6 L. ed. U. S. 152.

On the administration of Federal laws in state courts—see note to Loughin v. McCaulley, 48 L.R.A. 33.

state commerce, which may result from the negligence of a fellow servant, is not exceeded by the enactment of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, although that act embraces instances where the causal negligence is that of an employee engaged in intrastate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — freedom to contract — employers' liability.

4. Congress, possessing the power exercised in the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, to regulate the relations of interstate railway carriers and their employees engaged in interstate commerce, made no unwarranted interference with the liberty of contract, contrary to U. S. Const. 5th Amend., by declaring in the 5th section of that act that any contract, rule, regulation, or device the purpose or intent of which is to enable the carrier to exempt itself from the liability therein created shall be void.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 605-607, 891-894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — classification — due process of law — equal protection of the laws — employers' liability.

5. The imposition of the liability created by the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, upon interstate carriers, by railroad only, and for the benefit of all their employees engaged in interstate commerce, although some are not subjected to the peculiar hazards incident to the operation of trains, or to hazards that differ from those to which other employees in such commerce not within the act are exposed, does not invalidate the statute under the due-process-of-law clause of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, on the ground that it makes an arbitrary and unreasonable classification,—even assuming that that clause is equivalent to the provision of the 14th Amendment securing the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional law, 286-291, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — employers' liability — conflicting state and Federal regulations.

6. The laws of the several states, in so far as they cover the same field, were superseded by the enactment by Congress of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, regulating the liability of interstate railway carriers for the death or injury of their employees while engaged in interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — employers' liability — conflicting legislation — distribution.

7. The distribution of the damages recoverable, under the act of April 22, 1908, from an interstate railway carrier, for the death of an employee while engaged in interstate commerce, is governed by the provisions of that statute, which necessarily supersede any applicable state legislation.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — concurrent jurisdiction — enforcing rights under Federal statute.

8. The enforcement of rights under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, regulating the liability of interstate railway carriers for the death or injury of their employees while engaged in interstate commerce, cannot be regarded as impliedly restricted to the Federal courts, in view of the concurrent jurisdiction provision of the judiciary act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), § 1, and of the amendment made by the act of April 5, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 143), to the original employers' liability act, which, instead of granting jurisdiction to the state courts, presupposes that they already possess it.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1361-1432, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — concurrent jurisdiction — enforcing rights under Federal statute.

9. Jurisdiction of an action to enforce the rights arising under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, regulating the liability of interstate railway carriers for the death or injury of their employees while engaged in interstate commerce, may not be declined by the courts of a state whose ordinary jurisdiction as prescribed by local laws is adequate to the occasion, on the theory that such statute is not in harmony with the policy of the state, or that the exercise of such jurisdiction will be attended by inconvenience and confusion because of the different standards of right established by the congressional act and those recognized by the laws of the state.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1361-1432, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 120, 170, 289, and 290.]

Argued February 20 and 21, 1911. Decided January 15, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of New London County in that state sustaining a demurrer to a complaint based upon the Federal employers' liability act. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings. Also—

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action based on the Federal employers' liability act. Affirmed. Also—

CROSS WRITS OF ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action based on the Federal employers' liability act. Affirmed.

See same case below, No. 120, 82 Conn. 373, 73 Atl. 762; Nos. 289, 290, 173 Fed. 494.

Statement by Mr. Justice Van Devanter:
No. 120.

This was an action by a citizen of Connecticut against a railroad corporation of that state, to recover for personal injuries suffered by the plaintiff while in the defendant's service. The injuries occurred in Connecticut August 5, 1908, the action was commenced in one of the superior courts of that state in October following, and the [4]right *of action was based solely on the act of Congress of April 22, 1908. [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1171.] According to the complaint, the injuries occurred while the defendant, as a common carrier by railroad, was engaged in commerce between some of the states, and while the plaintiff, as a locomotive fireman, was employed by the defendant in such commerce, and the injuries proximately resulted from negligence of the plaintiff's fellow servants, who also were employed by the defendant in such commerce. A demurrer to the complaint was interposed upon the grounds, first, that the act of Congress was repugnant in designated aspects to the Constitution of the United States, and, second, that, even if the act were valid, a right of action thereunder could not be enforced in the courts of the state. The demurrer was sustained, judgment was rendered against the plaintiff, the judgment subsequently was affirmed by the supreme court of errors of the state (82 Conn. 373, 73 Atl. 762), upon the authority of Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 352, 73 Atl. 754, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 324, and the plaintiff then sued out the present writ of error. No. 170.

This was an action by the personal representative of a deceased employee of a railroad corporation to recover, for the exclusive benefit of the surviving widow, for the death of the employee, which resulted from an injury suffered in the course of his employment. The injury and death occurred in Montana, September 25, 1908, the action was commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, October 4, 1909, and the right of action was based solely on the act of Congress before mentioned. It appeared from the complaint that the injury occurred while the defendant, as a common carrier by railroad, was engaged in commerce between some of the states, and while the deceased, as a locomotive fireman, was employed [5]by the defendant in *such commerce; that the injury proximately resulted from negligence of fellow servants of the deceased, who also were employed by the defendant in such commerce; that the deceased resided in Montana, and died without issue or a surviving father or mother, but leaving a widow and also a sister; and that if the statutes of Montana were applicable, the recovery should be for the equal benefit of the widow and sister, and not for the exclusive benefit of the widow, as prayed in the complaint, and as provided in the act of Congress. The defendant challenged the validity of the act by a demurrer to the complaint, and in the subsequent proceedings insisted that the recovery, if any, should be for the benefit of the widow and sister jointly, and not for the benefit of the widow alone, but the demurrer and the insistence were overruled, and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for the exclusive benefit of the widow, as prayed. By a direct writ of error the defendant seeks a reversal of that judgment. Nos. 289 and 290.

These writs of error relate to the judgment in a single case. It was an action by the personal representative of a deceased employee of a railroad corporation to recover, for the benefit of the surviving widow and children, for the death of the employee, which resulted from an injury suffered in the course of his employment. The injury and death occurred in Connecticut, February 11, 1909, the action was commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts in July following, and the right of action asserted in the second count of the declaration was based on the act of Congress before mentioned. There were several other counts, but they may be passed without special notice. It was charged in the second count that the injury occurred while the defendant, *as a common carrier by [6] railroad, was engaged in commerce between some of the states, and while the deceased, in the course of his employment by the defendant in such commerce, was engaged in replacing a drawbar on one of the defendant's cars then in use in such commerce, and that the injury proximately resulted from negligence of fellow servants of the deceased in pushing other cars against the one on which he was working. A demurrer to that count challenged the validity of the act of Congress, but the demurrer was overruled. The defendant answered, putting in issue all that was stated in that count, and also alleging that the deceased, by his own negligence, contributed to the injury which resulted in his death, and therefore that the damages should be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to him. A trial to the court and a jury resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff upon the second count, and there was a judgment for the defendant upon the other counts. Each party has sued out a direct writ of error from this court. The defendant calls in question the ruling upon its demurrer and other rulings in the progress of the cause, notably such as related to the nature of the employment in which the deceased and the fellow servants whose conduct was in question were engaged at the time of the injury, and to the admeasurement of the damages. The plaintiff makes no complaint of the judgment upon the second count, and, if it shall be affirmed, wishes to waive her objections to the judgment upon the other counts.

The act whose validity is drawn in question (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1171), and the amendment of April 5, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 143), are as follows:

An Act Relating to the Liability of Common Carriers by Railroad to Their Employees in Certain Cases.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every common carrier by railroad, while engaging in commerce between any of the several states or territories, or between any of the states and territories, or between the District of Columbia and any of the states or territories, or between the District of Columbia or any of the states or territories and any foreign nation or nations, shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier in such commerce, or, in case of the death of such employee, to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee; and, if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee, for such injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier, or by reason of any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, works, boats, wharves, or other equipment.

Sec. 2. That every common carrier by railroad in the territories, the District of Columbia, the Panama canal zone, or other possessions of the United States, shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier in any of said jurisdictions, or, in case of the death of such employee, to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee; and, if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee, for such injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier, or by reason of any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, works, boats, wharves, or other equipment.

Sec. 3. That in all actions hereafter brought against any such common carrier by railroad under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act, to recover damages for personal injuries to an employee, or where such injuries have resulted in his death, the fact that the employee may have been guilty of contributory negligence shall not bar a recovery, but the damages shall be diminished by the jury in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to such employee: Provided, That no such employee who may be injured or killed shall be held to have been guilty of contributory negligence in any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee.

Sec. 4. That in any action brought against any common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act to recover damages for injuries to, or the death of, any of its employees, such employee shall not be held to have assumed the risks of his employment in any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee.

Sec. 5. That any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this act, shall to that extent be void: Provided, That in any action brought against any such common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this act, such common carrier may set off therein any sum it has contributed or paid to any insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity that may have been paid to the injured employee or the person entitled thereto on account of the injury or death for which said action was brought.

Sec. 6. That no action shall be maintained under this act unless commenced within two years from the day the cause of action accrued.

Sec. 7. That the term "common carrier" as used in this act shall include the receiver or receivers or other persons or corporations charged with the duty of the management and operation of the business of a common carrier.

Sec. 8. That nothing in this act shall be held to limit the duty or liability of common carriers, or to impair the rights of their employees under any other act or acts of Congress, or to affect the prosecution of any pending proceeding or right of action under the act of Congress entitled, "An Act Relating to Liability of Common Carriers in the District of Columbia and Territories, and to Common Carriers Engaged in Commerce between the States and Foreign Nations to their Employees," approved June eleventh, nineteen hundred and six. [34 Stat. at L. 232, chap. 3073, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1148].

Approved April 22, 1908.

An Act to Amend an Act Entitled, "An Act Relating to the Liability of Common Carriers by Railroad to Their Employees in Certain Cases," Approved April Twenty-second, Nineteen Hundred and Eight.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act entitled "An Act Relating to the Liability of Common Carriers by Railroad to Their Employees in Certain Cases," approved April twenty-second, nineteen hundred and eight, be amended in section six so that said section shall read:

Sec. 6. That no action shall be maintained under this act unless commenced within two years from the day the cause of action accrued.

"Under this act an action may be brought in a circuit court of the United States, in the district of the residence of the defendant, or in which the cause of action arose, or in which the defendant shall be doing business at the time of commencing such action. The jurisdiction of the courts of the United States under this act shall be concurrent with that of the courts of the several states, and no case 10]*arising under this act and brought in any state court of competent jurisdiction shall be removed to any court of the United States."

Sec. 2. That said act be further amended by adding the following section as section nine of said act:

"Sec. 9. That any right of action given by this act to a person suffering injury shall survive to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee, and if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee; but in such cases there shall be only one recovery for the same injury."

Approved, April 5, 1910.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Donald G. Perkins argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error in No. 120:

So far as the substantive right goes, the employers' liability act of 1908 does not differ from the act of 1906, and was within the power of Congress.

Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability Acts, § 7, p. 10; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 178, 52 L. ed. 444, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

Even the rules of the common law limited the power of the carrier to free itself entirely by contract from liability for its negligence in the carriage of passengers and freight, and the legislative power of Congress, assuming the matter is within its sphere, includes the right to change these rules of the common law and create a new and different rule.

New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655, 24 L. ed. 535; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

All the arguments as to the confusion and evil results likely to be caused by this law have no bearing upon the question as to the constitutional power of Congress to pass it, but relate merely to the wisdom of the legislative act.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 492, 52 L. ed. 306, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 405, 53 L. ed. 847, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Nor is there any violation of constitutional privilege because the act applies to railroad interstate carriers alone; for it bears alike upon all in that class, and it was a matter for Congress alone to decide whether it should apply to all carriers, carriers by water or carriers by railroad, as Congress saw the need for the regulation of commerce.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161.

The opinion of the Connecticut supreme court fails to take note of the distinction between the act conferring power on the court to take jurisdiction of and adjudicate the disputed rights of the litigant, and the right of action itself belonging to the litigant.

Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 243, 20 L. ed. 626; Cook v. Whipple, 55 N. Y. 164, 14 Ann. Rep. 202.

State courts have concurrent jurisdiction of civil actions arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, unless such jurisdiction is excluded by express words or by a strong implication.

Claffin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 137, 23 L. ed. 838.

The power to regulate interstate commerce is one of the powers which the state surrendered to the United States, and assuming that the act in question is constitutional and within the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce, then the power of Congress is supreme and paramount to that of the state, and supersedes the law and policy of the state of Connecticut on the same subject, so that the state has no law and no policy on this subject except the act of Congress.

Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 242, 16 L. ed. 247; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 103, 39 L. ed. 910, 912, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 162, 47 L. ed. 995, 999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

The great and substantial difference noted by the Connecticut supreme court, which, in its opinion, precludes jurisdiction, is that the act allows recovery for damages caused by the negligence of a fellow servant, while the Connecticut law does not; but this very difference has been held not sufficient to prevent the courts of one state from enforcing the laws of another, merely from comity.

Walsh v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 160 Mass. 571, 39 Am. St. Rep. 514, 36 N. E. 584; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 197, 38 L. ed. 960, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978.

Another objection noted by the Connecticut supreme court was the rule of distribution of death damages fixed by the act, which differs slightly from the Connecticut law, but such a difference has been held by this court not sufficient to prevent the courts of one state from enforcing a cause of action under the statutes of another.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 18, 21, 26 L. ed. 441, 443.

There is no objection to the statute because under it a receiver appointed by a state court may be sued without going through the form of first getting the consent of the court.

Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717.

Even if the plaintiff's right of action were to be treated as arising under the laws of a foreign state, the Connecticut court could not deny him a remedy from mere whim or because the judges did not like the law, but it could only be done on established principles of law governing all cases, that to grant him his remedy would be against the public policy or interests of the state, not simply against the interest of the defendant, and the following cases show that the conclusion of the court that it could not entertain jurisdiction was unsound and not in accord with established principles.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 18, 26 L. ed. 441; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 38 L. ed. 958, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978; Ward v. Jenkins, 10 Met. 588; Higgins v. Central New England & W. R. Co. 155 Mass. 176, 31 Am. St. Rep. 544, 29 N. E. 534; Walsh v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 160 Mass. 571, 39 Am. St. Rep. 514, 36 N. E. 584; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 31, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Leonard v. Columbia Steam Nav. Co. 84 N. Y. 48, 38 Am. Rep. 491; Stoekman v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 15 Mo. App. 503; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, 92 Va. 495, 44 L.R.A. 449, 23 S. E. 935.

But the plaintiff's case is much stronger than if he were suing under a foreign law, because the whole foundation of the comity rule as to transitory actions is the principle that the law of a state has no extra-territorial force, and therefore can be enforced, not of right, but only as an act of comity; while this plaintiff is a citizen of Connecticut, and sues in the courts of his own state on a cause of action arising in the state under the act of Congress, which is the supreme law of Connecticut, and governs the public policy of the state on that point.

Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 508, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Claffin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 136, 23 L. ed. 838.

It is true, as held in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 285, 52 L. ed. 1064, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, that each state may determine the limits of the jurisdiction of its courts, and how far it will entertain transitory actions when the cause of action arose outside the state, but that case establishes the exception that such power is subject to the limitations of the Federal Constitution, and is not applicable to a cause of action arising in the state under a law of the United States which is secured to the citizen by the Constitution.

No such situation is presented here as in Re Stephens, 4 Gray, 559, where by state statute the courts had been deprived of jurisdiction to grant naturalization papers to United States citizens.

The following authorities establish the proposition that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain his action in the state court:

Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 243, 20 L. ed. 626; Teal v. Felton, 12 How. 292, 13 L. ed. 993; Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 136, 23 L. ed. 838; First Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 132 U. S. 141, 144, 33 L. ed. 282, 283, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 48 L. ed. 140, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Raisler v. Oliver, 97 Ala. 710, 38 Am. St. Rep. 213, 12 So. 238; Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 245, 28 Am. Rep. 455; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bullock, 24 Neb. 827, 40 N. W. 413; Singer v. National Bedstead Mfg. Co. 65 N. J. Eq. 293, 55 Atl. 868; Cook v. Whipple, 55 N. Y. 164, 14 Am. Rep. 202; People v. Welch, 141 N. Y. 273, 24 L.R.A. 117, 38 Am. St. Rep. 793, 36 N. E. 328; Bletz v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. 87, 30 Am. Rep. 343; Hartley v. United States, 3 Hayw. 45; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Flipppo, 138 Ala. 487, 35 So. 457; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Bromberg, 141 Ala. 258, 37 So. 395; Nelson v. Southern R. Co. 172 Fed. 478.

Mr. Edward D. Robbins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph F. Berry, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Congress cannot confer jurisdiction upon the state courts.

Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 334, 4 L. ed. 104; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 27, 5 L. ed. 25; Dudley v. Mayhew, 3 N. Y. 15; Davison v. Champlin, 7 Conn. 244; State v. Curtis, 35 Conn. 374, 95 Am. Dec. 263; United States v. Lathrop, 17 Johns. 8; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 301; 1 Kent, Com. 12th ed. 399, 400; State v. Inferior C. P. Judges, 58 N. J. L. 97, 30 L.R.A. 761, 32 Atl. 743.

The reservation to the states respectively means the reservation of the right of sovereignty which they respectively possessed before the adoption of the Constitution, and which they had not parted from by that instrument; and any legislation by Congress beyond the limits of the power delegated would be trespassing upon the rights of the states or the people, and would not be the supreme law of the land, but null and void.

United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 295, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Ex parte Merryman, Taney, 246, Fed. Cas. No. 9,487; The Collector v. Day (Guffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 124, 20 L. ed. 125.

The several state legislatures retain all the powers of legislation delegated to them by the state Constitutions which are not expressly taken away by the Constitution of the United States. The establishing of courts of justice, the appointment of judges, and the making of regulations for the administration of justice within each state according to laws on all subjects not intrusted to the Federal government is the peculiar and exclusive province and duty of the state legislature.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 388, 1 L. ed. 649.

Can it be within the power of Congress to prescribe that the superior court of Connecticut must assume jurisdiction of a cause of action based upon an act the terms of which are entirely incompatible with its system of jurisprudence?

Kent, Com. 12th ed. *403; Mitchell v. Great Works Mill. & Mfg. Co. 2 Story, 648, Fed. Cas. No. 9,662; The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 126, 20 L. ed. 122, 126; Stearns v. United States, 2 Paine, 300, Fed. Cas. No. 13,341; Sherman v. Bingham, 3 Cliff. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 12,762; Beavin's Petition, 33 N. H. 89; Re Stephens, 4 Gray, 559.

Nowhere in the United States Constitution can it be found that the states have given up to the Federal government the power which they originally possessed of assuming or denying jurisdiction of any particular cause of action, and this power never having been granted to the Federal government, neither expressly nor impliedly, and never having been prohibited to the states, they may assume or decline to assume the jurisdiction as granted.

Re Woodbury, 98 Fed. 833.

The rule is well settled that Congress cannot provide rules of evidence which the state courts are bound to follow.

People ex rel. Barbour v. Gates, 43 N. Y. 40; Caldwell v. New Jersey S. B. Co. 47 N. Y. 282; Moore v. Moore, 47 N. Y. 467, 7 Am. Rep. 466; Bowlin v. Com. 2 Bush, 5, 92 Am. Dec. 468; Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 542.

One of the most vital objections which the state court may offer as an excuse for refusing to assume jurisdiction is that contained in § 7 of the act, which gives the right to bring an action against a receiver of a corporation, irrespective of whether the receiver is appointed by authority of a state court or not. The court which appoints the receiver clearly has the right to decide for itself whether the receiver, acting for the court, shall be sued in any action. Although this section is not contrary to practice in the Federal courts, by reason of the fact that every receiver appointed by a court of the United States may be sued without its previous leave, it is, however, contrary to the practice of the state court, and sets up a new rule which the state courts may well object to. No action against a receiver may be had except by permission of the court which appointed the receiver.

Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S. 126, 26 L.

ed. 672; Tobin v. Central Vermont R. Co. 185 Mass. 337, 70 N. E. 431; Passage v. Dansville & Mt. M. R. Co. 41 App. Div. 182, 58 N. Y. Supp. 770.

All actions brought under the interstate commerce law for penalties and complaints made in regard to rates and so forth are brought exclusively in the courts of the United States, as it is desirable to obtain uniformity in decisions.

Sheldon v. Wabash R. Co. 105 Fed. 785.

The reasons of the supreme court of errors of the state of Connecticut, as set forth in the case of Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 352, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324, are sufficient to warrant this court in holding that the state courts of Connecticut are not obliged to assume jurisdiction in cases arising under an act which is not in harmony with Connecticut's system of administrative justice, and which sets up rules of evidence and procedure which could only be sustained by disregarding many of the requirements of the law of the state of Connecticut, both with respect to pleadings and evidence.

Mr. Edward D. Robbins also filed a separate brief for defendant in error:

The relations of master and servant, and specifically the liability of the master in case of injury to a servant, are in themselves matters for regulation by the states, and are not, in general, within the sphere of the national government.

From the mere circumstance that an act of Congress regulates the relation of master and servant, it does not necessarily follow that it may not also substantially affect the course of commerce between the states; and there is no peculiar sacredness about this particular relation, which should hedge out the national government from dealing with it, if and when Congress is truly acting under the power to regulate commerce between the states, within the limits established by the Constitution of the United States.

The mere circumstance that persons are engaged in interstate commerce does not make all their affairs and mutual relations subjects for regulation by Congress, or render any statute affecting the affairs and relations of such persons a regulation of commerce between the states, and therefore void if enacted by a state legislature, and valid if enacted by Congress. Such a statute must at least actually and substantially affect the course of such commerce. The application of this rule is alone sufficient for a complete disposal of this whole case. It is difficult to believe that anybody, awake to facts and willing to face them, can believe that this act does in reality affect the course of commerce between the states.

An act of Congress may affect the course of interstate commerce in some of its applications, but if it has also other substantial important applications in which it will not so affect interstate commerce, it is not in these last-mentioned applications a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate commerce, and, unless sustained by some other constitutional provision, is, to this extent, at least, an invalid law. And where the applications of an act of Congress which are beyond the power of Congress are not applications of separable parts of the act, but are applications of the statute as a whole, or of the particular provision in question, then this whole statute, or this whole provision, is invalid. And it is respectfully submitted that this act embraces provisions without which it would never have been enacted at all by Congress, which invade the sphere secured by the Constitution of the United States to the governments of the several states.

An act of Congress may directly and substantially affect the course of commerce between the states, and yet be invalid, if it violates the fundamental principles of justice and social order upon which rests the distinction between an arbitrary government and a government of law, so as to deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

In determining whether any statute does, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States, deny to any person the protection of the "law of the land," the judiciary will always look beyond the form of the statute, and, refusing to be trammelled by fictions or technicalities, will consider it as constitutional statesmen, whose eyes may and should be fully open to all actualities of the present, and all substantial potentialities of the future.

Mr. Charles W. Bunn argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error in No. 170:

The act of Congress rests wholly upon the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states, and this power has not been described in better terms than by Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23, when he said it was the power "to prescribe the rules by which commerce is to be governed."

This definition has been followed constantly; see Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 177, 52 L. ed. 436, 443, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

The object of the commerce clause, we think, was well stated by Mr. Hackett in 22 Harvard L. Rev. 38, thus: "It is the guarantying of a facility of intercourse in transportation across state lines. In a word, the power intrusted to Congress was designed to insure and expedite the conveyance of passengers and freight with complete freedom and ease from one state to another."

It will be said that the effect and purpose of the act are to promote the safety of employees; that employees are an instrumentality of commerce; that Congress has the right to regulate such instrumentalities, and therefore the right to regulate employees. This is true only to the extent that the attempted regulation of the employee bears such relation to commerce as to be in fact a regulation thereof. Congress may well have the right to prescribe qualifications, examinations, or tests for color blindness, to regulate the carrier's method of doing business and its relations to its employees by prescribing safety appliances or by limiting the employees' hours of labor. All these matters operate directly upon commerce, tending, as they do, to make transportation more reliable, safe, and expeditious. It would seem that regulation of liability for injury to an employee merely because the master is engaged in interstate commerce, or because the employee is so engaged, is inadmissible, the particular regulation not being a rule of commerce or having any relation to commerce; or, at most, such a shadowy and indirect relation as not to be a regulation of commerce within the power of Congress.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

Such regulations as are before us would seem to be police regulations for the protection of life, within the Gloucester Ferry Company Case; to be of that character of regulation within the police power of the state under the Rahrer Case; to relate to the security of lives, limbs, and health of persons and within the jurisdiction of the state, as said in the Robbins Case; to be within the first division of powers stated in Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 209, 38 L. ed. 962, 965, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087, and within the exceptions stated in the Hooper Case.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Congress has the power, under the commerce clause, to regulate the relation of master and servant as between an interstate carrier and an interstate servant.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. 56 L. ed.

Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 494, 496, 52 L. ed. 297, 307, 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Peirce v. VanDusen, 69 L.R.A. 705, 24 C. C. A. 280, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 693; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

The power of Congress to regulate commerce upon natural highways is exactly the same as it is to regulate commerce on artificial highways, being based solely upon the commerce clause of the Constitution. Hence, decisions of this court construing statutes regulating commerce by water are directly in point in the case at bar. In this connection, see:

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 724, 725, 18 L. ed. 96, 99; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 78, 9 L. ed. 1004, 1006; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821.

The power of Congress in this respect is as great as was that of the states in their respective boundaries before the adoption of the Constitution.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 725, 18 L. ed. 99.

Various decisions of this court, in which state statutes regulating the relation of railroad common carriers and their employees were under consideration as to their constitutionality, clearly tend to sustain the contention that Congress has the power to regulate the relation of master and servant as between an interstate carrier and an interstate employee.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

There can be no question that the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the states is as great as to regulate commerce with foreign nations, the power in both instances originating solely from the commerce clause.

Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156

U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 538, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415.

There would seem to be no doubt that the act, properly construed, covers cases where injuries to an interstate employee are caused through the negligence of any employee, whether or not the latter was employed in such commerce. But it does not undertake to change the common-law doctrine of the assumption of risk for the negligence of fellow servants, in so far as interstate employees are concerned. It would impair the usefulness of the act very materially if Congress did not have the power to impose such liability upon a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce, for the work being done by interstate employees and intrastate employees is so combined and intermingled that at all times interstate trains and interstate employees, as well as the public, are constantly being exposed to danger through the acts of intrastate servants. If Congress did not have the power to impose liability for the negligence of such intrastate servants, then it would not be true that the power to regulate "may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution."

Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 942.

The decisions of this court sustaining the constitutionality of the safety-appliance acts are directly in point. Those acts make it unlawful for any common carrier by railroad, engaged in interstate commerce, to use any car in any train engaged in interstate commerce, not equipped as provided for in those acts, without reference to the use to which such car at any time is being put. In other words, if any car in said train is being used in interstate commerce, all cars in that train must be equipped according to the provisions of the safety-appliance acts, whether such cars are being used or were ever used in carrying interstate merchandise.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 93 C. C. A. 393, 168 Fed. 1.

It necessarily follows that, if Congress has the power to regulate as to the character of safety appliances to be used upon all cars in an interstate train, irrespective of whether the cars are interstate or intrastate cars, so as to promote the safety of the employees engaged in interstate commerce, the safety of the train and of the public, Congress also has the power to impose liability upon an interstate carrier by railroad in favor of an interstate servant injured through the negligence of other employees working at and about and in connection with such interstate railroad, irrespective of the employment of the servant chargeable with careless acts resulting in such injury.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The act in question is not invalid because confined to common carriers by railroad, engaged in interstate commerce, nor because it embraces all interstate employees or interstate roads, when injured while engaged in such service, without regard to the character of such service.

Kiley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 138 Wis. 215, 119 N. W. 309, 120 N. W. 756.

Congress has just as much power to classify railroads engaged in interstate commerce for the purpose of legislation as it had to pass an act with reference to contracts for seamen's wages, and such legislation has been held to be valid.

Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821.

Congress has the right to declare that the common-law doctrine of contributory negligence and assumption of risk, being good defenses, notwithstanding the negligence of the master, shall no longer prevail.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; The Max Morris, 137 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 586, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; The Mystic, 44 Fed. 399; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 295, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1068, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Any contention made that the statute impairs liberty of contract is fully and ably met and refuted by the language of the supreme court of Wisconsin, and the cases therein, cited in Kiley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 138 Wis. 215, 119 N. W. 309, 120 N. W. 756.

Mr. John L. Hall argued the cause and filed a brief for the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad Company in Nos. 289, 290:

Any regulation, to come within the meaning of the interstate commerce clause, must be direct and logical, and not indirect, remote, and merely incidental.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 592, 43 L. ed. 290, 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 228, 44 L. ed. 136, 142, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 487, 24 L. ed. 547, 548; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 623, 48 L. ed. 1154, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 624, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Corfield v. Coryell, 4

Wash. C. C. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. ed. 745; Wabash St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 190, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 178, 180, 52 L. ed. 436, 444, 445, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 113; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

If the act has no real or substantial relation to that commerce, or if it is an invasion of the rights reserved to the state, it is the duty of the court to adjudge the act unconstitutional.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

Acts which are held constitutional when applied to maritime regulation are not necessarily constitutional when applied to commerce by land.

Craig v. Continental Ins. Co. 141 U. S. 638, 35 L. ed. 886, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Butler v. Boston & S. S. Co. 130 U. S. 548, 32 L. ed. 1021, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. 678; Re Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 631, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 183, 47 L. ed. 770, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt) 21 Wall. 558, 22 L. ed. 654.

The act invades the sovereignty of the states.

Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 96, 25 L. ed. 552; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1, 48, 5 L. ed. 19, 30; Keller v. United States, 213 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 737, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 470, 16 Ann. Cas. 1066; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 352, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324.

The right of the state to regulate its commerce within its own borders is paramount to the power of Congress to regulate such commerce.

License Cases, 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 256.

The act touches directly and seeks to regulate the relation of master and servant as to intrastate business.

Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 368, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324.

The purpose of both the 5th and 14th Amendments to the Federal Constitution is to secure the existence of fundamental justice and to prevent capricious and arbitrary legislation whereby unfair burdens are placed upon one class of persons. If such legislation be passed by any of the states, it conflicts with the 14th Amendment. If it is an act of Congress, it conflicts with the 5th Amendment. In this respect the construction placed upon one Amendment is applicable to the other.

San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 7 Sawy. 517, 13 Fed. 151; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 718, 25 L. ed. 501; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 123, 24 L. ed. 83; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The 5th Amendment insures equal protection of the laws. It prevents distinctions and classifications, unless the classifications are made upon some basis which is natural, and not arbitrary.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

As a basis for classification by special legislation of Congress, has this court any right to assume that the majority of the members of the class who are favored by this legislation are exposing their lives to extraordinary risks when the facts are to the contrary? This court will determine for itself the propriety of the classification.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

One rule of liability cannot be established for railway companies merely as such, and another rule for other employers, under like circumstances and conditions.

Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 222, 8 L.R.A. 419, 45 N. W. 156.

Assuming as we do that the equal protection demanded by the 14th Amendment in respect to legislation by the states is similarly demanded by the 5th Amendment in respect to legislation of Congress (French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 328, 45 L. ed. 879, 883, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625), and that no classification can be made that does not rest upon some proper basis, then the hazardous character of the railroad business seems to offer the only reasonable and natural test.

Akeson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 106 Iowa, 54, 75 N. W. 676.

The provisions of § 5 violate the 5th Amendment in that they interfere with freedom of contract.

Allegeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 19 Wall. 584, 22 L. ed. 173.

Congress in this respect, and under the guise of regulating interstate commerce, sought to legislate upon the right of contract in relation to matters only indirectly and remotely connected with interstate commerce.

Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 369, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324.

It would seem to be a strained construction of the statute to hold that Walsh and Keating resumed their employment in interstate commerce by returning to the work of repairs upon a car which had been withdrawn from its journey, if, indeed, its journey was not at an end.

Foley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 64 Iowa, 644, 21 N. W. 124; Stroble v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 70 Iowa, 555, 59 Am.

Rep. 456, 31 N. W. 63; Malone v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 65 Iowa, 417, 54 Am. Rep. 11, 21 N. W. 756; Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 222, 8 L.R.A. 419, 45 N. W. 156; Jemming v. Great Northern R. Co. 96 Minn. 302, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 696, 104 N. W. 1079; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Medaris, 60 Kan. 151, 55 Pac. 875; Indianapolis & G. Rapid Transit Co. v. Foreman, 162 Ind. 85, 102 Am. St. Rep. 185, 69 N. E. 669; Taylor v. Southern R. Co. 178 Fed. 380; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Delk, 86 C. C. A. 95, 158 Fed. 931, 14 Ann. Cas. 233.

The carrier is not liable for the negligence of the intrastate employee.

Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 79 Fed. 893.

Congress cannot create such a right of action in favor of the personal representatives of the inhabitant of a state, thereby seeking to regulate the measure of damages and determining the beneficiaries.

Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Sherlock v. Al-ling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820.

A strict construction of this statute, which alters the common law, is required, and no sufficient provision has been made for the assessment of damages.

Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. 412; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. ed. 892.

Expectancy tables are entitled to consideration only when the precedent has brought the deceased clearly within the class of selected lives tabulated.

Kerrigan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 194 Pa. 98, 44 Atl. 1069; McKenna v. Citizens' Natural Gas Co. 198 Pa. 31, 47 Atl. 990.

Those tables themselves were the best evidence, and not the testimony of the witness as to their contents.

Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 38 Fed. 15; Scheffler v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 32 Minn. 518, 21 N. W. 711; Donaldson v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 18 Iowa, 280, 87 Am. Dec. 391; Banks v. Braman, 195 Mass. 97, 80 N. E. 799.

Life or mortuary tables do not furnish any absolute rule of computation.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 39 L. ed. 624, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 30 L. ed. 257, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Hinsdale v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 81 App. Div. 617, 81 N. Y. Supp. 356; Mix v. Hamburg-American S. S. Co. 85 App. Div. 475, 83 N. Y. Supp. 322; Fajardo v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 84 App. Div. 354, 82 N. Y. Supp. 912; Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability Acts, p. 121.

Mr. Endicott P. Saltonstall argued the cause, and, with Mr. George D. Burrage, filed a brief for Walsh, administratrix:

Congress has the power to regulate the relations of master and servant as between an interstate carrier and an interstate employee.

Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 942; Colasurdo v. Central R. Co. 180 Fed. 832; Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 179 Fed. 893; Fulgham v. Midland Valley R. Co. 167 Fed. 660; Winfree v. Northern P. R. Co. — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 97 C. C. A. 392, 173 Fed. 65; Dewberry v. Southern R. Co. 175 Fed. 307; Bottoms v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 179 Fed. 318; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 494, 52 L. ed. 307, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 136 Wis. 410, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 326, 117 N. W. 686.

The fellow-servant rule is an exception to the general rule, respondeat superior. If Congress repeals the fellow-servant rule as to employees of an interstate carrier while engaged in interstate commerce, then the employer becomes directly responsible in such cases to the injured employee, by force of the general rule; and it is entirely immaterial how the employee who caused the injury was employed, since his act or omission is legally that of the employer.

Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 950.

Assuming, however, that the act must be held to regulate intrastate commerce, to some extent, because it makes the employer liable for the negligence of intrastate employees, nevertheless, even in that event, the act is not invalid, because, wherever it is a necessary incident to the regulation of interstate commerce, Congress may control to that extent intrastate commerce.

United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 893; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 566, 19 L. ed. 999, 1002; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 599, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1107, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; United States v. Burlington & H. C. Ferry Co. 21 Fed. 340; The Hazel Kirke, 23 Blatchf. 292, 25 Fed. 607; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 953; Colasurdo v. Central R. Co. 180 Fed. 832; Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability Acts, pp. 48-50.

There is nothing to indicate that any distinction is made between injuries due to the negligence of interstate employees and injuries due to the negligence of intrastate employees.

Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 178, 52 L. ed. 436, 444, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; El Paso & N. E. 56 L. ed.

R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 93, 54 L. ed. 106, 109, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

Railroads may be classed as subjects for special legislation on account of the dangerous character of their business.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ross, 212 U. S. 560, 53 L. ed. 652, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

If the Indiana act does not violate the 14th Amendment, a fortiori, the act under discussion does not violate the 5th Amendment, which does not contain the "equal protection" clause.

Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 946.

If there is nothing in the 14th Amendment to prevent a state from passing an employers' liability act which puts in one class all railroad employees, irrespective of the hazardous nature of their employment, as in the Indiana act (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676), a fortiori, there is nothing in the 5th Amendment to prevent Congress from making a similar classification in a Federal employers' liability act.

If Congress has the power to regulate the relation between interstate railroads and their employees while engaged in interstate commerce, and may prescribe a rule of liability as between them (Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764), it certainly has the power to determine the extent of that liability, and therefore to alter or abolish the common-law rule that contributory negligence is a defense.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Wilmington Star Min. Co. v. Fulton, 205 U. S. 60, 74, 51 L. ed. 708, 716, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 524, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 183 U. S. 582, 46 L. ed. 339, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. 203 U. S. 284, 51 L. ed. 184, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, 8 Ann. Cas. 87.

If Congress has power, under the Constitution of the United States, to pass the act, it is clear that nothing in the Constitution, laws or decisions of the courts of Connecticut can in any way affect its validity, so that these assignments raise no new question.

Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 99, 32 L. ed. 352, 353, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The safety-appliance act is a penal statute, and there are no words specifically giving an injured employee a right of action for damages, much less providing how those damages shall be assessed; but, since a violation of a statutory obligation is negligence, an employee who is injured by reason of such violation has his action for damages, and those damages will be assessed according to the principles applied in similar actions of tort for personal injuries.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

Congress may create such a right of action in favor of personal representatives of an inhabitant of a state.

Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 104, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 179 Fed. 893.

Congress has the power to abolish the doctrine of "assumption of risk" as provided in § 4 of the act.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

Congress has the power to declare void a contract which enables a common carrier to exempt itself from liability under the act, as provided in § 5.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 540, 52 L. ed. 326, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 179 Fed. 893.

The single fact that the defective car which Walsh undertook to repair contained perishable freight, brought from outside the state where the accident happened, is sufficient to show that the company was engaged in interstate commerce at the time Walsh was killed.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 566, 19 L. ed. 999, 1002; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 893.

The defective car which Walsh was repairing at the time he was killed was, under the decisions above and hereafter cited, being used in interstate commerce. It was filled with perishable freight brought from outside the state, and temporarily "cut out" of the train for necessary, but easily and quickly made, repairs.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 70 L.R.A. 264, 65 C. C. A. 226, 129 Fed. 522; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Delk, 86 C. C. A. 95, 158 Fed. 931, 14 Ann. Cas. 233; United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 149 Fed. 486; United States v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 154 Fed. 516; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 156 Fed. 182; United States v. Wheeling & L. E. R. Co. 167 Fed. 198; Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 93 C. C. A. 393, 168 Fed. 1; Belt R. Co. v. United States, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 582, 93 C. C. A. 666, 168 Fed. 542; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 94 C. C. A. 652, 169 Fed. 372; United States v. Southern R. Co. 170 Fed. 1014; Johnson v. Great Northern R. Co. 102 C. C. A. 89, 178 Fed. 646; Felt v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 48 Colo. 249, 110 Pac. 215, 1136, 21 Ann. Cas. 379.

It follows that Walsh was at that time employed in such commerce.

Colasurdo v. Central R. Co. 180 Fed. 832; Johnson v. Great Northern R. Co. 102 C. C. A. 89, 178 Fed. 643; Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 179 Fed. 893.

The late Solicitor General Bowers and Attorney General Wickersham filed a brief for the United States as amici curiæ:

So far as it relates to the liability of an interstate employer to an interstate employee for injury received through the negligence of another interstate employee, the act is certainly a regulation of interstate commerce, and therefore is within the constitutional power of Congress.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 543, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Watson v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 169 Fed. 942; Zikos v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 179 Fed. 893.

Numerous illustrations of the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce by legislation concerning the agents who carry it on or the instruments with which it is done exist both in the Federal statutes and in the decisions of this court. For example:

(a) Congress may even create an agent for doing interstate commerce. The Pacific Railroad Companies were so incorporated or enfranchised.

Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 319, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; California

v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

In like manner, Congress may authorize the erection of bridges as instrumentalities of interstate commerce.

The Clinton Bridge (Gray v. Chicago, I. & N. R. Co.) 10 Wall. 454, 19 L. ed. 969; Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 38 L. ed. 808, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891.

All this is because the agent or the instrumentality makes possible the act. If Congress may create, a fortiori it may legislate to preserve, the agent or instrumentality; because such preservation is essential to the act.

(b) Congress may prescribe the character or qualifications of the agents of interstate commerce. Thus, it may require the use of pilots licensed under its authority, and may provide that none but such pilot shall be necessary.

Spraigue v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 95, 30 L. ed. 115, 117, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988.

Such power as the states possess to license and to require the use of pilots exists only because Congress leaves them that power until action by itself.

Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Huus v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 182 U. S. 392, 45 L. ed. 1146, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Olsen v. Smith, 195 U. S. 332, 344, 49 L. ed. 224, 230, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

This congressional power over the kind and quality of the agents of interstate commerce arises from their influence upon the act of interstate commerce.

(c) Likewise, Congress may prescribe the kind and condition of the material instruments with which commerce shall be done. This is illustrated by the safety-appliance acts of March 2, 1893, April 1, 1896, and of March 2, 1903. It is illustrated also by the numerous acts concerning such things as steam boilers, life preservers, life boats, and fire apparatus on vessels. The validity of the safety-appliance acts seems never to have been questioned either by the bar or by this court.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The system of licensing steam vessels engaged in interstate commerce was upheld in The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999.

Do the kind and quality of material instruments affect the act of interstate commerce more importantly than it is influenced by the higher security and the more concentrated attention of its human agents?

56 L. ed.

(d) The supply and distribution of cars as instruments of interstate commerce may be regulated under the authority of Congress.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 472-474, 54 L. ed. 280, 288, 289, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

(e) Congress has also already legislated with direct view to the good condition of interstate railroad employees during their work.

Congress has been upheld in restricting the subject of commerce—by forbidding carriage of commodities owned by the carrier itself—where the conduct of interstate commerce in that subject would cause inequality and injustice.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The Federal power is to protect and advance the act of interstate commerce, and so to protect and further the work of any particular agent of interstate commerce, against all the world. This was settled emphatically by Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

Even a state of the Union cannot sanction an interruption. A grant by a state of exclusive right of navigating waters of the state cannot prevent their navigation by vessels licensed for the purpose by Congress.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

Bridges whose construction has been authorized by a state must be altered or removed if they impede interstate commerce.

Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 13 How. 518, 14 L. ed. 249; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

Question may be made whether Congress would not be within its power if it were legislating solely for the benefit of the interstate employee who is injured in interstate work, and without reference to the effect of its legislation upon the security and efficiency of the interstate act itself.

Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821.

The established power of Congress to prohibit interstate commerce in certain subjects carries a like suggestion. That power rests upon the ground that Congress may so legislate as to preserve the utility or the beneficence of commerce to those for whom it is done or to the public at large, and may prevent the conduct of pernicious commerce.

Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Authority of the most varied kind could be cited to show the protective power of Congress over interstate commerce against external interference or detriment. Indeed, that very sort of protection has been most commonly required from Congress and the Federal courts.

Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 52 L. ed. 488, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815.

An act for punishment of outsiders for stealing goods of a wrecked vessel was upheld, on the commerce clause, in United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 77, 78, 9 L. ed. 1004, 1006, 1007.

The congressional selection of a civil liability of the interstate employer as the best sanction for his new duty of preventing injury of an interstate employee through negligence of his coemployees was clearly allowable.

Narramore v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 48 L.R.A. 68, 37 C. C. A. 499, 96 Fed. 300.

As Congress had authority to adopt that sanction, it necessarily prescribed to whom the new civil right should belong.

Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. ed. 237, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

Nobody has a vested right in the continuance of the rules of the common law. Rights already created under those rules and property already derived from them have sanctity; but the common law may be changed as to future transactions, just as statutes may be.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87.

The admiralty practice, which divides the loss between persons concurrently negligent, is well known.

The Sapphire, 18 Wall. 51, 56, 21 L. ed. 814, 816; The Max Morris, 137 U. S. 1, 8, 9, 15, 34 L. ed. 586-589.

And contribution lies between joint tortfeasors in admiralty.

Erie R. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 204 U. S. 220, 225, 227, 51 L. ed. 450, 453, 454, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

The rule of comparative negligence, variant in its details, but always contradictory of the common-law rule, was established by the courts in Illinois, Kansas, and Tennessee.

Galena & C. Union R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 496; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Peavey, 29 Kan. 180, 44 Am. Rep. 630; Union P. R. Co. v. Rollins, 5 Kan. 180; Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 557; Nashville & C. R. Co. v. Smith, 6 Heisk. 174; Nashville & C. R. Co. v. Carroll, 6 Heisk. 366. See also McNicholas v. Dawson, 68 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 470 [1899]

1 Q. B. 773, 47 Week. Rep. 500, 80 L. T. N. S. 317, 15 Times L. R. 242.

It seems never to have been held anywhere that the Federal or any state Constitution requires that contributory negligence be either total or a partial defense. Such holding would be strange. Usually no constitutional question has been raised concerning alternative statutes; but they have been sustained when attacked.

(a) As to statutes adopting the rule of comparative negligence—Missouri P. R. Co. v. Castle, 97 C. C. A. 124, 172 Fed. 843; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Coggins, 32 C. C. A. 1, 60 U. S. App. 140, 88 Fed. 455; Christian v. Macon R. & Light Co. 120 Ga. 314, 47 S. E. 923.

(b) As to a statute exactly like the congressional act—Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Foxworth, 41 Fla. 63, 79 Am. St. Rep. 149, 25 So. 338.

And as to the congressional act itself—Philadelphia B. & W. R. Co. v. Tucker, 35 App. D. C. 123.

(c) As to a statute abolishing contributory negligence altogether—Pulliam v. Illinois C. R. Co. 75 Miss. 627, 23 So. 359.

The doctrines of contributory negligence and assumption of risk are so closely related that the authorities hereafter cited concerning the latter doctrine are here in point.

Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

Authorities upholding such statutory change of the doctrine of assumed risk are abundant.

(a) Where the change is general.

Coley v. North Carolina R. Co. 128 N. C. 534, 57 L.R.A. 817, 39 S. E. 43, 129 N. C. 407, 57 L.R.A. 834, 40 S. E. 195.

(b) The cases sustaining statutes which abolish the fellow-servant rule are in point, because that rule itself rests upon the idea that each employee assumes the risk of negligence of his coemployee.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

(c) Cases inferring a change of the common-law rule where defendant's negligence consists in violation of a statute specifically prohibiting certain conduct, or specifically requiring certain protective appliances.

Narramore v. Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 48 L.R.A. 68, 37 C. C. A. 499, 96 Fed.

302; Kilpatrick v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 74 Vt. 288, 93 Am. St. Rep. 887, 52 Atl. 531.

(d) Cases under the safety-appliance acts.

Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 11-14, 51 L. ed. 681, 685-687, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158.

The general grant of jurisdiction by state law is sufficient to cover any right, whether created by the law of that state or of other states or of the United States or of foreign countries. Congress has left the state courts free to use that general jurisdiction, by not prohibiting its use; and the terms of the state's grant of jurisdiction cover the case.

Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 23 L. ed. 833.

In exercising their concurrent jurisdiction, the state courts do not use a new jurisdiction conferred upon them by Congress, but their ordinary jurisdiction derived from the Constitution or statutes of their own state.

Ibid.

The following cases sustain state statutes abolishing the fellow-servant rule upon railroads alone, against express attack under the 14th Amendment:

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Callahan, 194 U. S. 628, 48 L. ed. 1157, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Lightheiser, 212 U. S. 560, 53 L. ed. 652, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676.

Pertinent support of other legislation making special rules for railroads is found in Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. 203 U. S. 284, 51 L. ed. 184, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, 8 Ann. Cas. 87; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 417, 53 L. ed. 836, 852, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Extension of the new rules to interstate employees generally was permissible. Their restriction to employees injured in consequence of special railroad hazard was not required by the Constitution.

Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. 56 L. ed.

v. Callahan, 194 U. S. 628, 48 L. ed. 1157, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857, 170 Mo. 473, 60 L.R.A. 249, 94 Am. St. Rep. 746, 71 S. W. 208; Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 50 L. ed. 322, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

Special Assistant to the Attorney General, J. C. McReynolds, also filed a brief for the United States as amicus curiæ:

The principles of law necessary for solving the questions in issue have been definitely determined by this court.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 96, 54 L. ed. 106, 111, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 55 L. ed. 78, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 226, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136, Ann. Cas. 1912a, 463; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Griffith v. Connecticut, 218 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 1151, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Hale, 219 U. S. 307, 55 L. ed. 229, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

The relationship—the reciprocal rights and liabilities—between a railroad carrier and its employees, arises out of agreement.

Beven, Employers' Liability, pp. 3, 5; Ruegg, Employers' Liability Act, 7th ed. § 1; Cooley, Torts, 531; Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 56, 38 Am. Dec. 339; Priestley v. Fowler, 3 Mecs. & W. 1; Murph. & H. 305, 7 L. J. Exch. N. S. 42, 1 Jur. 987, 19 Eng. Rul. Cas. 102; Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. 1 McMull. L. 385, 36 Am. Dec. 268; Thomas v. Quartermaine, L. R. 18 Q. B. Div. 685, 15 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 340, 57 L. T. N. S. 537, 35 Week. Rep. 555, 51 J. P. 516; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 349, 38 L. ed. 1009, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983; Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 647, 29 L. ed. 755, 758, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Mechem's article 4 Ill. L. Rev. 243; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 382, 28 L. ed. 787, 789, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

Without doubt Congress has plenary power to regulate whatever is interstate commerce, subject only to the restrictions of the Constitution.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

It has long been established doctrine in this court that, in the absence of action by Congress, the states may legislate concerning the relationship—the rights and liabilities—between master and servant operating in interstate commerce. But such declarations have been constantly coupled with the statement that the general subject is within the control of Congress whenever it may choose to exercise its power.

Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. 203 U. S. 284, 294, 51 L. ed. 184, 191, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, 8 Ann. Cas. 87; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 107, 23 L. ed. 819, 820, 821; The Hamilton (Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Gilmore) 207 U. S. 398, 52 L. ed. 264, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815.

The contract between a passenger and an interstate carrier is a part of interstate commerce subject to regulation by Congress. Accordingly, a state legislature cannot prescribe its terms in such way as to interfere with the free flow of commerce between the states.

Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Chiles v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 218 U. S. 71, 54 L. ed. 936, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667, 20 Ann. Cas. 980; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 540, 41 L. ed. 256, 257, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; New Jersey S. B. Co. v. Brockett, 121 U. S. 637, 30 L. ed. 1049, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1039; Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. §§ 997, 1077.

The contract of sale negotiated by a traveling agent representing a manufacturer in another state and the purchaser is a part of interstate commerce, and cannot be taxed or otherwise restricted by state legislation so as to burden commerce between the states.

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 128, 54 L. ed. 965, 967, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

A contract for the transportation of goods between different states by vessel or railroad is a part of interstate commerce whose terms may be prescribed or regulated by act of Congress.

The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 471, 472, 40 L. ed. 771, 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; The Southwark, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. ed. 65, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 663, 45 L. ed. 361, 364, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

The contract for service between a sailor and a vessel engaged in foreign commerce is part thereof, and its terms may be directly prescribed by Congress.

Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 176, 47 L. ed. 1002, 1006, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326.

Congress may prescribe the character of instruments to be used in interstate commerce, and declare the result of a failure so to do upon the agreement of employment between master and servant.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 294, 295, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 1068, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter, after stating the cases as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal questions presented in these cases as discussed at the bar and in the briefs are: 1. May Congress, in the exertion of its power over interstate commerce, regulate the relations of common carriers by railroad and their employees while both are engaged in such commerce? 2. Has Congress exceeded its power in that regard by prescribing the regulations which are embodied in the act in question? 3. Do those regulations supersede the laws of the states in so far as the latter cover the same field? 4. May rights arising under those regulations be enforced, as of right, in the courts of the states when their jurisdiction, as fixed by local laws, is adequate to the occasion?

The clauses in the Constitution (art. I., § 8, clauses 3 and 18) which confer upon Congress the power "to regulate commerce . . . among the several states," and "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper" for the purpose, have been considered by this court so often and in such varied connections that some propositions bearing upon the extent and nature of this power have come to be so firmly settled as no longer to be open to dispute, among them being these:

1. The term "commerce" comprehends more than the mere exchange of goods. It embraces commercial intercourse in all its branches, including transportation of passengers and property by common carriers, whether carried on by water or by land.

2. The phrase "among the several states" marks the distinction, for the purpose of governmental regulation, between commerce which concerns two or more states and commerce which is confined to a single [47]state and does *not affect other states,—the power to regulate the former being conferred upon Congress and the regulation of the latter remaining with the states severally.

3. "To regulate," in the sense intended, is to foster, protect, control, and restrain, with appropriate regard for the welfare of those who are immediately concerned and of the public at large.

4. This power over commerce among the states, so conferred upon Congress, is complete in itself, extends incidentally to every instrument and agent by which such commerce is carried on, may be exerted to its utmost extent over every part of such commerce, and is subject to no limitations save such as are prescribed in the Constitution. But, of course, it does not extend to any matter or thing which does not have a real or substantial relation to some part of such commerce.

5. Among the instruments and agents to which the power extends are the railroads over which transportation from one state to another is conducted, the engines and cars by which such transportation is effected, and all who are in any wise engaged in such transportation, whether as common carriers or as their employees.

6. The duties of common carriers in respect of the safety of their employees, while both are engaged in commerce among the states, and the liability of the former for injuries sustained by the latter, while both are so engaged, have a real or substantial relation to such commerce, and therefore are within the range of this power. Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 315-317, 13 L. ed. 996, 1003, 1004; The Lot-tawanna (Rodd v. Heartt) 21 Wall. 558, 577, 22 L. ed. 654, 662; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103-105, 23 L. ed. 819-821; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 479, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 99, 32 L. ed. 352, 353, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238. 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Peirce v. Van Dusen, 69 L.R.A. 705, 24 C. C. A. 280, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 693, 698-700; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 378, 37 L. ed. 772, 776, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 176, 47 L. ed. 1002, 1006, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48]407; Employers' Liability Cases (How- 56 L. ed.

ard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 495, 52 L. ed. 297, 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 176-178, 52 L. ed. 436, 443, 444, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 764; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 618, 55 L. ed. 878, 882, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2.

As is well said in the brief prepared by the late Solicitor General: "Interstate commerce—if not always, at any rate when the commerce is transportation—is an act. Congress, of course, can do anything which, in the exercise by itself of a fair discretion, may be deemed appropriate to save the act of interstate commerce from prevention or interruption, or to make that act more secure, more reliable, or more efficient. The act of interstate commerce is done by the labor of men and with the help of things; and these men and things are the agents and instruments of the commerce. If the agents or instruments are destroyed while they are doing the act, commerce is stopped; if the agents or instruments are interrupted, commerce is interrupted; if the agents or instruments are not of the right kind or quality, commerce in consequence becomes slow or costly or unsafe or otherwise inefficient; and if the conditions under which the agents or instruments do the work of commerce are wrong or disadvantageous, those bad conditions may and often will prevent or interrupt the act of commerce or make it less expeditious, less reliable, less economical, and less secure. Therefore, Congress may legislate about the agents and instruments of interstate commerce, and about the conditions under which those agents and instruments perform the work of interstate commerce, whenever such legislation bears, or, in the exercise of a fair legislative discretion, can be deemed to bear, upon the reliability or promptness or economy or security or utility of the interstate commerce act."

In view of these settled propositions, it does not admit of doubt that the answer to the first of the questions before stated must be that Congress, in the exertion of its power over interstate commerce, may regulate the relations *of common car- [49 riers by railroad and their employees, while both are engaged in such commerce, subject always to the limitations prescribed in the Constitution, and to the qualification that the particulars in which those relations are regulated must have a real or substantial connection with the interstate commerce in which the carriers and their employees are engaged.

We come, then, to inquire whether Congress has exceeded its power in that regard by prescribing the regulations embodied in the present act. It is objected that it has, (1) because the abrogation of the fellow-servant rule, the extension of the carrier's liability to cases of death, and the restriction of the defenses of contributory negligence and assumption of risk, have no tendency to promote the safety of the employees, or to advance the commerce in which they are engaged; (2) because the liability imposed for injuries sustained by one employee through the negligence of another, although confined to instances where the injured employee is engaged in interstate commerce, is not confined to instances where both employees are so engaged; and (3) because the act offends against the 5th Amendment to the Constitution (a) by unwarrantably interfering with the liberty of contract, and (b) by arbitrarily placing all employers engaged in interstate commerce by railroad in a disfavored class, and all their employees engaged in such commerce in a favored class.

Briefly stated, the departures from the common law made by the portions of the act against which the first objection is leveled are these: (a) The rule that the negligence of one employee resulting in injury to another was not to be attributed to their common employer is displaced by a rule imposing upon the employer responsibility for such an injury, as was done at common law when the injured person was not an employee; (b) the rule exonerating an employer from liability for injury sustained by an employee through the concurring negligence of the employer 50]* and the employee is abrogated in all instances where the employer's violation of a statute enacted for the safety of his employees contributes to the injury, and in other instances is displaced by the rule of comparative negligence, whereby the exoneration is only from a proportional part of the damages corresponding to the amount of negligence attributable to the employee; (c) the rule that an employee was deemed to assume the risk of injury, even if due to the employer's negligence, where the employee voluntarily entered or remained in the service with an actual or presumed knowledge of the conditions out of which the risk arose, is abrogated in all instances where the employer's violation of a statute enacted for the safety of his employees contributed to the injury; and (d) the rule denying a right of action for the death of one person, caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another, is displaced by a rule vesting such a right of action in the personal representatives of the deceased, for the benefit of designated relatives.

Of the objection to these changes it is enough to observe:

First. "A person has no property, no vested interest, in any rule of the common law. That is only one of the forms of municipal law, and is no more sacred than any other. Rights of property which have been created by the common law cannot be taken away without due process; but the law itself, as a rule of conduct, may be changed at the will . . . of the legislature, unless prevented by constitutional limitations. Indeed, the great office of statutes is to remedy defects in the common law as they are developed, and to adapt it to the changes of time and circumstances." Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87; Martin v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 203 U. S. 284, 294, 51 L. ed. 184, 191, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 87; The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt), 21 Wall. 558, 577, 22 L. ed. 654, 662; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 417, 54 L. ed. 1088, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59.

Second. The natural tendency of the changes described *is to impel the car-ri-ers to avoid or prevent the negligent acts and omissions which are made the bases of the rights of recovery which the statute creates and defines; and as whatever makes for that end tends to promote the safety of the employees and to advance the commerce in which they are engaged, we entertain no doubt that in making those changes Congress acted within the limits of the discretion confided to it by the Constitution. Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 353, 355, 47 L. ed. 492, 500, 501, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 203, 55 L. ed. 167, 181, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

We are not unmindful that that end was being measurably attained through the remedial legislation of the several states, but that legislation has been far from uniform, and it undoubtedly rested with Congress to determine whether a national law, operating uniformly in all the states, upon all carriers by railroad engaged in interstate commerce, would better subserve the needs of that commerce. The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt), 21 Wall. 558, 581, 582, 22 L. ed. 654, 664; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 378, 379, 37 L. ed. 772, 777, 778, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914.

The second objection proceeds upon the theory that, even although Congress has power to regulate the liability of a carrier for injuries sustained by one employee through the negligence of another, where all are engaged in interstate commerce, that power does not embrace instances where the negligent employee is engaged in intrastate commerce. But this is a mistaken theory, in that it treats the source of the injury, rather than its effect upon interstate commerce, as the criterion of congressional power. As was said in Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 27, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, that power is plenary, and competently may be exerted to secure the safety of interstate transportation and of those who are employed therein, no matter what the source of the dangers which threaten it. The present act, unlike the one condemned in Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, deals only with the liability of a carrier engaged in interstate commerce for injuries sustained 52]*by its employees while engaged in such commerce. And this being so, it is not a valid objection that the act embraces instances where the causal negligence is that of an employee engaged in intrastate commerce; for such negligence, when operating injuriously upon an employee engaged in interstate commerce, has the same effect upon that commerce as if the negligent employee were also engaged therein.

Next in order is the objection that the provision in § 5, declaring void any contract, rule, regulation, or device, the purpose or intent of which is to enable a carrier to exempt itself from the liability which the act creates, is repugnant to the 5th Amendment to the Constitution as an unwarranted interference with the liberty of contract. But of this it suffices to say, in view of our recent decisions in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164, and Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 55 L. ed. 878, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621, that if Congress possesses the power to impose that liability, which we here hold that it does, it also possesses the power to insure its efficacy by prohibiting any contract, rule, regulation, or device in evasion of it.

Coming to the question of classification, it is true that the liability which the act creates is imposed only on interstate carriers by railroad, although there are other interstate carriers, and is imposed for the benefit of all employees of such carriers by railroad who are employed in interstate commerce, although some are not subjected to the peculiar hazards incident to the operation of trains, or to hazards that differ from those to which other employees in such commerce, not within the act, are exposed. But it does not follow that this classification is violative of the "due process of law" clause of the 5th Amendment. Even if it be assumed that that clause is equivalent to the "equal protection of the laws" clause of the 14th Amendment,[53 which is the most that can be claimed for it here, it does not take from Congress the power to classify, nor does it condemn exertions of that power merely because they occasion some inequalities. On the contrary, it admits of the exercise of a wide discretion in classifying according to general, rather than minute, distinctions, and condemns what is done only when it is without any reasonable basis, and therefore is purely arbitrary. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 78, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337. Tested by these standards, this classification is not objectionable. Like classifications of railroad carriers and employees for like purposes, when assailed under the equal protection clause, have been sustained by repeated decisions of this court. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 55 L. ed. 78, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 226, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136.

It follows that the answer to the second of the questions before stated must be that Congress has not exceeded its power by prescribing the regulations embodied in the present act.

The third question, whether those regulations supersede the laws of the states in so far as the latter cover the same field, finds its answer in the following extracts from the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall in McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579:

(P. 405) "If any one proposition could command the universal assent of mankind, we might expect it would be this,—that the government of the Union, though limited in its powers, is supreme within its sphere of action. This would seem to result necessarily from its nature. It is the government of all; its powers are delegated by all; it represents all, and acts for all. Though any one state may be willing to control its operations, no state is willing to allow others to control them. The nation, on those subjects on which it can act, must necessarily bind its component *parts.[54 But this question is not left to mere reason: the people have, in express terms, decided it, by saying, 'this Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof,' 'shall be the supreme law of the land,' and by requiring that the members of the state legislatures, and the officers of the executive and judicial departments of the states, shall take the oath of fidelity to it. The government of the United States, then, though limited in its powers, is supreme; and its laws, when made in pursuance of the Constitution, form the supreme law of the land, 'anything in the Constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.'

(P. 426) "This great principle is that the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof are supreme; that they control the Constitution and laws of the respective states, and cannot be controlled by them."

And particularly apposite is the repetition of that principle in Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 473, 31 L. ed. 508, 510, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564:

"The grant of power to Congress in the Constitution to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, it is conceded, is paramount over all legislative powers which, in consequence of not having been granted to Congress, are reserved to the states. It follows that any legislation of a state, although in pursuance of an acknowledged power reserved to it, which conflicts with the actual exercise of the power of Congress over the subject of commerce, must give way before the supremacy of the national authority."

True, prior to the present act, the laws of the several states were regarded as determinative of the liability of employers engaged in interstate commerce for injuries received by their employees while engaged in such commerce. But that was because Congress, although empowered to regulate that subject, had not acted thereon, and because the subject is one which falls within the police power of the states in the absence of action by Congress. Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 473, 480, 482, 31 L. ed. 508, 510, 513, 514, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 99, 32 L. ed. 352, 353, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 146, 47 L. ed. 108, 113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506. The inaction of Congress, however, in no wise affected its power over the subject. The Lottawanna (Rodd v. Heartt), 21 Wall. 558, 581, 22 L. ed. 654, 664; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114

U. S. 196, 215, 29 L. ed. 158, 166, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. And now that Congress has acted, the laws of the states, in so far as they cover the same field, are superseded, for necessarily that which is not supreme must yield to that which is. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 104, 39 L. ed. 910, 912, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, No. 487, 222 U. S. 424, ante, 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, No. 136, 222 U. S. 370, ante, 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160.

We come next to consider whether rights arising under the congressional act may be enforced, as of right, in the courts of the states when their jurisdiction, as prescribed by local laws, is adequate to the occasion. The first of the cases now before us was begun in one of the superior courts of the state of Connecticut, and, in that case, the supreme court of errors of the state answered the question in the negative. That, however, was not because the ordinary jurisdiction of the superior courts, as defined by the Constitution and laws of the state, was deemed inadequate or not adapted to the adjudication of such a case, but because the supreme court of errors was of opinion (1) that the congressional act impliedly restricts the enforcement of the rights which it creates to the Federal courts, and (2) that, if this be not so, the superior courts are at liberty to decline cognizance of actions to enforce rights arising under that act, because (a) the policy manifested by it is not in accord with the policy of the state respecting the liability of employers to employees for injuries received by the latter while in the service of the former, and (b) it would be inconvenient and confusing for the same court, in dealing with cases of the same general class, to apply in some the standards of right established by the congressional act, and in others the different standards recognized by the laws of the state.

We are quite unable to assent to the view that the enforcement of the rights which the congressional act creates was originally intended to be restricted to the Federal courts. The act contains nothing which is suggestive of such a restriction, and in this situation the intention of Congress was reflected by the provision in the general jurisdictional act, "That the circuit courts of the United States shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of two thousand dollars, and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States." 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, § 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. ed. 542, 546, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; United States v. Barnes, 222 U. S. 513, ante, 291, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117. This is emphasized by the amendment engrafted upon the original act in 1910, to the effect that "the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States under this act shall be concurrent with that of the courts of the several states, and no case arising under this act, and brought in any state court of competent jurisdiction, shall be removed to any court of the United States." The amendment, as appears by its language, instead of granting jurisdiction to the state courts, presupposes that they already possessed it.

Because of some general observations in the opinion of the supreme court of errors, and to the end that the remaining ground of decision advanced therein may be more accurately understood, we deem it well to observe that there is not here involved any attempt by Congress to enlarge or regulate the jurisdiction of state courts, or to control or affect their modes of procedure, but only a question of the duty of such a court, when its ordinary jurisdiction, *as prescribed by local laws, is appropriate to the occasion, and is invoked in conformity with those laws, to take cognizance of an action to enforce a right of civil recovery arising under the act of Congress, and susceptible of adjudication according to the prevailing rules of procedure. We say "when its ordinary jurisdiction, as prescribed by local laws, is appropriate to the occasion," because we are advised by the decisions of the supreme court of errors that the superior courts of the state are courts of general jurisdiction, are empowered to take cognizance of actions to recover for personal injuries and for death, and are accustomed to exercise that jurisdiction, not only in cases where the right of action arose under the laws of that state, but also in cases where it arose in another state, under its laws, and in circumstances in which the laws of Connecticut give no right of recovery, as where the causal negligence was that of a fellow servant.

The suggestion that the act of Congress is not in harmony with the policy of the state, and therefore that the courts of the state are free to decline jurisdiction, is quite inadmissible, because it presupposes what in legal contemplation does not exist. When Congress, in the exertion of the power confided to it by the Constitution, adopted that act, it spoke for all the people and all the states, and thereby established a policy for all. That policy is as much the policy of Connecticut as if the act had emanated from its own legislature, and should be respected accordingly in the courts of the state. As was said by this court in Claffin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 136, 137, 23 L. ed. 833, 838, 839:

"The laws of the United States are laws in the several states, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the state laws are. The United States is not a foreign sovereignty as regards the several states, but is a concurrent, and, within its jurisdiction, paramount, sovereignty. . . . If an act of Congress gives a penalty [meaning civil and remedial] to a party aggrieved, without *speci- [58] fying a remedy for its enforcement, there is no reason why it should not be enforced, if not provided otherwise by some act of Congress, by a proper action in a state court. The fact that a state court derives its existence and functions from the state laws is no reason why it should not afford relief; because it is subject also to the laws of the United States, and is just as much bound to recognize these as operative within the state as it is to recognize the state laws. The two together form one system of jurisprudence, which constitutes the law of the land for the state; and the courts of the two jurisdictions are not foreign to each other, nor to be treated by each other as such, but as courts of the same country, having jurisdiction partly different and partly concurrent. . . . It is true, the sovereignties are distinct, and neither can interfere with the proper jurisdiction of the other, as was so clearly shown by the Chief Justice Taney, in the case of Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; and hence the state courts have no power to revise the action of the Federal courts, nor the Federal the state, except where the Federal Constitution or laws are involved. But this is no reason why the state courts should not be open for the prosecution of rights growing out of the laws of the United States, to which their jurisdiction is competent, and not denied."

We are not disposed to believe that the exercise of jurisdiction by the state courts will be attended by any appreciable inconvenience or confusion; but, be this as it may, it affords no reason for declining a jurisdiction conferred by law. The existence of the jurisdiction creates an implication of duty to exercise it, and that its exercise may be onerous does not militate against that implication. Besides, it is neither new nor unusual in judicial proceedings to apply different rules of law to different situations and subjects, even although possessing some elements of similarity, as where the liability of a public carrier for personal injuries turns upon 59] whether the injured person *was a passenger, an employee, or a stranger. But it never has been supposed that courts are at liberty to decline cognizance of cases of a particular class merely because the rules of law to be applied in their adjudication are unlike those applied in other cases.

We conclude that rights arising under the act in question may be enforced, as of right, in the courts of the states when their jurisdiction, as prescribed by local laws, is adequate to the occasion.

In No. 289 several rulings in the progress of the cause, not covered by what already has been said, are called in question, but it suffices to say of them that they have been carefully considered, and that we find no reversible error in them.

In Nos. 170, 289, and 290 the judgments are affirmed, and in No. 120 the judgment is reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

—
QUONG WING, Plff. in Err.,
v.

THOMAS B. KIRKENDALL, as Treasurer of the County of Lewis and Clark, State of Montana.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 59-65.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — discrimination in license tax.

Exempting steam laundries and women engaged in the laundry business, where not more than two women are employed, from the license tax imposed by Mont. Rev. Codes, § 2776, upon the laundry business, does not deny the equal protection of the laws to a man operating a hand laundry.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 360-368, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 119.]

Argued December 18, 1911. Decided January 22, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Montana to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court for the County of Lewis and Clark, in that state, for the recovery of a license tax exacted from a person operating a hand laundry. Affirmed.

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

See same case below, 39 Mont. 64, 101 Pac. 250.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles E. Pew argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Ira. T. Wight and M. S. Gunn, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Classification for any purpose must be based upon same real and reasonable difference in the property or business placed in one class from the property or business which is exempted from burdens imposed upon such class; otherwise such classification is repugnant to the equal protection clause of the Federal Constitution.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 155, 41 L. ed. 668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Re Yot Sang, 75 Fed. 983; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676.

Mr. W. H. Poorman, Assistant Attorney General of Montana, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Albert J. Galen, Attorney General of Montana, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The "equal protection of the laws" clause requires the same means and methods to be applied impartially to all the constituents of a class, so that the law shall operate equally and uniformly upon all persons in similar circumstances.

Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

No doubt can be entertained of the right of a state legislature to tax trades, professions, or occupations in the absence of inhibition in the state Constitution in that regard.

Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; State ex rel. Toi v. French, 17 Mont. 56, 30 L.R.A. 415, 41 Pac. 1078; State v. Camp Sing, 18 Mont. 129, 32 L.R.A. 635, 56 Am. St. Rep. 551, 44 Pac. 516.

The state may, if it chooses, exempt certain classes of property altogether; may impose different specific taxes upon different trades or professions; may vary the rates of excise upon various products; may tax real and personal estate in a different manner; may tax visible property only, and not securities; may allow or not allow deductions for indebtedness. All such regulations and those of like character, so long as they proceed within limits and general usage, are within the discretion of the state legislature or the people of the state in confirming their Constitution.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. ed. 451, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 562, 46 L. ed. 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

There can be no claim maintained here that the "United States citizenship" of anyone is invaded by the state law, for this law makes no distinctions or discriminations except as the same relates to women.

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

Neither can it be successfully maintained that the purpose of this law is to discriminate against the subjects of the Emperor of China, for no such motive is apparent on the face of this law, nor is there anything in its practical application that would lead to such a conclusion. The law by its terms operates equally upon all male persons, and by its exemptions operates equally upon all female persons.

Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 710, 28 L. ed. 1145, 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

We can here investigate neither the wisdom nor the expediency of this legislation, nor can we go beyond the statute itself to inquire into the motives which impelled its enactment.

McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539, 547, 53 L. ed. 315, 319, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Quong Wing v. Kirkendall, 39 Mont. 69, 101 Pac. 250.

Discrimination as between persons having equal facilities for profit is not objectionable.

St. Louis v. Wehrung, 46 Ill. 392.

There is no precise application of the rule of reasonableness or classification, and the rule of equality permits many practical inequalities, and necessarily so. In a classification for governmental purposes, there cannot be any exact exclusion or inclusion of persons or things.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 329, 46 L. ed. 569, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382.
56 L. ed.

The state could exempt women from the operation of this law.

Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957.

Whether the license required by this state law is a license tax, strictly speaking, or a revenue tax, is immaterial, for the legislature has authority under the state Constitution to resort to either or both methods in raising revenue, and it also has the authority to resort to the license system as a method of regulation, or as a proper exercise of the police power, and the license tax, whether imposed for regulation or for revenue, is not controlled by the equality or uniformity requirements of the Constitution.

State ex rel. Toi v. French, 17 Mont. 54, 30 L.R.A. 415, 41 Pac. 1078.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the [62 opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover $10 paid under duress and protest for a license to do hand laundry work. The plaintiff got judgment in the court of first instance, but this judgment was reversed by the supreme court of the state. 39 Mont. 64, 101 Pac. 250. The law under which the fee was exacted imposed the payment upon all persons engaged in laundry business other than the steam laundry business, with a proviso that it should not apply to women so engaged, where not more than two women were employed. Rev. Codes, § 2776. The only question is whether this is an unconstitutional discrimination, depriving the plaintiff of the equal protection of the laws. U. S. Const. 14th Amend.

The case was argued upon the discrimination between the instrumentalities employed in the same business and that between men and women. One like the former was held bad in Re Yot Sang, 75 Fed. 983, and while the latter was spoken of by the supreme court of the state as an exemption of one or two women, it is to be observed that in 1900, the census showed more women than men engaged in hand laundry work in that state. Nevertheless we agree with the supreme court of the state so far as these grounds are concerned. A state does not deny the equal protection of the laws merely by adjusting its revenue laws and taxing system in such a way as to favor certain industries or forms of industry. Like the United States, although with more restriction and in less degree, a state may carry out a policy, even a policy with which we might disagree. McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539, 547, 53 L. ed. 315, 319, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 235, 50 L. ed. 451, 456, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 562, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431. It may make discriminations, if founded on distinctions that we cannot pronounce unreasonable and purely arbitrary, as was 63] illustrated in American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 92, 95, 45 L. ed. 102, 103, 105, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 276, 45 L. ed. 186, 189, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 469, 45 L. ed. 619, 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423. It may favor or discourage the liquor traffic or trusts. The criminal law is a whole body of policy on which states may and do differ. If the state sees fit to encourage steam laundries and discourage hand laundries, that is its own affair. And if, again, it finds a ground of distinction in sex, that is not without precedent. It has been recognized with regard to hours of work. Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 957. It is recognized in the respective rights of husband and wife in land during life, in the inheritance after the death of the spouse. Often it is expressed in the time fixed for coming of age. If Montana deems it advisable to put a lighter burden upon women than upon men with regard to an employment that our people commonly regard as more appropriate for the former, the 14th Amendment does not interfere by creating a fictitious equality where there is a real difference. The particular points at which that difference shall be emphasized by legislation are largely in the power of the state.

Another difficulty suggested by the statute is that it is impossible not to ask whether it is not aimed at the Chinese, which would be a discrimination that the Constitution does not allow. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064. It is a matter of common observation that hand laundry work is a widespread occupation of Chinamen in this country, while, on the other hand, it is so rare to see men of our race engaged in it that many of us would be unable to say that they ever had observed a case. But this ground of objection was not urged, and rather was disclaimed when it was mentioned from the bench at the argument. It may or may not be that if the facts were called to our attention in a proper way the objection would prove to be real. But even if, when called to our attention, the facts should be taken notice of judicially, 64]*whether, because they are only the premises for a general proposition of law (Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 211 U. S. 210, 227, 53 L. ed. 150, 159, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, 24 L. ed. 154; Telfair v. Stead, 2 Cranch, 407, 418, 2 L. ed. 320, 324), or for any other reason, still there are many things that courts would notice if brought before them that beforehand they do not know. It rests with counsel to take the proper steps, and if they deliberately omit them, we do not feel called upon to institute inquiries on our own account. Laws frequently are enforced which the court recognizes as possibly or probably invalid if attacked by a different interest or in a different way. Therefore, without prejudice to the question that we have suggested, when it shall be raised, we must conclude that so far as the present case is concerned, the judgment must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Hughes concurs in the result.

Mr. Justice Lamar, dissenting:

I dissent from the conclusions reached in the first branch of the opinion, because, in my judgment, the statute, which is not a police but a revenue measure, makes an arbitrary discrimination. It taxes some and exempts others engaged in identically the same business. It does not graduate the license, so that those doing a large volume of business pay more than those doing less. On the contrary, it exempts the large business and taxes the small. It exempts the business that is so large as to require the use of steam, and taxes that which is so small that it can be run by hand. Among these small operators there is a further discrimination, based on sex. It would be just as competent to tax the property of men and exempt that of women. The individual characteristics of the owner do not furnish a basis on which to make a classification for *purposes of taxation.[65 It is the property or the business which is to be taxed, regardless of the qualities of the owner. A discrimination founded on the personal attributes of those engaged in the same occupation, and not on the value or the amount of the business, is arbitrary. "A classification must always rest upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed." Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 560, 46 L. ed. 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

JOSEFA RUIZ DE NOBLE, James R. Noble, William D. Noble, et al., Appts.,
v.

ELIZA GALLARDO Y SEARY, Estefania Varonni, Celestina Gallardo y Varonni, and Eva Gallardo y Varonni.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 65-67.)

Laches — in foreclosure suit — applying doctrine in Porto Rico.

The injustice which would result from applying the doctrine of laches to the conduct of the parties in Porto Rico during the many years that were not governed by any rule peculiar to chancery courts forbids the application of this doctrine so as to defeat a suit to foreclose a mortgage or lien executed in 1865, and still supposed to exist at law, and not shown to be barred by any statute of limitations,—especially where no change of position on the faith of, or seemingly influenced by, the quiescence of the complainants or their predecessors, is disclosed.

[Laches as equitable defense, see Limitation of Actions, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 147.]

Submitted December 22, 1911. Decided
January 22, 1912.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree dismissing, on the ground of laches, a bill to foreclose a mortgage or lien. Reversed without prejudice.

See same case below, 5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 10.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill submitted the cause for appellants:

A suit to foreclose a mortgage cannot be held to be barred by laches when the limit of time fixed by the applicable statute of limitations has not arrived at the time of beginning suit.

Story, Eq. Jur. 13th ed. § 1520; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. St. Louis Dispatch Co. 149 U. S. 436, 448, 37 L. ed. 799, 803, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Rankin v. Scott, 12 Wheat. 177, 6 L. ed. 592; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 528, 35 L. ed. 843, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Diefenthaler v. New York, 111 N. Y. 331, 19 N. E. 48; Boon v. Pierpont, 28 N. J. Eq. 7; Jenkins v. Wilkinson, 113 N. C. 532, 18 S. E. 696; Jordan v. Sayre, 24 Fla. 1, 3 So. 329; Syracuse Salor Salt Co. v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 67 Hun, 153, 22 N. Y. Supp. 321; Fullwood v. Fullwood, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 176, 47 L. J. Ch. N. S.

459, 38 L. T. N. S. 380, 26 Week. Rep. 435; Re Baker, L. R. 20 Ch. Div. 230, 51 L. J. Ch. N. S. 315, 45 L. T. N. S. 658, 30 Week. Rep. 858.

No brief was filed for appellees.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to foreclose a mortgage or lien executed in *December, 1865, by [66] which one Ramon Ruiz Gandia bound himself to pay a certain sum to William Noble with the proceeds of the first crops that might be ground from the next January at a certain plantation. The defendants pleaded laches apparent on the face of the bill and different statutes of limitation. The notarial document by which the lien was created is presented only in a translation which suggests doubts whether a further lien upon succeeding crops applied to this debt or only to another that is referred to and that was due to another man. There was also a petition for leave to intervene on the part of the representative of the other creditor, referring to documents not set out, but this was not acted upon except as affected by the disposition of the principal case. The court below expressed doubts whether any of the instruments bound the land, but held that in any event the plaintiffs were barred by laches, and dismissed the bill.

As was observed by the court below, a court of equity in a novelty in Porto Rico. But, this being so, it would be unjust to apply its doctrines to the conduct of the parties during the many years that were not governed by any rule peculiar to chancery courts. The plaintiffs are not relying upon a merely equitable right; they are asserting a lien which they say the Spanish law gave them until it was barred by the statute of limitations. Whether the Spanish law had any doctrines of laches that in any aspect would be applicable to this case was not argued and we have not inquired. But it is to be observed that no change of position on the faith of, or seemingly influenced by, the quiescence of the plaintiff's and their predecessors, is disclosed. It would be open to argument whether laches was made out, even under our law, sufficient to defeat the remedy usually given by equity to enforce a purely legal right; in other words, whether mere lapse of time short of the statute of limitations, with nothing more, should defeat the foreclosure of a lien supposed still to *exist at law. [67]

NOTE.—As to laches as a defense—see notes to Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L.R.A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. 8 L.R.A. 248; Coffey v. Emigh, 10 56 L. ed.

J.L.R.A. 125; Pratt v. Carroll, 3 L. ed. U. S. 627; Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; and Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720.

But we express no opinion on that point because the matter must be decided by Spanish law, which prevailed during the time when the laches is supposed to have been shown.

The case is a hard one, no doubt, if the plaintiffs ultimately should prevail on the strength of the old law of prescription for mortgages and subsequent recognitions. It should be scrutinized with care, not only with reference to the property covered by the lien, but the nature of the recognitions during the time when the bond could not be denied, and the law. As we have intimated, the record leaves some doubt as to material facts, no argument was presented to us on behalf of the appellees, and upon the whole we think it will be more conducive to justice if the case be remitted to the district court for further consideration. To that end the decree will be reversed.

Decree reversed without prejudice.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.

WONG YOU, Wong Cheen, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 67-70.)

Aliens — deportation of Chinese laborers.

Chinese laborers are not tacitly exempted from the general provisions of the immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, 908, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, pp. 447, 466), for the deportation of any alien unlawfully entering the United States, because of the Chinese exclusion acts of earlier date, which make it unlawful for any Chinese laborer to come from any foreign place into the United States, or, having so come, to remain there, and provide a different procedure for removing him, although by § 43 of the later act its provisions shall not be construed to repeal, alter, or amend the laws relating to the Chinese.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 597.]

Argued January 12, 1912. Decided January 22, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court for the Northern District of New York, refusing relief by habeas corpus to Chinese laborers whose deportation from the United States had been ordered. Reversed.

See same case below, 104 C. C. A. 535, 181 Fed. 313.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The application of the immigration laws to Chinese aliens is well settled.

Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 36 L. ed. 340, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Ex parte Lec Sher Wing, 164 Fed. 506; Looc Shee v. North, 95 C. C. A. 646, 170 Fed. 566; Ex parte Li Diek, 174 Fed. 674, 176 Fed. 998; Haiw Moy v. North, 105 C. C. A. 381, 183 Fed. 89.

No appearance for respondents.

*Mr Justice Holmes delivered the [69] opinion of the court:

This is a writ of habeas corpus. It was dismissed by the district court (176 Fed. 933), but was sustained by the circuit court of appeals, which ordered the parties concerned to be discharged from custody. 104 C. C. A. 535, 181 Fed. 313. The parties are Chinamen who entered the United States surreptitiously, in a manner prohibited by the immigration act of February 20, 1907, chap. 1134, § 36, 34 Stat. at L. 898, 908, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, pp. 447, 466, and the rules made in pursuance of the same, if applicable to Chinese. They were arrested in transitu and ordered by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to be deported. §§ 20, 21. But as it transpired in the evidence that they were laborers, the circuit court of appeals held that they could be dealt with only under the Chinese exclusion acts of earlier date. Those acts make it unlawful for any Chinese laborer to come from any foreign place into the United States, or, having so come, to remain there, and provide a different procedure for removing them. Hence it was concluded that such persons were tacitly excepted from the general provisions of the immigration act, although broad enough to include them, and although of later date.

We are of opinion that the circuit court of appeals made a mistaken use of its principles of interpretation. By the language of the act any alien that enters the country unlawfully may be summarily deported by order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor at any time within three years. It seems to us unwarranted to except the Chinese from this liability because there is an earlier more cumbrous proceeding which this partially overlaps. The existence of the earlier laws only indicates the special solicitude of the government to limit the entrance of Chinese. It is the very reverse of a reason for denying to the government a better remedy against them alone of all the world, now that one has been 70] created in general terms. *To allow the immigration act its literal effect does not repeal, alter, or amend the laws relating to the Chinese, as it is provided that it shall not, in § 43. The present act does not contain the clause found in the previous immigration act of March 3, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 569, chap. 206, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1300], that it shall not apply to Chinese persons, and, on the other hand, as it requires deportation to the trans-Pacific ports from which such aliens embarked for the United States (§ 35), it is rather hard to say that it has not the Chinese specially in mind.

NOTE.—As to what Chinese persons are excluded from the United States—see note to Wong You v. United States, 104 C. C. A. 538.

Judgment reversed.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

F. W. COOK BREWING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 70-84.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — Federal question.

1. The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit by an Indiana corporation to enjoin a common carrier incorporated under the laws of Kentucky from refusing to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors consigned to local-option points in Kentucky was not dependent upon diverse citizenship alone, so as to make the judgment of the circuit court of appeals final, where there was involved not only the validity of the Kentucky statute as a regulation of interstate commerce, but the question as to whether the sole remedy was not by an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 790-807, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — objections not raised below — adequate remedy at law.

2. The objection that there was an adequate remedy at law where a common carrier refused to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors destined to local-option or "dry" points in another state, and announced its purpose to persist in such refusals, comes too late, if ever available, when first made on appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4550-4555, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — intoxicating liquors — carrier's refusal to accept.

3. A carrier incorporated under the laws of the state of Kentucky cannot justify its refusal to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors consigned to localities in that state where local-option prohibitory laws prevail, under Ky. act of March 21, 1906, making the transportation of such shipments unlawful, since such statute, as applied to interstate shipments, is an unlawful regulation of commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 178-184, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — remedy for refusal to accept interstate shipment — necessity of action by Interstate Commerce Commission.

4. A shipper seeking relief because of the refusal of a carrier to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors consigned to local-option or "dry" points, which the carrier seeks to justify under a state statute forbidding the transportation of such shipments, which is attacked as an unlawful regulation of commerce, may invoke the jurisdiction of the courts without first applying to the Interstate Commerce Commission, since the question involved is one of general law, for a judicial tribunal, and one not competent for the Commission as a purely administrative body.

[Carrier's duty to receive shipment, see Carriers, II. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 64.]

Submitted November 13, 1911. Decided January 22, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Indiana, enjoining a carrier from refusing to accept interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors consigned to local-option or "dry" points. Affirmed.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 96 C. C. A. 322, 172 Fed. 117.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lurton:

This suit started in a court of the state of Indiana, and was removed by the defendant, now the appellant, to the circuit court of the United States.

The brewing company is an Indiana corporation, engaged in brewing beer at Evansville, Indiana, and sells its product in state and interstate trade. The railroad

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

As to constitutional right to prohibit sales of intoxicating liquors—see note to State v. Durein, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 908.

On jurisdiction of courts pending proceedings before Interstate Commerce Commission—see note to Sandusky-Portland Cement Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 111 C. C. A. 443.

56 L. ed.

company is a Kentucky corporation, owning and operating a line of railway extending into many states, including Indiana and Kentucky.

72] *The complaint averred that although prepayment of freight had been tendered and every shipping regulation complied with, the railroad company had refused to accept for carriage from Evansville, Indiana, to stations on the line of its railway in the state of Kentucky, beer in kegs and cases, consigned to points which were "local-option" or "dry" localities under the law of Kentucky, and had notified complainant and the public that it would discontinue receiving consignments of beer or other liquors for points in the state of Kentucky where the local-option law of that state was in operation. The prayer of the bill was that the railroad company be enjoined from so refusing to accept the product of the brewing company for transportation from Evansville to such local-option points in Kentucky.

A preliminary injunction was issued as prayed. Thereupon the defendant removed the case to the circuit court of the United States, upon the ground that there was diversity of citizenship, and also because the case involved questions arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States; namely, the validity of the law of Kentucky, prohibiting the transportation and delivery of liquors to points in that state where the sale was prohibited, and also as a case arising under the act of Congress regulating interstate commerce of February 4, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154], as amended June 29, 1906 [34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149]. An answer was then filed and the cause heard upon bill and answer, with the result that the preliminary injunction allowed by the state court was made permanent, and the railroad company enjoined from refusing to receive and carry beer from Evansville to any point upon its line of road in the state of Kentucky, wet or dry. An appeal by the railroad company to the circuit court of appeals resulted in an affirmance of the order of the circuit court. For the opinion see — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 96 C. C. A. 322, 172 Fed. 117.

Mr. Henry L. Stone submitted the cause for appellant. Messrs. Philip W. Frey and George De Bruler were on the brief:

The Vanderburgh circuit court of Indiana had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of this action, because original and exclusive jurisdiction thereof has been vested by the act to regulate commerce in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 112 Fed. 823; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Howard Supply Co. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 162 Fed. 188; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

The order of the state court granting to appellee the preliminary injunction was void, as well as the order of the circuit court perpetuating the same, because they affected property and rights of the parties beyond the territorial jurisdiction of either court.

11 Cyc. 684; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Western & A. R. Co. 8 Baxt. 54.

After removal, it was the duty of the court below to dissolve the temporary restraining order and dismiss the action.

Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gill Car Co. 25 Fed. 737; Foster, Fed. Pr. § 391, pp. 955, 956, note, 22; Auracher v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co. 102 Fed. 1; Swift & Co. v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 633, 58 Fed. 858; Sheldon v. Wabash R. Co. 105 Fed. 785.

The rule of the appellant that it will not accept, transport, or deliver intoxicating liquors consigned to points in Kentucky where the sale of such liquor is prohibited by law is reasonable and valid.

Dickson v. Great Northern R. Co. 56 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 111, L. R. 18 Q. B. Div. 176, 55 L. T. N. S. 868, 35 Week. Rep. 202, 51 J. P. 388, 5 Eng. Rul. Cas. 358; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 162; 4 Elliott, Railroads, §§ 1465, 1466; Moore, Carr. § 5, p. 98; 1 Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 144, 145, 147; Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 118 Fed. 169; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 37, affirmed in 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 9 Kan. 243, 12 Am. Rep. 494; Johnson v. Midland R. Co. 4 Exch. 367, 18 L. J. Exch. N. S. 366, 6 Eng. Ry. & C. Cas. 61; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; American Exp. Co. v. Com. 30 Ky. L. Rep. 207, 97 S. W. 807; Crigler v. Com. 27 Ky. L. Rep. 921, 87 S. W. 276; Adams Exp. Co. v. Com. 124 Ky. 160, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 630, 92 S. W. 932; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Cook v. Marshall

County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 662, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; State v. Goss, 59 Vt. 266, 59 Am. Rep. 706, 9 Atl. 829; Pearson v. Duane, 4 Wall. 605, 18 L. ed. 447; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 206 U. S. 129, 51 L. ed. 987, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co. 73 Iowa, 98, 34 N. W. 761; Platt v. LeCocq, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 558, 85 C. C. A. 621, 158 Fed. 723.

Mr. George A. Cunningham submitted the cause for appellee:

The appeal should be dismissed.

Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 198 U. S. 292, 49 L. ed. 1056, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Bonin v. Gulf Co. 198 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 970, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Banker's Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 48 L. ed. 484, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Cochran v. Montgomery County, 199 U. S. 260, 50 L. ed. 182, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58, 4 Ann. Cas. 451; Chapman v. Bowen, 207 U. S. 89, 52 L. ed. 116, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 51 L. ed. 779, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Weir v. Rountree, 216 U. S. 603, 54 L. ed. 635, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. ed. 752, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

The remedies provided by the act to regulate commerce are exclusive only when it is sought to enforce some provision of the act itself, and not when it is sought to enforce a right theretofore existing, either at common law or by statute, unless the enforcement of such right is, by the act, committed to some other tribunal.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 112 Fed. 823; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Danciger v. Wells, F. & Co. 154 Fed. 379.

Even proceedings in the courts of one state may be enjoined by courts of another state, where the latter have jurisdiction of the parties.

1 High, Inj. 4th ed. §§ 103, et seq.; 6 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 670; Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co. 59 Am. St. Rep. 859, note; Hawkins v. Ireland, 58 Am. St. Rep. 534, note; Hayden v. Yale, 45 La. Ann. 362, 40 Am. St. Rep. 232, 12 So. 633.

56 L. ed.

The court, having jurisdiction of the parties, was not without authority to act merely because the merchandise in question is to be delivered in another state.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 34 Fed. 481; Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 149; Bluthenthal v. Southern R. Co. 84 Fed. 920.

Mandatory injunction is the proper remedy to compel a carrier to accept shipments of intoxicating liquors which it refuses because of void state legislation.

Elliott, Railroads, 2d ed. § 1564; Danciger v. Wells, F. & Co. 154 Fed. 379; Crescent Liquor Co. v. Platt, 148 Fed. 897.

The transportation of intoxicating liquor from one state to another is interstate commerce, and entirely beyond the control of the states.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Com. 126 Ky. 563, 104 S. W. 394; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 51 L. ed. 178, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 Ann. Cas. 1130; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Lord v. Goodall, M. & P. S. S. Co. 102 U. S. 541, 26 L. ed. 224; Com. v. McKinney, 140 Ky. 657, 131 S. W. 497; Com. v. Scott, 141 Ky. 702, 133 S. W. 766; Danciger v. Stone, 188 Fed. 510, 187 Fed. 823; Barrett v. New York, 183 Fed. 793.

No state may make any law limiting the right of a citizen of one state to purchase any article of commerce in any other state, and to have the same shipped to him, wherever he may be, without regard to the laws of any state.

State v. Wignall, 150 Iowa, 650, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 507, 128 N. W. 935.

Mr. Justice Lurton, after making the above statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The jurisdiction of this court to entertain an appeal in this case cannot be seriously controverted. The jurisdiction of the circuit court was not dependent alone upon diversity of citizenship. There was involved not only the validity of the law of Kentucky as a regulation of interstate commerce, but a question as to whether the sole remedy in any such case was not by an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

2. The objection that there was an adequate remedy at law, assuming that the subject is one for any tribunal other than the Interstate Commerce Commission, comes too late, if ever available, the objection being now made for the first time, so far as is discoverable from the record. The announced purpose of the railroad company to abjure its function and duty as a common carrier in respect of interstate shipments of all intoxicating liquors to localities in the state of Kentucky where the Kentucky local-option prohibition laws prevailed threatened the ruin of complainant's business, and relief by injunction against such a continued course of conduct was certainly one which in such circumstances might be granted. Where the case is one in which, under any circumstances, relief in equity may be admissible, it is too late to say that there was an adequate remedy at law only upon review proceedings. Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 32 L. ed. 1005, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

3. The case was heard upon bill and answer. The defense is based solely upon the terms of the Kentucky act of March 21, 1906, now § 2569a, Carroll's Kentucky Statutes of 1909, entitled an act "to Regulate the Carrying, Moving, Delivery, Transferring or Distribution of Intoxicating Liquors in Local-option Districts." By that act it is made unlawful for any common carrier to transport beer or any intoxicating liquor to any consignee in any locality within the state where the sale of such liquors has been prohibited by vote of the people under the local-option law of the state. A violation of the law subjects the offender to a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

Upon the assumption that this legislation effectively prohibited both state and interstate transportation of such commodities within the state, the railroad company notified all of its agents, in and out of the state, to refuse to receive such liquors when consigned to any local-option point. This notification was by a printed circular letter, which set out the full text of the act, and gave a full list of all such local-option points. In express terms this 82]*notification applied to both inter and intrastate shipments; and, it is averred, this circular was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is not, however, averred that the Commission either took any action thereon, or that it was asked to take any action.

The legality of the attitude of the railroad company toward interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors to local-option points in Kentucky must turn upon the validity of that legislation as applied to interstate shipments.

By a long line of decisions, beginning even prior to Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, it has been indisputably determined:

a. That beer and other intoxicating liquors are a recognized and legitimate subject of interstate commerce;

b. That it is not competent for any state to forbid any common carrier to transport such articles from a consignor in one state to a consignee in another;

c. That until such transportation is concluded by delivery to the consignee, such commodities do not become subject to state regulation, restraining their sale or disposition.

The Wilson act (26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177), which subjects such liquors to state regulation, although still in the original packages, does not apply before actual delivery to such consignee, where the shipment is interstate. Some of the many later cases in which these matters have been so determined and the Wilson act construed are: Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 51 L. ed. 178, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1130; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 214 U. S. 218, 53 L. ed. 972, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

Valid as the Kentucky legislation undoubtedly was as a regulation in respect to intrastate shipments of such articles, it was most obviously never an effective enactment in so far as it undertook to regulate interstate shipments to dry points. Pending this very litigation, the Kentucky court of appeals, upon the authority of the line of cases *above cited, reached the 83 same conclusion. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Com. 126 Ky. 563, 104 S. W. 394.

The obligation of the railroad company to conform to the requirements of the Kentucky law, so far as that law prohibited intrastate shipments, is clear, and to this extent its circular notification was commendable. But the duty of this company, as an interstate common carrier for hire, to receive for transportation to consignees upon its line in Kentucky from consignors in other states, any commodity which is an ordinary subject of interstate commerce and such transportation, could not be prohibited by any law of the state of such consignee, inasmuch as any such law would be an unlawful regulation of interstate commerce, not authorized by the police power of the state. It is obvious, therefore, that in so far as the Kentucky statute was an illegal regulation of interstate commerce, it neither imposed an obligation to obey, nor affords an excuse for refusal to perform the general duty of the railroad company as a common carrier of freight.

The fact that the circular notice of the company referred to was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission is incidentally stated in the answer of the company, and this fact is now made the basis for an argument that neither the state court nor the circuit court had any jurisdiction, and that an application should have been made to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an order requiring the railroad company to desist from refusing to transport such articles in interstate commerce.

Why should the brewing company have made complaint to the Commission? What relief could it afford? There was no tariff question. There was no discrimination against shipments tendered by complainant and like shipments tendered by other brewers to the same points. There was no claim that the commodities tendered were inherently dangerous to transport, or that the railroad company did not have transportation facilities. Evansville was not discriminated against in favor of like shipments to the same points. To say that there was a discrimination between shipments of intoxicants and other commodities does not make a case of discrimination or preference where the denial of such shipments is based, as is the case here, wholly and solely upon an illegal restraint upon that kind of interstate commerce, is to reason in a circle, for the question comes back at last to the validity of the law forbidding such shipments. There was no discrimination if the law was valid, and the result must turn not upon any administrative question or questions of fact within the scope of the power of the Commission, but upon the validity of the legislation which controlled the action of the carrier. That is a question of general law, for a judicial tribunal, and one not competent for the Commission as a purely administrative body.

The decision in the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075, is not applicable here. The question there was one of the reasonableness of a rate. Such a question is primarily one of administrative character, and the propriety of a prior resort to the Commission to obtain a ruling upon the question of reasonableness involved the very heart of the whole statute. That there might be uniformity in rate-making necessarily required a resort to that body as a basis for a common-law recovery of an excessive charge.

The result is that the decree of the court below must be affirmed.

56 L. ed.

*FRANK H. WASKEY et al., Petition-[85 ers,
v.

JOSEPH HAMMER et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 85-95.)

Mines — readjustment of lines of location — loss of place of discovery.

1. A placer mining claim which unintentionally included a trifle more than the maximum permitted area is invalidated under U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2320, 2329, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1424, 1432, making the discovery of mineral within the limits of the claim a prerequisite to the location, when, by the readjustment of its lines so as to exclude the excess, the point or place of the only prior mineral discovery was left outside the area included by the readjusted lines.

[For other cases, see Mines, 54-64, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — location by mineral surveyor.

2. The location of a placer mining claim by a United States mineral surveyor is within the prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 452, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 257, against the direct or indirect purchase by officers, clerks, and employees in the General Land Office of any of the public land. [For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — location by employee of Land Office — void or voidable.

3. The location of a placer mining claim, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 452, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 257, prohibiting officers, clerks, and employees in the General Land Office, under penalty of dismissal, from directly or indirectly purchasing or becoming interested in the purchase of the public land, is void, and not merely voidable at the instance of the government.

[For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 84.]

Argued December 7, 1911. Decided January 22, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the District of Alaska, Second Division, in favor of plaintiffs in an action of ejectment growing out of conflicting locations of placer mining claims. Affirmed.

See same case below, 95 C. C. A. 305, 170 Fed. 31.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On location of mining claim—see notes to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 763; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 39 L. ed. 859; and Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 96.

Mr. Albert Fink argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners Whittren and Eadie:

Upon a valid location of a mining claim title vests in the locator to an estate from which he shall not be divested, even by act of Congress.

Belk v. Mcagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 183; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650, 43 L. ed. 320, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 575; Elder v. Wood, 208 U. S. 226, 52 L. ed. 464, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 85.

Whatever reason might be assigned for extending the supposed doctrine of Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482, further than the facts of that case in lode locations, can find no support when applied to placers, where it is presumed that the auriferous gravels extend through the entire claim.

The doctrine of Gwillim v. Donnellan, supra, has never been pushed further than the facts of that case.

Little Pittsburgh Consol. Min. Co. v. Amie Min. Co. 5 McCrary, 298, 17 Fed. 57; Silver City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. Lowry, 19 Utah, 334, 57 Pac. 11, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 55; Tonopah & S. L. Min. Co. v. Tonopah Min. Co. 125 Fed. 408.

A deputy mineral surveyor is not an employee of the General Land Office.

Century Dict.; Hand v. Cook, 29 Nev. 518, 92 Pac. 3.

That the General Land Office has itself concluded that a deputy mineral surveyor is an employee within the prohibition of the statute is not controlling. The earlier view of the Department was to the contrary, and no sufficient reason is assigned for the change of sentiment.

Instructions of Commissioner of Gen. Land Office, 2 Land Dec. 313; Dennison v. Willets, 11 C. L. O. 261; Re Lock Lode, 6 Land Dec. 105.

It has always been the practice of the Land Department to permit entries to be perfected where the rights had been initiated prior to any relation with the government, even though at the time of the entry the entrymen were in the government service and employed in the General Land Office.

Winans v. Beidler, 15 Land Dec. 266.

The question cannot be raised by plaintiffs.

1 Lindley, Mines, § 233; Martin, Mining Law, § 98; Costigan, Mines, p. 167; Snyder, Mines, § 263; Lone Jack Min. Co.

v. Megginson, 27 C. C. A. 63, 48 U. S. App. 452, 82 Fed. 89; Billings v. Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. 2 C. C. A. 252, 10 U. S. App. 1, 51 Fed. 338, 3 C. C. A. 69, 10 U. S. App. 322, 52 Fed. 251; Tornanses v. Melsing, 47 C. C. A. 596, 109 Fed. 711; Shea v. Nilima, 66 C. C. A. 263, 133 Fed. 209; Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 85; McKinley Creek Min. Co. v. Alaska United Min. Co. 183 U. S. 563, 46 L. ed. 331, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 730.

Messrs. W. H. Metson, Ira D. Orton, and E. H. Ryan filed a brief for petitioners Wasky and Crabtree:

If it be admitted that Whittren, as a deputy mineral surveyor, is subject to the loss of any location made by him while such surveyor, no such loss could be asserted except in a proceeding under proper process and pleading where the government is a party.

Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 85; McKinley Creek Min. Co. v. Alaska United Min. Co. 183 U. S. 563, 46 L. ed. 331, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 730; Shea v. Nilima, 66 C. C. A. 263, 133 Fed. 215; Tornanses v. Melsing, 47 C. C. A. 596, 109 Fed. 711; Lone Jack Min. Co. v. Megginson, 27 C. C. A. 63, 48 U. S. App. 452, 82 Fed. 89; Billings v. Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. 3 C. C. A. 69, 10 U. S. App. 322, 52 Fed. 250; Holdt v. Hazard, 10 Cal. App. 440, 102 Pac. 540; Shamel, Mining, Mineral & Geological Law, 108; Morrison, Mining Rights, 13th ed. 308; 1 Lindley, Mines, § 233; Martin, Mining Law, § 98; Costigan, Mines, § 263; Ricketts, Mines, § 163; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 627, 25 L. ed. 188, 190; Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 249, 25 L. ed. 580, 584; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 102, 103, 26 L. ed. 444, 445; Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Gadsden, 191 U. S. 451, 48 L. ed. 258, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Seymour v. Slide & S. Gold Mines, 153 U. S. 523, 38 L. ed. 807, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 847; Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 60, 25 L. ed. 547, 549; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 27 L. ed. 401, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 450, 451, 50 L. ed. 822, 823, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; McMichael v. Murphy, 197 U. S. 304, 49 L. ed. 766, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Hodges v. Colcord, 193 U. S. 192, 48 L. ed. 677, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Weber v. Spokane Nat. Bank, 12 C. C. A. 93, 29 U. S. App. 97, 64 Fed. 208; Sanders v. Thornton, 38 C. C. A. 508, 223 U. S.

97 Fed. 863; Brown v. Schleier, 55 C. C. A. 475, 118 Fed. 987; Blodgett v. Lanyon Zinc Co. 58 C. C. A. 79, 120 Fed. 893; Waterbury v. McKinnon, 77 C. C. A. 294, 146 Fed. 737; Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 545; Neuchatel Asphalt Co. v. New York, 155 N. Y. 373, 49 N. E. 1043; Ledebuhr v. Wisconsin Trust Co. 112 Wis. 657, 88 N. W. 607, 609; Myers v. Campbell, 64 N. J. L. 186, 44 Atl. 863; Camp v. Land, 122 Cal. 167, 54 Pac. 839.

The fact that the claim exceeded in area the statutory amount simply rendered that excessive area void.

McIntosh v. Price, 58 C. C. A. 136, 121 Fed. 716; Zimmerman v. Funchion, 89 C. C. A. 53, 161 Fed. 859; Waskey v. Hammer, 95 C. C. A. 305, 170 Fed. 31; Richmond Min. Co. v. Rose, 114 U. S. 576, 29 L. ed. 273, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1055.

And even as to this void excess Whittren had the sole and first right to say where and how he should cut it off. He was not compelled to cast it off until someone had complained, and then could use his judgment as to what portion should be eliminated.

McIntosh v. Price, 58 C. C. A. 136, 121 Fed. 716; Zimmerman v. Funchion, 89 C. C. A. 53, 161 Fed. 859.

If these innocent purchasers were assumed to know the law, no other conclusions could have been arrived at by them than:

(1) Assuming that loss of employment was specifically named as a penalty in the statute, the courts could prescribe no further penalty.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. §§ 324, 327; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 397; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 545; DeWolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. 392, 6 L. ed. 349; Bird v. Dennison, 7 Cal. 308.

(2) If loss of employment (the consequence provided by the statute) was not to be regarded as the exclusive penalty, and the courts could by construction assume that Congress designed a further penalty, there could be none greater than by making the location voidable, and that could only be at the instance of the sovereign power.

Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 26 Utah, 1, 99 Am. St. Rep. 808, 71 Pac. 1046, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 610.

The presumption is that discovery extends throughout location.

Armstrong v. Lower, 6 Colo. 393, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 631; Patterson v. Hitchcock, 3 Colo. 533, 5 Mor. Min. Rep. 542; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 1116, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 472; Lange v. Robinson, 148 Fed. 799; Shoshone 56 L. ed.

Min. Co. Rutter, 31 C. C. A. 223, 59 U. S. App. 538, 87 Fed. 807, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 356.

Where the locator of a mining claim extends or changes his boundaries by an amended location, he is not required to make any discovery of ore in the ground so added, as it becomes a part of the original claim, and is validated by the original discovery.

Tonopah & S. L. Min. Co. v. Tonopah Min. Co. 125 Fed. 389.

After the claim has been properly located, the owner of it may sell any part without prejudice to his right to hold the remainder. He may dispose of it by gift or grant in any way that seems proper to him.

Little Pittsburgh Consol. Min. Co. v. Amie Min. Co. 5 McCary, 298, 17 Fed. 57; Silver City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. Lowry, 19 Utah, 334, 57 Pac. 11, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 55.

An innocent purchaser may be in a somewhat different position than would be the original locator.

Harris v. Equator Min. & Smelting Co. 3 McCary, 14, 8 Fed. 863, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 178.

A deputy mineral surveyor is not an "officer" within the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 452, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 257, in that he cannot be held to be an officer of the United States.

United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. ed. 830; United States v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508, 25 L. ed. 482; United States v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303, 307, 31 L. ed. 463, 464, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505; United States v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525, 532, 31 L. ed. 534, 536, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

A deputy mineral surveyor is not a "clerk in the General Land Office."

Bouvier's Law Dict.; People ex rel. Sims v. Fire Comrs. 73 N. Y. 442; People ex rel. Satterlee v. Board of Police 75 N. Y. 38.

A deputy mineral surveyor is not an "employee" in the General Land Office.

Century Dict.; Standard Dist.; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 593; United States v. Meigs, 95 U. S. 748, 24 L. ed. 578; Ex parte Burdell, 32 Fed. 681; Powell v. United States, 60 Fed. 689; People ex rel. Crane v. Ahearn, 125 App. Div. 795, 110 N. Y. Supp. 306; United States v. McDonald, 21 C. C. A. 347, 44 U. S. App. 461, 72 Fed. 898; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 505, 34 L. ed. 1023, 1025, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 310, 34 L. ed. 674, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Vane v. Newcombe, 132 U. S. 220, 233, 33 L. ed. 310, 315, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60; Pack v. New York, 8 N. Y. 222; Campfield v. Lang, 25 Fed. 128; Kelly v. New York, 11 N. Y. 432; People ex rel. Morris v. Randall, 73 N. Y. 416; Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 58, 55 Am. Dec. 304; Wood, Mast. & S. § 4; Bishop, Non-Contract Law, § 602; Kearney v. Oakes, 18 Can. S. C. 148; Com. ex rel. Bache v. Binns, 17 Serg. & R. 220.

Where a statute plainly points out the persons subject to its provisions, no others can by construction be brought within the purview thereof.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law 2d ed. 597; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 44 L. ed. 219, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Mr. Albert H. Elliot argued the cause, and, with Mr. George W. Rea, filed a brief for respondents:

A deputy United States mineral surveyor comes within the restrictive prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 452, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 257.

Re McMicken, 10 Land Dec. 97; Muller v. Coleman, 18 Land Dec. 394; Re Neill, 24 Land Dec. 393; Floyd v. Montgomery, 26 Land Dec. 122; Re Maxwell, 29 Land Dec. 76; Re Baltzell, 29 Land Dec. 333; Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 26 Utah, 1, 99 Am. St. Rep. 808, 71 Pac. 1046, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 610.

The marking of boundaries on the ground and discovery of gold are two acts necessary to a valid mining location.

Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 50, 29 L. ed. 348, 349, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482.

Locating a mining claim is purchasing or becoming interested in the purchase of any of the public lands, within the meaning of the statute.

Farrington v. Wilson, 29 Wis. 392; 32 Cyc. 1265.

When Whittren drew in his lines and excluded his discovery point, he abandoned his location of January, 1902, and the ground was open to location by Schwartz if the attempted relocation of 1903 by Whittren was invalid.

Farrell v. Lockhart, 210 U. S. 142, 52 L. ed. 994, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 162, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 L. ed. 1119, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716; Tuolumne Consol. Min. Co. v. Maier, 134 Cal. 583, 66 Pac. 863, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 678.

Did Whittren acquire such a title that he could hold the claim against the whole world except the government of the United States?

Prosser v. Finn, 208 U. S. 67, 52 L. ed. 392, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of ejectment, the subject-matter of which was the overlapping portions of two placer mining claims in Alaska, one known as the Golden Bull and the other as the Bon Voyage. The plaintiffs claimed the area in conflict as part of the Golden Bull, and the defendants claimed it as part of the Bon Voyage. The facts, as they must be accepted for present purposes, are these:

In 1902 the Bon Voyage was located by J. Potter Whittren, he having previously made a discovery of placer gold within the ground which he included in the claim. Although not intended to be excessive, the claim embraced a trifle more than 20 acres, the maximum area permitted in a location by one person. In 1903 Whittren, upon ascertaining that fact, drew in two of the boundary lines sufficiently to exclude the excess, and in doing so left the point or place of his only prior mineral discovery outside the readjusted lines. Later in 1903, he made a discovery of placer gold within the lines as readjusted. At the time of drawing in the lines and making the subsequent discovery he was a United States mineral surveyor, but was not such at the time of the original location. In 1904 the Golden Bull was located by B. [90] Schwartz, and included a part of the ground embraced in the Bon Voyage. Neither claim was carried to patent or entry, and when the action was begun the defendants were in possession. The plaintiffs other than Schwartz claimed under him, and the defendants other than Whittren claimed under conveyances from him, made after 1904.

Upon the trial the court, at the instance of the plaintiffs, directed a verdict in their favor, substantially upon the following grounds, taken collectively: 1. A discovery of mineral within the limits of a mining claim is essential to its validity; 2. The original location of the Bon Voyage was invalidated by the readjustment of its lines whereby the point or place of the only prior discovery of mineral was left without those lines; 3. The readjusted location was invalid because, at the time of the discovery of mineral therein, Whittren, being a United States mineral surveyor, was disqualified to make a location under the mining laws. The jury returned a verdict as directed, judgment was entered thereon, the judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit, (95 C. C. A. 305, 170 Fed. 31), and the case is here upon certiorari (216 U. S. 622, 54 L. ed. 641, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577).

Conceding that the unintentional inclusion of a trifle more than 20 acres in the Bon Voyage as originally located was an irregularity which did not vitiate the location, but merely made it necessary that the excess be excluded when it became known (Richmond Min. Co. v. Rose, 114 U. S. 576, 580, 29 L. ed. 273, 274, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1055; McIntosh v. Price, 58 C. C. A. 136, 121 Fed. 716; Zimmerman v. Funchion, 89 C. C. A. 53, 161 Fed. 859), we come to consider whether the location was invalidated when, by the readjustment of its lines, it was left without a mineral discovery therein. The mining laws, Rev. Stat. §§ 2320, 2329, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1424, 1432, make the discovery of mineral "within the limits of the claim" a prerequisite to the location of a claim, whether lode or placer, the purpose being to reward the discoverer and to prevent the location of land not found to be mineral. A discovery without the limits of the claim, no matter what its proximity, does not suffice. In giving effect to this restriction, this court said, in Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482, that the loss of that part of a location which embraces the place of the only discovery therein is "a loss of the location." Possibly what was said went beyond the necessities of that case, critically considered, but it illustrates what naturally would be taken to be the effect of the statute; and as that view of it has been accepted and acted upon for twenty-five years by the Land Department and by the courts in the mining regions, it should not be disturbed now. It follows that when, in 1903, Whittren excluded from the Bon Voyage the only place at which mineral had been discovered therein, he lost the location. That his purpose was not to give up the location, but only to eliminate the excess in area, is immaterial, because, although free to exclude any other part of the claim and to retain that embracing the discovery, he excluded the latter, and thereby caused the location to be without a discovery within its limits. Possibly, as was suggested in argument, the discovery was excluded because it was not deemed sufficiently promising to make its retention advisable, but, however that may have been, its exclusion defeated the location and left the lands therein "open to exploration and subject to claim for new discoveries." Ibid.

As no adverse right had intervened at the time of Whittren's subsequent discovery of mineral within the limits of the readjusted location, it must be conceded that that location became effective as of that time, just as if he had then marked those limits anew (2 Lindley, Mines, §§ 328, 330), unless he was then disqualified to make a location by reason of his having become a United States mineral surveyor; and so it is necessary to consider whether such a surveyor is within the prohibition of Rev. Stat. § 452, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, 92]p. 257, *and, if so, whether the prohibition made the readjusted location void, or only voidable at the instance of the government. That section reads:

"The officers, clerks, and employees in the General Land Office are prohibited from directly or indirectly purchasing or becoming interested in the purchase of any of the public land; and any person who violates this section shall forthwith be removed from his office."

Mineral surveyors are appointed by the surveyor general under Rev. Stat. § 2334, and their field of action is confined to the surveying of mining claims and to matters incident thereto. They act only at the solicitation of owners of such claims, and are paid by the owners, not by the government; but their charges must be within the maximum fixed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and their work must be done in conformity to regulations prescribed by that officer. They are required to take an oath, and to execute a bond to the United States, as are many public officers. Within the limits of their authority they act in the stead of the surveyor general and under his direction, and in that sense are his deputies. The work which they do is the work of the government, and the surveys which they make are its surveys. The right performance of their duties is of real concern, not merely to those at whose solicitation they act, but also to the owners of adjacent and conflicting claims and to the government. Of the representatives of the government who have to do with the proceedings incident to applications for patents to mining claims, they alone come in contact with the land itself, and have an opportunity to observe its situation and character, and the extent and nature of the work done and improvements made thereon; and it is upon their reports that the surveyor general makes the certificate required by Rev. Stat. § 2325, which is a prerequisite to the issuance of a patent. See Mining Regulations of July 26, 1901, paragraphs 90, 115-169, 31 *Land Dec. 474, 489, 493; Gowdy [93 v. Kismet Gold Min. Co. 24 Land Dec. 191, 193. The résumé of their authority and duties, and of their relation to the surveyor general and the General Land Office, satisfies us that they are within the prohibition of § 452. That prohibition is addressed not merely to the officers of the General Land Office, or to its officers and clerks, but to its "officers, clerks, and employees." These words, taken collectively, are very comprehensive, and easily embrace all persons holding positions under that office and participating in the work assigned to it, as is the case with mineral surveyors. The purpose of the prohibition is to guard against the temptations and partiality likely to attend efforts to acquire public lands, or interests therein, by persons so situated, and thereby to prevent abuse and inspire confidence in the administration of the public-land laws. So understanding the letter and purpose of the prohibition, we think it embraces the location of a mining claim by a mineral surveyor. True, it is addressed to officers, clerks, and employees "in the General Land Office," and is directed against "the purchase of any of the public land" by them; but in view of the terminology common to public-land legislation, we think the reference to the General Land Office is inclusive of the subordinate offices or branches maintained under its supervision, such as the offices of the surveyors-general and the local land offices, and that the term "purchase" is inclusive of the various modes of securing title to or rights in public lands under the general laws regulating their disposal.

That the construction which we here place upon § 452 is the one prevailing in the Land Department is shown in its circular of September 15, 1890, 11 Land Dec. 348, wherein it is said: "All officers, clerks, and employees in the offices of the surveyors general, the local land offices, and the General Land Office, or any persons, wherever located, employed under the supervision of the Commissioner *of the General Land Office, are, during such employment, prohibited from entering or becoming interested, directly or indirectly, in any of the public lands of the United States." The published decisions of the Secretary of the Interior, although disclosing instances in which that construction has been departed from or doubted (Dennison and Willets, 11 Copp's L. O. 261; Lock Lode, 6 Land Dec. 105; Re Leflingwell, 30 Land Dec. 139), show that in the main it has been closely followed (Re McMicken, 10 Land Dec. 97, and 11 Land Dec. 96; Muller v. Coleman, 18 Land Dec. 394; Re Neill, 24 Land Dec. 393; Floyd v. Montgomery, 26 Land Dec. 122, 136; Re Maxwell, 29 Land Dec. 76; Re Baltzell, 29 Land Dec. 333; Re Bradford, 36 Land Dec. 61).

In principle, the recent case of Prosser v. Finn, 208 U. S. 67, 52 L. ed. 392, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225, goes far to sustain the view here expressed. There a special agent of the General Land Office, whose field of duty was in the state of Washington, made an entry of public land under the timber-culture law, and thereafter in all respects complied with that law. But it was held by this court that he was, in every substantial sense, an employee in the General Land Office, and therefore was within the prohibition of § 452.

The general rule of law is that an act done in violation of a statutory prohibition is void and confers no right upon the wrongdoer; but this rule is subject to the qualification that when, upon a survey of the statute, its subject-matter and the mischief sought to be prevented, it appears that the legislature intended otherwise, effect must be given to that intention. Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 421, 426, 36 L. ed. 759, 762, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884; Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 649, 38 L. ed. 578, 583, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 548, 46 L. ed. 679, 685, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431. Here we think the general rule applies. The acts described in § 452 are expressly prohibited under penalty of dismissal. There is in its language nothing indicating that its scope is to be confined *to the[95] exaction of that penalty. (Prosser v. Finn, supra), or that acts done in violation of it are to be valid against all but the government. Nor is there anything in its subject-matter or in the mischief sought to be prevented which militates against the application of the general rule. On the contrary, it is reasonably inferable, from the language of the section and the situation with which it deals, that it is intended that violations of it shall be attended by the ordinary consequences of unlawful acts. We therefore are of opinion that the readjusted location was void.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX REL.
LILLIE LOWE, Ransom Lowe, Bertha Lowe, Evalina Lowe, Mary Robbins, Albert Rogers, and Dollie Jones, Heirs at Law of Sherman Jones, Deceased, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

WALTER L. FISHER†, Secretary of the Interior.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 95-107.)

Judgment — supplemental decision — court of claims.

1. The reply of the court of claims in response to a request from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, giving its opinion upon a question not passed upon in its original opinion, but of which it was given special jurisdiction by the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249), is a part of the decision in the case, where, at the time of such reply, the case was still under its control, and pending upon certain motions made by the parties.

†Resignation of Richard A. Ballinger, as Secretary of the Interior, suggested October 30, 1911, and Walter L. Fisher, his successor in office, substituted as the party defendant in error herein.

[For other cases, see Judgment, XII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Cherokee enrolment — confirmation.

2. The enrolment of Cherokee freedmen on the tribal rolls is not to be taken as absolutely confirmed by the confirmatory provision of the act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 321, chap. 398), in view of the requirements of the subsequent acts of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 517), § 1, July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), § 27, and April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876), § 3, that a roll of Cherokee freedmen be made in strict compliance with a decree of the court of claims, so as to exclude freedmen and their descendants who had not returned to the Cherokee Nation within the time designated by a treaty stipulation.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Cherokee allotment — revision by Secretary of Interior.

3. The revisory and corrective power of the Secretary of the Interior over Indian allotments under the acts of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1060, chap. 1479), and April 26, 1906, includes the right, upon notice and hearing, to strike from the approved roll of the citizens of the Five Civilized Tribes the names of Cherokee freedmen allottees because their ancestors had not returned to the Cherokee Nation within the time designated by a treaty stipulation, although, by the act of July 1, 1902, § 29, "when there shall have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of the Interior lists embracing the names of all those lawfully entitled to enrolment, the roll shall be deemed complete." [For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 445.]

Argued November 14, 1911. Decided January 29, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to review a judgment which, on a second writ of error, affirmed the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a petition for mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to cancel his action in striking the names of certain Cherokee freedmen from the approved roll of citizenship. Affirmed.

See same case below on first appeal, 34 App. D. C. 70; on second appeal, 35 App. D. C. 524.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Merillat argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles J. Kappler, James K. Jones, and Frank E. Duncan, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Executive officials have no power to cancel or forfeit a vested interest.

56 L. ed.

Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Allison, 211 U. S. 265, 53 L. ed. 176, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

If recourse is to be had to analogy, the Indian statutes should be compared with special statutes, such as that involved in Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

By the Cherokee agreement and other acts the Secretary of the Interior was invested with jurisdiction over enrolments, and authority to approve rolls containing names of persons he found on the facts and law to be entitled to enrolment. That approval, being pursuant to authority vested in him, is not open to review.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 486; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 323, 47 L. ed. 1076, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 418, 26 L. ed. 187; Foltz v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 8 C. C. A. 635, 19 U. S. App. 581, 60 Fed. 316.

The extent of his investigation and knowledge of the points decided, or the methods by which the Secretary reached his determination, is not open to review.

De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 121, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519.

Having approved the partial lists constituting part and parcel of the final roll, the Secretary had exhausted his discretion and power was gone except it had been specially invested in him. His approval of enrolment ended authority in him. The statutes conferred no further power or authority upon him, in the absence of statutory authority to proceed further and to cancel, his jurisdiction had ceased and determined. Once declared to be citizens of the tribe, by operation of law the plaintiffs in error became entitled absolutely and of right to a vested interest in tribal lands and funds, and with the issuance of an allotment certificate that individual but vested interest in the tribal lands became a vested interest in a separate and distinct tract of land as the enrolled's separate partited share of the tribal landed estate.

Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 721.

Executive officers derive their powers from the statutes. Not only must an officer have jurisdiction of the subject-matter, but he must also keep within the limits of the power conferred on him by statute.

United States v. McDaniel, 7 Pet. 1-14, 8

L. ed. 587-592; United States v. Thurber, 28 Fed. 56.

Any contention that because of his general power of supervision over enrolment, allotments, and the Five Civilized Tribes, the Secretary must be held to have power to cancel enrolments which he ascertains he has approved by reason of fraud or mistake of law, can best be answered by citation of the case of Mosgrove v. Harper, 33 Or. 252, 54 Pac. 187, wherein it was held that the Secretary was without authority for any cause to cancel a once approved lease.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

The allotment certificates, like certification of lists of lands under the special acts, convey a title as complete as patents.

Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 29 L. ed. 311, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 24 L. ed. 1063.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The secretary had authority to correct the rolls, upon notice and hearing to the party concerned, within the time fixed by law for their completion.

Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 461, 32 L. ed. 482, 483, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 490, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Only Cherokee freedmen and their descendants who had complied with the provisions of the treaty of 1866, as to residence in the nation, were entitled to enrolment.

Whitmire v. Cherokee Nation, 31 Ct. Cl. 148.

The court of claims had jurisdiction to determine this matter.

Journeycake v. Cherokee Nation, 28 Ct. Cl. 282.

Congress itself construed article 9 of the treaty of August 11, 1866, as conferring the rights of native Cherokees only upon Cherokee freedmen residents of the nation, or who had returned thereto as provided therein.

Whitmire v. Cherokee Nation, 30 Ct. Cl. 182.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The case involves the question whether the Secretary of the Interior, after due hearing, and after having made up a roll of citizens of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians, and after having issued certificates of allotment to the enrolled Indians, may strike their names from the roll after *giving due notice of his intended action[97 and an opportunity to be heard.

The case arose upon the exercise of such power by the Secretary and an action of mandamus to require him to cancel his action. To the answer of the Secretary, the supreme court of the District of Columbia sustained a demurrer and entered a judgment in accordance with the prayer of the petition. The court of appeals reversed the judgment. On return of the case to the supreme court, the relators elected to stand on their demurrer and the court dismissed their petition. This action was affirmed by the court of appeals and the case was then brought here.

It was decided in Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, that the Secretary had no such power without notice to the parties concerned and an opportunity to be heard. These conditions were performed in the present case, and, so far, the case is distinguished from the Goldsby Case. The power of the Secretary upon the rehearing under the applicable statutes is now to be considered.

The relators base their right of enrolment on article 9 of the Cherokee treaty of August 11, 1866 [14 Stat. at L. 801], the material part of which is as follows: "They [Cherokee Nation] further agree that all freedmen who have been liberated by voluntary act of their former owners or by law, as well as all free colored persons who were in the country at the commencement of the Rebellion and are now residents therein, or who may return within six months, and their descendants, shall have all the rights of native Cherokees." It was found by the Secretary of the Interior that relators were descendants of liberated slaves, but he also found that their ancestors had not returned to the Cherokee Nation within six months of the date of the treaty, August 11, 1866. This must be assumed to be the fact, for it is alleged in the answer and admitted by the demurrer. Two propositions of law are, however, urged *by relators: (1) That[98 the requirement of a return within the time designated applies only to free colored persons; and (2) that the Secretary, having, on November 16, 1904, approved a list of Cherokee freedmen, containing the names of relators, on the ground that their ancestors had complied with the provisions for return to the Nation, had no power to cancel their names.

(1) Article 9 of the treaty is undoubtedly ambiguous, and to support their construction of it relators trace its genesis to the compulsion exercised on the Cherokee Nation by the United States for its espousal of the cause of the Confederacy during the Civil War. The Indians, it is said, were regarded as having forfeited their treaty rights, but the United States were willing to renew relations with them, stipulating, among other things, that "the institution of slavery, which has existed among several of the tribes, must be forthwith abolished, and measures taken for the unconditional emancipation of all persons held in bondage, and for their incorporation into the tribes on an equal footing with the original members, or suitably provided for."

The Indians resisted the conditions, and replied that it would not be for the benefit of the emancipated negro, nor for the Indians, to incorporate the former into the several tribes on an equal footing with the original members. They conceded, however, that the emancipated negro must be suitably provided for, and subsequently the Choctaws suggested that white persons should be excluded from their territory, and that "no person of African descent, except our former slaves, or free persons of color who are now, or have been, residents of the territory, will be permitted to reside in the territory, unless formerly incorporated with some tribe, according to the usage of the band."

The Seminoles answered to the same effect, and asked that article 3 be changed 99]to admit only colored persons* lately held in bondage by them and free persons of color residing in the Nation previous to the Rebellion, to a residence among them, and adoption in the Seminole tribe upon some plan to be agreed upon by them and approved by the government. "We are willing," they said, "to provide for the colored people of our own Nation, but do not desire our lands to become colonization grounds for the negroes of other states and territories." The Creeks expressed this in the same way, and the relators further adduce, as supporting their construction of article 9, that the commission which negotiated the treaty, reporting on it officially, said: "Slavery is abolished and the full rights of the freedmen are acknowledged."

The history of article 9, therefore, it is insisted, shows that the article consummated the purpose. In other words, when the Indians realized that they must provide for negroes, they limited their concession "to former slaves and then to any other negroes who had been in the Indian country at the outbreak of the War, and might return within a short time after peace to make their home in the Indian territory, thereby preventing a general influx of negroes who might seek free land." And the right to land, it is pointed out, was the consequence to be apprehended, as "lawful residence in the Indian territory meant the right to occupy land."

It is further contended that the Cherokees acted upon the treaty practically in accordance with this construction of it, and that it was not until many years after that they "sought to refine it away and abrogate it in effect." They accepted it reluctantly, it is said, and subsequently contended that it conferred civil, not property, rights, and passed what was known as the "blood bill," by which they sought to exclude all but native Cherokees by blood from participation in a large payment of funds which was about to be made. This gave rise to controversy, and Congress passed an act conferring jurisdiction on the *court of claims to settle[100 the matter. The act is entitled, "An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes." It was approved October 1, 1890. [26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249.] The Cherokee freedmen whose rights were to be determined under the act were those who "settled and located in the Cherokee Nation under the provisions and stipulations of article 11" of the treaty.

The court decided that under the Cherokee constitution of 1866 the freedmen became citizens equally with the Cherokees, and equally interested in the common property, and equally entitled to share in its proceeds per capita. But the court did not attempt an analysis of § 5 of the constitution nor of article 9 of the treaty (they are alike), but defined the rights of the freedmen and the free negroes in the language of the constitution and the article. 31 Ct. Cl. 148. The opinion in the case, therefore, as delivered, had the same ambiguity as the constitution and treaty, and was not understood by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who was charged by the Secretary of the Interior with the duty of determining who were the resident freedmen entitled to share in the disposition of the fund as decreed, and who desired the further opinion of the court. In reply, the court said:

"The court is of the opinion that the clauses in that article in these words, 'And are now residents therein, or who may return within six months, and their descendants,' were intended, for the protection of the Cherokee Nation, as a limitation upon the number of persons who might avail themselves of the provisions of the treaty; and consequently that they refer to both the freedmen and the free colored persons previously named in the article. That is to say, freedmen and the descendants of freedmen who did not return within six months are excluded from the benefits of the treaty and of the decree."

101] *Subsequently the court was called upon to add to its opinion, which it did, as follows: "The court is also of the opinion that the act 2d March, 1895 (28 Stat. at L. p. 910, § 11, chap. 188), prescribes the manner in which payments per capita shall be made, and that the matter of payment is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior. The court, after further consideration, adheres to the opinion communicated to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs February 18, 1896.

"The within motion for instructions is overruled." 31 Ct. Cl. 140, 148.

The relators contend that the reply of the court to the Commissioner was not part of its decision. This, however, is a mistake. The court had kept control of the case, and at the time of its reply to the Commissioner the case was pending upon certain motions made by the parties. And, as we have seen, the court had been given special jurisdiction of the question and all others which were involved in the controversy. But it is contended that the only issue submitted to the court was whether "the Cherokee freedmen, as a class, were entitled to share in the proceeds of the Cherokee outlet or strip lands west of the 90th meridian." It is, hence, further contended that the jurisdictional act did not extend to the determination of what particular persons composed such class, or who were freedmen, and that therefore "the point now involved has not had judicial determination."

The object of the contention, no doubt, is to clear the way for the ultimate contention upon which their case must rest,—the want of power of the Secretary of the Interior over rolls which he had once approved, and after having issued certificates of allotment to the enrolled Indians. In other words, relators would push aside the adjudication of their disqualification to be enrolled, they not having returned to the Cherokee Nation within the time designated by the treaty. They, however, make 102]*an alternative contention, and urge that they were adjudged to be within the provisions of the treaty by their enrolment upon the Kern-Clifton roll, which they insist was adjudged to be legal evidence of the rights of the freedmen; in other words, that the enrolment identified the individual freedmen who were entitled to participate in the tribal property.

It is admitted in the answer that relators are on the Kern-Clifton roll, and it does not seem to be contested that the roll was made under instructions from the court of claims. A plausible argument, therefore, is presented that it partakes of the conclusive effect to be attributed to a judicial decree. And it is further urged by relators that the Kern-Clifton roll was confirmed by the act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 321, 329, chap. 398), which declared "that the rolls of citizenship of the several tribes, as now existing, are hereby confirmed."

What effect we should have to give to the decree, assuming it to go as far as contended, we are not called upon to say. It was certainly competent for Congress further to deal with the subject. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

We pass, therefore, to a consideration of the act of June 10, 1896, upon which relators rely. It was one of a number of acts which exhibit a connected scheme for the enrolment of the members of the Five Civilized Tribes and the division of their tribal property, although their provisions are somewhat varying.

By the act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 645, chap. 209), the Dawes Commission was created, with powers to negotiate with the tribes. In 1896, by the act of June 10th of that year (29 Stat. at L. 321, chap. 398), the Commission was directed to make up a roll of the citizens of the tribes, which included the Cherokees, who should apply within three months from the passage of the act, and to decide all such applications within ninety days after the same should be *made. Due force[103 and effect was directed to be given to tribal rolls, usages, customs, and laws, if not inconsistent with Federal laws. The act contained the provision which we have already quoted, that is, "that the rolls of citizenship of the several tribes as now existing are hereby confirmed." There were powers of review given to those aggrieved by the decision either of the Commission or the tribal authorities. The relators, however, say that "the Dawes Commission, as is matter of official history, did not adopt the tribal rolls as confirmed, but proceeded to try the rights of persons to be on the tribal rolls, and the controversy which ensued continued, and the rolls were not closed until March 4, 1907, Congress refusing to heed administrative appeals for more time."

But before that final date arrived Congress passed several acts, the provisions of which are relied on by relators as establishing their right. The acts would seem to demonstrate the contrary, and that the conditions which arose demanded changes in legislation. It is true that it is provided that the rolls of the tribes which were directed to be made, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, should be final, and should constitute the several tribes which they represented; and it is therefore contended that those provisions became legislative confirmations which the Secretary was without power to disregard, and that every partial list forwarded to him which he approved he could not afterwards change, whatever the proof of mistake, imposition, or fraud. A few citations will prove the unsoundness of the contention.

The act of June 10, 1896, supra, which is so much relied on, was largely superseded by § 1 of the act of June 28, 1898, commonly known as the Curtis act. 30 Stat. at L. 495, 502, chap. 517. The section gave the Commission the power to investigate the right of persons whose names were on the rolls, and to "omit all such as may have been placed there by fraud or without authority of law, enrolling only 104]such *as may have lawful rights thereto," etc. And it was provided that the Commission "should make a roll of Cherokee freedmen in strict compliance with the decree of the court of claims, rendered the 3d day of February, eighteen hundred and ninety-six." It was further provided that the Commission should "take the roll of Cherokee citizens of eighteen hundred and eighty, not including freedmen, as the only roll intended to be confirmed by this and preceding acts of Congress. . . ."

It is manifest from this act that the contention of relators that the tribal rolls were to be treated or accepted as absolutely confirmed is unsound. One roll only was confirmed. The other rolls were to be corrected, not confirmed; and a roll of the Cherokee freedmen was to be made in conformity with the decree of the court of claims,—a roll not confirmed, but to be made, so as to exclude the relators because they were excluded by the decree; that is, because they were not residents of the Cherokee Nation at the time of the promulgation of the treaty.

It does not appear that relators were on any roll prior to the passage of the act of June 10, 1896, upon which they so much rely, and therefore within its confirmatory provision, giving it all the force contended for. They were on the Kern-Clifton roll, it is said, but when that roll was made does not appear. The allegation of the petition is that prior to November 16, 1904, the Secretary of the Interior affirmed a decision by the Commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes, which held that relators were entitled to enrolment as citizens, and that prior to that date they were regularly ordered to be placed upon the final roll of freedmen citizens, and that such roll was duly and regularly approved by the Secretary of the Interior on the 16th of November, 1906.

But the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, § 27, chap. 1375), emphasized the requirement that the enrolment of freedmen *must be made in strict conform-[105 ity with the decree of the court of claims. Congress was even more particular in the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876). Section 3 of the act explicitly provided that "the roll of Cherokee freedmen shall include only such persons of African descent, either free colored or the slaves of Cherokee citizens and their descendants, who were actual, personal, bona fide residents of the Cherokee Nation August 11, 1866, or who actually returned and established such residence in the Cherokee Nation on or before February 11, 1867."

Relators nevertheless insist that notwithstanding they were not entitled to be placed upon the rolls, yet, having been placed there, they cannot be taken off by the Secretary of the Interior; citing in support of the contention certain provisions of the acts of Congress and the congressional policy expressed in them. The policy of the government, it is said, was to expedite enrolment, with the view to the distribution of the tribal property and the preparation of the Indian territory for statehood. To these ends the acts of May 31, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 598), and March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 1073, chap. 832), endeavored to speed enrolment matters by directing the Secretary of the Interior to fix a time for closing the rolls, after which no name should be added thereto. Then came the act of 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), which, it is insisted, practically repealed prior acts so far as they concerned enrolments. Such prior acts, it is said, "made approval of enrolments depend upon the completion of the rolls of an entire tribe, and the Secretary's approval under it would await the finishing of enrolments of an entire tribe." And until such time "there would be no allotment to any tribal member." The Secretary's control, hence, continued "until the last" and the congressional policy was likewise postponed. But it is argued, contrasting the *new measures with the old, under[106 the act of 1902 "enrolment and allotment went hand in hand." This connection is rested on § 29 of the act, which directs lists to be prepared of those found by the Commission to be entitled to enrolment; and it is provided that "the lists thus prepared, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall constitute a part and parcel of the final roll of citizens of the Cherokee Tribe upon which allotment of land and distribution of other tribal property shall be made;" and, further, that "when there shall have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of the Interior lists embracing the names of all those lawfully entitled to enrolment the roll shall be deemed complete."

A roll made complete, it is argued, by legislation, excludes the idea of correction by an executive officer; and, besides, it is urged that the certificates of allotment carry with them the sanction of the law's declaration that they shall be "conclusive evidence" of the rights of the allottee. Physical possession of the lands described in them is to be given, it is pointed out, and, describing the conditions which were created and which would be disturbed by an exercise of power to recall them it is said that "from the date of selection of their allotments under the law, allottees did lease their allotments for grazing, oil and gas, mineral, and other purposes." And, further, that "allottees also, from the same date, created town sites where practicable, and sold town lots, with their title resting in their allotment selections or certificates," and that such transactions have been declared valid by the supreme court of Oklahoma, citing McWilliams Invest. Co. v. Livingston, 22 Okla. 884, 98 Pac. 914; Godfrey v. Iowa Land. & T. Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792.

We recognize the strength of the considerations urged, but it certainly did not militate against the congressional policy of the allotment of lands to retain in the Secretary of the Interior the power of revision and correction until *the final moment when jurisdiction was expressly taken from him as provided in § 2 of the act of April 26, 1906, (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876), that is, the 4th day of March 1907. That Congress could give such power to the Secretary of the Interior is settled. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, and Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363. In all the legislation providing for the making of the rolls care is observed to prevent or correct mistakes and to defeat attempts at fraud. We have seen what power the Dawes Commission was given to investigate the rights of persons whose names were on the rolls, and, as to freedmen, strict compliance with the decree of the court of claims was enjoined. By the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1060, chap. 1479), the work of completing the unfinished business of the Commission was devolved upon the Secretary of the Interior, and all of the powers theretofore granted to the Commission were conferred upon the Secretary. It was subsequent to this act that action was taken as to relators, and their names stricken from the rolls. This revisory and corrective power of the Secretary over the allotment of land is similar to that exercised by the Land Department respecting the entries upon public lands, which this court has stated to be to correct and annul entries of land which were made upon false testimony and without authority of law. Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 461, 32 L. ed. 482, 483, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 490, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Judgment affirmed.

*CHEROKEE NATION and the United States, Appts.,
v.

MOSES WHITMIRE, Trustee for the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 108-117.)

Appeal — final judgment — supplemental decree.

1. A supplemental decree of the court of claims in a controversy over the rights of Cherokee freedmen to participate in the distribution of the tribal property cannot be regarded, for the purpose of testing the right to appeal, as merely in the nature of an execution of the original decree, where, assuming that such original decree declared the principle by which such rights should be determined, there was intervening congressional legislation by which the original decree was by one of the parties thought to be confirmed, and by the other superseded, the court holding that it was confirmatory in character.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d. 10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — further proceedings below — motion for new trial.

2. The court of claims did not lose jurisdiction of a case upon the filing of an application for an appeal from its decree to the Federal Supreme Court, so as to preclude it from allowing a subsequent motion to withdraw the application, and from entertaining a motion for new trial.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. g. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — allotment — Cherokee freedmen.

3. The roll of the Cherokee freedmen, made by administrative officers under in-

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of lower court to rehear cause or grant new trial after remand by appellate court—see note to American Soda Fountain Co. v. Sample, 70 C. C. A. 416.

structions from the court of claims, which, under the act of October 1, 1890, had determined the rights of such freedmen in the tribal property, was superseded by the roll made by the Dawes Commission conformably to the provisions of the subsequent acts of June 28, 1898, and July 1, 1902, directing such commission to make a roll of Cherokee freedmen in strict compliance with the decree of the court of claims. [For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 735.]

Argued January 9 and 10, 1912. Decided January 29, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a decree directing the Secretary of the Interior to enroll certain Cherokee freedmen upon the final roll of the citizens of the Cherokee Nation. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss the petition.

See same case below 46 Ct. Cl. 227.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William W. Hastings, National Attorney for the Cherokee Nation, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant, the Cherokee Nation:

The jurisdiction of the court of claims, conferred by the jurisdictional act, had been exhausted.

Journeycake v. Cherokee Nation, 30 Ct. Cl. 174, 31 Ct. Cl. 143.

Only rights of Cherokee freedmen as a class, not as individuals, were determined by decree of February 3, 1896.

Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Cherokee Nation v. Blackfeather (United States v. Blackfeather) 155 U. S. 218, 39 L. ed. 126, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 51 L. ed. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; Blackfeather v. United States, 190 U. S. 368, 47 L. ed. 1099, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772; Journeycake v. Cherokee Nation, 31 Ct. Cl. 144.

The court of claims had no jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief in this case.

United States v. Jones, 131 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 90, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669.

Congress, in re-enacting § 21 of the act of June 28, 1898, by § 27 of the act of July 1, 1902, must have adopted the construction placed upon that section by the Senate, by the Department, Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, and the Cherokee Nation.

Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 41, 36 L. ed. 614, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799.

Courts will regard the contemporaneous construction by the executive officers and Department.

Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 763, 24 L. ed. 589; Sac & F. Indians v. Sac & F. Indians, 220 U. S. 481, 55 L. ed. 552, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473.

The language of laws and treaties is to be construed favorably to the Indians.

Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 582, 8 L. ed. 483, 508.

Congress had the power to change the method of making the Cherokee freedmen roll.

Wallace v. Adams, 143 Fed. 716, affirmed in 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Roff v. Burney, 168 U. S. 222, 42 L. ed. 443, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

There are no vested interests in enrolment as citizens.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716, affirmed in 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; Hayes v. Barringer, 93 C. C. A. 507, 168 Fed. 221; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 54 L. ed. 393, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

Was not exclusive jurisdiction for the making of the final rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes, including the Cherokee freedmen roll, conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior?

United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 354, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

No provision was made for an appeal from the decision of the Secretary of the Interior in citizenship cases.

United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 323, 47 L. ed. 1076, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 486; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 121, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519.

The duties of the Commission in enrolment matters were judicial.

Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 653; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Buffington v. Commission, Annual Rep. Int. Dept. 1904, pt. 2, p. 160; Sac & F. Indians v. Sac & F. Indians, 220 U. S. 481, 55 L. ed. 552, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62;

Garfield v. United States ex rel. Turner, 31 App. D. C. 332; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Lowe, 34 App. D. C. 70; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

Enrolment by the Secretary of the Interior is not reviewable.

United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. ed. 718, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 486; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 323, 47 L. ed. 1076, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 418, 26 L. ed. 187; Foltz v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 8 C. C. A. 635, 19 U. S. App. 581, 60 Fed. 316; Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 653; Bufington v. Commission, Annual Rep. Int. Dept. 1904, pt. 2, p. 160.

Neither the court nor the Department, under existing law since the enactment of § 2 of the act of April 26, 1906, providing that the Secretary of the Interior should have no jurisdiction to approve the enrolment of anyone after March 4, 1907, has any authority to order the enrolment of anyone upon the roll of the Cherokee Nation. Congress alone, by legislation, could authorize it, and this has not been done.

Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

The appeal should not be dismissed.

Re Eastern Cherokees, 220 U. S. 83, 55 L. ed. 379, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 373; Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co. 170 U. S. 675, 42 L. ed. 1192, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786; Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson and Mr. George M. Anderson filed a brief for appellant the United States:

The court of claims has no jurisdiction to issue the writ of injunction to the Secretary of the Interior.

United States v. Milliken Imprinting Co. 202 U. S. 168, 50 L. ed. 980, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; Hearne v. New England Mut. M. Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 490, 491, 22 L. ed. 396, 397; Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 583, 584, 25 L. ed. 965, 966; South Boston Iron Works v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 174; United States v. Jones, 131 U. S. 1-20, 33 L. ed. 90-92, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 97, 16 L. ed. 725; Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 483, 18 L. ed. 930.

Congress gave the Secretary of the Interior exclusive jurisdiction to make the Cherokee rolls.

Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 653; Laurel Oil & Gas Co. v. Morrison, 212 U. S. 291, 53 L. ed. 517, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Sass v. Thomas, 214 U. S. 489, 53 L. ed. 1057, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Romadka v. Sessions, 145 U. S. 41, 36 L. ed. 614, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Claflin v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. 110 U. S. 81, 28 L. ed. 76, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440, 25 L. ed. 168; Sac & F. Indians v. Sac & F. Indians, 220 U. S. 481, 55 L. ed. 552, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. ed. 718, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Fleming v. McCurtain, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Pam-to-pee v. United States, 187 U. S. 371, 47 L. ed. 221, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Pain-to-pee v. United States, 148 U. S. 691, 705, 37 L. ed. 613, 618, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Garfield v. United States ex rel. Lowe, 34 App. D. C. 70.

The appellee was guilty of laches in not having taken appropriate action in time.

Re Eastern Cherokees, 220 U. S. 83, 55 L. ed. 379, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 373; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 259, 40 L. ed. 414, 417, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

Mr. George S. Ramsey filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

The United States and the Cherokee Nation have the right of appeal from the decree of the court of claims, entered February 20, 1911, that decree being of such finality as renders it applicable to this court.

Re Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 129 U. S. 206, 32 L. ed. 656, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Re Michigan C. R. Co. 59 C. C. A. 643, 124 Fed. 727; Bibber-White Co. v. White River Valley Electric R. Co. 53 C. C. A. 282, 115 Feb. 787.

The court of claims had no jurisdiction to entertain the supplemental petition filed May 6, 1908, and enter the decree of February 20, 1911, based thereupon.

Price v. United States & O. Indians, 174 U. S. 375, 43 L. ed. 1012, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; Blackfeather v. United States, 190 U. S. 369, 47 L. ed. 1099, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772.

Citizenship remains a political question until the lands are actually allotted, and the power of the legislative department of the government is plenary and supreme until some property right has vested by virtue of an actual allotment. Citizenship is not a vested property right, and has not been recognized as such by Congress.

Delaware Indians v. Cherokee Nation, 193 U. S. 129, 48 L. ed. 648, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Hays v. Barringer, 93 C. C. A. 507, 168 Fed. 221; Fleming v. McCurtin, 215 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 88, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Woodbury v. United States, 95 C. C. A. 498, 170 Fed. 302; Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians v. United States, 117 U. S. 288, 312, 29 L. ed. 880, 887, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 299, 47 L. ed. 183, 184, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716, 204 U. S. 419, 51 L. ed. 550, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co. 42 C. C. A. 499, 102 Fed. 559.

The Dawes Commission had authority and jurisdiction to hear and determine who were entitled to be enrolled as Cherokee freedmen, and its decision, whether right or wrong, on the facts submitted, is not void, is not a nullity, and is not subject to review by the courts.

United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 82, 51 L. ed. 720, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 654; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 32, 37 L. ed. 356, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Foley v. Harrison, 15 How. 433, 14 L. ed. 761; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Wright v. Rosebury, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Ligon v. Johnston, 90 C. C. A. 486, 164 Fed. 670; United States use of Hine v. Morse, 218 U. S. 493, 507, 54 L. ed. 1123, 1128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Flannigan v. Chapman & D. Land Co. 75 C. C. A. 310, 144 Fed. 371; Foltz v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 8 C. C. A. 635, 19 U. S. App. 576, 60 Fed. 316; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

Messrs. Charles M. Rice, C. C. Calhoun, Frank J. Boudinot, John J. Hemphill, and Daniel B. Henderson also filed briefs as amici curiæ.
56 L. ed.

Messrs. Samuel A. Putman and Charles Poe argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert H. Kern, filed briefs for appellee:

The court of claims is a court with jurisdiction to pass and enforce decrees, and not a mere commission to give opinions or recommendations to the heads of executive departments.

Gordon v. United States, 117 U. S. 697; United States v. Anderson, 9 Wall. 56, 19 L. ed. 615.

The court did not intend to surrender its jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter so long as anything remained to be done properly to carry out and enforce its decree.

Pam-to-pee v. United States, 187 U. S. 371, 47 L. ed. 221, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

Repeals by implication are not favored. They are never admitted where former directions can stand with the new act, but only where there is positive repugnancy between the two, and where both acts cannot be reconciled.

United States v. Greathouse, 166 U. S. 601, 41 L. ed. 1130, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 701.

The Dawes Commission was not a judicial body.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 726.

The Secretary of the Interior and the Dawes Commission were directed by the 21st section of the act of 1898 to obey the decree of the court. Their refusal to do so was the exercise of arbitrary and unwarranted power, and it was not only within the power of the court of claims to restore the status of the parties aggrieved, but it was its imperative duty to do so.

Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; United States ex rel. Turner v. Fisher, 222 U. S. 204, ante 165, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37.

The appeal should be dismissed.

Carr v. Hoxie, 13 Pet. 460, 10 L. ed. 247; Callan v. May, 2 Black, 541, 17 L. ed. 281; Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289, 25 L. ed. 932; United States v. Babbitt, 104 U. S. 767, 26 L. ed. 921; Whiting v. Bank of United States, 13 Pet. 6, 15, 10 L. ed. 33, 37; Bank of Lewisburg v. Sheffey, 140 U. S. 445, 35 L. ed. 493, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Mackey v. Daniel, 59 Md. 485.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is prosecuted to review a supplemental decree of the court of claims enjoining and directing the Secretary of the Interior to enroll upon the final roll of the citizens of the Cherokee Nation for allotment of lands the names of certain persons and their descendants claiming rights as Cherokee freedmen, whose names were found upon the roll called the Kern-Clifton roll, which the decree adjudged was directed to be made by a former decree of the court. The names of those persons who are appellees in this case, after investigation by the Secretary of the Interior, were found by him not entitled to be enrolled, and not entitled to participate in the distribution of the tribal property.

The decision in United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher [223 U. S. 95, ante 364, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196] has simplified the decision in this case. Indeed, the ultimate question in both is the same, the power of Congress over the allotment of Indian lands and the manner of ascertaining what persons shall be entitled to them. There were, however, contentions made in that case which are not made here. There are propositions of law conceded in this case which were contested in that. Therefore a brief summary of the elements necessary to a decision is appropriate.

Preceding the merits, however, motion to dismiss the appeal must be disposed of. The motion is made on the following grounds: (1) The decree of February 3, 1896, was a final decree from which no appeal was prosecuted to this court; (2) that the decree of February 20, 1911, hereafter referred to, was merely in the nature 110] of an execution *of that of February 3, 1896, and defined no new rights, but enforced merely rights established and consented to; and (3) because, although the decree of February 20, 1911, was regularly entered on that day, and the appeal now pending was not allowed or prosecuted until the 17th of June, 1911, more than ninety days after the entry of the decree.

The first and second grounds are untenable. The decree under review has broader application than that of February 3, 1896. It determined rights to allotments which had not then been provided for, and, assuming that it declared the principle by which such rights could be determined, there was, as we shall presently see, intervening legislation by Congress. This legislation gave rise to serious controversy. It confirmed, it was contended by petitioners (appellees here), and is yet contended by them, as we shall presently see, the decree of the court both as to the principle of the decree and also as to the means of identification of the individuals who would be entitled to rights under the principle. By the defendants (appellants here) it was contended that the legislation superseded the decree and made new provision for the identification of persons. The court decided in favor of the petitioners, and we think the decision is more than the execution of the decree of February 3, 1896. It is a decision upon the effect of subsequent legislation by Congress, enacted in the exercise of its power over Indian affairs,—a power which is not questioned.

The third ground urged for the dismissal of the appeal is also without merit. The contention is that the decree of the court became final the instant it was entered, February 20, 1911, and that an appeal was not taken from it until June 17, 1911, which was not within the time allowed by § 1086, of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 745). There were, however, intervening proceedings. The record shows that “on March 30, 1911, the defendants [appellants] filed an application for appeal. On May 15, 1911, the defendants *filed a motion to withdraw[111 the application for appeal filed March 30, 1911, which was allowed by the court May 15, 1911.” On May 15, 1911, the defendants filed a motion for new trial, which motion was overruled June 5, 1911, “with privilege to the defendants to renew their application for appeal heretofore filed.” The record further shows that the defendants, “from the decree rendered on the 20th day of February, 1911, in favor of claimants, . . . make application for, and give notice of, an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.” The application was allowed as prayed.

This court has decided that if a motion for a new trial or petition for rehearing is made in season and entertained by the court, the time for taking an appeal or writ of error does not begin to run until the motion or petition is disposed of. Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co. 170 U. S. 675, 42 L. ed. 1192, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786. It is, however, urged that the court lost jurisdiction of the case by the application for appeal filed March 30, 1911. United States v. Adams, 6 Wall. 101, 18 L. ed. 792, is cited to support this contention. In that case the paper filed was as follows: “The United States, by E. P. Norton, its solicitor, makes application to the honorable court of claims for an appeal of the case of Theodore Adams v. The United States to the Supreme Court of the United States.” This application was filed within the ninety days allowed by the statute. The order allowing it, however, was not made until after the expiration of the ninety days. It was contended that both application and allowance should have been made within that time, but this court held otherwise, saying “that the filing of this paper was taking the appeal, and that the delay in the subsequent proceeding to render it effectual does not touch its validity.”

It was not, however, decided that the court of claims lost control of the case. It was only decided that the party had secured a right under the statute. The 112] rules of the "court of claims, made under regulations prescribed by this court, provided for further action to perfect the right acquired by the party, which was made necessary by certain statutes under which only questions of law could be brought here for review. And the action was more than formal. It consisted in the finding of the ultimate facts in the nature of a special verdict, and the questions of law therefrom to be certified to this court.

The practice in the court of claims is adverse to appellees' contention. The court followed the practice in entering the decree of February 3, 1896, the decree upon which appellees based all of their rights. It was substituted for a decree passed May 8, 1895. On the 20th of July, following entry of the latter decree, the defendants filed a motion for rehearing and an application for appeal from the decree. A few days afterward the claimants also filed an application for an appeal. Later the defendants filed a motion for new trial. On January 30, 1896, the applications for appeal were withdrawn by leave of the court, and, on February 3, the decree of May 6, 1895, was vacated and the decree of the former date was entered.

It will be observed, therefore, that if the contention of appellees is correct that the court of claims lost jurisdiction of the decree under review by the application of appellants for an appeal March 30, 1911, the court lost jurisdiction of the case by the applications for appeal from the decree of May 8, 1895, and therefore had no jurisdiction to enter the decree of February 3, 1896, which is the foundation of the rights of appellees. Counsel would hardly like us to push their contention that far, and that far it might have to be pushed if it were tenable. The motion to dismiss is denied.

The court of claims obtained its jurisdiction of the questions involved by an act of Congress approved October 1, 1890, entitled, 113] "An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes." The rights referred to the court of claims for adjudication were those "in law or in equity . . . of the Cherokee freedmen" who were "settled and located in the Cherokee Nation under the provisions and stipulations of article 9" of the treaty of 1866 [14 Stat. at L. 801], "in respect to the subject-matter" in the act provided for. The subject-matter was described to be "to recover from the Cherokee Nation all moneys due, either in law or equity, and unpaid to the . . . freedmen, which the Cherokee Nation" had "before paid out or" might there after "pay per capita in the Cherokee Nation, and which was or might be" refused or neglected "to be paid to the said . . . freedmen by the Cherokee Nation out of any funds" which had been, or might be, "paid into the treasury of," or in any way had come or might come "into the possession of, the Cherokee Nation, Indian territory, derived from the sale, leasing, or rent for grazing purposes on Cherokee lands west of ninety-six degrees west longitude," and which had been or might be, "appropriated and directed to be paid out per capita by the acts passed by the Cherokee Council, and for all moneys, lands, and rights which" should "appear to be due to the said . . . freedmen under the provisions of the aforesaid articles of the treaty and articles of agreement." 26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249.

Article 9 of the treaty of August 11, 1866, the meaning of which was to be determined, provided as follows: "They [Cherokee Nation] further agree that all freedmen who have been liberated by voluntary act of their former owners or by law as well as all free colored persons who were in the country at the commencement of the Rebellion and are now residents therein, or who may return within six months, and their descendants, shall have all the rights of native Cherokees."

*Under the jurisdictional act, and in[114 accordance with its provisions, suit was brought by the freedmen by their trustee, Moses Whitmire, against the Cherokee Nation and the United States, to determine the rights of the freedmen under the treaty, which resulted in a decree of the court, passed May 8, 1895. The course of the litigation will be found in 30 and 33 Ct. Cl. pp. 138, 180. respectively.

The court decided that under the Cherokee constitution of 1866 the freedmen became citizens of the nation equally with the Cherokees, and equally interested in the common property, and equally entitled to share in its proceeds, but also decided that the freedmen to whom the treaty referred were those who had returned to the nation within six months after the promulgation of the treaty, and their descendants, and that the freedmen and the descendants of freedmen who did not return within six months were excluded from the benefits of the treaty. United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher.

The court decreed that the Cherokee Nation and the United States be prohibited from making any discrimination between such freedmen citizens and their descendants and native Cherokees in the distribution of a fund of $8,595,736 paid by the United States to the Cherokee Nation for that portion of its territory known as the "Cherokee Outlet."

The court conceived it necessary to ascertain the individual Indians who were entitled under its decree to share in the fund, and adjudged that the roll called the "Wallace Roll," which showed 3,524 persons, should be approved by the court.

Appeals were prayed by claimant and defendant, but were withdrawn afterward by stipulation, and a decree was entered February 3, 1896, as of May 8, 1895. The decree adjudged the rights of freedmen to be as we have hereinabove set out.

The decree also authorized the Secretary of the Interior *to appoint commissioners to make up a roll of the freedmen entitled to share in the fund to be distributed, which that officer did. They completed the roll which was thereafter known, and to which we have referred, as the Kern-Clifton roll. It was approved by the Secretary on the 18th of January, 1897, and in the succeeding month the moneys available for distribution were paid to the persons whose names were on the roll.

The legislation in regard to the allotment of lands and the making of rolls of persons entitled to allotments is detailed in United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher, and need not be repeated except in a very brief way. By virtue of that legislation the Dawes Commission, which had been created before the decree of February 3, 1896, proceeded to make up rolls, which were finally approved by the Secretary on March 4, 1907, from which were excluded a large number of freedmen whose names were on the Kern-Clifton roll, with the consequence that such persons so excluded will receive no allotments of lands or share in the moneys which stand to the credit of the Cherokee Nation in the Treasury of the United States.

On May 6, 1908, Jacob B. Wilson, by permission of the court of claims, and having been substituted trustee of the freedmen, filed a supplemental petition in the court in behalf of such excluded persons, which recited the decrees of the court and acts of Congress subsequent to them, asserted a right under the decrees and acts of Congress to be upon the rolls, to be allotted lands, and to share in the distribution of funds, and prayed that the action of the Dawes Commission and of the Secretary of the Interior be declared unlawful, and that the Cherokee Nation and the United States be enjoined from discriminating between such freedmen and other citizens of the Cherokee Nation in the allotment of lands and the distribution of property and assets of the nation, and that it and the United States be further enjoined from further *distributing such freedmen in [116] the possession and occupation of their homes and improvements, and to reinstate such of them as have been ousted from such possession.

The court took jurisdiction of the petition, as we have seen, and decreed as it prayed. 44 Ct. Cl. 453. The court, in an elaborate and ably reasoned opinion, decided that its decree had larger scope than a description of the class of freedmen and the declaration of a principle, and that it undertook to identify 'the individuals who were entitled to share in everything that was to be allotted or distributed.' To this, the court said, the "defendants made no objections and acquiesced in the terms of the decree for the distribution of that part of the property then ready to be distributed." The court further said that "there was nothing in the terms of the decree or in the conduct of the parties affected by it to raise the inference that its language did not apply to all future distributions of the property, which the plaintiffs in that suit were entitled to have and enjoy whenever such property was ready for distribution."

The court therefore considered that the Kern-Clifton roll was made in compliance with the decree, and that the provisions of the Curtis act (30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 517), requiring a roll to be made in "strict compliance with the decree of the court of claims rendered the 3d of February, eighteen hundred and ninety-six," necessarily confirmed the Kern-Clifton roll, and that the Dawes Commission, in disregarding it, disobeyed the command of the statute. "If," said the court, "the payment by the Secretary of the Interior was a 'compliance' with the provision of the decree for the payment of money, the refusal of the Dawes Commission to allow those same persons to participate in the common property, as further provided in the decree, is not a 'strict' compliance, nor, for that matter, a compliance of any kind."

The case is simplified by the concession of appellees that *the Congress [117] had power to alter the decree and to adopt other means or ways for the disposition of the property than there provided. Indeed, the decree of the court recognizes this power, and the case is brought to an interpretation of the acts of Congress subsequent to the decree. As we have already said, we have reviewed those acts in United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher, and, after a further consideration of them, invoked in the case at bar, and supported by the very able opinion of the court of claims, we adhere to the views there expressed. Congress accepted the decree as a correct interpretation of article 9 of the treaty as to the rights of freedmen. It did not accept the Kern-Clifton roll as an authentic identification of the individual freedmen. It had been challenged. It had been made up with haste and under circumstances which caused question of its correctness. It had not received judicial approval. From the first to the last it was the act of administrative officers. Had it been reported to the court and its integrity established by the judgment of the court, Congress might, indeed, have hesitated to ignore it. As an act of merely administrative officers it had no such sanction. It must be borne in mind that important rights were involved and no good reason could be urged against, or serious consequences apprehended from, another investigation. Those who were entitled to be enrolled could again establish their right. Those who were not so entitled, and who had got on the rolls either by mistake or fraud, had no legal ground of complaint. However, we are not required to consider the reasons which induced Congress to direct that a roll be made by the Dawes Commission. Congress had the power, and, as we have decided, exercised it.

Decree reversed and case remanded, with directions to dismiss the supplemental petition.

118]•PACIFIC STATES TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF OREGON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 118-151.)

Courts — jurisdiction — political question — republican form of government — initiative and referendum.

Whether or not a state has ceased to be republican in form within the meaning of the guaranty in U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4, because of its adoption of the initiative and referendum, is not a judicial question, but a political one, which is solely for Congress to determine.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. c. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 36.]

Argued November 3, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

NOTE.—On the initiative and referendum—see notes to Ex parte Pfahler, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1092, and Ex parte Farnsworth, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 969.
56 L. ed.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for Multnomah County, in that state, enforcing a tax on the gross revenue of a domestic corporation. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 53 Or. 162, 99 Pac. 427.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. S. Pillsbury argued the cause, and, with Mr. Oscar Sutro, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The authorities cited by defendant in error do not sustain the contention that the questions raised in the opening brief are political, and not within the jurisdiction of this court.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 730, 19 L. ed. 239; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Hopkins v. Duluth, 81 Minn. 189, 83 N. W. 536; Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa, 543, 14 N. W. 738, 15 N. W. 609; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

The courts have never held that a cause was not justiciable because it involved an interpretation of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4, but have in proper cases construed the language of that clause.

Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 1 L. ed. 440; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Hopkins v. Duluth, 81 Minn. 189, 83 N. W. 536; Re Pfahler, 150 Cal. 71, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1092, 88 Pac. 270, 11 Ann. Cas. 911; People ex rel. Elder v. Sours, 31 Colo. 369, 102 Am. St. Rep. 34, 74 Pac. 167; Kadderly v. Portland, 44 Or. 118, 74 Pac. 710, 75 Pac. 222; People v. Johnson, 38 Colo. 76, 88 Pac. 184; People ex rel. Stidger v. Elder, 34 Colo. 197, 86 Pac. 250, 204 U. S. 85, 51 L. ed. 381, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627; Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 519, 41 L. ed. 1100, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 454, 50 L. ed. 261, 266, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 4 Ann. Cas. 737; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 50 L. ed. 167, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

The right to a republican form of government is a substantial right. Like the franchise to vote, it is a political right. But this has always been held to be within the protection of the courts.

Capen v. Foster, 12 Pick. 489, 23 Am. Dec. 632; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 369, 30 L. ed. 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

So, in Florida v. Georgia, 17 How. 478,

15 L. ed. 181, it was pointed out that boundary disputes, though political in their nature, became, when brought into the judicial forum, judicial questions.

And see Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wall. 54, 20 L. ed. 71.

So, too, the right to the governorship of a state, when disputed, becomes a judicial question, and its determination involves a construction of the Constitution or laws of the United States.

Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 161, 36 L. ed. 103, 109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

The clause in the Federal Constitution conferring jurisdiction extended it to all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution without making in its terms any exception whatever.

Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 257, 29 L. ed. 390, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 824, 6 L. ed. 224; Nashville v. Cooper, 6 Wall. 252, 18 L. ed. 852; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 264, 25 L. ed. 650; New Orleans, M. & F. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 140, 26 L. ed. 98; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 416, 28 L. ed. 795, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 384, 385, 37 L. ed. 212, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; 1 Bryce, Am. Com. p. 365; Wilcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 40, 53 L. ed. 382, 394, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 378, 5 L. ed. 284.

The action of Congress in receiving senators and representatives from Oregon, and its approval of a Constitution containing the initiative as providing a republican form of government, do not control this court in the construction of the language of the Oregon Constitution, or in passing upon the validity of any provision of or amendment to that Constitution.

Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212; Homestead Cases, 22 Gratt. 266, 12 Am. Rep. 507; Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

The court cannot decline the exercise of jurisdiction upon the inadmissible suggestion that action might be taken by political agencies in disregard of the judgment of the highest tribunal of the state, as revised by our own.

McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 869, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

The courts are the final interpreters of the Constitution, and as they pass upon the constitutional powers of the legislatures and executives of the nation and of the states, so must they, when called upon, exercise their functions and determine the validity of the acts of the people of a state, so far as they affect the constitutional rights of the citizens or the powers of the national government.

Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 725, 19 L. ed. 237; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 527, 42 L. ed. 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The court has jurisdiction because the Oregon amendment providing for the initiative and the "measure" in question deny due process of law and the equal protection of the law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Southwestern Tele. & Teleph. Co. v. Dallas, — Tex. —, 134 S. W. 321; Home Teleph. & Tele. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 280, 53 L. ed. 185, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

The unconstitutionality of the acts of a state are equally within the jurisdiction of the courts, whether they be the acts of the legislative or executive department or of the people themselves, adopting their constitutions or amending them.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 415, 5 L. ed. 293; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 332, 15 L. ed. 401; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 62.

Mr. A. M. Crawford, Attorney General of Oregon, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. I. H. Van Winkle, W. S. U'Ren, and C. E. S. Wood, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power to determine whether a state has a republican form of government is vested in Congress. Hence, is a political rather than a judicial question.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1-42, 12 L. ed. 581-599; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 730, 19 L. ed. 227, 239; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 578, 44 L. ed. 1187, 1200, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; Hopkins v. Duluth, 81 Minn. 189, 83 N. W. 536; 6 Mich. L. Rev. No. 4, p. 304; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 59; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 42.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick L. Siddons and William E. Richardson, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The only branch of the government competent to decide as to whether there exists in a state a republican form of government is the political, and not the judicial, branch, Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 25; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009.

Mr. George Fred. Williams also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Messrs. George H. Shibley, Robert L. Owen, and J. Harry Carnes filed a brief as amici curiæ.

The Congress of these United States, a department that is co-ordinate with this judicial department, has repeatedly passed upon the question at issue, and, therefore, under the settled practice in this court, it will not trench upon the powers conferred by the Constitution upon Congress.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 731, 19 L. ed. 227, 239; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009.

Messrs. John T. Dye and Addison C. Harris submitted a brief by permission of the court.

Mr. Elliott W. Major, Attorney General of Missouri, also filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

We premise by saying that while the controversy which this record presents is of much importance, it is not novel. It is important, since it calls upon us to decide whether it is the duty of the courts or the province of Congress to determine when a state has ceased to be republican in form, and to enforce the guaranty of the Constitution on that subject. It is not novel, as that question has long since been determined by this court conformably to the practice of the government from the beginning to be political in character, and therefore not cognizable by the judicial power, but solely committed by the Constitution to the judgment of Congress.

The case is this: In 1902 Oregon amended its Constitution. This amendment, while retaining an existing clause vesting the exclusive legislative power in a general assembly consisting of a senate and a house of representatives, added to that provision the following: "But the people reserve to themselves power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution, and to enact or *reject the same at the polls, independent of the legislative assembly, and also reserve power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any act of the legislative assembly." [Art. 4, § 1.] Specific means for the exercise of the power thus reserved was contained in further clauses authorizing both the amendment of the Constitution and the enactment of laws to be accomplished by the method known as the initiative and that commonly referred to as the referendum. As to the first, the initiative, it suffices to say that a stated number of voters were given the right at any time to secure a submission to popular vote for approval of any matter which it was desired to have enacted into law, and providing that the proposition thus submitted, when approved by popular vote, should become the law of the state. The second, the referendum, provided for a reference to a popular vote, for approval or disapproval, of any law passed by the legislature, such reference to take place either as the result of the action of the legislature itself, or of a petition filed for that purpose by a specified number of voters. The full text of the amendment is in the margin.†

er thus reserved was contained in further clauses authorizing both the amendment of the Constitution and the enactment of laws to be accomplished by the method known as the initiative and that commonly referred to as the referendum. As to the first, the initiative, it suffices to say that a stated number of voters were given the right at any time to secure a submission to popular vote for approval of any matter which it was desired to have enacted into law, and providing that the proposition thus submitted, when approved by popular vote, should become the law of the state. The second, the referendum, provided for a reference to a popular vote, for approval or disapproval, of any law passed by the legislature, such reference to take place either as the result of the action of the legislature itself, or of a petition filed for that purpose by a specified number of voters. The full text of the amendment is in the margin.†

*In 1903 detailed provisions for the carrying into effect of this amendment were enacted by the legislature.

By resort to the initiative in 1906, a law taxing certain classes of corporations was submitted, voted on, and promulgated by the governor in 1907 as having been duly adopted. By this law telephone and telegraph companies were taxed, by what was qualified as an annual license, 2 per centum upon their gross revenue derived from business done within the state. Penalties were provided for nonpayment, and methods were created for enforcing payment in case of delinquency.

The Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Company, an Oregon corporation engaged in business in that state, made a return of its gross receipts, as required by the statute, and was accordingly assessed 2 per cent upon the amount of such return. The suit which is now before us was commenced by the state to enforce payment of this assessment and the statutory penalties †Section 1 of article 4 of the Constitution of the state of Oregon shall be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

Section 1. The legislative authority of the state shall be vested in a legislative assembly, consisting of a senate and house of representatives, but the people reserve to themselves power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution, and to enact or reject the same at the polls, independent of the legislative assembly, and also reserve power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any act of the legislative assembly. The first power reserved by the people is the initiative, and not more than 8 per cent of the legal voters shall be required to propose any measure by such petition, and every such petition shall include the full text of the for delinquency. The petition alleged the passage of the taxing law by resort to the initiative, the return made by the corporation, the assessment, the duty to pay, and the failure to make such payment.

The answer of the corporation contained twenty-nine paragraphs. Four of these challenged the validity of the tax because of defects inhering in the nature or operation of the tax. The defenses stated in these four paragraphs, however, may be put out of view, as the defendant corporation, on its own motion, was allowed by the court to strike these propositions from its answer. We may also put out of view the defenses raised by the remaining paragraphs based upon the operation and effect of the state Constitution, as they are concluded by the judgment of the state court. Coming to consider these paragraphs of the answer thus disembarassed, it is true to say that they all, in so far as they relied upon the Constitution of the United States, rested exclusively upon an alleged infirmity of the powers of government of the state, begotten by the incorporation into the state Constitution of the amendment concerning the initiative and the referendum.

The answer was demurred to as stating no defense. The demurrer was sustained, and the defendant electing not to plead further, judgment went against it, and that judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of Oregon. (53 Or. 163, 99 Pac. 427.) The court sustained the conclusion by it reached, not only for the reasons expressed in its opinion, but by reference to the opinion in a prior case (Kadderly v. Portland, 44 Or. 118, 146, 74 Pac. 710, 75 Pac. 222), where a like controversy had been determined.

The assignments of error filed on the allowance of the writ of error are numerous. The entire matters covered *by [137 each and all of them in the argument, however, are reduced to six propositions, which really amount to but one, since they are all based upon the single contention that the creation by a state of the power to legislate by the initiative and referendum causes the prior lawful state government to be bereft of its lawful character as the result of the provisions of § 4 of article 4 of the Constitution, that "the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the legislature, or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence." This being the basis of all the contentions, the case comes to the single issue whether the enforcement of that provision, because of its political character, is exclusively committed to Congress, or is judicial in its character. Because of their absolute unity we consider all the propositions together, and therefore at once copy them. We observe, however, that in the argument the second, fourth, and fifth paragraphs, for the purposes of discussion, were subordinately classified, and these subordinate classifications we omit from our text, reproducing them, however, by a marginal reference.

I.

"The initiative and the tax measure in question are repugnant to the provisions of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which forbids a state to deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law.

measure so proposed. Initiative petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State not less than four months before the election at which they are to be voted upon. The second power is the referendum, and it may be ordered (except as to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, or safety) either by the petition signed by 5 per cent of the legal voters, or by the legislative assembly, as other bills are enacted. Referendum petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State not more than ninety days after the final adjournment of the session of the legislative assembly which passed the bill on which the referendum is demanded. The veto power of the governor shall not extend to measures referred to the people. All elections on measures referred to the people of the state shall be had at the biennial regular general elections, except when the legislative assembly shall order a special election. Any measure referred to the people shall take effect and become the law when it is approved by a majority of the votes cast thereon, and not otherwise. The style of all bills shall be: "Be it enacted by the people of the state of Oregon." This section shall not be construed to deprive any member of the legislative assembly of the right to introduce any measure. The whole number of votes cast for justice of the supreme court at the regular election last preceding the filing of any petition for the initiative or for the referendum shall be the basis on which the number of legal voters necessary to sign such petition shall be counted. Petitions and orders for the initiative or for the referendum shall be filed with the Secretary of State, and in submitting the same to the people, he and all other officers shall be guided by the general laws and the act submitting this amendment until legislation shall be especially provided therefor.

II.

"The initiative amendment and the tax in question, levied pursuant to a measure passed by authority of the initiative amendment, violates the right to a republican form of government which is guaranteed by § 4, article 4, of the Federal Constitution.†

III.

"Taxation by the initiative method violates fundamental rights, and is not in accordance with 'the law of the land.' (U. S. Const. art. 6.)

IV.

"The initiative is in contravention of a republican form of government. Government by the people directly is the attribute of a pure democracy, and is subversive of the principles upon which the Republic is founded. Direct legislation is therefore repugnant to that form of government with which alone Congress could admit a state to the Union, and which the state is bound to maintain.‡

V.

139] * "The Federal Constitution presupposes in each state the maintenance of a republican form of government and the existence of state legislatures, to wit: Representative assemblies having the power to make the laws; and that in each state the powers of government will be divided into three departments: a legislature, an executive, and a judiciary. One of these, the legislature, is destroyed by the initiative.†

VI.

"The provision in the Oregon Constitution for direct legislation violates the provisions of the act of Congress admitting Oregon to the Union."

On the surface, the impression might be produced that the first and third propositions,—the one in words relating *to [140 the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment, and the other in terms asserting "taxation by the initiative method violates fundamental rights, and is not in accordance with the law of the land," are addressed to some inherent defect in the tax or infirmity of power to levy it, without regard to the guaranty of a republican form of government. But this is merely superficial, and is at once dispelled by observing that every reason urged to support the two propositions is solely based on § 4 of article 4, and the consequent inability of the state to im-

†1. The guaranty of article 4, section 4, of the Federal Constitution, is to the people of the states, and to each citizen, as well as to the states as political entities.

2. Section 4 of article 4 therefore prohibits the majority in any state from adopting an unrepubli can Constitution.

‡1. Difference between a republic and democracy.

2. In ascertaining the meaning of the phrase "republican form of government," the debates of the constitutional conventions and the federalist papers are of great importance, if not conclusive.

3. The framers of the Constitution recognized the distinction between the republican and democratic form of government, and carefully avoided the latter.

4. The extent of territory of the states alone sufficed, in the judgment of the framers of the Constitution, to condemn the establishment of a democratic form of government.

5. The form of state government perpetuated by the Constitution was the republican form, with the three departments of government, in force in all the states at the time of the adoption of the Constitution.

6. The history of other nations does not furnish the definition of the phrase "republican form of government," as those words were used by the framers of the Constitution. They distinguish the American from all other republics by the introduction of the principle of representation.

7. Initiative legislation is invalid because government by the people directly is inconsistent with our form of government.

8. The well-known practices of (a) adopting state Constitutions by popular vote, and of (b) local legislation in "town meetings," furnish no precedent for the lodgment of legislative power in the ballot box.

† 1. State legislatures are a vital feature of our government; the Federal Constitution presupposes their existence, and imposes on each state the obligation to maintain them.

2. The division of powers of the three departments in each of the states is a prerequisite to the national government.

3. It is evident under the Constitution the state legislatures are the agency to carry on the relations between the nation and the states.

4. The word "legislature" in the Constitution means a representative assembly consisting of two houses, empowered to make the law. Such was its meaning at the time of the adoption of the Constitution.

5. Contemporaneous legislation by Congress sheds some light on the meaning of the term "legislature," as used in the Constitution.

6. The initiative destroys the legislative assemblies or legislatures which it is the implied obligation of each state to maintain, for a legislature must be the law-making power.

7. The initiative overthrows one of the greatest safeguards against the abuse of the power of legislation, to wit: the system of a dual legislative assembly.

pose any tax of any kind which would not violate the 14th Amendment, or be repugnant to the law of the land, if in such state the initiative or referendum method is permitted. Thus dispelling any mere confusion resulting from forms of expression, and considering the substance of things, it is apparent that the second proposition, which rests upon the affirmative assertion that, by the adoption of the initiative and referendum, the state "violates the right to a republican form of government which is guaranteed by § 4 of article 4 of the Federal Constitution," and the two subdivisions made of that proposition, the first, that "the guaranty in question is to the people of the states and to each citizen, as well as to the states as political entities," and the second asserting, "§ 4 of article 4 therefore prohibits the majority in any state from adopting an unrepublican Constitution," are the basic propositions upon which all the others rest. That is to say, all the others and their subdivisions are but inducements tending to show the correctness of the second and fundamental one. This conclusion is certain, as they all but point out the various modes by which the adoption of the initiative and referendum incapacitated the state from performing the duties incumbent upon it as a member of the Union, or its obligations towards its citizens, thus causing the state to cease to be a government republican in form, 141] within the intendment of the *constitutional provision relied upon. In other words, the propositions each and all proceed alone upon the theory that the adoption of the initiative and referendum destroyed all government republican in form in Oregon. This being so, the contention, if held to be sound, would necessarily affect the validity, not only of the particular statute which is before us, but of every other statute passed in Oregon since the adoption of the initiative and referendum. And indeed, the propositions go further than this, since in their essence they assert that there is no governmental function, legislative or judicial, in Oregon, because it cannot be assumed, if the proposition be well founded, that there is, at one and the same time, one and the same government, which is republican in form, and not of that character. Before immediately considering the text of § 4 of article 4, in order to uncover and give emphasis to the anomalous and destructive effects upon both the state and national governments which the adoption of the proposition implies, as illustrated by what we have just said, let us briefly fix the inconceivable expansion of the judicial power and the ruinous destruction of legislative authority in matters purely political which would necessarily be occasioned by giving sanction to the doctrine which underlies and would be necessarily involved in sustaining the propositions contended for.

First. That however perfect and absolute may be the establishment and dominion in fact of a state government, however complete may be its participation in and enjoyment of all its power and rights as a member of the national government, and however all the departments of that government may recognize such state government, nevertheless, every citizen of such state, or person subject to taxation therein, or owing any duty to the established government, may be heard, for the purpose of defeating the payment of such taxes or avoiding the discharge of such duty, to assail in a court of justice the rightful existence *of the state. Sec-[142] ond. As a result, it becomes the duty of the courts of the United States, where such a claim is made, to examine as a justiciable issue the contention as to the illegal existence of a state, and if such contention be thought well founded, to disregard the existence in fact of the state, of its recognition by all of the departments of the Federal government, and practically award a decree absolving from all obligation to contribute to the support of, or obey the laws of, such established state government. And as a consequence of the existence of such judicial authority, a power in the judiciary must be implied, unless it be that anarchy is to ensue, to build by judicial action upon the ruins of the previously established government a new one,—a right which, by its very terms, also implies the power to control the legislative department of the government of the United States in the recognition of such new government and the admission of representatives therefrom, as well as to strip the executive department of that government of its otherwise lawful and discretionary authority. Do the provisions of § 4, article 4, bring about these strange, far-reaching, and injurious results? That is to say, do the provisions of that article obliterate the division between judicial authority and legislative power upon which the Constitution rests? In other words, do they authorize the judiciary to substitute its judgment as to a matter purely political for the judgment of Congress on a subject committed to it, and thus overthrow the Constitution upon the ground that thereby the guaranty to the states of a government republican in form may be secured,—a conception which, after all, rests upon the assumption that the states are to be guaranteed a government republican in form by destroying the very existence of a government republican in form in the nation.

We shall not stop to consider the text to point out how absolutely barren it is of support for the contentions sought to be based upon it, since the repugnancy of 143]those contentions *to the letter and spirit of that text is so conclusively established by prior decisions of this court as to cause the matter to be absolutely foreclosed.

In view of the importance of the subject, the apparent misapprehension on one side and seeming misconception on the other, suggested by the argument as to the full significance of the previous doctrine, we do not content ourselves with a mere citation of the cases, but state more at length than we otherwise would the issues and the doctrine expounded in the leading and absolutely controlling case,—Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581.

The case came from a circuit court of the United States. It was an action of damages for trespass. The case grew out of what is commonly known as the Dorr Rebellion in Rhode Island, and the conflict which was brought about by the effort of the adherents of that alleged government, sometimes described as “the government established by a voluntary convention,” to overthrow the established charter government. The defendants justified on the ground that the acts done by them, charged as a trespass, were done under the authority of the charter government during the prevalence of martial law, and for the purpose of aiding in the suppression of an armed revolt by the supporters of the insurrectionary government. The plaintiffs, on the contrary, asserted the validity of the voluntary government, and denied the legality of the charter government. In the course of the trial the plaintiffs, to support the contention of the illegality of the charter government and the legality of the voluntary government, “although that government never was able to exercise any authority in the state, nor to command obedience to its laws or to its officers,” offered certain evidence tending to show that nevertheless it was “the lawful and established government,” upon the ground that its powers to govern have been ratified by a large majority of the male people of the state of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, and also 144]by a large *majority of those who were entitled to vote for general officers cast in favor of a Constitution which was submitted as the result of a voluntarily assembled convention of what was alleged 56 L. ed.

to be the people of the state of Rhode Island. The circuit court rejected this evidence and instructed the jury that, as the charter government was the established state government at the time the trespass occurred, the defendants were justified in acting under the authority of that government. This court, coming to review this ruling, at the outset pointed out “the novelty and serious nature” of the question which it was called upon to decide. Attention also was at the inception directed to the far-reaching effect and gravity of the consequences which would be produced by sustaining the right of the plaintiff to assail and set aside the established government by recovering damages from the defendants for acts done by them under the authority of, and for the purpose of sustaining, such established government. On this subject it was said (p. 38):

“For, if this court is authorized to enter upon this inquiry, as proposed by the plaintiff, and it should be decided that the charter government had no legal existence during the period of time above mentioned,—if it had been annulled by the adoption of the opposing government,—then the laws passed by its legislature during that time were nullities; its taxes wrongfully collected; its salaries and compensation to its officers illegally paid; its public accounts improperly settled; and the judgments and sentences of its courts in civil and criminal cases null and void, and the officers who carried their decisions into operation answerable as trespassers, if not in some cases as criminals.”

Coming to review the question, attention was directed to the fact that the courts of Rhode Island had recognized the complete dominancy in fact of the charter government, and had refused to investigate the legality of the *voluntary govern-[145]ment for the purpose of decreeing the established government to be illegal, on the ground (p. 39) “that the inquiry proposed to be made belonged to the political power, and not to the judicial; that it rested with the political power to decide whether the charter government had been displaced or not; and when that decision was made, the judicial department would be bound to take notice of it as the paramount law of the state, without the aid of oral evidence or the examination of witnesses, etc.” It was further remarked:

“This doctrine is clearly and forcibly stated in the opinion of the supreme court of the state in the trial of Thomas W. Dorr, who was the governor elected under the opposing Constitution, and headed the armed force which endeavored to maintain its authority."

Reviewing the grounds upon which these doctrines proceeded, their cogency was pointed out and the disastrous effect of any other view was emphasized, and from a point of view of the state law the conclusive effect of the judgments of the courts of Rhode Island was referred to. The court then came to consider the correctness of the principle applied by the Rhode Island courts, in the light of § 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States. The contention of the plaintiff in error concerning that article was, in substantial effect, thus pressed in argument: The ultimate power of sovereignty is in the people; and they, in the nature of things, if the government is a free one, must have a right to change their Constitution. Where, in the ordinary course, no other means exists of doing so, that right, of necessity, embraces the power to resort to revolution. As, however, no such right, it was urged, could exist under the Constitution, because of the provision of § 4 of article 4, protecting each state, on application of the legislature, or of the executive, when the legislature cannot be convened, against domestic violence, it followed that the guaranty of a republican government in form *was the means provided by the Constitution to secure the people in their right to change their government, and made the question whether such change was rightfully accomplished a judicial question, determinable by the courts of the United States. To make the physical power of the United States available, at the demand of an existing state government, to suppress all resistance to its authority, and yet to afford no method of testing the rightful character of the state government, would be to render people of a particular state hopeless in case of a wrongful government. It was pointed out in the argument that the decision of the courts of Rhode Island in favor of the charter government illustrated the force of these contentions, since they proceeded solely on the established character of that government, and not upon whether the people had rightfully overthrown it by voluntarily drawing and submitting for approval a new Constitution. It is thus seen that the propositions relied upon in this case were presented for decision in the most complete and most direct way. The court, in disposing of them, while virtually recognizing the cogency of the argument in so far as it emphasized the restraint upon armed resistance to an existing state government, arising from the provision of § 4 of article 4, and the resultant necessity for the existence somewhere in the Constitution of a tribunal, upon which the people of a state could rely, to protect them from the wrongful continuance against their will of a government not republican in form, proceeded to inquire whether a tribunal existed and its character. In doing this it pointed out that, owing to the inherent political character of such a question, its decision was not by the Constitution vested in the judicial department of the government, but was, on the contrary, exclusively committed to the legislative department, by whose action on such subject the judiciary were absolutely controlled. The court said (p. 42):

*"Moreover, the Constitution of the [147 United States, as far as it has provided for an emergency of this kind and authorized the general government to interfere in the domestic concerns of a state, has treated the subject as political in its nature, and placed the power in the hands of that department.

"The fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution of the United States provides that the United States shall guarantee to every state in the Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on the application of the legislature or of the Executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence.

"Under this article of the Constitution it rests with Congress to decide what government is the established one in a state. For, as the United States guarantee to each state a republican government, Congress must necessarily decide what government is established in the state before it can determine whether it is republican or not. And when the senators and representatives of a state are admitted into the councils of the Union, the authority of the government under which they are appointed, as well as its republican character, is recognized by the proper constitutional authority. And its decision is binding on every other department of the government, and could not be questioned in a judicial tribunal. It is true that the contest in this case did not last long enough to bring the matter to this issue; and as no senators or representatives were elected under the authority of the government of which Mr. Dorr was the head, Congress was not called upon to decide the controversy. Yet the right to decide is placed there, and not in the courts."

Pointing out that Congress, by the act of February 28, 1795 [1 Stat. at L. 424, chap. 36], had recognized the obligation resting upon it to protect from domestic violence by conferring authority upon the 148] President of the United States, *on the application of the legislature of a state or of the governor, to call out the militia of any other state or states to suppress such insurrection, it was suggested that if the question of what was the rightful government within the intendment of § 4 of article 4 was a judicial one, the duty to afford protections from invasion and to suppress domestic violence would be also judicial, since those duties were inseparably related to the determination of whether there was a rightful government. If this view were correct, it was intimated, it would follow that the delegation of authority made to the President by the act of 1795 would be void as a usurpation of judicial authority, and hence it would be the duty of the courts, if they differed with the judgment of the President as to the manner of discharging this great responsibility, to interfere and set at naught his action; and the pertinent statement was made (p. 43): "If the judicial power extends so far, the guaranty contained in the Constitution of the United States is a guaranty of anarchy, and not of order."

The fundamental doctrines thus so lucidly and cogently announced by the court, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the case which we have thus reviewed, have never been doubted or questioned since, and have afforded the light guiding the orderly development of our constitutional system from the day of the deliverance of that decision up to the present time. We do not stop to cite other cases which indirectly or incidentally refer to the subject, but conclude by directing attention to the statement by the court, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, in Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009, where, after disposing of a contention made concerning the 14th Amendment, and coming to consider a proposition which was necessary to be decided concerning the nature and effect of the guaranty of § 4 of article 4, it was said (p. 578):

"But it is said that the 14th Amendment must be *read with § 4 of article 4, of the Constitution, providing that 'the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the legislature, or of the Executive (when the legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.' It is argued that when the state of Kentucky entered the Union, the people 'surrendered their right of forcible revolution in state affairs,' and received in lieu thereof a distinct pledge to the people of the state of the guaranty of a republican form of government, and of protection against invasion, and against domestic violence; that the distinguishing feature of that form of government is the right of the people to choose their own officers for governmental administration; that this was denied by the action of the general assembly in this instance; and, in effect, that this court has jurisdiction to enforce that guaranty, albeit the judiciary of Kentucky was unable to do so because of the division of the powers of government. And yet the writ before us was granted under § 709 of the Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, to revise the judgment of the state court on the ground that a constitutional right was decided against by that court.

"It was long ago settled that the enforcement of this guaranty belonged to the political department. Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581. In that case it was held that the question, which of the two opposing governments of Rhode Island, namely, the charter government or the government established by a voluntary convention, was the legitimate one, was a question for the determination of the political department; and when that department had decided, the courts were bound to take notice of the decision and follow it."

It is indeed a singular misconception of the nature and character of our constitutional system of government to suggest that the settled distinction which the doctrine just *stated points out between [150] judicial authority over justiciable controversies and legislative power as to purely political questions tends to destroy the duty of the judiciary in proper cases to enforce the Constitution. The suggestion but results from failing to distinguish between things which are widely different; that is, the legislative duty to determine the political questions involved in deciding whether a state government republican in form exists, and the judicial power and ever-present duty whenever it becomes necessary, in a controversy properly submitted, to enforce and uphold the applicable provisions of the Constitution as to each and every exercise of governmental power.

How better can the broad lines which distinguish these two subjects be pointed out than by considering the character of the defense in this very case? The defendant company does not contend here that it could not have been required to pay a license tax. It does not assert that it was denied an opportunity to be heard as to the amount for which it was taxed, or that there was anything inhering in the tax or involved intrinsically in the law which violated any of its constitutional rights. If such questions had been raised, they would have been justiciable, and therefore would have required the calling into operation of judicial power. Instead, however, of doing any of these things, the attack on the statute here made is of a wholly different character. Its essentially political nature is at once made manifest by understanding that the assault which the contention here advanced makes is not on the tax as a tax, but on the state as a state. It is addressed to the framework and political character of the government by which the statute levying the tax was passed. It is the government, the political entity, which (reducing the case to its essence) is called to the bar of this court, not for the purpose of testing judicially some exercise of power, assailed on the ground that its exertion has in-151]juriously *affected the rights of an individual because of repugnancy to some constitutional limitation, but to demand of the state that it establish its right to exist as a state, republican in form.

As the issues presented, in their very essence, are, and have long since by this court been, definitely determined to be political and governmental, and embraced within the scope of the powers conferred upon Congress, and not, therefore, within the reach of judicial power, it follows that the case presented is not within our jurisdiction, and the writ of error must therefore be, and it is, dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

FRANK KIERNAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF PORTLAND, Joseph Simon, Mayor, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 151-166.)

Courts — jurisdiction — political question — republican form of government — initiative and referendum.

1. Whether or not a state has ceased to be republican in form within the meaning of the guaranty in U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4, because of its adoption of the initiative and referendum, is not a judicial question, but a political one, which is solely for Congress to determine.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — local law.

2. Questions as to the validity under the state Constitution of Or. Laws 1907, chap. 226, authorizing the voters of a municipality to resort to the initiative to amend its charter, and as to the regularity of the proceedings leading up to the adoption of an amendment, and of the proceedings culminating in the adoption of a particular ordinance, are not Federal, and hence will not support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1529-2049, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 503.]

Argued November 3, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Multnomah County, in that state, dismissing a taxpayer's suit to enjoin the sale of municipal bonds. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 57 Or. 454, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 332, 111 Pac. 379, 112 Pac. 402.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ralph R. Duniway argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. J. Geisler, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Frank S. Grant and William C. Benbow argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The Federal government is the only party who can question the construction of a bridge over navigable water on account of a lack of Federal authority. None can question the lack of legislative authority to construct a bridge across navigable waters, except the state.

Kundinger v. Saginaw, 132 Mich. 405, 93 N. W. 914; Portland v. Montgomery, 38 Or. 222, 62 Pac. 755, 190 U. S. 89, 47 L. ed. 965, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 689, 27 L. ed. 442, 447, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Ft. Plain Bridge Co. v. Smith, 30 N. Y. 44; Roe v. Strong, 107 N. Y. 350, 14 N. E. 294; Doolittle v. Broome County, 18 N. Y. 155.

NOTE.—On the initiative and referendum—see notes to Ex parte Pfahler, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1092, and Ex parte Farnsworth, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 969.

On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

Whether or not a state government is republican in form is a political question.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 42, 12 L. ed. 581, 599; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 730, 19 L. ed. 227, 239; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; Hopkins v. Duluth, 81 Minn. 189, 83 N. W. 536; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 467, 35 L. ed. 225, 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; McConaughy v. Secretary of State, 106 Minn. 392, 119 N. W. 408; Brickhouse v. Brooks, 165 Fed. 534.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Following the incorporation into the Constitution of the state of Oregon in 1902 of the initiative and referendum amendment referred to in the case of Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon, just decided [223 U. S. 118, ante 377, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224], two other amendments to the Constitution were adopted by that method, designated, the first, as article 4, § 1a, and the second as article 11, § 2. The pertinent provisions of article 4, § 1a, and of article 11, § 2, are in the margin.†

160] *The legislature (Laws of 1907, chap. 226) authorized municipalities to provide by ordinance for carrying into effect the initiative and referendum powers reserved by the amendment to the Constitution just quoted. The city of Portland adopted ordinance No. 16,311, providing the methods by which the initiative and referendum powers of the city should be exerted. We quote †Article 4, § 1a. . . . The initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people by this Constitution are hereby further reserved to the legal voters of every municipality and district, as to all local, special, and municipal legislation, of every character, in or for their respective municipalities and districts. The manner of exercising said powers shall be prescribed by general laws, except that cities and towns may provide for the manner of exercising the initiative and referendum powers as to their municipal legislation. Not more than 10 per cent of the legal voters may be required to order the referendum, nor more than 15 per cent to propose any measure by the initiative, in any city or town.

Article 11, § 2. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by the legislative assembly by special laws. The legislative assembly shall not enact, amend, or repeal any character or act of incorporation for any municipality, city, or town. The legal voters of every city and town are hereby granted power to enact and amend their municipal charter, subject to the Constitution and criminal laws of the state of Oregon.

56 L. ed.

in the margin‡ from the opinion of the *supreme court of Oregon [57 Or. 457[161 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 332, 111 Pac. 379] in this case the facts concerning the action taken by the municipality leading up to the adoption of an ordinance which forms the subject-matter of this controversy.

The ordinance in question was entitled, "To Amend Article 6 of Chapter 3 of the Charter of the City of Portland . . . by Inserting a Section in Said Article 6 of Chapter 3 after Section 118, and before Section 119 Thereof, Which Shall Be Designated in the Charter as Section One Hundred and Eighteen and a Half (118½) of Article 6 of Chapter 3." Omitting details, the amendment conferred upon the council of the city authority to issue and dispose of bonds of the city not exceeding two millions of dollars, to be sold, as occasion might require, to enable the executive board of the city of Portland to construct, in the name of the city of Portland, a bridge with proper approaches and terminals "across the Willamette river in said city, from Broadway street at or near its intersection with Larabee street, on the east side of said river. . . ." The amendment gave power to the executive board in building the authorized bridge, to "erect and construct . . . subject to such regulations as may be imposed by the United States, piers, abutments, and other necessary supports in the bed of the Willamette river for the foundation of such bridge." Again, as stated by the supreme court of Oregon, pursuant to the submission to voters, as above stated, "on June 7th the election was held, at which

‡On April 7, 1908, an initiative petition, containing the required number of signatures, was filed with the council, requesting the city to build a bridge across the Willamette river, from Broadway street in East Portland, to the west side of the river, whereupon the city of Portland took steps to obtain plans and specifications for building said bridge. On May 8, 1908, the auditor notified the mayor of the filing of said petition, and requested him to comply with his duties under the charter in regard thereto. On October 20, 1908, the petition, containing a sufficient number of signatures, was presented to the council at a legally called meeting, and at said date the council requested the opinion of the city attorney as to the validity thereof. On October 27, 1908, the attorney filed his opinion, affirming its validity, and thereafter, on November 11, 1908, the council passed an ordinance (No. 18,531) submitting to a vote of the people an amendment to the city charter, providing for the construction of said bridge, and for issuing bonds in the sum of not to exceed $2,000,000 to pay for the same, designating said proposed amendment as § 118½ of art. 6 of chap. 3, and on November 25, there were cast for the amendment 10,087 votes, and against it 6,061, and on June 21st the mayor proclaimed that the amendment had been adopted." Following the adoption of the ordinance, on October 27, 1909, 162]the council passed an ordinance ("No. 20,208), authorizing the issue and sale of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the bonds provided for in the amendment to the charter for the purpose of obtaining funds to commence the construction of the bridge. On the promulgation of this ordinance the present suit was begun by the plaintiff in error in a state court, with the object of enjoining the sale of the bonds, and preventing the carrying out of the amendment of the city charter which had been adopted in pursuance of the vote as above stated. The right to stand in judgment for this purpose was based upon the interest of the complainant as a citizen and taxpayer. The complaint stated a multitude of grounds, assailing in every conceivable form the power to authorize the voters of the municipality to resort to the initiative for the purpose of amending the charter; and the repugnancy of the delegation of that power and of the charter amendment adopted in pursuance of it to many provisions of the state Constitution and the Constitution of the United States. The regularity of the proceedings taken to adopt the amendment was also elaborately assailed. The city answered. The case was submitted to the trial court on bill and answer, and resulted in the dismissal of the bill. The case was taken to the supreme court of the state, where that judgment was affirmed. The court delivered two opinions, one on the first hearing and the other on a rehearing. The first carefully disposed of the many objections made to the power under the state Constitution to confer on the voters of the municipality the authority to amend the charter, and to the regularity of the proceedings leading up to the adoption of the amendment, and to the proceedings culminating in the adoption of the assailed ordinance. The various contentions concerning these subjects, based upon the Constitution of the United States, were also disposed of in the course of the opinion. We have not examined the petition for the rehearing, as it was omitted in printing the record, but it is *inferable, from the 163 elaborate opinion which was delivered on the rehearing, that the main grounds urged for a rehearing were based on the absence of power in a state to adopt the methods of initiative and referendum, and the effect of doing so on the continued existence of a government republican in form. We think this is the reasonable inference, as those subjects were elaborately reviewed by the court on the rehearing.

The errors assigned are numerous and involve assumed state and Federal questions so interwoven as to cause it to be difficult to separate them or state with precision the questions of a Federal nature which they embrace. We need not, however, undertake to do so, as all the questions which it is deemed arise for consideration are in the argument reduced to eight propositions, which are in the margin.† Coming to test these propositions, we think on their face it is apparent they are disposed of by either or *both of one or 164 two considerations,—(a) the necessary operation and effect of the opinion in Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon, just announced, or (b) the conclusive effect on 1908, the council passed a resolution, submitting the proposed amendment to a vote of the people at a special election on April 23, 1909. Thereafter, on February 17, 1909, the council passed an ordinance (No. 18,976), amending ordinance No. 18,531, so as to fix the date of the election on May 8, 1909, instead of April 23d, as originally specified. On March 31, 1909, the council passed an ordinance (No. 19,174) expressly repealing ordinance No. 18,531 as amended, and no special election was held under any ordinance or resolution. On March 31, 1909, the same date as that of the repealing ordinance, a resolution was passed, authorizing the submission of the charter amendment to a vote of the people at the general election to be held June 7, 1909. More than twenty days prior to the election the auditor of the city published the proposed charter amendment, with the ballot in full, in the city's official newspaper, as required by law, and also sent out and distributed copies of said amendment to the voters of the city."

†1. Can the state of Oregon legally adopt the initiative and referendum amendment to its Constitution, article 4, § 1, attempted to be adopted June 2, 1902, and printed above, pages —?

2. Can the electors of the state of Oregon legally adopt the further initiative and referendum amendments to its Constitution, article 4, § 1a, and article 11, § 2, attempted to be adopted June 4, 1906, by virtue of said article 4, § 1, and printed above, pages —?

3. Can the electors of the city of Portland legally adopt the pretended § 118½ of the charter of the city of Portland, which is printed above in this brief, by virtue of the above-mentioned initiative and referendum amendments to the Oregon Constitution?

4. Can the city of Portland legally issue bonds, tax plaintiff in error, and build said Broadway bridge across the navigable Willamette river owned by the state of Oregon, by virtue of the said § 118½ of the charter, attempted to be adopted at said questions of a local and state character resulting from the action of the court below, and hence that none of them have a foundation sufficiently substantial to support the exertion of jurisdiction.

In saying this we are not unmindful that one of the assignments is based upon the contention that, as the Willamette river was navigable, there was no power to build a bridge over it without the consent of the government of the United States. But in the first place, we are unable to perceive upon what theory the complainant possessed the right to raise such a question, and in the second place, the ordinance which empowered the bridge expressly exacted [165] *that it should be built in conformity to the requirements of the authorities of the United States. It is to be observed that both sides refer to and insert in their printed arguments an act of the legislature of Oregon passed since this writ of error was sued out. Nothing could be more complete and comprehensive in the manifestation of a purpose, so far as there was power to do so, to cure any and every possible defect. Its title is an indication of its purpose and scope:

"An act to authorize the construction of a bridge known as the Broadway bridge, to be built across the Willamette river in the city of Portland, in the state of Oregon, and to cure any errors or irregularities in the passage of the amendment to the charter of the city of Portland, authorizing *such bridge, and to validate and con-[166 firm the bonds issued or to be issued for the construction therefor."

We have not deemed it necessary to take into consideration the act of Congress (36 Stat. at L. chap. 253, p. 1348) expressly approving the authority granted to build the bridge, so far as the United States was concerned, and ratifying any infirmity city election under said system of government?

5. The supreme court of Oregon committed error in deciding that the pretended § 118½ is invalid in so far as it attempts to impose the care and maintenance of the Broadway bridge upon Multnomah county, and then holding that said clause is severable from the rest of the section, and the remainder of the section is valid, as thereby the supreme court of Oregon attempted to legislate and authorize the taxation of plaintiff in error, and deprived him of the law of the land.

6. The supreme court of Oregon committed error in deciding that the granting of a franchise and building a bridge across the Willamette river, owned by the state of Oregon and controlled jointly by the United States of America and the state of Oregon, is a municipal purpose instead of a state purpose, and can be granted by the electors of the city of Portland in amending the charter of the city of Portland under the said "Oregon system," as said decision denied to plaintiff in error the law of the land.

7. The supreme court of Oregon committed error in deciding that the council and electors of the city of Portland can enact a charter amendment to the charter of the city of Portland, under said "Oregon system," by which the city could issue bonds in a large amount and tax the property of plaintiff in error for the payment of the bonds as a municipal purpose, when it is a state purpose, and it is not within the constitutional power of the people of the state of Oregon to delegate the power to tax without limitation, and exercise state powers to the electors of a municipality, and the attempt to do so is in violation of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; also in violation of §§ 3 and 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States of America, as such grant of power would be for the state of Oregon to commit state suicide, and dissolve the state of Oregon into as many smaller states as there are municipalities within the state, and to change the republican government of the state of Oregon into a confederacy of cities within the state of Oregon, and tends to destroy our system of government created and guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America.

8. The supreme court of Oregon erred in holding and deciding that plaintiff, a citizen of the United States; must conform his conduct and hold his property in state matters and tax matters, to a rule of conduct or law enacted by mere numbers of people and assemblages of people within the borders of a municipality, because it is not in accordance with due process of law and is in violation of the law of the land to require any citizen of the United States to conform his conduct, and hold his property in state matters and in tax matters, to a rule of conduct or law, enacted directly by mere numbers of people or assemblages of people within a municipal corporation, and is contrary to § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America; §§ 3 and 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States of America; and also is contrary to the implied provisions of the Constitution of the United States that government of the several states shall be representative in form, and that the several states shall create and maintain representative legislative assemblies, and that the citizens of the United States shall be protected in their rights of enjoyment of life, liberty, and property by the law of the land, which is an inherent attribute of citizenship of the United States, which no state or its people may impair.

which might otherwise have arisen in that regard.

It follows that the writ of error must be, and it is, dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

THE ABBY DODGE, A. Kalimeris, Claimant Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 166-178.)

Waters — relative rights of state and United States to sponges within territorial limits.

1. The taking or gathering of sponges from land under water within state territorial limits is not subject to congressional control.

[For other cases, see Waters, I. b. 2; Fisheries, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Sponges — Federal regulation.

2. Only sponges taken outside of state territorial limits can be deemed included in the provisions of the act of June 20, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 3442, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1087), making it unlawful to land, deliver, cure, or offer for sale at any port or place in the United States any sponges taken by means of diving or diving apparatus from the waters of the Gulf of Mexico or Straits of Florida, since any other construction would plainly render the statute unconstitutional, as in excess of the powers of Congress.

Commerce — Federal power — prohibiting foreign commerce.

3. Congress could validly prohibit, as it did by the act of June 20, 1906, the landing at any port or place in the United States of sponges taken between certain dates outside of state territorial waters.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. b. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Admiralty — libel — sufficiency.

4. A libel charging a vessel with violating the act of June 20, 1906, by landing at a Florida port sponges taken by means of diving or diving apparatus from the waters of the Gulf of Mexico or Straits of Florida, must negative the fact that the sponges may have been taken from waters within the territorial limits of a state.

[For other cases, see Admiralty, III. g. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — judgment — remanding for amendment of libel.

5. A decree of the Federal Supreme Court which, construing the act of June 20, 1906, regulating the landing of sponges, as applicable only to sponges taken outside of state territorial limits, reverses a decree below, fining a vessel for violating the statute, because the libel fails to negative the fact that the sponges may have been taken from waters within the territorial limits of a state, will be accompanied with directions to permit the government, if it desires, to amend the libel so as to present a case within the statute as so construed.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5446-5454, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 41.]

Argued November 6 and 7, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida to review a decree fining a vessel for violation of a Federal statute regulating the landing of sponges. Reversed and remanded with directions to permit an amendment of the libel.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward R. Gunby argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Granting that the landing of an ordinary article of commerce is commerce within the meaning of the law, it is plain that when commerce is confined within the limits of a single state, Congress has no power to regulate or control it.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; The Bright Star, 1 Woolw. 266, Fed. Cas. No. 1,880; King v. American Transp. Co. 1 Flipp. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,787; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 15,867; United States v. The James Morrison, Newberry Adm. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 15,465; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 16 L. ed. 243.

37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On state control over navigable waters—see note to Gibson v. United States, 41 L. ed. U. S. 997.

On the regulation of oyster fisheries—see note to Bradshaw v. Lankford, 11 L.R.A. 583.

On jurisdiction over the sea—see note to Humboldt Lumber Mfrs. Asso. v. Christopherson, 46 L.R.A. 264.

On the amendment of libel or information in admiralty—see note to The Burma, 110 C. C. A. 333.

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Abby Dodge."

NOTE.—On governmental control over right of fishery—see note to People v. Truckee Lumber Co. 39 L.R.A. 581.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corvin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 390

Even if the acts controlled and regulated by the act of Congress are matters of interstate commerce, if the same are so blended with intrastate commerce that the two are inseparable, the act of Congress would be unconstitutional.

Employers' Liability Case (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Sears v. Warren County, 36 Ind. 267, 10 Am. Rep. 62.

The courts are not bound by mere form; they may, and should, look at the substance of things whenever they enter upon the inquiry whether the legislature has transcended the limits of its authority.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The decisions upon the right of the states to legislate in regard to oysters are so nearly parallel that they would practically control the same rights in regard to sponges. The right of the state absolutely to regulate the oyster industry has been so clearly recognized that it seems no longer open to question.

Lee v. New Jersey, 207 U. S. 67, 52 L. ed. 106, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 913, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408, 571; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 71, 15 L. ed. 269. See also State v. Harrub, 95 Ala. 176, 15 L.R.A. 761, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 99, 36 Am. St. Rep. 195, 10 So. 752; Waverly Water-Front & Improv. Co. v. White, 97 Va. 176, 45 L.R.A. 227, 33 S. E. 534; People v. Truckee Lumber Co. 39 L.R.A. 581, and note, 116 Cal. 397, 58 Am. St. Rep. 183, 48 Pac. 374; Com. v. Hilton, 174 Mass. 29, 45 L.R.A. 475, 54 N. E. 362; State v. Lewis, 134 Ind. 250, 20 L.R.A. 52, 33 N. E. 1024; Greer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 62, 21 L. ed. 404; State v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 32 Fed. 722; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Keller v. United States, 213 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 737, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 470, 16 Ann. Cas. 1066; Holderman v. Thompson, 105 Ind. 112, 5 N. E. 175.

On the question of the ownership, sovereignty, and control of the tide water and the right to control the fishing therein, this court has frequently recognized the power of the states, and defined the rights of the general government.

Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 159, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. ed. 997; Pollard v. 56 L. ed.

Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Wharton v. Wise, 153 U. S. 155, 38 L. ed. 669, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 273, 38 L. ed. 714, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

By the express provisions of the act of Congress of March 3, 1845, Florida was "admitted into the Union on equal footing with the original states in all respects whatsoever."

State v. Black River Phosphate Co. 32 Fla. 94, 21 L.R.A. 189, 13 So. 640.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles E. McNabb, Assistant Attorney, filed a brief for appellee:

Whether the act of Congress in question is unconstitutional as an invasion of the reserved power of the state is a question not presented by this record, inasmuch as it is not shown that any of the sponges landed from the Abby Dodge were taken within the boundaries of the state.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107-177, 55 L. ed. 389-423, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

The United States has the undoubted right alike in virtue of its power to regulate foreign commerce and as an exercise of its inherent powers of national sovereignty, to regulate the use of fisheries near its shores and outside the boundaries of the states, so far as it concerns operations by its own people or to or from its own shores.

Lord v. Goodall, N. P. S. S. Co. 102 U. S. 541, 26 L. ed. 224; Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 32 L. ed. 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 39 L. ed. 1082, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967; North American Commercial Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 110, 43 L. ed. 98, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U. S. 320, 53 L. ed. 1013, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

By libel of the vessel Abby Dodge, either her forfeiture or the enforcement of a monetary penalty was sought because of an alleged violation of the act of June 20, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 3442, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1087, entitled, "An Act to Regulate the Landing, Delivery, Cure, and Sale of Sponges." The specific violation alleged was "that there was at the port of Tarpon Springs, within the southern district of Florida, on the 28th day of September, A. D. 1908, landed from the said vessel, Abby Dodge, 1,229 bunches of sponges, taken by means of diving and apparatus from the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and the Straits of Florida, . . . at a time other than between October 1st and May 1st of any year, and at a time subsequent to May 1st, A. D. 1907."

The owner of the vessel appeared and filed exceptions which, although urged in various forms, were all, as stated by counsel, "directed to and based upon the alleged unconstitutionality of the said act of June 20, 1906." The exceptions were overruled, and, the claimant declining further to plead, a decree was entered assessing a fine of $100 against the vessel. This appeal was then taken.

For the purposes of the questions upon which this case turns, we need only consider the 1st section of the act of June 20, 1906, which is as follows:

"That from and after May first, anno Domini nineteen hundred and seven, it shall be unlawful to land, deliver, cure, or offer for sale at any port or place in the United States, any sponges taken by means of diving or diving apparatus from the waters of the Gulf of Mexico or Straits of Florida: Provided, That sponges taken or gathered by such process between October first and May first of each year in a greater depth of water than fifty feet shall not be subject to the provisions of this act: And provided further, That no sponges taken from said waters shall be landed, delivered, cured, or offered for sale at any port or place in the United States of a smaller size than four inches in diameter."

Broadly, the act, it is insisted, is repugnant to the Constitution because, in one aspect, it deals with a matter exclusively within the authority of the states, and in another because, irrespective of the question of state authority, the statute regulates a subject not within the national grasp, and hence not embraced within the legislative power of Congress. The first proceeds upon the assumption that the act regulates the taking or gathering of sponges attached to the land under water, within the territorial limits of the state of Florida, and it may be of other states bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, prohibits internal commerce in sponges so taken or gathered, and is therefore plainly an unauthorized exercise of power by Congress. The second is based on the theory that, even if the act be construed as concerned only with sponges taken or gathered from land under water outside of the jurisdiction of any state, then its provisions are in excess of the power of Congress, because, under such hypothesis, the act can only apply to sponges taken from the bed of the ocean, which the national government has no power to deal with.

We briefly consider the two propositions. If the premise upon which the first rests be correct, that is to say, the assumption that the act, when rightly construed, applies to sponges taken or gathered from land under water within the territorial limits of the state of Florida or other states, the repugnancy of the act to the Constitution would plainly be established by the decisions of this court. In McCready v. Virginia, [174 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248, the question for decision was whether the state of Virginia had such exclusive authority over the planting and gathering of oysters upon the soil in tide waters within the territorial limits of the state as not only to give the state the power to control that subject, but to confer the right to exclude the citizens of other states from participating. In upholding a statute exerting such powers the doctrine was declared to be as follows: "The principle has long been settled in this court that each state owns the beds of all tide waters within its jurisdiction, unless they have been granted away. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 74, 15 L. ed. 270; Mumford v. Wardwell, 6 Wall. 436, 18 L. ed. 761; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 66, 21 L. ed. 802. In like manner the states own the tide waters themselves, and the fish in them, so far as they are capable of ownership while running. For this purpose the state represents its people, and the ownership is that of the people in their united sovereignty. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 410, 10 L. ed. 1012. . . . The right which the people of the state thus acquire comes not from their citizenship alone, but from their citizenship and property combined. It is, in fact, a property right, and not a mere privilege or immunity of citizenship." True it is that the rights which were thus held to exist in the states were declared to be "subject to the paramount right of navigation, the regulation of which, in respect to foreign and interstate commerce, has been granted to the United States;" but with that dominant right we are not here concerned.

Again, in Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 159, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, in upholding a statute of the state of Massachusetts regulating the taking of menhaden in Buzzard's bay, the doctrine of the case just cited was expressly reiterated.

True, further in that case, probably having in mind the declaration made in the opinion in the McCready Case, that fish running within the tide waters of the several [175] *states were subject to state ownership "so far as they are capable of ownership while so running," the question was reserved as to whether or not Congress would have the right to control the menhaden fisheries. But here also, for the reason that the question arising relates only to sponges growing on the soil covered by water, we are not concerned with the subject of running fish, and the extent of state and national power over such subject.

The obvious correctness of the deduction which the proposition embodies, that the statute is repugnant to the Constitution when applied to sponges taken or gathered within state territorial limits, however, establishes the want of merit in the contention as a whole. In other words, the premise that the statute is to be construed as applying to sponges taken within the territorial jurisdiction of a state is demonstrated to be unfounded by the deduction of unconstitutionality to which such premise inevitably and plainly leads. This follows because of the elementary rule of construction that where two interpretations of a statute are in reason admissible, one of which creates a repugnancy to the Constitution and the other avoids such repugnancy, the one which makes the statute harmonize with the Constitution must be adopted. United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 407, 53 L. ed. 836, 848, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, and cases cited.

While it is true that it would be possible to interpret the statute as applying to sponges taken in local waters, it is equally certain that it is susceptible of being confined to sponges taken outside of such waters. In view of the clear distinction between state and national power on the subject, long settled at the time the act was passed, and the rule of construction just stated, we are of opinion that its provisions must be construed as alone applicable to the subject within the authority of Congress to regulate, and, therefore, be held not to embrace that which was not within such power.

[176] *In substance the argument is that this case does not come within the rule, since it is insisted to confine the statute to sponges taken or gathered outside of state territorial limits would also, although for a different reason, cause it to be plainly unconstitutional. This but assumes that the second proposition, denying all power in Congress to exert authority in respect to the landing of sponges taken outside of the territorial jurisdiction of a state, is well founded; and we come, therefore, to the consideration of that proposition. For the sake of brevity we do not stop to review the general considerations which the proposition involves for the purpose of demonstrating its inherent inaccuracy, or to point out its conflict with the law of nations, and its inconsistency with the practices of the government from the beginning. We thus refrain, since there is a simpler and yet more comprehensive point of view disposing of the whole subject.

Undoubtedly (Lord v. Goodall, N. & P. S. S. Co. 102 U. S. 541, 26 L. ed. 224), whether the Abby Dodge was a vessel of the United States or of a foreign nation, even although it be conceded that she was solely engaged in taking or gathering sponges in the waters which, by the law of nations, would be regarded as the common property of all, and was transporting the sponges so gathered to the United States, the vessel was engaged in foreign commerce, and was therefore amenable to the regulating power of Congress over that subject. This being not open to discussion, the want of merit of the contention is shown, since the practices from the beginning, sanctioned by the decisions of this court, establish that Congress, by an exertion of its power to regulate foreign commerce, has the authority to forbid merchandise carried in such commerce from entering the United States. Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 492, 493, 48 L. ed. 525, 534, 535, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, and authorities there collected. Indeed, as pointed out in the Buttfield Case, so complete is the authority of Congress over the subject that no one can be said to have a vested *right to [177] carry on foreign commerce with the United States.

Although, for the reason stated, we think the statute, limited by the construction which we have given it, is not repugnant to the Constitution, we are nevertheless of opinion that, as thus construed, the averments of the libel were not sufficient to authorize the imposition of the penalty which the court below decreed against the vessel. As, by the interpretation which we have given the statute, its operation is confined to the landing of sponges taken outside of the territorial limits of a state, and the libel does not so charge,—that is, its averments do not negative the fact that the sponges may have been taken from waters within the territorial limits of a state,—it follows that the libel failed to charge an element essential to be alleged and proved, in order to establish a violation of the statute. United States v. Britton, 107 U. S.

655, 661, 662, 27 L. ed. 520, 522, 523, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, and cases cited.

As we deem that it has no relevancy to the power of Congress to deal with a subject not within its constitutional authority, that is, the taking of sponges within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state, we have not considered it necessary to refer to a statement made by the district judge concerning legislation of the state of Florida, making it unlawful to gather or catch sponges "in and upon any of the grounds known as sponging grounds along the coast of Florida from Pensacola to Cape Florida, by diving either with or without a diving suit and armor." Equally, also, have we refrained from attempting to reconcile the enactment of this state law with some reference made by the government in argument to certain statements in testimony given before a committee of the House when the act which is before us was in process of adoption, to the effect that there were no sponge beds within the jurisdiction of Florida, because "the sponge beds were from 15 to 60 and 65 miles out."

178] *In view of the paramount authority of Congress over foreign commerce, through abundance of precaution we say that nothing in this opinion implies a want of power in Congress, when exerting its absolute authority to prohibit the bringing of merchandise, the subject of such commerce, into the United States, to cast upon one seeking to bring in the merchandise, the burden, if an exemption from the operation of the statute is claimed, of establishing a right to the exemption.

While it necessarily follows from what we have said that the decree must be reversed, we are of opinion that, under the circumstances of the case, it should be accompanied with directions to permit the government, if desired, to amend the libel so as to present a case within the statutes as construed. The Marv Ann, 8 Wheat. 389, 5 L. ed. 643.

Reversed.

HAMILTON H. HENDRICKS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 178-184.)

Error to circuit court — frivolousness of Federal question.

1. The contention that an indictment

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333.

charging subornation of perjury before a Federal grand jury did not sufficiently set forth "the nature and cause of the accusation," within the meaning of U. S. Const., 6th Amend., because it did not "set forth in some definite way the matter or thing which was under investigation at the particular time, so that the defendant may know as to what particular controversy the alleged false testimony is claimed to be material, and how to meet the allegation of materiality," is too frivolous to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a circuit court, to review a conviction under such indictment, where the description therein of the proceeding in which the perjury was committed is as follows: ". . . Sitting as a grand jury . . . and, among other matters, inquiring into certain criminal violations of the laws of the said United States relating to the public lands and the disposal of the same, and the unlawful fencing thereof, which had then lately before been committed within the said district."

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indictment — subornation of perjury — sufficiency.

2. An indictment charging subornation of perjury before a Federal grand jury need not, in describing the proceedings in which the perjury was committed, state the name of a specified defendant under investigation. [For other cases, see Indictment, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indictment — subornation of perjury — definiteness.

3. There is no want of definiteness in an indictment charging subornation of perjury before a Federal grand jury because it is in effect simply alleged therein that before the grand jury, after the witness had been sworn, the truth of the recited matters concerning which it was subsequently alleged that he testified falsely, "became and was a material question," and did not specify in just what evidentiary way the perjured testimony became material.

[For other cases, see Indictment, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 164.]

Argued January 25, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon to review a conviction for subornation of perjury. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred S. Bennett argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The provisions of U. S. Const. 6th Amend. give to defendants in criminal cases important constitutional rights of which the courts will not permit them to be deprived, and substantial and serious failure to comply with its terms raises a constitutional question which the defendant may invoke as such, and which cannot be taken away by any act of legislature.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; State v. Webber, 78 Vt. 463, 62 Atl. 1018; Hogue v. United States, 106 C. C. A. 387, 184 Fed. 248; United States v. Pettus, 84 Fed. 791; State v. Silverberg, 78 Miss. 858, 29 So. 761; Moline v. State, 67 Neb. 164, 93 N. W. 228; State v. Mace, 76 Me. 66, 5 Am. Crim. Rep. 588; McLaughlin v. State, 45 Ind. 343; McNair v. People, 89 Ill. 444; Reyes v. State, 34 Fla. 181, 15 So. 876; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Proc. §§ 104, 108-110; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 31, 40 L. ed. 607, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 251; United States v. Trumbull, 46 Fed. 755; United States v. Potter, 56 Fed. 83.

It has always been held that the particular proceeding in which the alleged false testimony is claimed to have been given, and to which the alleged false testimony is claimed to be material, must be set forth in the indictment, whether the alleged perjury was committed before a grand jury or before any other tribunal.

Com. v. Taylor, 96 Ky. 394, 29 S. W. 138; State v. Webber, 78 Vt. 463, 62 Atl. 1018; State v. McCormick, 52 Ind. 169; Banks v. State, 78 Ala. 14; State v. Wiggins, — Miss. —, 30 So. 712; Buller v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 551, 28 S. W. 465; Com. v. Pickering, 8 Gratt. 628, 56 Am. Dec. 158; State v. Koslowesky, 228 Mo. 351, 128 S. W. 741; State v. Ayer, 40 Kan. 43, 19 Pac. 403; State v. Silverberg, 78 Miss. 858, 29 So. 761; State v. McCone, 59 Vt. 117, 7 Atl. 407; State v. See, 4 Wash. 344, 30 Pac. 327, 746; Wilson v. State, 115 Ga. 206, 90 Am. St. Rep. 104, 41 S. E. 696, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 597; State v. Ela, 91 Me. 309, 39 Atl. 1001; Davis v. State, 79 Ala. 20; United States v. Wilcox, 4 Blatchf. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 16,692; Hogue v. United States, 106 C. C. A. 387, 184 Fed. 245; State v. Smith, 40 Kan. 631, 20 Pac. 529; United States v. Robinson, 4 Dak. 72, 23 N. W. 90; Brooks v. State, 29 Tex. App. 582, 16 S. W. 542; Weaver v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. Rep. 282, 30 S. W. 220.

The defendant had an inherent as well as a constitutional right to a fair opportunity to meet and resist that essential element of the offense, and to have notice in advance, so that he could do so.

United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580, 24 L. ed. 531.

It is not enough that alleged false testimony may have been material. On the contrary, its materiality must be proved and established the same as any other fact in the case.

56 L. ed.

McClelland v. People, 49 Colo. 538, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1069, 113 Pac. 640; State v. Aikens, 32 Iowa, 403; State v. Dineen, 203 Mo. 628, 102 S. W. 480; State v. Koslowesky, 228 Mo. 351, 128 S. W. 741; State v. Smith, 40 Kan. 631, 20 Pac. 529; Banks v. State, 78 Ala. 14; Com. v. Pollard, 12 Met. 229.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. William W. Lemmond, Assistant Attorney, filed a brief for defendant in error:

A less definite description was held sufficient in Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 320, 325, 40 L. ed. 441, 442, 443, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, where the indictment specified "and inquiry then pending before and within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions of the United States at Washington, in the District of Columbia;" and a similar situation in principle was ruled in Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40, 40 L. ed. 606, 607, 609, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 251; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. ed. 390, 393, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325, also (pointing out that a bill of particulars could have been had); Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 468, 39 L. ed. 494, 496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 452, 39 L. ed. 481, 490, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 64, 43 L. ed. 890, 897, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 574; United States v. Thompson, 189 Fed. 839. See also United States v. Howard, 132 Fed. 359; United States v. Ammerman, 176 Fed. 637; Com. v. McCarty, 152 Mass. 577, 26 N. E. 140; Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. § 1304; 30 Cyc. p. 1435.

Indeed, the specification of the identity of the defendant and the precise nature of his offense are normally the end, and not the beginning, of grand jury proceedings.

Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 61, 65, 50 L. ed. 652, 660, 661, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

The objections, even if originally valid, would not survive verdict.

Holmgren v. United States, 217 U. S. 509, 523, 54 L. ed. 861, 867, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588, 19 Ann. Cas. 778; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 411, 39 L. ed. 1033, 1034, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951; Serra v. Mortiga, 204 U. S. 470, 475, note, 51 L. ed. 571, 574, note, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Grey v. United States, 96 C. C. A. 415, 172 Fed. 101; Hardesty v. United States, 93 C. C. A. 417, 168 Fed. 25; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40 L. ed. 606, 607, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 251; Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 324, 325, 40 L. ed. 441, 443, 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, upon a conviction and sentence for subornation of perjury, in violation of § 5393, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3654), prosecutes this writ of error upon the theory that a question of constitutional right was involved, arising upon a claim made in the court below that the indictment was repugnant to the 6th Amendment to the Constitution. On the assumption that there was jurisdiction to entertain the writ, counsel also in argument assailed as erroneous certain rulings of the trial court "admitting evidence and instructions given and refused in the course of the trial."

The indictment consisted of two counts, —the first charging the subornation of one George W. Hawk, and the second the subornation of one Clyde Brown, to commit perjury in giving the testimony before a Federal grand jury.

181] *As, however, on the trial, the government elected to rely upon the charge of the subornation of Hawk, we are concerned alone with the first count. The sufficiency of this count was assailed by demurrer, it being alleged "that the said count of said indictment and the matters and facts therein contained, in manner and form as the same are stated, are not sufficient in law, and are not sufficient to constitute a crime, and are not direct and certain." The protection of the Constitution was not, however, invoked until after conviction, when a motion to arrest judgment was made, "based upon the ground that the indictment in this case does not charge a crime, and is insufficient, and does not sufficiently describe the offense. 'And does not inform the defendant of the nature and cause of the accusation' against him, and is in violation of and insufficient under the 6th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The portions of the indictment which relate to the particular matter which was under investigation before the grand jury, or which refer to the materiality of the alleged testimony, and which it is claimed exhibit the repugnancy of the indictment to the 6th Amendment, are contained in the excerpt, which is in the margin,† the italics being *those of counsel, who[182 assert that the italicized portion "is the portion bearing upon the question."

It is urged that the indictment did not sufficiently set *forth "the nature and[183 cause of the accusation" within the meaning of the 6th Amendment, because it did not "set forth in some definite way the matter or thing which was under investigation at the particular time, so that the defendant may know as to what particular controversy the alleged false testimony is claimed to be material, and how to meet the allegation of materiality." It is claimed "that the indictment, in order to be sufficient, should have stated the particular matter which was being investigated by the grand jury at the time, and to which it was claimed the alleged false testimony was material;" and that if the alleged false testimony concerning Hawk's final proof upon his land "became material collaterally in some other later matter, of which the grand jury did have jurisdiction, . . . the collateral matter should have been set forth, and the indictment should have alleged that it was material in relation to that matter, so that the defendant could have an opportunity to intelligently defend as to the materiality of the alleged evidence, as well as to other elements of the offense."

Reduced to their final analysis the contentions but assert that the indictment did not apprise the accused of the crime charged with such reasonable certainty that he could make his defense and be protected after judgment against another prosecution for the same offense. We are of opinion, however, that the principles settled by many prior adjudications of this court are so controlling as to foreclose discussion of the matter.

The description, in the indictment, of the proceeding in which the perjury was committed, is as follows:

" . . . Sitting as a grand jury . . . and, among other matters, inquiring into certain criminal violations of the laws of the said United States relating to the public lands and the disposal of the same, and the unlawful fencing thereof, which had then lately before been committed within the said district."

*That this description adequately[184 advised the defendant as to the identity of the proceeding in which the perjury was committed is settled by the following authorities: Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 320, 40 L. ed. 441, 442, 16 Sup.

†"That Hamilton H. Hendricks, late of the county of Wheeler, in the said district, on the 15th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1905, at and within the said county of Wheeler, in the said district, unlawfully did wilfully and corruptly suborn, instigate, and procure one George W. Hawk to appear in person before them, the said

Ct. Rep. 288; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 34, 40, 40 L. ed. 606, 607, 609, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 251; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 192, 39 L. ed. 390, 393, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 464, 468, 39 L. ed. 494, 496, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 338; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 452, 39 L. ed. 481, 490, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; grand jurors, then and from thence hitherto sitting at the city of Portland, in the said district, as a grand jury of the circuit court of the said United States for the said district, and, amongst other matters, inquiring into certain criminal violations of the laws of the said United States relating to the public lands and the disposal of the same, and the unlawful fencing thereof, which had then lately before been committed within the said district, and to take his oath before the said grand jury, and upon his oath so taken to testify, depose, and swear before the said grand jury in substance and to the effect that when he, the said George W. Hawk, made his application dated October 19, 1898, and filed in the land office of the said United States at The Dalles, Oregon, on October 21, 1898, to enter certain public lands known and described as the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 2, the east half of the northeast quarter of section 11, and the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 12, in township 7 south and range 22 east, reference being had to the Willamette meridian and base line, as a homestead, under the laws of the said United States concerning homesteads, the same was honestly and in good faith made for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, and not for the benefit of any other person, persons, or corporation; that he, the said George W. Hawk, was not acting as agent of any person, corporation, or syndicate in making such entry, nor in collusion with any person, corporation, or syndicate to give them the benefit of the land so entered, or any part thereof, or the timber thereon; that he was not applying to enter the said lands for the purpose of speculation, but in good faith, and to obtain a home for himself; that he had not made, and would not make, any agreement or contract with any person or persons, corporation or syndicate, by which the title which he should acquire from the said United States in the said lands would inure to the benefit of any person except himself, and that he himself paid the fees required by law to be paid upon the filing of such application; that when he, the said George W. Hawk, on the 2d day of March, in the year 1900, subscribed and swore to his affidavit and testimony of final proof of settlement upon and cultivation of the said lands, he had theretofore, to wit, in the month of April, 1899, commenced his residence on the said lands, and had not sold, conveyed, or mortgaged any portion of the said lands; and thereupon the said George W. Hawk, in consequence and by means of the said wilful and corrupt subornation, instigation, and procurement of the said Hamilton H. Hendricks, afterwards, to wit, on the 23d day of January, in the year 1905, in the said district, did appear in person before the said grand jury, at Portland aforesaid, and then and there was in due manner sworn by the foreman thereof, and then and there took his, the said George W. Hawk's, oath before the said grand jury that he would testify truly, and true answers make to all questions which should be put to him, before the said grand jury; the said grand jury then and there being a tribunal having due and competent authority to administer the said oath to the said George W. Hawk in that behalf, and the matter in which he was so sworn and took his oath as last aforesaid, being then and there a case in which a law of the United States then authorized an oath to be administered; and it then and there, at and upon the taking of the said oath by the said George W. Hawk before the said grand jury as aforesaid, became and was a material question whether, when he so made and filed his said application to enter the said lands as a homestead as aforesaid, the same was honestly and in good faith made for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, and whether it was made for the benefit of any other person, persons, or corporation, and whether he, the said George W. Hawk, was acting as agent of any person, corporation, or syndicate in making such entry, and whether, in making his said entry, he was in collusion with any person, corporation, or syndicate to give them the benefit of the land so entered, or any part thereof, or the timber thereon, and whether he was not applying to enter the said lands for the purpose of speculation, rather than in good faith to obtain a home for himself, and whether he had not made, and would not make, an agreement or contract with some person or persons, corporation or syndicate, by which the title which he should acquire from the said United States in the said lands would inure to the benefit of some person except himself, and whether he, the said George W. Hawk, himself paid the fees aforesaid; and whether, when he, the said George W. Hawk, so subscribed and swore to his said affidavit and testimony of final proof of settlement upon and cultivation of the said lands as aforesaid, he had, in the month of April, 1899, or at any time, commenced his residence on the said lands, and whether he had sold, conveyed, or mortgaged any portion of the said lands, and whether he himself paid the fees required by law to be paid upon the making of such final proof."

and Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 64, 43 L. ed. 890, 897, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 330. A less definite description was held sufficient in the Markham Case, where the indictment specified "an inquiry then pending before and within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions of the United States, at Washington, in the District of Columbia." As the specification of the identity of a defendant and the precise nature of his offense is normally the end, and not the beginning, of grand jury proceedings (Hale v. Kenkel, 201 U. S. 43, 61, 65, 50 L. ed. 652, 660, 661, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370), and the very object of the proceeding may have been to determine the identity of the criminal, it was not essential that the proceedings should state the name of a specified defendant under investigation.

That the indictment was not wanting in definiteness because therein it was in effect simply alleged that before the grand jury, after Hawk had been sworn, the truth of the recited matters concerning which it was subsequently alleged Hawk testified falsely, "became and was a material question," and it was not specified in just what evidentiary way the perjured testimony became material, is settled by the Markham Case (160 U. S. 324, 325, 40 L. ed. 443, 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288), where a similar point was directly held to be without merit.

As, in view of prior decisions, the contention based upon the 6th Amendment was manifestly frivolous, it results that the writ of error must be dismissed.

Writ of error dismissed.

185]*ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PATRICK C. TREMBLAY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 185-190.)

Error to state court—Federal question—effect of Canadian judgment.

The contention that full and proper faith and credit were not given to a judgment of a Canadian court by a decision of a state court does not involve a Federal question

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts which will support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1968-2003, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 166.]

Argued and submitted January 26, 1912.
Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Maine to review a judgment granting only a portion of the relief sought by an insurance company in a proceeding for review of an action at law in which judgment had been recovered for the full amount due upon a policy of life insurance. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ralph W. Crockett submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Henry W. Oakes argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Frye White, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts are these: At Quebec, Canada, in 1885, the plaintiff in error issued its policy of insurance for $2,000 upon the life of Jean O. Tremblay, a resident of Canada, his wife being named as the beneficiary. In 1891 Tremblay assigned the policy as collateral security to J. B. Cloutier, of Quebec. Ten years later Mr. and Mrs. Tremblay assigned the policy to their son, Patrick F. Tremblay, subject to the claim of Cloutier. Soon after this last assignment, Jean O. Tremblay died, and both assignees made claim upon the insurance company. The contending claimants not being able to agree as to the amount of the claim of Cloutier, the insurance company, as authorized by the statutes of Canada, paid the amount of the policy to the Provincial Treasurer of Quebec. Cloutier then brought suit upon the policy, making the heirs, widow and son of the insured, parties defendant. None of the defendants appeared; judgment by default was entered in favor of Cloutier, and the money was paid over to him by the Provincial Treasurer. During the pendency of Cloutier's suit, however, and before the latter obtained his judgment, Patrick F. Tremblay sued the insurcan be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On review of decisions of state courts presenting the question of full faith and credit—see note to Allen v. Alleghany Co. 49 L. ed. U. S. 551.

ance company in a court of the state of Maine, and recovered judgment for the full amount due upon the policy. 97 Me. 547, 94 Am. St. Rep. 521, 55 Atl. 509. The insurance company then unsuccessfully attempted, by a suit in equity, to stay the collection of the judgment in the action at law. 101 Me. 585, 65 Atl. 22. Presumably in consequence of an intimation of the court when dismissing the equity cause, the insurance company began this proceeding for a review of the action at law, and the same culminated in a judgment in favor of the insurance company against Tremblay for $818.33 and interest, the sum found to be due to Cloutier, as equitable assignee of the policy, for his advances to the original holder of the policy, thereby operating a set-off of the amount against Tremblay's judgment upon the policy. This writ of error was then allowed by the chief justice of the supreme judicial court of Maine.

The assignments of error are three in number, but they merely allege in various forms the commission of error by the state court, sitting as a court of law, in not holding as requested, that the judgment obtained upon the policy by Cloutier, which had been pleaded in bar by the insurance company, was a bar to the action upon the policy brought by Patrick F. Tremblay, thereby denying "full and proper faith and credit" to the Cloutier judgment.

Plainly the writ of error was improvidently allowed. The authority conferred by Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, to review a final judgment or decree in any suit in the highest court of a state, in which 190] a decision in the suit could be had, *is limited to cases "where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against their validity; or where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of their validity; or where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the Constitution, or any treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or immunity, specially set up or claimed, by either party, under such Constitution, treaty, statute, commission, or authority." The 1st section of article 4 of the Constitution confers the right to have full faith and credit "given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings in every other state." No such right, privilege, or immunity, however, is 56 L. ed.

conferred by the Constitution or by any statute of the United States in respect to the judgments of foreign states or nations, and we are referred to no treaty relative to such a right.

Neither expressly nor by necessary intendment was there asserted in the state court during the course of the litigation in question any claim on behalf of the insurance company of the possession of a right, etc., protected by the Constitution of the United States. Since, therefore, entirely aside from all question as to the correctness of the judgment below rendered, we are without authority to review the decision made by the state court, it results that the writ of error must be, and it is, dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Writ of error dismissed.

*UNITED STATES, Petitioner. [191
v.

LEOPOLD BARUCH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 191-200.)

Duties — on cotton featherstitch braid.

Narrow woven cotton strips bearing "featherstitch" or "herringbone" ornamentation, used largely for binding seams, but commercially known as "featherstitch braids" at and prior to the enactment of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 181, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1662), which shifted braids from the lower duty of the notions schedule, ¶ 320, to the higher duty of the trimmings schedule, ¶ 339, without any change of phraseology to indicate that it was the purpose to depart from the settled commercial meaning of the word "braids," must be deemed dutiable at 60 per cent under the trimmings schedule, as cotton braids, and not at 45 per cent under the notions schedule, as "bindings" or as "tapes,"—especially in view of the settled administrative construction to such effect.

[Duties on particular articles, see Duties, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 190.]

Argued November 13 and 14, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, affirming the decision of the board of general appraisers, which sustained the decision of the collector, classifying cotton featherstitch braids under the trimmings schedule. Decree of Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and decree of Circuit Court affirmed.

NOTE.—On the interpretation of commercial and trade terms in tariff laws—see note to Dennison Mfg. Co. v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 545.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 40, 172 Fed. 342.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Wemple argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles E. McNabb, Assistant Attorney, filed a brief for petitioner:

The history of litigation and of legislation supports the government's contention that these articles are dutiable as "braids."

Re Dicckerhoff, 54 Fed. 161; Steinhardt v. United States, 121 Fed. 442; United States v. Hague, T. D. 25,466, 67 C. C. A. 680, 134 Fed. 1022; Vom Baur v. United States, 141 Fed. 439, T. D. 27,397; Marshall Field & Co. v. United States, T. D. 29,548, 30,299.

If words used in a statute imposing duties on imports had at the time of its passage a well-known signification in our trade and commerce, differing from their ordinary meaning, the commercial designation must prevail unless Congress has clearly manifested a contrary intention; and it is only when no commercial usage is called for or proved that the common meaning is to be adopted.

Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. 430, 438, 439, 6 L. ed. 128-130; Curtis v. Martin, 3 How. 106, 109, 110, 11 L. ed. 516, 517; Arthur v. Morrison, 96 U. S. 108, 111, 112, 24 L. ed. 764-766; Arthur v. Butterfield (Miller v. Butterfield) 125 U. S. 70, 75, 31 L. ed. 643, 645, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Robertson v. Salomon, 130 U. S. 412, 415, 32 L. ed. 995, 996, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Sonn v. Magone, 159 U. S. 417, 422, 40 L. ed. 203, 204, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 471, 472, 35 L. ed. 821-823, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Hedden v. Richard, 149 U. S. 346, 348, 349, 37 L. ed. 763, 764, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; Cadwalader v. Zeh, 151 U. S. 171, 176, 38 L. ed. 115, 117, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; De Jonge v. Magone, 159 U. S. 562, 569, 40 L. ed. 260, 263, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Goat & Sheepskin Import. Co. v. United States, 206 U. S. 194, 202, 203, 51 L. ed. 1022, 1025, 1026, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

A descriptive term may have a commercial meaning which differs from the ordinary meaning, and the former must govern.

Arthur v. Cumming, 91 U. S. 362, 363, 23 L. ed. 438, 439; Pickhardt v. Merritt, 132 U. S. 252, 255-257, 33 L. ed. 353, 355, 356, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Bogle v. Magone, 152 U. S. 623, 627, 38 L. ed. 574, 575, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Cadwalader v. Zeh, 151 U. S. 171, 38 L. ed. 115, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; United States v. Nordlinger, 58 C. C. A. 438, 121 Fed. 690; United States v. Klumpp, 169 U. S. 209, 212, 216, 42 L. ed. 720-722, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Patton v. United States, 159 U. S. 500, 510, 40 L. ed. 233, 237, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Arthur v. Davies, 96 U. S. 135, 136, 24 L. ed. 810.

Commercial designation fixes the dutiable character of the articles notwithstanding the phrase, "not elsewhere specially provided for."

Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112, 118, 24 L. ed. 766, 768; United States v. Schwarz, 140 Fed. 302; Thomas v. Schwarz, 71 C. C. A. 401, 140 Fed. 989.

The acceptance of a definition in one standard dictionary to the exclusion of others is decisively disapproved in Koechl v. United States, 28 C. C. A. 458, 55 U. S. App. 404, 84 Fed. 448.

The action of the collector is presumptively correct. The burden is upon the protesting importers to establish their contention.

Arthur v. Unkart, 96 U. S. 118, 122, 24 L. ed. 768, 769; Earnshaw v. Cadwalader, 145 U. S. 247, 262, 36 L. ed. 693, 698, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Erhardt v. Schroeder, 155 U. S. 124, 130, 39 L. ed. 94, 96, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; United States v. Ranledd, 172 U. S. 133, 146, 43 L. ed. 393, 398, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

The mode of manufacture will not avail in determining dutiable classification as against a commercial usage.

Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 701, 705, 26 L. ed. 896, 898, 899; Chew Hing Lung v. Wise, 176 U. S. 156, 160, 162, 44 L. ed. 412, 414, 415, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 320; Vom Baur v. United States, 141 Fed. 439, T. D. 27,397; Field's Appeal, 50 Fed. 908, 4 C. C. A. 371, 9 U. S. App. 460, 54 Fed. 367; United States v. Wright, T. D. 13,707, 13,974; Wolff v. United States, 116 Fed. 1023; Re Dicckerhoff, 54 Fed. 161.

The concurring decisions of two courts upon a question of fact will be followed unless wholly unwarranted. A conflict in the testimony is insufficient ground for disturbing such finding.

Dravo v. Fabel, 132 U. S. 487, 490, 33 L. ed. 421, 422, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 198, 42 L. ed. 711, 715, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 14, 42 L. ed. 639, 643, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Beyer v. Le Fevre, 186 U. S. 114, 119, 46 L. ed. 1080, 1082, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; The Carib Prince, 170 U. S. 655, 658, 42 L. ed. 1181, 1185, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; Shappirio v. Goldberg, 192 U. S. 232, 240, 48 L. ed. 419, 424, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; The Iroquois, 194 U. S. 240, 247, 48 L. ed. 955, 959, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 104 U. S. 401, 412, 48 L. ed. 1039, 1045, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; United States v. Clark, 200 U. S. 601, 608, 50 L. ed. 613, 616, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340.

This doctrine of concurrence is given more weight by the finding of fact in the first instance by the board of general appraisers, whose findings, when supported by evidence, will not be disturbed on appeal.

Re Van Blankensteyn, 5 C. C. A. 579, 11 U. S. App. 687, 56 Fed. 475; Apgar v. United States, 24 C. C. A. 113, 46 U. S. App. 625, 78 Fed. 332, Vandiver v. United States, 84 C. C. A. 522, 156 Fed. 961; United States v. Reibe, 1 Ct. Customs Appeals, 19, 20; Carson v. United States, 2 Ct. of Customs Appeals—.

Braids do not have to be trimmings to come within ¶ 339 of the act of 1897. The law reads "embroideries and all trimmings, including braids . . .," but the word "including" before "braids" in that paragraph was used not by way of specification, but by way of addition.

Hiller v. United States, 45 C. C. A. 229, 106 Fed. 74.

The imported articles cannot be followed into trade to ascertain their use before the assessment of duties. Classification must be determined upon an examination of the merchandise in its condition at the time of importation, when duty attaches.

Worthington v. Robbins, 139 U. S. 337, 341, 35 L. ed. 181, 182, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Loeb v. United States, 80 C. C. A. 211, 150 Fed. 328.

The test is the name of the articles. They cannot be both braids and bindings for tariff purposes.

Arthur v. Stephani, 96 U. S. 125, 127, 128, 24 L. ed. 771, 772; Robertson v. Rosenthal, 132 U. S. 460, 464, 33 L. ed. 392, 393, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Seeberger v. Cahn, 137 U. S. 95, 98, 34 L. ed. 599, 600, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

To classify the braids under ¶ 320, they must be shown by proof to be definitely, uniformly, and generally designated and known in commerce as bindings.

Seeberger v. Schlesinger, 152 U. S. 581, 585, 38 L. ed. 560, 561, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Maddock v. Magone, 152 U. S. 368, 371, 38 L. ed. 482, 483, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588; Sonn v. Magone, 159 U. S. 417, 422, 40 L. ed. 203, 204, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

An eo nomine provision takes precedence of a mere descriptive term, although the latter may be sufficiently broad to embrace the article.

Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112, 24 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

766; Robertson v. Glendenning, 132 U. S. 158, 159, 33 L. ed. 298, 299, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

Mr. Wade H. Ellis argued the cause, and, with Mr. John A. Kratz, Jr., filed a brief for respondent:

In the present case the question is not "What is the most general commercial name of these goods?" but "was this article in the trade and commerce of this country when Congress legislated in 1897, a variety of binding?"

De Jonge v. Magone, 159 U. S. 562, 40 L. ed. 260, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Drew v. Grinnell, 115 U. S. 477, 29 L. ed. 453, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; Lowenthal v. United States, 1 Ct. Customs Appeals T. D. 31,592.

The ordinary meaning of the word "bindings," as applied by the circuit court of appeals in this case, is presumed to be the same as the commercial meaning, unless the contrary is shown.

Schmieder v. Barney, 113 U. S. 645, 647, 28 L. ed. 1130, 1131, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

It is not the usage of the retail trade which brings a provision within the rule of commercial designation, but it is the understanding of that trade which buys and sells at wholesale.

Morrison v. Miller, 37 Fed. 82; Stewart, H. & M. Co. v. United States, 51 C. C. A. 558, 113 Fed. 928.

The commercial meaning of a term in a tariff law must be definite, uniform, and general, and not partial, local, or personal.

Maddock v. Magone, 152 U. S. 368, 371, 38 L. ed. 482, 483, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588; Berbecker v. Robertson, 152 U. S. 373, 376, 38 L. ed. 484, 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Sonn v. Magone, 159 U. S. 417, 421, 40 L. ed. 203, 204, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Patton v. United States, 159 U. S. 500, 506, 40 L. ed. 233, 236, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89.

The language in ¶ 339 is descriptive, and not commercial. The doctrine of commercial designation, therefore, in the present instance, is not of primary importance.

Barber v. Schell (Cochran v. Schell) 107 U. S. 617, 27 L. ed. 490, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; United States v. Klumpp, 169 U. S. 209, 216, 42 L. ed. 720, 722, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Schiff v. United States, 39 C. C. A. 652, 99 Fed. 555.

Congress, in transferring the unqualified provisions for "braids" from the notions paragraph (263) of the act of 1894 to the trimmings paragraph (339) of the act of 1897, making it read "trimmings, including braids," and further restricting its operation by adding the clause "not elsewhere specially provided for," and at the same time inserting a provision for the first time in tariff legislation for "bindings . . . of cotton" without words of qualification or restriction, clearly expressed its intention to limit the high tax of 60 per cent to such braids as were not bindings.

Komada v. United States, 215 U. S. 392, 54 L. ed. 249, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Goldenberg Bros. v. United States, 64 C. C. A. 442, 130 Fed. 108; Re Johnson, 56 Fed. 822; H. B. Claffin Co. v. United States, 78 Fed. 805; Re John Hope & Sons Engraving & Mfg. Co. 100 Fed. 286.

A provision which is absolute and exclusive in its phraseology is of a superior governing force to one qualified by the phrase "not elsewhere specifically provided for."

Barber v. Schell (Cochran v. Schell) 107 U. S. 617, 620, 27 L. ed. 490, 492, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; Hartranft v. Meyer, 135 U. S. 237, 34 L. ed. 110, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 751; Arthur v. Vietor (Miller v. Vietor) 127 U. S. 572, 32 L. ed. 201, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1225.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This case concerns the proper classification of merchandise imported in 1899, and 192]subsequent years, by the *respondent, at the port of New York, invoiced as "cotton featherstitch braids." The goods consisted of articles ranging variously from about one fourth to one half of an inch in width, loom woven, of white or colored threads throughout, or of mixed white and variously colored threads of cotton or other vegetable fiber, and ornamented with raised figures in various designs, some of which had plain and others scalloped or looped edges. They were officially appraised as "cotton braids—60 per centum;" and were accordingly classified by the collector as "braids" under paragraph 339 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, generally referred to as the "trimmings" schedule, the pertinent provision of which is as follows: "Embroideries and all trimmings, including braids, edgings, insertings, flouncings, galloons, gorings, and bands, . . . composed wholly or in chief value of flax, cotton, or other vegetable fiber, and not elsewhere specially provided for in this act." [30 Stat at L. 181, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1662.]

Asserting that the articles should not have been assessed at 60 per cent, but were dutiable at the rate of 45 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 320 of said act, usually styled the "notions" schedule, as "bindings" or as "tapes . . . made of cotton or other vegetable fiber," the importers duly protested, and the question of the proper classification was considered by the board of general appraisers. That body, on July 24, 1906, sustained the decision of the collector, upon the authority of a ruling made in the case of Straus Brothers & Company, wherein the board but acted upon the evidence taken in and applied the ruling made in what is known as the Vom Baur Case. The importers carried the case to the circuit court, and in that court additional evidence was introduced by both parties. Upon such additional evidence and the evidence taken before the board, the decision of the board was affirmed on November 23, 1907. 159 Fed. 294. On appeal, however, the circuit court of appeals *held the merchandise [193 dutiable at 45 per cent ad valorem as "binding," under paragraph 320, and the decision of the circuit court was reversed. 97 C. C. A. 40, 172 Fed. 342. This writ of certiorari was then allowed.

Under the tariff acts of 1890 [26 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 1244], and 1894 [28 Stat. at L. 509, chap. 349], braids were enumerated in the "notions" schedule, which carried a lower rate of duty than articles in the "trimmings" schedule.

Re Dieckerhoff, 54 Fed. 161, involved a review of the decision of the board of general appraisers (G. A. 1301) in the matter of an importation, in 1891, of articles similar to those here in question, dutiable under the tariff act of 1890. The controversy was whether the goods should have been assessed at the rate of 60 per cent ad valorem as cotton trimmings, under the "trimmings" schedule, paragraph 373 of the tariff act of 1890, or assessed as cotton braids at 35 cents per pound, under the "notions" schedule of the same act. The government, insisting on the higher duty, contended that the articles should be classified as cotton trimmings, and were not braids, because to be such they must be braided. The importers, however, contending for the lower duty, urged that the goods were commonly known as featherstitch braids, and should be classified as braids, and thus be brought under the notion schedule bearing the lower duty. The court overruled the contention of the government, accepted the commercial designation, and sustained the ruling of the board of general appraisers that the goods were braids, and dutiable as such. The government acquiesced in this decision. The administrative rule, therefore, under the tariff act of 1890, was to classify the articles in question as braids embraced within the notions schedule, and thereby cause them to carry a lower duty than they would have carried had they been embraced in the trimmings schedule; and under the act of 1894 the *same practice was pur-[194 sued. When, by the act of 1897, upon which this case depends, braids were taken out of the notions schedule carrying a lower duty, and put in the trimmings schedule, which carried the higher, the articles continued to be classed as braids, and consequently, because of the change in the law, were assessed for a higher duty. And this administrative construction was applied under the act of 1897 for a considerable number of years. See G. A. 4326 (T. D. 20,515), decided January 3, 1899, and G. A. 4929 (T. D. 23,073), decided May 27, 1901.

When the latter decision was rendered (May 27, 1901), however, the importer appealed from the ruling, and the circuit court for the southern district of New York, in Steinhardt v. United States, 121 Fed. 442, reversed the decision of the board of general appraisers, and held that the articles were dutiable as bindings under the notions schedule, and not as braids under the trimmings schedule. The reasoning was this,—the court said: "The articles in question appear to be narrow woven tapes of cotton, used largely for covering the seams of underwear and waists. The Standard Dictionary gives one definition of a 'braid' as 'a narrow, flat tape or woven strip for binding the edges of fabrics or for ornamenting them.' If these articles are braids within this or a like definition, they are also bindings or tapes, within paragraph 320." Thus, finding the articles to be within the dictionary definition of both braids and bindings, as the trimmings schedule in which braids were embraced, paragraph 339 contained a general qualification that articles therein named should be liable to the duty therein specified when "not elsewhere specially provided for in this act," the court held that as the braids in question were within the dictionary definition of bindings, they were therefore otherwise provided for, and should be classed within the notion schedule, paragraph 320, and carry the lower duty. The government did not appeal from 195] this decision, under the *instructions of the Attorney General. Such instructions, however, expressly directed that in all future importations the decision should not be applied, but that duty should be assessed according to the prior practice, so that a test case might be made. T. D. 24,269. It is persuasively indicated by what we shall hereafter state, that this course was followed, because the record in the Steinhardt Case did not contain what was deemed to be adequate proof as to the accepted commercial designation of the articles to afford a proper basis for testing the matter in that case,—a deficiency which it may well be surmised arose from the belief on the part of the government, in making up that case, that the settled administrative practice, based upon the previous judicial construction, would not be departed from.

The classification again came under consideration in what is known as the Vom Baur Case, and much testimony was taken before the board "for the purpose of showing that the articles were commercially known as braids, and were so commercially known at and prior to the passage of the tariff act of 1897, and therefore dutiable under paragraph 339." In an exhaustive review of the evidence in that case, the board held that the testimony established that there had been no change in the commercial designation of the articles since 1892, at which time, as heretofore stated, the goods were commercially known as "featherstitch braids," and such had been judicially determined to be the case by the circuit court in the Dieckerhoff Case, supra. The board pointed out that in the case before it, the importers had taken a position the opposite to that which had been assumed by the importers in the Dieckerhoff Case, since in that case, for the purpose of obtaining the lower duty under the act of 1890, they had insisted that the articles were commercially known as braids, and were dutiable as such; and in the case under consideration, the contention was that there was no general and definite *trade designation of the articles as[196 braids, since they were known as bindings and tapes, as well as by the name of featherstitch braids, and that they were in fact tapes, having been produced by weaving instead of by braiding.

The following questions were considered by the board in connection with an extended review of the testimony:

"First. Were these goods known in the trade and commerce of this country at and immediately prior to July 24, 1897, as 'braids'?"

"Second. If the goods were commercially known as 'braids' at and immediately prior to July 24, 1897, are they dutiable under paragraph 339?"

On the record before it it was found "as matter of fact:"

1. That the goods in question were generally known in the wholesale trade of the United States at and prior to July 24, 1897, as "featherstitch braids."

2. That the term "featherstitch braids" was the only general commercial name under which the goods were known in the trade and commerce of this country at and immediately prior to July 24, 1897, and that the terms "seam bindings," "finishing tapes," and others are subordinate names which have not been generally employed to designate these goods.

The board concluded its opinion as follows:

"In view of these findings, we think the case is distinguished from the Steinhardt Case, supra. That case only decided that if the articles were braids within the lexicographical definitions, they were also bindings or tapes, and were therefore more specifically provided for in paragraph 320. There was no satisfactory testimony in the case as to the commercial designation of the articles, whereas it has now been shown by competent testimony that they are generally known in the commerce of this country as 'braids,' and not as 'tapes' or 'bindings.' The circuit court of appeals in Hiller v. United States, 45 C. C. A. 229, 106 Fed. 73, decided that cotton braids of 197]all *classes are included within the scope of paragraph 339. The decision of the court is in part as follows: 'A comparison of the provisions of the cotton schedules in the acts of 1894 and 1897 in regard to the classification of braids is, however, quite significant of the intent of Congress. Paragraph 263 of the act of 1894, which corresponds to paragraph 320 of the act of 1897, imposed a duty of 45 per cent upon cords, braids, etc., made of cotton, but braids are omitted in paragraph 320 of the new act, which imposes the same duty. Paragraph 276 of the act of 1894, which corresponded to paragraph 329 of the new act, omitted braids, which was inserted in paragraph 339,—the one under consideration. A comparison of the two acts indicates that Congress intentionally took braids out of the 45 per cent paragraph, where it had been in 1894, and put the article into a paragraph imposing the higher rate of duty, and that it intended to impose the rate upon the articles, irrespective of the use to which they might be applied.

"Under this decision, featherstitch braids, which were held in the Dieckerhoff Case to be dutiable as 'braids' under the act of 1890, and which we have found were commercially known as 'braids' at the time of the passage of the act of July 24, 1897, are, in our opinion, dutiable as assessed under the provision of paragraph 339 of the act of July 24, 1897."

On the appeal of the importers, the decision was affirmed, "on the opinion of the board," which is set out verbatim in the report of the case. Vom Baur v. United States, 141 Fed. 439. An appeal was taken from the decision, but it was subsequently dismissed without prejudice.

As already stated, the board of general appraisers, in the case at bar, rested their decision upon the evidence taken and its ruling in the Vom Baur Case. As also stated, that evidence was supplemented in the circuit *court by evidence taken on[198 behalf of both parties to the controversy. Such further testimony, it was observed by the circuit court, did not tend to weaken the conclusion reached by the board, "that these goods were known generally in the trade as featherstitch braids prior to 1897," but "in truth it serves to strengthen it."

In the opinion of the circuit court of appeals, reversing the decision of the circuit court, the court referred to the "merchandise in question" as consisting "of narrow woven strips bearing 'featherstitch' or 'heringbone' ornamentation," and substantially conceded that the circuit court and board of appraisers correctly decided "that prior to 1897 it was generally commercially designated as 'featherstitch braid.'" Accepting this commercial designation, however, and evidently relying upon the reasoning of the opinion in the Steinhardt Case, it was in effect held that the braids in question were not used "for ornamental purposes solely," but, "being used for the purpose of binding seams, are, in our opinion, the kind of braids properly called bindings." Referring to paragraph 320 of the act of 1897 as the "notions" paragraph, and paragraph 339 as the "trimmings" paragraph, the court then said:

"And we think that it may fairly be assumed that when Congress inserted the word 'bindings' in the 'notions' paragraph, and transferred the word 'braid' to the 'trimmings' paragraph, with words of qualification, it intended to embrace in the latter paragraph only such braids as were not bindings.

"If the articles are bindings as well as braids, the provision in the 'notions' paragraph is the more specific. Bindings are embraced without the words of restriction or qualification. These articles as bindings are necessarily included, and they are specially provided for elsewhere than in paragraph 339."

There is no substantial dispute as to the correctness of the findings of the board of general appraisers that *the goods[199 in question were generally known in the wholesale trade of the United States at and prior to July 24, 1897, as "featherstitch braids," and at such period that designation "was the only general commercial name under which the goods were known in the trade and commerce of this country." That the tariff act of 1897 was drafted and was adopted by Congress in the light of the then fixed practice of the government to assess such articles as "braids," irrespective of the subsidiary names which may have been applied by some who used the articles, or without regard to some of the special uses of which they were susceptible of being put, is not open to reasonable contention. This being the case, we are unable to conclude that Congress, knowing the commercial as well as the tariff designation of the articles, re-employed the term "braids" in the act of 1897, and yet intended that some of the articles embraced within the commercial designation should be taken out of that designation and treated, for the purpose of assessment of duty, as being that which they were not, because they possessed features of utility as well as ornamentation.

When the contentions which had arisen concerning the dutiable character of the articles under the act of 1890 are taken into view, and the claims there made by the importers as to their nature and character, for the purpose of subjecting them to a lower duty, are borne in mind, we think the shifting of braids from the lower duty of the notions schedule to the higher duty of the trimmings schedule, without any change of phraseology to indicate that it was the purpose to depart from the settled commercial meaning of the word "braids," plainly manifested the purpose of Congress to accept that designation and make it applicable, and hence to subject the articles, under their accepted designation, to the higher duty placed upon the articles embraced in the schedule to which braids were transferred. Any other view 200] would render *necessary the conclusion that it was the intention of Congress in using the word "braids" not to adhere to the then well-settled commercial and tariff meaning of the term, but to use the word in a sense different from that which was accepted, for the purpose of renewing a conflict as to the proper meaning of the word, which had been flagrant under the prior act. While these conclusions need no reinforcement, their soundness is additionally and cogently sustained by the construction given to the act upon its adoption, and the consequent administrative enforcement of the same which prevailed without question for so considerable a time.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed, and that of the Circuit Court is affirmed; and the case is remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

56 L. ed.

RUTHER JACOBS, Lillie Jacobs, and E. D. Wilcox as Guardian of Ruther Jacobs, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

A. G. PRICHARD, Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 200-214.)

Statutes—executive construction.

1. The construction given by the Department of the Interior to the consents of Indian allottees, under the act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 612, chap. 209), to the sale and appraisal of that portion of the allotted land not required for their homes, as surviving the decease of those giving them, would control in case of ambiguity in the statute,—especially since the Secretary of the Interior is directed "to make the necessary regulations to carry out the purposes" of its enactment.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 256-258, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — consent to sale — effect of death.

2. The consents of the Puyallup Indian allottees and owners to the sale of such portion of the lands allotted to them under the treaty with the Omahas as was not required for their homes, when given and approved conformably to the act of March 3, 1893, must be deemed to survive their decease, in view of the provision of the act that such consents should make the commissioner appointed thereunder trustee to sell the lands and make deeds to the purchasers for the same, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, which deeds should operate as a complete conveyance of the land upon the full payment of the purchase money.

[Indian allotments, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 93.]

Submitted December 8, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of the County of Pierce, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to quiet title to land. Affirmed.

See same case below, 46 Wash. 562, 90 Pac. 922.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. H. Doolittle submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. E. D. Wilcox and Jesse Thomas were on the brief:

While the findings of the Department of the Interior, especially the Land Department and its various branches, are held to be binding on questions of fact, no such rule can be found as to questions of law on rulings made by officers of the departments of the government.

Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530-535, 24

L. ed. 848-851; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473-475, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420-424, 26 L. ed. 800-802.

The regulation of a department of the government is not, of course, to control the construction of an act of Congress when its meaning is plain.

Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 607, 32 L. ed. 269, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328.

When the government patented the land, the title in fee simple passed to the Indian, subject only to the restriction against alienation, which the government had the right to make.

Lykins v. McGrath, 184 U. S. 169, 46 L. ed. 485, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450; United States v. Kopp, 110 Fed. 160; Goudy v. Meath, 38 Wash. 129, 80 Pac. 295, affirmed in 203 U. S. 146, 51 L. ed. 130, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Wa-La-Note-Tke-Tynin v. Carter, 6 Idaho, 85, 53 Pac. 106; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

The so-called consent to sale of land in controversy is nothing more than a naked authority to sell and convey the land in the name of the principal, and could have been revoked at any time by the givers, and was revoked by death.

Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327, 86 Pac. 573; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 174, 5 L. ed. 589; Galt v. Galloway, 4 Pet. 332-342, 7 L. ed. 876-880; McClaskey v. Barr, 50 Fed. 712; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296, 11 Pac. 824; Staples v. Bradbury, 8 Me. 181, 23 Am. Dec. 494; Story, Agency, § 489.

Even if there had been a trust imposed upon the commissioner by the consent, it was revoked by the death of the patentee prior to its execution.

Harmon v. Smith, 38 Fed. 482; 4 Kent, Com. 310, and note; Gartland v. Dunn, 11 Ark. 720; Bradstreet v. Kinsella, 76 Mo. 63; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1000.

The Secretary of the Interior has no judicial power to adjudge a forfeiture, to decide questions of inheritance, or to divest the owner of his title without his knowledge or consent.

Richardville v. Thorp, 28 Fed. 52; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Mr. Stanton Warburton submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Overton G. Ellis and John D. Fletcher were on the brief:

Where a statute intrusted the carrying out of its own provisions to one of the executive departments of the government, the interpretation of the statute by such department will be followed by the courts unless there are most cogent reasons to the contrary.

Prichard v. Jacobs, 46 Wash. 570, 90 Pac. 922; Eells v. Ross, 12 C. C. A. 205, 29 U. S. App. 59, 64 Fed. 420; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760-764, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 206-210, 6 L. ed. 603-605; Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568-574, 28 L. ed. 1079-1081, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70-78, 53 L. ed. 92-97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 607-614, 32 L. ed. 269-271, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29-40, 8 L. ed. 308-312; Schell v. Fauché, 138 U. S. 562-573, 34 L. ed. 1040-1043, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States v. Cerecedo Hermanos y Compañía, 209 U. S. 337-339, 52 L. ed. 821, 822, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357-366, 33 L. ed. 363-367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; United States v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 98 U. S. 334-342, 25 L. ed. 198-201; United States v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265-272, 25 L. ed. 322-324; Hahn v. United States, 107 U. S. 402-406, 27 L. ed. 527-529, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374-383, 23 L. ed. 47-50; United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236-255, 31 L. ed. 389-396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236-254, 46 L. ed. 890-897, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615-622, 35 L. ed. 1134-1136, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52-59, 30 L. ed. 559-561, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch, 299-309, 2 L. ed. 115-118; McSorley v. Hill, 2 Wash. 651, 27 Pac. 552; Keane v. Brygger, 3 Wash. 351, 28 Pac. 653; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 474; State ex rel. Smith v. Ross, 42 Wash. 445, 85 Pac. 29; Blair v. Brown, 17 Wash. 570, 50 Pac. 483; Harrington v. Smith, 28 Wis. 68; Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light & Street R. Co. 36 Fla. 519, 29 L.R.A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44, 18 So. 446; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 9 Ariz. 383, 84 Pac. 516; Van Veen v. Graham County, 13 Ariz. 167, 108 Pac. 253.

Consent of the Secretary of the Interior to a conveyance by an Indian patentee whose patent prohibited alienation by him or his heirs without such consent may be given after the death of the Indian grantor, and when so given is retroactive in its effect, and relates back to the date of the conveyance, so as to cut off any claim of the heirs of such grantor to the land.

Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310-316, 36 L. ed. 716-719, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 43 L. ed.

601, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Lykins v. McCrath, 184 U. S. 169, 46 L. ed. 485, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450.

On the question of Indian lands and the government supervision over the same, see Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Starr v. Campbell, 208 U. S. 527, 52 L. ed. 602, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Error to the supreme court of Washington to review a decree of that court which affirmed a decree of the superior court of the county of Pierce, adjudging defendant in error, who was plaintiff in the trial court, to be the owner of the east half and the east half of the east half of the west half of the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 35, township 21 N. R. 3 east of the Willamette meridian, Pierce county, Washington, formerly in King county, Washington.

The land lies in the Puyallup Indian Reservation and was allotted or patented by the United States on January 30, 1886, to Charley Jacobs, the head of a family consisting of himself, Julia, Annie, Frank, and Oscar, all Puyallup Indians, the allotment or patent being subject to the stipulations and conditions contained in article 6 of the treaty of the United States with the Omaha Indians. [10 Stat. at L. 1043.] Plaintiffs in error were not named in the patent, they not then being born.

208] *Defendant in error claims title under a deed dated February 27, 1901, from C. A. Snowden, trustee and commissioner of Puyallup lands, appointed by the United States government under an act of Congress dated March 3, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 612, chap. 209], and an amendatory act passed June 7, 1897. [30 Stat. at L. 62, chap. 3.]

Plaintiffs in error claim title to an undivided one-third part of the lands as heirs of Charley and Julia Jacobs, deceased, and contend that the deed from Snowden is void as to them or as to the interest they would take as such heirs, for the reason that the Snowden sale and deed were after the death of Charley and Julia Jacobs.

Article 6 of the treaty of the United States with the Omaha Indians, to the conditions of which the patent to Charley Jacobs was made subject, empowered the President to cause allotments to be made from reservation lands to such Indians as were willing to avail themselves of the privilege, and who would locate on the same as permanent homes. The patent was to be issued upon the further condition that the assigned land should not "be aliened or leased for a longer term than two years," and "should be exempt from levy, sale, or forfeiture." Upon the formation of a state these restrictions could be removed by the legislature, but it was provided that they could not be removed without the consent of Congress. It was also provided that lands not necessary for assignment might be sold for the benefit of the Indians under such rules and regulations as might thereafter be prescribed by Congress or the President of the United States.

Under the act of March 3, 1893, the President was empowered to appoint a commission of three persons to select and appraise such portion of the allotted lands not required for homes of the Indian allottees. It was provided that if the Secretary of the Interior approved the selections and the appraisement, the lands selected should *be sold for the benefit of the allot- [209] tees, after due notice, at public auction, at no less than the appraised value.

It was the duty of the commission to superintend the sale of the lands, ascertain the true owners thereof, and have guardians appointed for minor heirs of deceased allottees, and make deeds of the lands to the purchasers thereof, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. The deeds, it was provided, should operate as a complete conveyance of the lands upon a full payment of the purchase money. The disposition of the money was provided for, and it was provided further that no part of the lands should be offered for sale until the Indian or Indians entitled to the same should sign a written agreement consenting to the sale thereof, and appointing the commissioners, or a majority of them, trustees to sell the land and make deeds to the purchasers. The approval of the Secretary was made necessary to the validity of the deeds, and he was directed to make all necessary regulations to carry out the provisions of the act.

On November 6, 1893, the Secretary instructed the commissioners, in accordance with the terms of the act, as to the appraisement of the lands, and to ascertain who were allottees or the heirs of allottees, or heads of families under the laws of Washington, to have guardians appointed for the minor heirs of deceased allottees, and to obtain the consent of the heirs of twenty-one years and of such guardians. The commissioners were directed to report to the Secretary their action for approval, and, if approved, further instructions were to be given.

By an act subsequent to that of March 3, 1893, to wit, an act of June 7, 1897, the number of commissioners was reduced to one, and Clinton A. Snowden was appointed commissicner. Instructions were given to him and he was informed as follows: "That the title under these patents vests in the family whose names are recited in the patent, and not in the head of the family." It is *necessary to obtain the written consent of all the members of the family named in the patent. That it is necessary to have legal guardians appointed for minors who are themselves allottees, but not minor heirs of deceased allottees. It is necessary to obtain the written consent of sale of allotments of all members of the family named in the patent, and natural guardians and parents of minors are incompetent for this purpose, as in the case of minor heirs of deceased allottees."

On January 18, 1901, in answer to an inquiry of Snowden, the Secretary instructed him that where the allottees and true owners of the lands had executed consents of sale which had been approved by the Secretary, it was the practice of the Department to continue the sale of the lands covered thereby, though the allottee or owner died, and to distribute the funds arising therefrom to his or her heirs, the Department regarding the "consents as remaining in full force upon the decease of the Indian executing the same," they being "in the nature of an agreement or contract to be carried out for the sole benefit of his heirs in case of his decease." The Secretary added: "These lands are sold under the provision of the act of Congress, March 3, 1893, and not under the laws of Washington. . . . It is for the Department to pass upon the sufficiency of consents, and not the courts of Washington."

Charley Jacobs was, as we have seen, the grantee in the patent as the head of a family consisting of himself, Julia, Annie, Frank, and Oscar. Julia was his wife, Annie his sister, Frank his son by a former wife, and Oscar his son by his wife, Julia.

Lillie Jacobs and Ruther Jacobs, plaintiffs in error, are, respectively, a daughter and son of Charley and Julia, and were born, respectively, in the years 1888 and 1891,—that is, after the patent was issued,—and necessarily were not named therein. 211] *Annie, who was named in the patent, died in November, 1888, never having been married, and leaving Charley Jacobs her sole heir. He, on the 7th of March, 1898, Julia Jacobs, and Frank Jacobs, all of age and named in the patent, executed a written consent required by the statute, directing Commissioner Snowden to sell the lands

Charley Jacobs, as guardian of Oscar Jacobs, named in the patent, having been previously appointed by the superior court of Pierce county, executed a similar consent, and also a similar consent as the sole heir of Annie, named in the patent.

These consents and other papers were duly transmitted to the Secretary of the Interior and approved by him, and Snowden, on the 27th of February, 1901, duly offered the lands for sale at public auction. They were purchased by A. G. Prichard, trustee, in accordance with the statute, he making the payment required. Snowden executed a deed to him, which was duly approved by the Secretary of the Interior and duly recorded in the Office of Indian Affairs.

Prior to the commencement of this action, Prichard made the payments required, which were received and accepted by the Interior Department for distribution to those entitled to the same, including Ruther Jacobs and Lillie Jacobs, plaintiffs in error. Their guardian, E. D. Wilcox, has not received the same, and refused to accept the sum, except a cash payment of $420.

Charley Jacobs died January 2, 1900, leaving surviving him, among others, the plaintiffs in error, who, as we have said, were not named in the patent. His death was reported to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs by Snowden May 1, 1900.

Wilcox is the duly appointed guardian of plaintiffs in error, and reported to the court the receipt by him of the payment of $420, made by Prichard. He did not know, however, that the sale by Snowden was after the death of *Charley Jacobs, father [212 of plaintiffs in error, until after the commencement of this suit; and, as soon as he discovered that fact, refused to receive any further payment. The money received by plaintiffs in error as their share of the purchase price of the land was tendered to defendant in error prior to the trial of the action.

At the time Prichard, defendant in error, purchased the land, he did not know of the death of Charley Jacobs, and was at no time advised of it or of the existence of plaintiffs in error until shortly before bringing this action. He purchased the property in good faith, relying upon the representations of Snowden, and in the full belief of the regularity of the proceedings.

We have stated the facts thus fully, although they are not disputed, as they exhibit clearly upon what right the Secretary of the Interior proceeded in his instructions to Commissioner Snowden, and the strict compliance of the latter with those instructions. It will be observed that where the allottees and true owners executed consents which had been approved by the Secretary, it was the practice of the Department to continue the sale of the lands covered thereby, though the allottee or owner died, and to distribute the funds arising therefrom to his or her heirs, the Department regarding the "consents as remaining in full force upon the decease of the Indian executing the same," they being "in the nature of an agreement or contract to be carried out for the sole benefit of his heirs in case of his decease." The Secretary expressed the view that the "lands are sold under the provisions of the act of Congress, March 3, 1893, and not under the laws of Washington. . . . It is for the department to pass upon the sufficiency of consents, and not the courts of Washington."

Defendant in error takes the view that the consents remained good after the decease of the Indian who gave them, in this case Charley Jacobs, and were "in the nature of a permanent power to trusteeship." On the other hand, plaintiffs in error contend that the consent was a "naked power to sell," and terminated with the death of the giver.

There can be no doubt of the power of Congress to give character to the consents. United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher, 223 U. S. 95, ante 364, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Cherokee Nation v. Whitmire, 223 U. S. 108, ante, 370, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200. The questions in the case, therefore, turn upon the statute, and both sides invoke it to sustain their respective contentions.

The patent to Charley Jacobs was made subject to the conditions and restrictions of the 6th article of the treaty. In other words, there was a limitation upon the right of alienation of the patented lands, and the ultimate power to remove this restriction and grant a right of full alienation was reserved to Congress. The act of 1893 was an exercise of this power. It provided for the sale of such part of the allotted lands as was not required for the homes of the Indians, and prescribed the conditions of the sale to be "a written agreement consenting to the sale," signed by the Indian or Indians entitled to the allotted land offered for sale. And it was provided further that the agreement should constitute the commissioners, or a majority of them (subsequently one commissioner), trustees to sell the lands and "make deeds to the purchasers for the same," subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, which deeds should "operate as a complete conveyance of the land upon the full payment of the purchase money." It is manifest that the "consent" required created something more than a mere revocable agency. It was a written agreement giving the commissioner (we drop the plural) full power to execute the provision and policy of the act of Congress,—a power which could be confidently counted on as continuing against contingencies, and to terminate in a "complete conveyance of the land."

That the "consent" was to have this character was the "immediate and continued construction of the act of Congress by the Interior Department, and such construction would determine against ambiguity in the act even if we should admit ambiguity existed. The rule which gives strength to the construction of the officers who are directed to execute the law, and who, it has been said, may have written or suggested it, is given an added force from one of the provisions of the act of Congress. It directs the Secretary of the Interior "to make the necessary regulations to carry out the purposes" of its enactment.

But we find no ambiguity in the act when we consider its purpose and the habits of Indian life. It could not have been intended that when proceedings had been instituted under it, they should be embarrassed always by the possibility of defeat, and, it may be, progressing up to the moment of the delivery of the deed to a purchaser, should be made useless and nugatory by the death of some roving Indian. It is to be noted that all the proceedings are under the control of the Secretary of the Interior, and that any irregularity in them or improvidence in the consents can be corrected by him.

We do not answer in detail the argument of plaintiffs in error based on the law of agency, because we do not think its analogies are applicable to the situation.

The Supreme Court of Washington has repeated its ruling in this case in two others, Little Bill v. Swanson, 64 Wash. 650, 117 Pac. 481; Little Bill v. Dyslin, 64 Wash. 697, 117 Pac. 487.

Judgment affirmed.

*ANNIE FAIRBANKS, a Minor by Her Guardian ad Litem, Benj. L. Fairbanks, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 112.)

EDWARD L. WARREN, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 113.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 215-226.)

Indians — Chippewa allotments — pine lands.

1. Nothing contained in the general allotment act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), nor the amendatory act of February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383), which would forbid the allotment of pine lands, was imported into the Steenerson act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat.

at L. 539, chap. 1786), providing for allotments to the Chippewa Indians residing upon the White Earth Reservation by the provision of that act that "the allotment shall be, and the patent issued therefor, in the manner and having the same effect as provided in the general allotment act," the later act being very direct as to quantity, and containing no qualifications as to the character of the land to be allotted.

[Indian allotments, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — residence on reservation.

2. An Indian need not have been on the reservation at the instant when the act of February 28, 1891, amending the general allotment act of February 8, 1887, was passed, in order to avail himself of the benefit of the provision of the later act giving to each Indian "located" thereon $\frac{1}{2}$ section of land.

[Indian allotments, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Chippewa allotments — general congressional scheme.

3. The Steenerson act of April 28, 1904, providing for the allotment of lands to the Chippewa Indians on the White Earth Reservation, was part of a general congressional scheme, and modified and changed the prior acts of February 8, 1887, January 14, 1889, and February 28, 1891, by superseding certain of their provisions and enlarging the quantity of land to be allotted.

[Indian allotments, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — cancellation — notice and hearing.

4. The cancellation of Indian allotments by the Secretary of the Interior after repeated changes in views and decisions in the Department cannot be said to have been ordered without notice and opportunity to be heard, where the proceedings leading up to such action were single and continuous, at one time one party prevailing, and at other times the other party, the first party finally succeeding.

[Indian allotments, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 112 and 113.]

Argued January 18 and 19, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEALS from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review decrees which, reversing decrees of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota, directed the dismissal of bills seeking the determination of the rights of Indian allottees. Affirmed.

See same case below, 96 C. C. A. 229, 171 Fed. 337.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. W. Houghton argued the cause, and, with Mr. George B. Edgerton, filed a brief for appellants:

410.

On August 8, 1904, neither Lewis nor Alice Mooers had any greater equity or right to an original allotment of 80 acres of pine land on White Earth Reservation than each of plaintiffs had to an additional allotment of 80 acres of pine land on such reservation on June 29 and 30, 1904.

Woodbury v. United States, 95 C. C. A. 498, 170 Fed. 302.

The Secretary of the Interior had no authority to allot pine lands on White Earth Reservation to Lewis and Alice Mooers, or to any Chippewa Indian.

Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Until April 24, 1905, no Chippewa Indian was entitled to an allotment of pine land on the White Earth Reservation.

Woodbury v. United States, supra.

The Secretary of the Interior cannot legally, on an ex parte hearing, set aside and overrule a final order made by the land commissioner in a controversy in which a full hearing was had and all parties interested took part.

Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 489, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 35 L. ed. 290, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

Since the order of Secretary Garfield overruling the order of the acting Commissioner of the Land Department was made ex parte, on a mere question of law, it is properly before this court for determination.

Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel argued the cause, and, with Mr. S. W. Williams, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants were plaintiffs in the court below, and we shall so designate them.

The plaintiffs, one a minor (No. 112) and the other an adult (113), residing on the White Earth Indian Reservation, brought these actions to determine their rights, respectively, to allotments of land under the provisions of a treaty with the Chippewa Indians proclaimed April 18, 1867 [16 Stat. at L. 719], and certain acts of Congress relating to such Indians.

The government claims that two minor children of Samuel Mooers, also Chippewa Indians, residing on the reservation with their father, have been justly allotted the lands on account of a superior right under the treaty and acts of Congress. The cases were tried together and a decree was entered in each case in accordance with the prayer of the plaintiffs, respectively. The decrees were reversed by the circuit court of appeals and the bills directed to be dismissed. 96 C. C. A. 229, 171 Fed. 337.

223 U. S.

The treaty of March 19, 1867, and certain acts of Congress, are elements in the controversy. The treaty provided that as soon as the location of the reservation should have been approximately ascertained, it should be surveyed in conformity with the system of government surveys, and that any Indian of bands parties to the treaty, either male or female, who should have 10 acres of land under cultivation, should be entitled to a certificate showing him to be entitled to 40 acres and a like number 217] of* acres for every additional 10 acres cultivated until the full amount of 160 acres should be certified. 16 Stat. at L. 721. This was denominated the "cultivation clause," and many allotments of 160 acres were made under it.

On February 8, 1887, Congress passed an act "to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations." [24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119.] The 1st section of the act provided that where any tribe or band of Indians had been or should be located upon any reservation created for their use by treaty, act of Congress, or executive order, the President was authorized, if the reservation or any part thereof was advantageous for agricultural and grazing purposes, to cause the reservation to be surveyed or resurveyed, and to allot the lands in severalty as follows: To each head of a family, $\frac{1}{4}$ of a section; to each single person over eighteen years of age, $\frac{1}{8}$ of a section; a like fraction to an orphan child under eighteen years; to each single person under eighteen then living, or who might be born prior to the date of the President's order directing allotment, $\frac{1}{16}$ of a section. In case of deficiency, the allotments were to be made pro rata. It was provided further that where the treaty or act of Congress setting apart the reservation provided for allotments in excess of those designated, the allotments should be made in the quantities specified in such treaty or act.

This act was amended February 28, 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383.] The allotment to which each Indian was to be entitled was made $\frac{1}{8}$ of a section of land. In case of an insufficiency, a pro rata allotment as near as might be, according to legal subdivision, was provided. On January 14, 1889, an act was passed entitled, "An Act for the Relief and Civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota." [25 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 24.] It is known as the Nelson act, and provided for the appointment by the President of three commissioners to negotiate with the different bands of Chippewas for the cession of all their *lands except so much [218 of the White Earth and Red Lake Reservations as the commissioner should deem necessary for allotments to be made to the Indians. It also provided for the removal to the White Earth Reservation of all but Red Lake Indians, and for allotments to such Indians on White Earth Reservation under the direction of such commissioners.

Section 4 of the act provided for the survey of the lands after the cession and relinquishment of the Indian title, and that, upon the report of the survey, the Secretary of the Interior should appoint a sufficient number of competent examiners to go upon the lands thus surveyed, and personally make a careful, complete, and thorough examination of the same by 40-acre lots, for the purpose of ascertaining upon which lots there was growing or standing pine timber, and the tract upon which such timber was standing or growing should be termed pine lands. The minutes of examination were directed to be entered in books, showing with particularity the quantity of timber, to be estimated by feet, and the quality of timber, which estimates and reports should be filed with the Commissioner of the General Land Office as a part of its permanent records, and that officer should thereupon make up a list of such lands, describing each 40-acre tract separately, and opposite each description place the actual cash value of the same, according to his best judgment and information, but such valuation should not be less than $3 per thousand feet, board measure. The list should thereupon be transmitted to the Secretary of the Interior for his approval, modification, or rejection, as he may deem proper. It is further provided that "all other lands acquired from the said Indians on said reservation, other than pine lands, are, for the purposes of this act, termed agricultural lands." There are provisions for the sale of the pine lands in 40-acre parcels, for the disposal to actual settlers only of the agricultural lands, and that the money *received from both shall be [219 deposited in the Treasury of the United States for the benefit of the Indians.

There are amending acts which need not be noticed. Then came the act of April 28, 1904, entitled, "An Act to Provide Allotments to Indians on White Earth Reservation in Minnesota." [33 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 1786.] It is called the Steenerson act. It authorized the President to allot to each Chippewa Indian legally residing on the White Earth Reservation, under the treaty or laws of the United States, 160 acres of land. The act recited that it was enacted in accordance with the express promise made to the Indians by previous acts and the treaty, and that the allotments should be made and the patents issued therefor should be in the manner and have the same effect as provided in the acts of February 8, 1887, and February 28, 1891. And it was provided "that where any allotment of less than 160 acres has heretofore been made, the allottee shall be allowed to take an additional allotment, which, together with the land already allotted, shall not exceed 160 acres." There is a provision, in case of insufficiency, for pro rata allotment, as follows: "That if there is not sufficient land in said White Earth (diminished) Reservation subject to allotment, each Indian entitled to allotments under the provisions of this act shall receive a pro rata allotment."

These acts constitute the statutory law of the case.

The facts are as follows: On June 29, 1904, and June 30, 1904, respectively, the plaintiffs, Annie Fairbanks, through her father, Warren, for himself, applied at the White Earth Agency for an additional allotment of 80 acres each, respectively, being the W. $\frac{1}{2}$ and E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of the N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 15, T. 142, R. 39. The applications were under the Steenerson act, the plaintiffs having received their full quota under the Nelson act. The applications were refused, on the ground that they could not then be received.

On August 8, 1904, Lewis and Alice 220] Mooers, aged, respectively, *four and six years, made application through their father, Samuel Mooers, for an original allotment of 80 acres of land each under the Nelson act, the act of Congress approved January 14, 1889. The selection for Lewis was the same 80 acres applied for by Annie Fairbanks; the selection for Alice the same 80 acres applied for by Warren. In the Mooers application the land was described as not pine land. At the time of the applications the Indian agent was away, but his clerk received the applications, marking the land on the agency plats as allotted to them, and made the usual entries on the allotment roll. He made the allotment, therefore, as far as he could.

Subsequently the agent required the clerk to cancel the allotment, on the ground that the lands were pine lands, and notified Mooers of such cancelation, which was done by mail, and he was directed to select other lands for his children.

On April 24, 1905, the allotments were commenced on the reservation under the Steenerson act, and on that date the plaintiffs, respectively, made application and were allotted the lands in controversy, they being the same as applied for by them on June 29th and 30th, 1904.

Against the action of the agent, canceling the allotments to Lewis and Alice on August 8, 1904, Mooers appealed to the Indian Office. The Commissioner ruled in favor of his contention, and directed the agent to reallocate the lands to Mooers's children. The agent, however, suspended action pending an investigation, which resulted in the Commissioner, under the directions of the Secretary of the Interior, revoking his ruling and sustaining the allotments to plaintiffs. Other lands were directed to be allotted to the Mooers. Upon Mooers's appeal, the last decision of the Commissioner was reversed and the land directed to be allotted to his children.

The Commissioner in his letter directing the restoration *of the allotment to [221 the Mooers children, discussing the right of selection of pine lands, said: "It is true that in the early work of the Chippewa commission in making allotments on the White Earth Reservation, the office did direct that only agricultural lands should be allotted, reserving the pine lands for the common benefit of all the Indians on the reservation; but after the passage of the Steenerson act, which contemplated the allotment of all of the lands of the reservation, such instructions necessarily could have no application."

The order of the Commissioner allotting the land to the Mooers children, as we have seen, was reversed by the then Secretary of the Interior, but not on the ground that pine lands could not be selected. The ruling of the Secretary was on the ground that the selection by the Mooers was premature. The Secretary said: "The testimony shows that Mr. Mooers was at the agency, arrived on Sunday, the day before the allotting began, but he did not take his place in line until quite late, if at all, but seems to have relied upon the fact that he had designated to a clerk at the agency the particular lands which he desired, even after he had been told that the selections would not be recognized as against other claimants."

Secretary Garfield, in reversing the decision of his predecessor, took the view that "the applications of the Mooers children were for original allotments, were actually allowed, and that there was no valid reason against such action." The Secretary also said that it was "plain that there was no reason for laying upon Mooers the rule governing additional allotments under the Steenerson act;" that is, that Mooers should appear in line and take his chances with other Indians. Concluding his opinion, the Secretary said: "It appears that allotments have been made to the Mooers children, for which Samuel A. Mooers says he did not apply. Our office will also adjust this matter accordingly."

222] *From these repeated changes in views and decisions in the Interior Department we gain little light upon the controversy between the parties, so far as it depends upon the interpretation of the statutes, and even the government in this case is somewhat uncertain as to what position it will ultimately take. "It might," it says, "find occasion to reverse its former attitude by conceding the plaintiffs' claim or denying that any of the contestants is entitled." But it concedes "that lands classified as pine lands outside of the reservation, which had been ceded by the Indians to be sold for their benefit, were not allotable."

We may gather, notwithstanding the confusion, that the Department and all of the claimants regarded the Nelson act as still effective as to Indians who had not received its benefits, and the Steenerson act as applying to additional allotments, leaving only the question whether allotments could be made of pine lands. If so, the allotments to the Mooers children were good, because selections under the Nelson act were not required to wait for proceedings under the Steenerson act. But, notwithstanding the uncertainty and seeming confusion, the question in the case is simple when certain elements are kept in mind,—that is, the distinction between the lands ceded and those not ceded, but reserved for allotments.

Section 1 of the Nelson act provides for the negotiation with the Chippewas "for the cession and relinquishment" of their title to their reservations, "except White Earth and Red Lake, and to all of those two which may not be required to fill the allotments required by this and existing acts." (Italics ours). The land reserved for allotments is the diminished reservation, to which we shall presently refer, and § 3 provides for its allotment. Section 4 applies to the lands ceded, not those reserved for allotments, and provides for the examination of the pine lands and for their sale in 40-acre pieces. It provides also (§ 6) for the disposal of agricultural lands 223] to settlers under the* homestead laws at $1.25 per acre, the proceeds of which and of the sale of pine lands to be put into the Treasury of the United States for the benefit of the Indians. Section 7.

The Department at first, as we have seen, regarded only agricultural lands as allottable, making no distinction between ceded and the reserved part of the reservation.

In the reserved part (diminished reservation), that is, the part that was to be allotted, there was no distinction made between pine land and agricultural lands. In the ceded part there was a distinction, but only in the manner of their disposition. Neither was allottable, not because of their character, but because of their situation. The Indian Department, as we have seen, took back its ruling, and even if it was not done under the compulsion of the Steenerson act, plaintiffs might have no ground of complaint. Certainly not if the first ruling was made under a misapprehension of the Nelson act, as the court of appeals strongly intimates. However, the Department justifies its last ruling under the Steenerson act, and upon the decision of the court of appeals sustaining that ruling plaintiffs assign error.

It becomes necessary, therefore, to consider the Steenerson act, and it may be well to repeat somewhat. The Steenerson act authorized the President to allot 160 acres of land "to each Chippewa Indian now legally residing upon the White Earth Reservation under the treaty or laws of the United States." And it was provided that where an allotment had theretofore been made of less than 160 acres, and additional allotment should be made, which, together with the land already allotted, should not exceed that amount. The act is very direct as to quantity, and there is no qualification as to the character of the land to be allotted, and no classification of the lands to cause misunderstanding. The general allotment act and the act of February 28, 1891, are referred to, but only to adopt the manner of the allotment and the effect of the patent. *The provision is: "The al-[224 lotment shall be, and the patent issued therefor, in the manner and having the same effect as provided in the general allotment act." The manner of allotment is one thing and the kind of land to be allotted is another, and cannot well be confounded, and we cannot hold that Congress did not observe or intend to make the distinction.

It is contended further that the Mooers children, being, respectively, four and six years of age, were not entitled to an original allotment under the Nelson act.

The lower courts disagreed as to this contention, the circuit court supporting it and the circuit court of appeals deciding that it was untenable. Plaintiffs urge that the circuit court of appeals fell into error by assuming that § 1 of the act of February 8, 1887, was part of the Nelson act, and hence decided that the power of the President to make allotments, which was given by the former, was a continuing power, and could be exercised from time to time in favor of those born upon the reservation subsequent to the first order. It is, however, insisted that under the Nelson act the power to make allotments was taken from the President and vested in commissioners, and that the provision relied on by the circuit court of appeals was omitted from the act, and it is insisted further that if it be considered part of the act, the whole of the provision must be considered, and that it limits an allotment to $\frac{1}{8}$ of a section to any single person then living, or who should be born prior to the date of the order directing an allotment of lands. Undoubtedly, if that part of the provision had remained the law, an allotment of 80 acres could not have been made; but plaintiffs concede that it did not remain the law. It was superseded by the act of February 28, 1891, and they admit that "the Land Department has treated the act of February 28, 1891, as amending § 1 of the act of 1887. By such amendment 225] the classification* found in the act of February 8, 1887, is entirely omitted, and the language is: "To each Indian located thereon, one-eighth of a section of land." The conclusion that plaintiffs draw from that provision is that being on the reservation at the instant of time the act was passed is a necessary condition. But such conclusion misses the meaning of the word "located." Of itself it has no reference to time. It has reference entirely to place, and is used to designate upon what Indians the powers given by the act, when exercised, should operate,—that is, "to each Indian located" on the reservation. The act was a part of a scheme of legislation to have existence and continuity of action until its purpose should be completely fulfilled. See Oakes v. United States, 97 C. C. A. 139, 172 Fed. 304.

This being so, the Steencerson act is easily seen to be a part of the plan of legislation, and, contrary to the contention of plaintiffs, did modify and change the prior acts of Congress by superseding certain of their provisions and enlarging the quantity of land to be allotted.

It is finally contended that Secretary Garfield had no power to set aside the allotments to plaintiffs on an ex parte appeal. In other words they were entitled to notice and opportunity to be heard. Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62. The only evidence offered to sustain the contention is that of an attorney, who testified that he appeared "before the Department for Warren and Fairbanks in this case," and that he "did not learn until after the decision had been rendered on the rehearing or appeal" that an appeal had been taken from the letter or order of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs of July 13, 1906, in which the Commissioner directed the agent not to cancel the allotments to Warren and Fairbanks, and to restore the allotments to them. It may well be, urged by the government, that such testimony does not preclude the inference that other attorneys, or Warren, or the father of the Fairbanks, had notice. We, however, do not consider *the in-[226 ference material. It is manifest that the proceedings were single and continuous,—at one time the Mooers prevailing, at others the plaintiffs, and finally the Mooers; and all were chargeable with notice of what was happening in regard to their rights. We have seen that an allotment to the Mooers children and that to plaintiffs were made without notice. The Mooers had a subsequent hearing, it is true, and the cancellation of the allotments to them ordered to be set aside. The latter order was suspended and an investigation instituted, upon which one Secretary decided in favor of plaintiffs and another Secretary decided in favor of the Mooers. The latter was considered as the final decision, and plaintiffs have sought its review in this proceeding.

It is objected by the government that the Mooers children are necessary parties. The point was suggested by the court of appeals, but passed by, as the court said, because counsel had not raised it. A doubt was expressed, however, if a decree could be rendered seriously affecting the rights of the Mooers children without their being made parties. A query to the same effect was made in Oakes v. United States, supra.

The jurisdictional act has this provision as to a suit brought under it:

"In said suit the parties thereto shall be the claimant, as plaintiff, and the United States, as party defendant." It may well be contended, therefore, that the United States stands in judgment for all opposing claimants; not, it may be, excluding the power of the court to permit them to come in, or, in its discretion, to order them to be brought in. However, we are not called upon to decide the question. Upon the suit brought and case made by plaintiffs we decide that they have no grounds for the relief they pray.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

227]*UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

A. SANDOVAL and P. Sandoval.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 227-233.)

Principal and surety — reimbursement of surety — voluntary payment.

1. The payment of the judgment in good faith by the surety on an appeal bond, after an affirmance on the appeal to a territorial supreme court, and after receiving notice from the governor that unless the judgment were paid the surety would forfeit its right to do business in the territory, cannot be said to have been made voluntarily or negligently, so as to defeat the surety's right to reimbursement from its principals, although execution had not then issued on the judgment, and the governor may not have had the power to carry out his threat. [For other cases, see Principal and Surety, 70-83, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Principal and surety — right of surety on appeal bond — taking security from judgment creditor.

2. The surety on an appeal bond may recover from its principals the amount of the judgment which it paid after an affirmance on the appeal to a territorial supreme court, although, when making such payment, it took from the judgment creditor a bond with collateral security conditioned for the reimbursement of the money so paid in case the judgment should be reversed on a proposed further appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, since the surety, by so acting, was not speculating out of its principals, but was benefiting them by acquiring security to which they could be subrogated in case of a reversal of the judgment. [For other cases, see Principal and Surety, 70-83, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 125.]

Submitted December 18, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which modified, and affirmed as modified, a judgment of the District Court of Santa Cruz County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action on an appeal bond. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 348, 100 Pac. 816.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives submitted the cause for appellant:

The written obligation given by Randolph expressed nothing more than the obligation implied in law in any event.

Scholey v. Halscy, 72 N. Y. 578; Bank of United States v. Bank of Washington, 6 Pet. 8, 8 L. ed. 299; Haebler v. Myers, 132 N. Y. 363, 15 L.R.A. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 589, 30 N. E. 963.

The principle that a surety is entitled to nothing more than a reimbursement, and that he shall not speculate out of the principal, applies to a case where the surety makes his payment either in property other than money, which is worth less than the amount of the debt, or as in the case of Stone v. Hammell, 83 Cal. 547, 8 L.R.A. 425, 17 Am. St. Rep. 272, 23 Pac. 703, by giving his own note, which is no payment at all.

For money paid out by the surety, the surety has an instant cause of action, and this without respect to the fact that it holds indemnity which may protect it against eventual loss.

Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365, 59 Pac. 764, 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; Paulin v. Kaighn, 29 N. J. L. 483; Bachelor v. Fiske, 17 Mass. 464.

When a surety pays the debt for which he becomes surety, he has an immediate right of action against the principal for reimbursement. His cause of action then accrues, and from that time on the statute of limitation commences to run. Though he may have taken security to indemnify him against loss, he may nevertheless maintain an action for reimbursement, unless it has been agreed that he shall look only to the security for his indemnity.

Cornwall v. Gould, 4 Pick. 444.

His rights in such case are those of the ordinary creditor who has taken collateral security for his debt; he may reimburse himself from the security, or he may ignore it and sue on the debt. But the giving of collateral security, in itself, never changes his rights, and he may pursue the same remedies as if no security had been given, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary.

Polhemus v. Prudential Realty Corp. 74 N. J. L. 570, 67 Atl. 303.

Payment of the judgment rendered by the court of first instance in this case would at once subrogate the Sandovals to every security held by the surety company for repayment of the amount of the former judgment in case of reversal.

Nelson v. Webster, 68 L.R.A. 513, and note, (72 Neb. 332, 117 Am. St. Rep. 799, 100 N. W. 411).

Forms of action are abolished in Arizona, and equitable defenses may be pleaded in legal actions, and the proper course, if the Sandovals desired subrogation, would be to plead the matters entitling them to it, as suggested in Knoblauch v. Foglesong, 37 Minn. 320, 33 N. W. 865.

NOTE.—On the right of surety who has paid judgment to enforce it for his own benefit—see note to Frank v. Praylar, 16 L.R.A. 117.

The suggestion in the opinion of the supreme court of the territory, that the surety company should have surrendered its security in order to maintain this action, is wholly untenable. A surety is not required to surrender his security until he is relieved of liability, or reimbursed for liability incurred and paid.

Smith v. Wigler, 72 N. J. Eq. 559, 65 Atl. 900; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 473.

A tender is necessary only where a right is made dependent upon the payment of money or delivery of property.

28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 4.

The contention that nonpayment by the appellees and breach of contract are not properly alleged is without merit.

Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 373, 24 Pac. 1072; Rarkin v. Sisters of Mercy, 82 Cal. 88, 22 Pac. 1134; Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197, 23 Pac. 1094.

The application made by the appellees for the bond, set forth in the complaint, and admitted by the answer, constitutes an express contract of indemnity, and the rule is that if there is such an express contract, a suit for reimbursement may be brought thereon.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 484, note 11; Powell v. Smith, 8 Johns. 249; Thompson v. Ketchum, 8 Johns. 192, 5 Am. Dec. 332; Lane v. Westmoreland, 79 Ala. 374.

The ordinary rule is that a surety may pay the debt at any time he becomes liable therefor. It is unnecessary that suit be brought or judgment rendered or execution issue. It is enough if the surety be subject to be coerced to pay before he discharges the debt.

May v. Ball, 108 Ky. 180, 56 S. W. 9; Nixon v. Beard, 111 Ind. 137, 12 N. E. 132; Martin v. Ellerbe, 70 Ala. 326; Feamster v. Withrow, 12 W. Va. 611.

And it is unnecessary that the surety wait longer than the maturity of the debt.

Nixon v. Beard, 111 Ind. 137, 12 N. E. 132.

And some authorities even hold that the surety may pay the debt before the maturity, and at the maturity of the obligation may bring a suit for reimbursement against the principal.

Ross v. Menefee, 125 Ind. 432, 25 N. E. 546.

The rendition of judgment against the surety entitles him to pay the judgment without issuance of execution, and entitles the surety to protection even without paying the judgment.

Babbitt v. Finn (Babbitt v. Shields) 101 U. S. 7, 25 L. ed. 820; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc.

Law, 2d ed. 462, note, 16; Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. 591, 31 L. ed. 825, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004.

The mere affirmance of a judgment fixes the liability of the principal and sureties on the supersedeas bond, and no execution or other steps are necessary.

Davis v. Patrick, 6 C. C. A. 632, 12 U. S. App. 629, 57 Fed. 909.

Messrs. Frank P. Flint and Henry S. Van Dyke submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. G. Bullard was on the brief:

The right to reimbursement of the surety from the principal is limited to the actual loss to the surety, caused by its payment of the debt of the principal which it, the surety, is obliged to pay.

1 Brandt, Suretyship & Guaranty, 3d ed. § 233; Stone v. Hammell, 83 Cal. 547, 8 L.R.A. 425, 17 Am. St. Rep. 272, 23 Pac. 703; Burrus v. Cook, 215 Mo. 496, 114 S. W. 1065; 12 Current Law, 2017.

The very term "payment," when voluntary and with full knowledge of the facts, excludes the idea of an implied promise to refund.

Morton v. Chandler, 6 Me. 144.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action to recover the sum of $10,528.33 and certain *expenses on account of a [228 judgment recovered against appellees and paid by appellant, as surety on an appeal bond executed at the request of appellees.

The action was brought and tried in the district court of Santa Cruz county, second judicial district of the territory of Arizona, and resulted in a judgment for the sum of $14,683.25 in favor of appellant. On appeal to the supreme court of the territory the judgment was reversed. Thereupon the case was brought here.

There is no dispute about the facts. One Epes Randolph recovered a judgment against the appellees for the sum of $10,528.33, from which they appealed to the supreme court of the territory. They applied to appellant for a bond to be given on appeal to stay the judgment. In the application for the bond they covenanted "to reimburse said company [appellant] for any and all loss, costs, charges, suits, damages, counsel fees, and expenses of whatever kind or nature which said company shall, or may, for any cause, at any time, sustain or incur or be put to for or by reason or in consequence of said company having entered into or executed said bond."

The judgment against appellees was affirmed by the supreme court and a judgment rendered against them and the guaranty company (appellant here) for the amount recovered in the lower court, with interest and costs, on the 27th of March, 1908.

About the 24th of June, 1908, the company received notice from the governor of the territory to the effect that the judgment of the supreme court had not been paid; that more than thirty days had elapsed from its rendition; and that unless it was paid or sufficient excuse for its nonpayment shown, the company would forfeit its rights to transact business as a surety company in Arizona. The company notified appellees by telegraph of this notice, but they failed to pay the judgment or to perfect an appeal from it to 229] this court, and therefore the *company (appellant) paid Randolph the amount due on the judgment, and interest, amounting to the sum of $11,484.95. The appellant also incurred certain expenses which, with the judgment paid, amounted in all to the sum of $13,911.70.

With unimportant variations, the complaint alleged the facts which were found by the court. The appellees demurred to the complaint for insufficiency, and also answered, denying some of its allegations and admitting others. They admitted the recovery of judgment against them and the application for the bond, but denied that the surety company had received notice from the governor, as alleged, or that the company paid Randolph for them in satisfaction of the judgment any sum of money, or that any sum was due. They alleged that after the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory and a rehearing denied, notice of appeal to this court was duly given, and that the cause was transferred to this court, where it was at the time of the answer; that no execution had been issued on the judgment, and that if the company had paid the judgment, it did so by reason of its own negligence, voluntarily, and not at the request of appellees, or by any order of the court, or in satisfaction of the judgment.

"The testimony shows," the supreme court said, "that on March 27, 1908, the judgment of the district court was affirmed in this court, and that, pursuant to the provisions of paragraph 1592, Rev. Stat. 1901, judgment was also entered against the guaranty company as surety upon the appeal bond. Thereafter, within the time allowed by law, a motion for a rehearing was made, which motion was denied by this court May 19, 1908. The action having been tried before the court without a jury, an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the judgment of this court was prayed, and was allowed by one of the justices of 230] the court on June 20, 1908. In the 56 L. ed.

order allowing the appeal it was directed that the judgment be stayed upon the appellants' filing their supersedeas bond in the sum of $20,000, to be approved by any justice of this court. This order was filed with the clerk June 22, 1908. A bond in proper form was approved by one of the justices on July 14th, and filed with the clerk on July 15, 1908. Citation was issued July 18, 1908, and served on July 31, 1908. It also appears that on or about June 18th the judgment creditor, Randolph, demanded of the guaranty company that it pay the judgment; that on June 24, 1908, the guaranty company paid the judgment in full, and thereafter, and as part of the transaction, took from Randolph a bond, with collateral security, for the return of the amount paid him, with interest, should the Supreme Court of the United States reverse the judgment of this court." [12 Ariz. 352, 100 Pac. 816.]

The supreme court sustained the trial court in holding the complaint sufficient and stating a cause of action, but it decided that the court erred in giving judgment for the amount paid by the company to Randolph, because it had not surrendered to appellees, its principals, the security it had taken from Randolph. The court, however, decided that the company could recover from appellees "such amount as it reasonably expended in connection with the adjustment of the matters for which it holds no security." These expenses were found to amount to the sum of $544.50, upon which interest was adjudged at 6 per cent from August 3, 1908, to the date of the judgment. The judgment of the district court was modified and reduced to the amount indicated, and, as modified, affirmed, "but without prejudice to the rights of the guaranty company to bring such further action as may be necessary to establish its rights, should a right of reimbursement of the amount of the judgment accrue to it."

The bond taken by appellant of Randolph, the judgment *creditor, is made the [231 determining element by the supreme court of the territory. The bond was the outcome of certain conversations, prior to the payment of the judgment, between a representative of the company and Randolph. A disagreement arose as to the effect of the conversations, the representative contending that Randolph agreed to refund the money if it should appear under any proceeding which should be started that it was not proper for the company to have paid the money. Randolph's attorney contended that, as a supersedeas bond might have been filed at the very moment that the money was being paid in the event that it should transpire that such bond was filed prior to the payment, Randolph would return the money. In consequence of this dispute, Randolph executed a bond to the guaranty company in the sum of $20,000, which recited the proceedings in the litigation and payment of the judgment to Randolph, and that the appellees herein were, on the 24th of June, 1908, proceeding to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, but had not, on said date, perfected their appeal, but "have, at the date of these presents, duly appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States from the said judgment;" it was agreed that if that court should affirm the judgment, or if it should reverse the judgment, and Randolph should refund the money paid to him by the company, then the obligation to be void; otherwise to remain in full force and effect. Randolph further agreed as collateral security for the bond that he would deposit, and he did deposit, with the guaranty company, 25,000 shares of the capital stock of the Huntington Beach Company, with the right in the company, if Randolph should not refund the money after the reversal of the judgment by the Supreme Court of the United States, to sell the stock and apply the proceeds to the payment of the amount paid by it, the company. Upon the affirmance of the judgment or dismissal of the appeal, *the stock was to be returned to Randolph, and Randolph had the right to withdraw such stock and substitute other collateral security.

The supreme court of the territory, as we have seen, made this bond and security the controlling factor in its decision. The court held that the payment of the judgment was not premature,—in other words, not voluntary. In this we agree with the court. Appellant was not bound to wait the issuance of an execution. The affirmance of the judgment fixed its liability. Babbitt v. Finn (Babbitt v. Shields), 101 U. S. 7, 15, 25 L. ed. 820, 822. And in determining the character of the payment as voluntary or negligent, as alleged by appellees in their answer, the threat of the governor must be given account, even if it be granted that he had no power, as held by the supreme court of the territory in this case, to revoke the license of appellant to do business in the territory. Such ruling had not then been made, and an attempted exercise of such power would have been injurious to appellant to yield to or resist. Appellant certainly acted in good faith, and discharged the duty that it was assured it had assumed under the law. However, this may not be of consequence, and we pass to the consideration of the ground upon which the supreme court of the territory based its decision. The court held, as we have seen, that appellant was justified in paying the judgment, and, having paid the judgment, it was entitled to reimbursement, but to no more, the court said, than reimbursement, and held that the only outlay it had incurred was for certain expenses, and limited the judgment to their amount.

The court argued that appellant was secured for all else, and that therefore its payment was not "an absolute one, but one conditioned that the judgment be affirmed by the Supreme Court, since it has taken and holds security satisfactory to it for the return of the money, with interest, in the event the judgment is reversed." *And[233 such event happening, the court concluded, would result in the payment to appellant twice. In other words, if the judgment should be sustained, it would collect the amount of appellees; if the judgment should be reversed, it would collect the amount of Randolph. This, the court said, would be inequitable; and that therefore appellant could not "claim reimbursement from its principals until its actual loss is ascertained; or, at least, it may not recover without surrendering the security to its principals."

The court's conclusion, we think, is not justified. It would indeed be inequitable to permit appellant to collect more than once the money paid by it, but once, at least, it is entitled,—a result which it seeks by this suit. Having paid money for its principals, it did not "speculate" out of them by reinforcing their responsibility to it by taking security from Randolph. It was bound by the judgment, which it paid equally with appellees, though on account of them. It was under an absolute duty to pay, but there were contingencies upon which the payment would have to be refunded by Randolph, and to secure itself it took security from him. We repeat, it was not speculating out of its principals, but was benefiting them. It acquired securities to which they could be subrogated in the event the judgment obtained by Randolph should be reversed. This represents the parties' rights on this record. In addition, however, we may say that we know that the judgment was not reversed, and that appellees' liability to Randolph has been affirmed. Sandoval v. Randolph, 222 U. S. 161, ante, 142, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded to the Supreme Court of the State of Arizona for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

234]*NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner,
v.

J. WILLIAM McCUE, Samuel O. McCue, Harry M. McCue, and Ruby G. McCue, Infants, by Marshall Dinwiddie, Their Next Friend, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 234-252.)

Life insurance — risk — death by execution for crime.

1. Death by a legal execution for crime is not covered by a policy of life insurance, though the policy contains no provision excepting such manner of death from the risks covered by it.

[For other cases, see Insurance, XI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conflict of laws — insurance — place of contract.

2. A policy of life insurance, though executed at the company's office in Wisconsin, is a Virginia contract, where the application was made by a resident of the latter state at a place in that state, and the policy was delivered to him there, when he gave his note for the premium, which was payable at that place, and subsequently paid there, the policy providing that it should not take effect until the first premium should be actually paid.

[For other cases, see Conflict of Laws, I. b, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Life insurance — risk — death by execution for crime.

3. Provisions in the charter of a foreign life insurance company making a person who insures therein a member of the company, and fixing his interest at the amount of his insurance, give no right of recovery for death by legal execution for crime, where, under the laws of the place of contract, the policy, by which alone the rights of the insured and the beneficiaries must be measured, does not cover a death so caused.

[For other cases, see Insurance, XI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 138.]

Argued December 20 and 21, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Virginia, upheld the right to recover upon a policy of life insurance for a death caused by legal execution for crime. Judgment of Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, and that of the Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 93 C. C. A. 71, 167 Fed. 435.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William H. White and William H. White, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George H. Noyes and John R. Dyer, filed a brief for petitioner:

Can there be a recovery on a life insurance policy where the insured is legally executed, the policy being silent on the subject?

Amicable Soc. v. Bolland, 4 Bligh, N. R. 194, 2 Dow & C. 1; Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S. 139, 42 L. ed. 693, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Hatch v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 120 Mass. 550, 21 Am. Rep. 541; Wells v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. 191 Pa. 207, 53 L.R.A. 327, 71 Am. St. Rep. 763, 43 Atl. 126; Burt v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 362, 47 L. ed. 216, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hill, 193 U. S. 551, 48 L. ed. 788, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Murray v. New York L. Ins. Co. 96 N. Y. 614, 48 Am. Rep. 658; Bloom v. Franklin L. Ins. Co. 97 Ind. 478, 49 Am. Rep. 469.

The policy was not a Wisconsin contract, but a Virginia contract, because the application was made, the premium paid, and the policy delivered in Virginia.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hill, 193 U. S. 551, 48 L. ed. 788, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus) 140 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Cohen, 179 U. S. 262, 264, 45 L. ed. 181, 183, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Elliott, 7 Sawy. 17, 5 Fed. 228; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Meyer, 198 U. S. 508, 49 L. ed. 1146, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S. 139, 42 L. ed. 693, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Hicks v. National L. Ins. Co. 9 C. C. A. 215, 20 U. S. App. 410, 60 Fed. 690; 25 Cyc. 748; Minor, Confl. L. p. 399; Cravens v. New York L. Ins. Co. 148 Mo. 600, 53 L.R.A. 305, 71 Am. St. Rep. 637, 50 S. W. 519; Wall v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 32 Fed. 273; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Robison, 54 Fed. 580; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Winning, 7 C. C. A. 359, 19 U. S. App. 173, 58 Fed. 541; McMaster v. New York L. Ins. Co. 78 Fed. 37.

A policy of insurance is a contract, whether it be fire, life, marine, accident, or personal liability, and therefore is in all respects and in all its phases to be treated and construed as any other contract.

Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S.

NOTE.—On the necessity that the assured's death be a reasonable legitimate consequence of violation in order to relieve insurer—see note to Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Crenshaw, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 258.

On conflict of laws as to insurance contracts—see notes to Johnson v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 63 L.R.A. 833, and McElroy v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 968.

139, 42 L. ed. 693, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; St. John v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. 38, 64 Am. Dec. 529; Rosenplanter v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. 46 L.R.A. 473, 37 C. C. A. 566, 96 Fed. 721.

On all questions of general commercial law, such as contracts, and especially insurance contracts, the Federal courts follow their own rules.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 18, 10 L. ed. 865, 871; Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 246, 25 L. ed. 580, 583; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 121, 27 L. ed. 878; Pleasant Twp. v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 138 U. S. 67, 34 L. ed. 864, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 101, 106, 37 L. ed. 97, 101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Carpenter v. Providence Ins. Co. 16 Pet. 495, 511, 10 L. ed. 1044, 1051; Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. v. Reliance M. Ins. Co. 106 Fed. 117, affirmed in 179 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 49, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; The Barnstable, 181 U. S. 464, 470, 45 L. ed. 954, 958, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684.

McCue's policy could not be a special Wisconsin contract, to be construed by any law or policy of that state inconsistent with those of Virginia and the general commercial law.

Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 255, 51 L. ed. 174, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, 7 Ann. Cas. 1104; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Cohen, 179 U. S. 262, 45 L. ed. 181, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

The law of Virginia prohibits a recovery in a case like this.

Plunkett v. Supreme Conclave, I. O. H. 105 Va. 643, 55 S. E. 9.

Mr. Daniel Harmon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. G. B. Sinclair and H. W. Walsh, filed a brief for respondents:

Opinion as to what is public policy varies from time to time. Courts are careful not to encroach unduly upon the liberty of contract. Contracts are not interfered with except where they clearly appear to be prejudicial to the public interest. No contract will be interfered with unless it embraces by its terms or necessary implication an agreement to do an act which is illegal or which has a corrupting tendency.

Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bing. 252, 9 J. B. Moore, 435, 1 Car. & P. 241, Ryan & M. 66, 3 L. J. C. P. 265, 27 Revised Rep. 603; Davies v. Davies, L. R. 36 Ch. Div. 364, 56 L. J. Ch. N. S. 962, 58 L. T. N. S. 209, 36 Week. Rep. 86; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, G. & Co. [1892] A. C. 45, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 295, 66 L. T. N. S. 1, 40 Week. Rep.

337, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 120, 56 J. P. 101; Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 310, 4 Moore Ind. App. 339, 12 Jur. 315; Printing & Numerical Registering Co. v. Sampson, L. R. 19 Eq. 465, 44 L. J. Ch. N. S. 705, 32 L. T. N. S. 354, 23 Week. Rep. 463, 21 Eng. Rul. Cas. 696; Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243, 1 Jur. N. S. 468, 3 C. L. R. 207, 24 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 40, 3 Week. Rep. 66; Smith v. DuBose, 78 Ga. 413, 6 Am. St. Rep. 260, 3 S. E. 309; Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. 26 Iowa, 190; Kellogg v. Larkin, 3 Pinney (Wis.) 123, 56 Am. Dec. 164; Swann v. Swann, 21 Fed. 299; Equitable Loan & Secur. Co. v. Warning, 117 Ga. 599, 62 L.R.A. 93, 97 Am. St. Rep. 177, 44 S. E. 320; Homestead Cases, 22 Gratt. 301; 12 Am. Rep. 507; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 128, 11 L. ed. 206; Pierce v. Randolph, 12 Tex. 290; Houlton v. Nichol, 93 Wis. 393, 33 L.R.A. 166, 57 Am. St. Rep. 928, 67 N. W. 715.

There being no agreement, express or implied, to do an illegal act, and the contract not having induced the parties to commit a crime, no interest is prejudiced by it, and there would seem to be no sound principle on which it could be avoided.

Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243, 1 Jur. N. S. 468, 3 C. L. R. 207, 24 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 40, 3 Week. Rep. 66; Wetherell v. Jones, 3 Barn. & Ad. 221, 1 L. J. K. B. N. S. 139; Waugh v. Morris, 42 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 57, L. R. 8 Q. B. 202, 28 L. T. N. S. 265, 21 Week. Rep. 438, 1 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 573; Bier v. Dozier, 24 Gratt. 1; McDonald v. Order of Triple Alliance, 57 Mo. App. 87; Fitch v. American Popular L. Ins. Co. 59 N. Y. 557, 17 Am. Rep. 372; Mills v. Rebstock, 29 Minn. 380, 13 N. W. 162; Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 310, 4 Moore Ind. App. 339, 12 Jur. 315.

The inquiry in the Federal courts is not general, independent of any specific law, but specific as to the law of the state of the obligation.

Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. v. Reliance M. Ins. Co. 106 Fed. 117; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 8 L. ed. 1055; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Phipps v. Harding (Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding) 30 L.R.A. 513, 17 C. C. A. 203, 34 U. S. App. 148, 70 Fed. 468; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Gatton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 95 Iowa, 112, 28 L.R.A. 556, 63 N. W. 589; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 27 L. ed. 584; McClain v. Provident Sav.

Life Assur. Soc. 49 C. C. A. 31, 110 Fed. 80; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 32, 27 L. ed. 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

In matters of general commercial law or general jurisprudence, the decisions of the state tribunals are of great authority.

Carpenter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 16 Pet. 495, 10 L. ed. 1044; Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 18, 10 L. ed. 871.

In the enforcement of statutes or the construction of statutes, the Federal courts make no extrinsic inquiry.

Williams v. Gaylord, 186 U. S. 157, 46 L. ed. 1102, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Whitfield v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 205 U. S. 489, 51 L. ed. 895, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

In questions of policy, the statutes and decisions of the state courts are controlling.

Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 127, 11 L. ed. 205; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962.

The law of this obligation is the law of Wisconsin.

LeMesnager v. Hamilton, 101 Cal. 532, 40 Am. St. Rep. 86, 35 Pac. 1054; Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399, 53 Am. St. Rep. 532, 66 N. W. 439; Nicholson v. Combs, 90 Ind. 515, 46 Am. Rep. 229.

The charter controls the rights of members, irrespective of the place where such rights may have been acquired.

Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 34 L. ed. 262, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Smith v. Kernochen, 7 How. 199, 12 L. ed. 667; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 647, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

Under the charter of the company, McCue occupied the relation of a member of the company. This was a valuable property right. Upon his death this membership passed to his executors.

21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 269; Condon v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 89 Md. 99, 44 L.R.A. 149, 73 Am. St. Rep. 196, 42 Atl. 944; Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 653, 115 Am. St. Rep. 1023, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135, 7 Ann. Cas. 400.

Where, as in this case, a statute prescribes the manner in which property shall pass upon death of the owner, no consideration of public policy can change the course of descent prescribed by the statute, even in the case—the most extreme than can arise—where the person designated to receive the property upon the death of the owner murders such owner for the purpose of coming into possession of the property.

Broom, Legal Maxims, 289; Shellenberger 56 L. ed.

v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631, 25 L.R.A. 565, 59 N. W. 935; Owens v. Owens, 100 N. C. 242, 6 S. E. 794; Holdom v. Ancient Order, U. W. 159 Ill. 619, 31 L.R.A. 70, 50 Am. St. Rep. 183, 43 N. E. 772; Deem v. Milliken, 6 Ohio C. C. 357, 3 Ohio C. D. 491; Carpenter's Estate, 170 Pa. 203, 29 L.R.A. 147, 50 Am. St. Rep. 765, 32 Atl. 637; McKinnon v. Lundy, 24 Ont. Rep. 132, reversing 21 Ont. App. Rep. 560; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; Ellerson v. Westcott, 148 N. Y. 149, 42 N. E. 540; Collins v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 232 Ill. 37, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 356, 122 Am. St. Rep. 54, 83 N. E. 542, 13 Ann. Cas. 129.

The canon of construction, expressio unius, etc., forbids a construction excepting this risk.

Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 24 L. ed. 607; Schmidt v. Northern Life Asso. 112 Iowa, 41, 51 L.R.A. 141, 84 Am. St. Rep. 323, 83 N. W. 800; McDonald v. Order of Triple Alliance, 57 Mo. App. 87; Harper v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 19 Mo. 506; Cleaver v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. [1892] 1 Q. B. 147, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 128, 66 L. T. N. S. 220, 40 Week. Rep. 230, 56 J. P. 180; Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149, 48 L. ed. 385, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Patterson v. Natural Premium Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Wis. 118, 42 L.R.A. 253, 69 Am. St. Rep. 899, 75 N. W. 980; Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243, 1 Jur. N. S. 468, 3 C. L. R. 207, 24 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 40, 3 Week. Rep. 66.

The company has been paid to assume this risk.

Campbell v. Supreme Conclave, I. O. H. 66 N. J. L. 274, 54 L.R.A. 576, 49 Atl. 550; Lange v. Royal Highlanders, 75 Neb. 196, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 666, 121 Am. St. Rep. 786, 106 N. W. 224, 110 N. W. 1110.

If the McCue estate cannot recover, the innocent parties interested will be admitted as claimants.

Cleaver v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. [1892] 1 Q. B. 147, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 128, 66 L. T. N. S. 220, 40 Week. Rep. 230, 56 J. P. 180; Mullen v. Reed, 64 Conn. 240, 24 L.R.A. 664, 42 Am. St. Rep. 174, 29 Atl. 478; Hodge's Appeal, 8 W. N. C. 209; Mullins v. Thompson, 51 Tex. 7; Tompkins v. Levy, 87 Ala. 263, 13 Am. St. Rep. 31, 6 So. 346; 4 Words & Phrases, p. 3254, "Heirs"; 4 Cooley, Briefs on Insurance, pp. 3226, 3729; Patterson v. Natural Premium Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Wis. 118, 42 L.R.A. 253, 69 Am. St. Rep. 903, 75 N. W. 980; Whitehurst v. Whitehurst, 83 Va. 153, 1 S. E. 801; Palmer v. Welch, 132 Ill. 141, 23 N. E. 412; Alexander v. Parker, 144 Ill. 355, 19 L.R.A. 187, 33 N. E. 183; Fuller v. Linzee, 135 Mass. 469; Bancroft v. Russell, 157 Mass. 47, 31 N. E. 710; Haskins v.

Kendall, 158 Mass. 224, 35 Am. St. Rep. 490, 33 N. E. 495; Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ins. Asso. 76 Iowa, 56, 1 L.R.A. 659, 14 Am. St. Rep. 196, 40 N. W. 87; Schmidt v. Northern Life Asso. 112 Iowa, 41, 51 L.R.A. 141, 84 Am. St. Rep. 323, 83 N. W. 800; Supreme Lodge, K. L. H. v. Menkhause, 209 Ill. 277, 65 L.R.A. 508, 101 Am. St. Rep. 239, 70 N. E. 567; Tyler v. Odd Fellows' Mut. Relief Asso. 145 Mass. 134, 13 N. E. 360; Schonfield v. Turner, 75 Tex. 324, 7 L.R.A. 189, 12 S. W. 626; Order of Railway Conductors v. Koster, 55 Mo. App. 186; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 96 Va. 737, 44 L.R.A. 305, 32 S. E. 475; Cardwell v. Kelly, 95 Va. 573, 40 L.R.A. 240, 28 S. E. 953; Montefiori v. Montefiori, 1 W. Bl. 363.

The present policy of the law is to require of insurance companies a strict liability for their losses.

Lord v. Dall, 12 Mass. 115, 7 Am. Dec. 38; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Eickhoff, 63 Minn. 170, 30 L.R.A. 587, 56 Am. St. Rep. 464, 65 N. W. 351; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co. 82 Md. 535, 38 L.R.A. 116, 34 Atl. 778; Trenton Pass. R. Co. v. Guarantors' Liability Indemnity Co. 60 N. J. L. 246, 44 L.R.A. 213, 37 Atl. 689; Waters v. Merchants' Louisville Ins. Co. 11 Pet. 213, 9 L. ed. 691; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 117 U. S. 312, 29 L. ed. 873, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Courtenmanche v. Supreme Court, I. O. O. F. 136 Mich. 30, 64 L.R.A. 668, 112 Am. St. Rep. 345, 98 N. W. 749; Supreme Lodge, O. M. P. Asso. v. Gelbke, 198 Ill. 365, 64 N. E. 1058; Patterson v. Natural Premium Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Wis. 118, 42 L.R.A. 253, 69 Am. St. Rep. 899, 75 N. W. 980; Darrow v. Family Fund Soc. 116 N. Y. 537, 6 L.R.A. 495, 15 Am. St. Rep. 430, 22 N. E. 1093; Goetzman v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 3 Hun, 515; Harpers v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 19 Mo. 506; Griffin v. Western Mut. Benev. Asso. 20 Neb. 620, 57 Am. Rep. 848, 31 N. W. 122; Cluff v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 99 Mass. 318; Mareck v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 62 Minn. 39, 54 Am. St. Rep. 613, 64 N. W. 68; Simpson v. Life Ins. Co. 115 N. C. 393, 20 S. E. 517; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Payne, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 32 S. W. 1063; Supreme Court of Honor v. Updegraff, 68 Kan. 474, 75 Pac. 477, 1 Ann. Cas. 309.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in the case is whether death by the hand of the law in execution of a conviction and sentence for murder is covered by a policy of life insurance, though such manner of death is not excepted from the policy, there being no question of the justness of the sentence.

The case was in equity, and brought in the corporation court for the city of Charlottesville, state of Virginia, by respondents, children and sole heirs of James S. McCue, by Marshall Dinwiddie, their next friend, upon a policy of life insurance issued to McCue by petitioner, named herein as the insurance company.

The main defense of the insurance company was (there were some technical defenses with which we are not concerned) that McCue came to his death by hanging after conviction and sentence for the murder of his wife.

The suit was brought under the laws of the commonwealth of Virginia against the insurance company, the People's National Bank of Charlottesville, as garnishee, and the executors of McCue's estate.

The case was removed on the petition of the insurance company, on the ground of a separable controversy, to the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Virginia. In that court there was a demurrer filed to the bill which raised the question as to the proper arrangement of the parties, and whether the heirs or the executors were the parties to recover on the policy, assuming that the insurance company was liable. In the answer *the same questions were again[244 raised and all liability of the insurance company denied, principally on the ground of the manner by which McCue came to his death.

At the trial the technical defenses were waived, and by agreement of the parties the heirs of McCue and his executors were treated as parties plaintiff. The court, considering the cause as one at law, and a jury having been waived by the parties, adjudged on the pleadings and an agreed statement of facts, "that the plaintiffs take nothing by their bill, and that said defendant go without day," with costs, the latter to be paid by a deposit made in the registry of the court in refund of the premium paid by McCue, as far as it would go. The judgment was reversed by the court of appeals and a new trial ordered. This certiorari was then petitioned for and allowed.

The facts as agreed are these: The insurance company is a corporation duly organized under the laws of Wisconsin, and a citizen and resident thereof. It is a mutual insurance company, with the power and obligations given to and imposed upon it by certain acts of the legislature of Wisconsin, which acts constitute its charter.

The People's National Bank of Charlottesville vile was made a party solely as garnishee, it having certain sums of money belonging to the insurance company in its possession.

McCue made written application to the insurance company in his own handwriting for the policy in suit, in pursuance of which the policy was issued for the sum of $15,000 on his life. He paid premiums as follows: When the policy was delivered to him he gave his note for the sum of $427.50 for the premium to E. L. Carroll and L. Fitzgerald, payable to their order, six months after date, at the Jefferson National Bank, Charlottesville, Virginia. Carroll & Fitzgerald at the time were soliciting insurance for T. A. Cary, the general agent of the insurance company in Virginia. The [245]note was indorsed by Carroll & Fitzgerald to Cary, with the following memorandum attached: "$427.50. Hold this note in Mr. Cary's office (don't use bank.) Notify Mr. McC. about thirty days before due, and send it to E. L. Carroll for collection." Carroll & Fitzgerald gave their individual notes to Mr. Cary, amounting to $427.50, on which he advanced the money to the company and held the notes for collection, with McCue's note as collateral.

The company received, at its home office in Milwaukee, the amount of the premium in cash from Cary on May 2, 1904, but had no knowledge of the note arrangement between McCue, Carroll & Fitzgerald, and Cary. The note was paid by McCue by checks after he had been arrested, he protesting his innocence, "which facts were known to Cary." The note arrangement was a general custom among soliciting agents for the company. Other facts will be noted hereafter.

The main question in the case is, as we said, the liability of the company under the circumstances. Or, to put it more abstractly for the present purpose of our discussion, whether a policy of life insurance insures against death by a legal execution for crime.

The question was before this court in Burt v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 362, 47 L. ed. 216, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139. In the policy passed on, as in the policy in the case at bar, there was no provision excluding death by the law. It was decided, however, that such must be considered its effect, though the policy contained nothing covering such contingency. These direct questions were asked: "Do insurance policies insure against crime? Is that a risk which enters into and becomes a part of the contract?" And answering, after discussion, we said: "It cannot be that one of the risks covered by a contract of insurance is the crime of the insured. There is an implied obligation on his part to do nothing to wrongfully accelerate the maturity of the policy. Public policy forbids the insertion *in a contract of a condition[246 which would tend to induce crime, and as it forbids the introduction of such a stipulation, it also forbids the enforcement of a contract under the circumstances which cannot be lawfully stipulated for." Cases were cited, among others Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S. 139, 42 L. ed. 693, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300. There it was held that a life insurance policy taken out by the insured for the benefit of his estate was avoided when one of sound mind intentionally took his life, irrespective of the question whether there was a stipulation in the policy or not. And the conclusion was based, among other considerations, upon public policy, the court saying that "a contract, the tendency of which is to endanger the public interests or injuriously affect the public good, or which is subversive of sound morality, ought never to receive the sanction of a court of justice, or be made the foundation of its judgment."

These cases must be accepted as expressing the views of this court as to the public policy which must determine the validity of insurance policies, and which they cannot transcend even by explicit declaration, much less be held to transcend by omissions or implications, and we pass by, therefore, the very interesting argument of counsel for respondents as to the indefinite and variable notions which may be entertained of such policy according to times and places and the temperaments of courts, and the danger of permitting its uncertain conceptions to control or supersede the freedom of parties to make and to be bound by contracts deliberately made. We come, therefore, immediately to the special contention of respondents, that the contract in controversy is a Wisconsin contract, and is not offensive to the public policy of that state or to its laws, but was indeed, as it is contended, made in conformity to the laws of that state, and carries all of their obligations.

The obligation of a contract undoubtedly depends upon *the law under which it[247 is made. In which state, then, Virginia or Wisconsin, was the policy made? In Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus), 140 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822, the question arose whether the contract of insurance sued on was made in New York or Missouri. The assured was a resident of Missouri, and the application for the policy was signed in Missouri. The policy, executed at the office of the company, provided that the contract between the parties was completely set forth in the policy and the application therefor, taken together. The application declared that the contract should not take effect until the first premium should have been actually paid during the life of the person proposed for assurance. Two annual premiums were paid in Missouri, and the policy, at the request of the assured, was transmitted to him in Missouri, and there delivered to him. The court said: "Upon this record the conclusion is inevitable that the policy never became a completed contract, binding either party to it, until the delivery of the policy and the payment of the first premium in Missouri; and consequently that the policy is a Missouri contract, and governed by the laws of Missouri."

In Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Cohen, 179 U. S. 262, 45 L. ed. 181, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106, the insurance policy contained a stipulation that it should not be binding until the first premium had been paid and the policy delivered. The premium was paid and the policy delivered in Montana. It was held that "under these circumstances, under the general rule, the contract was a Montana contract, and governed by the laws of that state." Citing Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements, supra.

The same conditions existed in Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hill, 193 U. S. 551, 48 L. ed. 788, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538, and it was decided, the two cases above mentioned being cited, that the policy of insurance involved was a Washington contract, not a New York contract.

248] *In the case at bar the application was made by McCue at Charlottesville, Virginia, February 25, 1904, and the policy was delivered to him there on March 15, 1904, when he gave his note for the premium which was payable at that place and subsequently paid there. And it is provided in the policy that it should not take effect until the first premium should be actually paid. Following that provision is this: "In witness whereof the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, at its office in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has by its president and secretary signed and delivered this contract, this 15th day of March, 1904." But manifestly this was not intended to affect the preceding provision, fixing the time when the policy should go into effect, nor the legal consequences which followed from it. In Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements the policy was executed at the company's office in New York. The exact conditions, therefore, existed which made, in the cases cited, the policies involved therein not New York contracts, but, respectively, Missouri, Montana, and Washington contracts. The policy, therefore, in the case at bar, must be held to be a Virginia, and not a Wisconsin, contract.

Respondents, however, contend that "the right asserted is a property right, vested by the special statute of incorporation, which is not divested by crime;" and that "the charter controls the rights of members irrespective of the place where such rights may have been acquired." To support the contention that the right asserted is a property right, respondents adduce §§ 1, 4, 7, and 20 of the charter. Their argument is brief and direct, and we may quote it. It is as follows: "Under the charter of the company, McCue occupied the relation of a member of the company. This was a valuable property right. Upon his death this membership passed to his executors." And further: "The charter of the company, § 1, provided that certain persons *named 'and all other persons who may [249 hereafter associate with them in the manner hereinafter prescribed shall be, and are, declared a body politic and corporate. Section 4 prescribes that persons who shall hereafter insure with the company 'shall thereby become members thereof.' And § 7 prescribes the manner in which this membership is to be perfected. 'Every person who shall become a member of this association, by effecting insurance therein, shall, the first time he effects insurance, pay the rates fixed by the trustees,' etc. There can be no doubt, then, that McCue was a member of this corporation. He insured with the company, and thereby he became a member. His interest in the company was fixed by the amount of his insurance. This membership constituted a vested property right. He was eligible as an officer, and entitled to vote in the management of the company (§ 20); entitled to the dividends on the surplus and profits (§ 2, § 13); and was a joint owner of the assets of the company." But this is assuming what is to be proved. It may be true that a person who insures with the company becomes a member thereof, and that his interest is fixed at the amount of his insurance. But what constitutes his title or right? Necessarily his policy. What entitles him to a realization of the benefits of his membership? Necessarily, again, his policy, if the manner of his death be not a violation of it. We need not follow counsel, therefore, through their argument as to the rights of property and the rules of its devolution, which, it is contended, must obtain, whatever be the act or guilt of the person producing it. The question before us, and the only question, is: What rights did McCue's estate and children get by his policy? And we are brought back to the simple dispute as to whether the policy covers death by the hand of the law. This court has pronounced on that dispute, and its ruling must prevail in the Federal courts of Virginia, in which state the contract was made. And it is consonant with the ruling in the 250]*state courts. In Plunkett v. Supreme Conclave, I. O. H. 105 Va. 643, 55 S. E. 9, a certificate of membership in the Conclave, which was issued to one Charles W. Plunkett, his wife being beneficiary, was considered. One of the conditions was that Plunkett comply with the laws, rules, and regulations then governing the Conclave, or that might in the future be enacted. There was no provision against suicide in the laws, rules, or regulations when the certificate was issued. Such a provision was subsequently enacted. Plunkett committed suicide, and the Order refused to pay benefits. Plunkett's wife brought suit to recover them, and asserted a vested interest in the benefits under the certificate. The contention was rejected. The trial court held that the forfeiture of the rights under the certificate, if the insured while sane committed suicide, was valid, because (1) it involved no vested right of the insured, and (2) because it was a fundamental, though unexpressed, part of the original contract that the insured should not intentionally cause his own death. And the court added: "Inasmuch as the original contract and by-laws were silent upon the subject of suicide by the insured while sane, the new by-law is valid, because there can be no such thing as a vested right for a sane man to commit suicide, and for the further reason that it is nothing more than the written expression of the provision which the law had read into the contract at its inception."

The supreme court of appeals affirmed the judgment, quoting the reasoning of the trial court, and added to it the considerations of public policy expressed in the Burt Case and Ritter Case, supra, and other cases. If the public policy of Virginia were the same as, it is contended, that of Wisconsin is, whether this court should have to yield it, we are not called upon to decide.

Being of opinion that McCue's policy was a Virginia contract, it may be unnecessary 251]*to review the cases relied *on by the respondents, which they contend declare the public policy of the state of Wisconsin. It may, however, be said that the cases are not absolutely definite.

Two cases only are cited, McCoy v. Northwestern Mut. Relief Asso. 92 Wis. 577, 47 L.R.A. 681, 66 N. W. 697, and Patterson v. Natural Premium Mut. L. Ins. Co. 100 Wis. 118, 42 L.R.A. 253, 69 Am. St. Rep. 56 L. ed.

899, 75 N. W. 980. We will not consider the facts in the first case. It is enough to say that the court, following a ruling that it had pronounced in other cases, said: "If a contract for life insurance does not provide against death by suicide or self-destruction, then such cause of death does not constitute a defense," citing four cases. The second also presented one of suicide, the insured being sane. It was contended that the policy did not cover such a risk, because (1) an incontestable clause (there being one) in the contract did not cover such a death; (2) if it could be held so in terms, it would be void, as against public policy; (3) suicide was a crime, and hence within a stipulation against death in violation of law.

The reliance of the insurance company to support its contentions was upon the Ritter Case, supra. The court, however, reiterated its former ruling as to death by suicide, though it recognized the cogency of the reasoning of the Ritter Case, that the insured should do nothing to accelerate the contingency of the policy, saying (page 122): "Were the question a new one in the law, the argument would be well nigh irresistible; especially where, as in the Ritter Case, the policy runs in favor of the estate of the insured, and the proceeds will go to the enrichment of such estate, instead of to other beneficiaries."

There were other beneficiaries in the case, the policy having been assigned, with the consent of the company, to the children of the insured. Commenting further on that fact, the court said it brought the case within the principle of certain cases, which were cited, but added, "nor would the application of that principle to this case necessarily *conflict with the Ritter Case, [252 where the policy was in favor of the estate of the insured. It may well be in such a case that the intentional suicide of the insured while sane would prevent a recovery by his personal representatives and yet not prevent a recovery in case a policy in favor of beneficiaries who had a subsisting vested interest in the policy at the time of the suicide, and who could not, if they would, prevent the act of the insured." McCue's policy was in favor of his estate, and comes within the concession made by the supreme court to the reasoning of the Ritter Case.

The court did not discuss considerations of public policy, but we may assume it found nothing offensive to such policy in a contract of insurance which covered death by suicide, and it may be supposed that the court would find nothing repugnant to public policy in a contract which did not except death for crime. However, we need not speculate, as the Wisconsin law does not control the policy in suit.

One other contention of respondents remains to be noticed. It is contended that if the McCue estate cannot recover, the innocent parties, his children, will be admitted as claimants. To this contention we repeat what we have said above,—the policy is the measure of the rights of everybody under it, and as it does not cover death by the law, there cannot be recovery either by McCue's estate or by his children.

Judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed, and that of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

253]*NEW YORK CONTINENTAL JEWELL FILTRATION COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 253-261.)

District of Columbia — contracts — construction.

The cost of changing sewers and water mains both inside and outside of a railroad right of way, made necessary by the elimination of grade crossings, pursuant to the act of February 12, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 767, chap. 353), and February 28, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 909, chap. 856), is chargeable to the railway company's contract or, under an agreement between such contractor and the District of Columbia, by which the District was to make the necessary changes in sewers and water mains upon deposit by the contractor of the estimated cost, where such estimate was more than 50 per cent in excess of what the changes within the right of way would cost, and where a different conclusion could only be reached upon the supposition that the earlier act controlled and was thought by the District to control, while in fact the District thought that the later act controlled, and required all the changes to be made at the expense of the railway company, and therefore of the contractor, its agent.

[For other cases, see District of Columbia, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 145.]

Argued December 22, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of plaintiff in an action of assumpsit, for less than the amount claimed. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 377.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James H. Hayden argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edward H. Thomas argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action of assumpsit by plaintiff in error in the supreme court of the District of Columbia to recover the sum of $7,172.97, claimed by it as the amount of unexpended balances of three deposits made by it with the District, to cover the cost of certain work undertaken by the District for it.

The case was tried to a jury, which, under the instructions of the court, returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,089.79, with interest, upon which judgment was duly entered. The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. We shall refer to plaintiff in error as plaintiff and to the defendant in error as the District.

The controversy grows out of work required to be done by certain acts of Congress for the elimination of grade crossings on the line of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Company, in the city of Washington, and requiring the railroad company to depress and elevate its tracks, and to enable it to relocate parts of its railroad therein, and for other purposes. 31 Stat. at L. 767, chap. 353. The scheme of improvement was quite extensive, and the act described in detail the changes to be made in the grades of streets in connection with the change of the location of the railroad company's tracks and station.

Section 9 of the act is the one with which we have most concern. It provides as follows, omitting parts not essential to be quoted:

"Sec. 9. That the entire cost and expenses of the revision, changes, relocations, and improvements of and in said railroad, as authorized and required by the preceding sections of this act, and of all structures connected therewith or incidental thereto, shall be borne, paid, and defrayed in manner following, to wit: The said Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Company shall bear, pay, and defray all cost and expense of the relocations, elevation and depression of its tracks, within the limits of its right of way, as are authorized and required by this act. . . . All other costs, expenses, damages resulting from, incidental to, or *to, or connected with, the revisions, [255 changes, and improvements in alignment and grades of said railroad, or the relocations thereof by this act required and authorized, and from changes in the grades of the streets or the railroad . . . shall be borne, paid, and defrayed in manner following, to wit: Fifty per centum thereof by the United States and the remaining fifty per centum thereof by the District of Columbia. . . . All work within the limits of said railroad company's right of way . . . shall be done by said railroad company to the satisfaction and approval of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, who are authorized to exercise such supervision over the same as may be necessary to secure the proper construction and maintenance of the said work. And all work which is without the limits of the right of way . . . shall be done by the District of Columbia."

There were quite radical modifications of the plan for the railroad terminal, made by an act passed in 1903. 32 Stat. at L. 909, chap. 856. Among other things, it provided for the construction of tunnels. It is, however, contended by plaintiff that the distribution of the cost of the work, as provided in § 9 of the prior act, was not changed. The District contends that the deposits made by the plaintiff were for work to be done by the latter, and that the work which was done by it, the District, was upon construction neither contemplated nor authorized by the act of 1901, but was embraced in the new location directed by the act of 1903, and was imposed by the latter act upon the railroad company, and was done by the plaintiff as agent of the railroad company.

In pursuance of the acts of Congress, the railroad company prepared a plat of its proposed line, extending from Second street and Virginia avenue southwest to First street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. This embraced the change necessary to connect its tracks with the *new Union station. The plat shows the course of the tunnels in question. The railroad company engaged plaintiff to construct the tunnels, and plaintiff proposed to the District that the District perform that portion of the work involved in changing and relocating the sewers and water mains.

The following letter was written by the engineer commissioner of the District to plaintiff:

Washington, July 22, 1903.

The New York Continental Jewell Filtration Company,

New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—

Referring to our oral conversation of July 16, in which you requested that the sewer and water changes necessary on account of the construction of the tunnel of the Pennsylvania R. R. Company, this city, be made by this office, and the plat which you left with me, I would state that the estimated cost of making the changes in the sewers is $7,693, and of changes in water mains is $488. Deposit slips for these amounts are herewith, and the deposits should be made separately, and upon receipt of the deposits the work will be done by this office. The water department made some modifications of the plan suggested by you in the drawings which you left, with the object of obtaining better circulation, and the sewer division increases the size and slope of the proposed new portion of sewer. I return your suggested plan.

Very respectfully,

John Biddle,

Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.,
Engineer Commissioner, D. C.

Subsequently letters were addressed to plaintiff containing estimates of necessary changes in the water mains and sewers, caused by the construction of the tunnels, respectively, $488 and $7,693, and stating that if plaintiff wished the District to do the work, it should deposit those amounts with the collector of taxes of the District. The *letters were dated, respectively, [257 the 20th and 21st of July, 1903.

The plaintiff accepted the District's offer to make the changes upon making the deposit indicated.

There was another change requested by plaintiff and undertaken by the District, an estimate of which was furnished and a deposit of the amount made by plaintiff.

On May 11, 1904, and after the completion of the work, the plaintiff wrote a letter to the District, in which it stated that it had deposited with the collector of taxes of the District certain amounts for sewer changes and water main changes "within the right of way" at certain designated points, and asking for a statement of the work and a return of the unexpended balances. Receiving no reply, plaintiff addressed another letter to the District of the same purport. There was other correspondence, which need not be given, as it is agreed that plaintiff had deposited $7,693 to cover the cost of changes in sewers and the sums of $488 and $600 to cover the cost of changes in water mains; that there was expended on sewers within the right of way the sum of $1,565.41, and on water mains $42.62, total $1,608.03, which, being deducted from the amount deposited by plaintiff, would leave an unexpended balance of $7,172.97, if plaintiff's contention be correct. If, on the other hand, the contention of the District be correct, and plaintiff is chargeable with costs of work done outside of the right of way, there would be a balance returnable of only $1,089.79.

The contention of the plaintiff is, as we have seen, that the railroad company was only required to defray the cost of work within the limits of its right of way, and that plaintiff's obligation is not greater, as it only undertook to do the work for the railroad company. In other words, plaintiff contends that the acts of 1901 and 1903 are the test of the rights of the parties. The District contends, on the other hand, that those acts do not control the case. 258]*The case made by the pleadings and the evidence, the District insists, "is one of simple contract, composed of an offer or request by the plaintiff to the defendant, which the defendant accepted and performed." It is further urged by the District that if the acts of 1901 and 1903 can be regarded as pertinent, all of the parties, the District, the plaintiff, and the railroad, construed them in accordance with the contention of the District. It is urged further that the act of 1901 contained no reference to changes in water mains and tunnels, and that the act of 1903 "imposed upon the railroad the obligation to do the entire work, thus modifying the former act, and, in return, provided for the payment of a large sum of money to the railroad."

It is very certain that the act of 1903 introduced new features into the scheme provided for by the act of 1901, and gives support to the contention of the District. It was testified by the assistant engineer of the District as follows: "The tunnel was not contemplated in the act of 1901. It was built pursuant to the act of 1903, and takes the place of the connection that would have been made to the Sixth street station, had that station remained as contemplated by the act of 1901. There was no tunnel at this point contemplated by the act of 1901."

But, without dwelling further upon this contention, we shall pass to the other contention of the District. The declaration in the case alleges that plaintiff, "acting in that behalf as the agent of the Philadelphia, Baltimore, & Washington Railroad Company, was engaged in constructing for said company certain tunnels at and about the intersection of New Jersey avenue and D street," which the railroad company was required to construct under the acts of Congress of 1901 and 1903.

It is alleged that the construction of the tunnels made necessary the change in the location of certain sewers and water mains. That estimates were made by the 259]District *and notice given thereof to plaintiff, conveying an offer by it to make the changes, provided plaintiff would deposit the cost thereof with the District. That the plaintiff did so upon the condition that the District would use so much of the deposit as would be necessary to make the changes "which the railroad company was required to perform or pay for," and return whatever balances there might be to plaintiff. The balances due are stated.

Issue was joined on the declaration by the District, and it set up, besides, affirmative matter of defense.

It will be observed that a contract between the plaintiff and the District is alleged, and we are to inquire whether it was established or whether some other contract was established. The facts show that the company approached the commissioners for the purpose of having the District undertake the work, as will be seen by the letter of July 22, 1903, which we have quoted above, submitting a plan of the work, which was changed somewhat by the commissioners. The letter was addressed to plaintiff, and contained these significant words: "The estimated cost to you for making the necessary charges in sewers, caused by the construction of tunnel N. J. ave. and D street, S. E., is $7,693." In the other letters the same words are used as to water main, the expense being stated at $488 and $600.

Plaintiff contends that under the circumstances those words were sufficient to cause it "to believe that the District understood that the 'necessary changes' would involve costs to be defrayed by the government, or, at any rate, some party other than the company." But this could only be on the supposition that the act of 1901 controlled and was thought by the District to control. The District thought otherwise,—thought the act of 1903 controlled, and required the work to be done at the expense of the railroad company, and therefore by its agent, the plaintiff; and, granting this position could be disputed, *it[260 nevertheless gives meaning to the language it used when addressing plaintiff as undertaking the work and all of the work, that outside and that within, of the railroad's right of way. And we do not see how plaintiff could have understood otherwise. If the words did not necessarily of themselves point to plaintiff as the party to defray the expense, the amount of the deposit required indicated that it was to cover the work outside of the right of way. The estimate of costs and deposits required amounted to $8,781, and yet it is admitted that the cost of the work within the right of way or space covered by the tunnels was only $1,608.03. The difference is too great to have been overlooked or its importance and meaning misunderstood. It is attempted to be explained, but inadequately. The necessity of the work was seen by plaintiff's engineer in charge, and he also saw the work going on daily outside of the right of way. He explained as follows: "We knew that the estimated amount was excessive for that which was solely within the right of way, but we considered that we were protected in the matter by the law. I did not know the cost of taking out 64 feet of sewer and putting it back. I had no estimate on it. I consider $7,693 for taking out 64 feet of sewer an excessive amount. I did not know that it could be done within $1,600. I made no estimate at all. I know that the total estimate submitted was largely in excess of the cost of work required within the right of way. . . . It was largely in excess, 50 per cent or more, but I only looked at it in a general way. I did not know it was 80 per cent more, and did not figure out the actual or approximate cost."

We repeat, the explanation is inadequate. An excess of more than fifty per cent in an estimate of the work within the right of way necessarily pointed to some other work, and plaintiff was called upon then to make objection if it had any. If it had objected, the District might have [261]*refused to deal with it, and insisted upon the responsibility of the railroad company. It is now in a different situation. This record does not show that the railroad company ever disputed its responsibility. Indeed, there is evidence which makes the other way.

Judgment affirmed.

THOMAS E. JACOB and Frank Hobson, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

S. L. ROBERTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 261-267.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — substituted service.

An order for the substituted service of summons in a suit to quiet title to certain lots in San Diego, California, made conformably to Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 412, is supported by a sufficient showing of diligent inquiry to satisfy the due-process-of-NOTE.—As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

On character of inquiry as to whereabouts of party, necessary to sustain constructive service of process, see note to Grigsby v. Wopschall, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 206.
56 L. ed.

law clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., where it was made upon an affidavit which, after reciting the proceedings, including the issue of the summons and the certificate of the sheriff that "after diligent search and inquiry" he was unable to find the "defendants or either or any of them in this, San Diego, County," further states that unsuccessful inquiries as to the whereabouts of defendants were made of their former neighbors and other residents of San Diego, and of certain county and state officers, and that plaintiff himself made diligent inquiry, and had no knowledge of their residence or post-office address, or where they could be found. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 696-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 169.]

Argued January 25, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which reversed an order of the Superior Court of the County of San Diego, in that state, setting aside a judgment quieting title to land upon substituted service of the summons. Affirmed.

See same case below, 154 Cal. 307, 97 Pac. 671.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Sam Ferry Smith argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

To constitute due process of law there must be a regular course of judicial proceedings, which means that no man shall be condemned in his person or property without due notice and an opportunity of being heard in his defense.

Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; McGehee, Due Process of Law, p. 73.

The clauses in our Constitution guarantying "the law of the land" and "due process of law" have always been held to include the opportunity to present any defenses which might affect the decision of the court or tribunal. The opportunity to defend implies notice of an official inquiry into the facts, and notice and hearing are necessary to "due process of law,"—are indeed the essential elements thereof.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 436, 45 L. ed. 1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Hooker v. Los Angeles, 188 U. S. 314-318, 47 L. ed. 487-491, 63 L.R.A. 471, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399-415, 46 L. ed. 612-619, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

Substituted service of judicial process is only authorized by reason of the necessity of the particular case, and because it is impossible and impracticable to obtain actual service; and when so authorized the substituted service provided for in the statute must be of such character that it will be reasonably probable that the party whose property is placed in jeopardy will be apprised of the pendency of the action, and will be afforded a reasonable opportunity to appear therein and make his defense.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 404; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 321, 33 L. ed. 919, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 737, 24 L. ed. 573; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 389, 42 L. ed. 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; State ex rel. Monnett v. Guilbert, 56 Ohio St. 575, 38 L.R.A. 519, 60 Am. St. Rep. 756, 47 N. E. 557; Shepherd v. Ware, 46 Minn. 174, 24 Am. St. Rep. 212, 48 N. W. 773; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 317; Burton v. Platter, 4 C. C. A. 95, 10 U. S. App. 657, 53 Fed. 903; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 522, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 109, 44 Pac. 345, 32 L.R.A. 82, 53 Am. St. Rep. 165.

Substituted service can be had only where it is legally shown by satisfactory evidence contained in an affidavit that the necessity exists therefor.

Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 407, 94 Am. Dec. 742; Marx v. Ebner, 180 U. S. 314, 45 L. ed. 547, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Thompson v. Circuit Judge, 54 Mich. 237, 19 N. W. 967; Ricketson v. Richardson, 26 Cal. 149; Braly v. Seaman, 30 Cal. 611; Neff v. Pennoyer, 3 Sawy. 274, Fed. Cas. No. 10,083; Johnson v. Hunter, 77 C. C. A. 359, 147 Fed. 133; Flint v. Coffin, 100 C. C. A. 342, 176 Fed. 877; Wheeler v. Cobb, 75 N. C. 22; Romig v. Gillett, 187 U. S. 111-117, 47 L. ed. 97-100, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Stillman v. Rosenberg, — Iowa, —, 78 N. W. 913; Grigsby v. Wopschall, 25 S. D. 564, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 206, 127 N. W. 605; Coughran v. Markley, 15 S. D. 37, 87 N. W. 2; Howard v. De Cordova, 177 U. S. 609, 44 L. ed. 908, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

Mr. William J. Mossholder argued the cause, and, with Mr. Samuel Herrick, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Where there is a nonresident, no showing of diligence is necessary.

Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 69, 1 Am. St. Rep. 34, 13 Pac. 73; Ligare v. California Southern R. Co. 76 Cal. 610, 18 Pac. 777.

The affidavit in this case was more copious and complete and had a fuller statement of facts than was contained in the affidavit passed upon by the supreme court of California in Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651, 66 Pac. 216, 70 Pac. 732.

See also Weis v. Cain, — Cal. —, 73 Pac. 980; People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11, 76 Pac. 646; People v. Norris, 144 Cal. 422, 77

Pac. 998; People v. Mason, 144 Cal. 770. 78 Pac. 1113; Sharp v. Salisbury, 144 Cal. 721, 78 Pac. 282; Shepard v. Mace, 148 Cal. 272, 82 Pac. 1046; Cargile v. Silsbee, 148 Cal. 260, 82 Pac. 1044; Emery v. Kipp, 154 Cal. 83, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 983, 129 Am. St. Rep. 141, 97 Pac. 17, 16 Ann. Cas. 792.

The contents of the affidavit were a sufficient basis for the court's order to publish the summons.

Ligare v. California Southern R. Co. 76 Cal. 614, 18 Pac. 777; Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Miller v. Brinkerhoff, 4 Denio, 118, 47 Am. Dec. 242, Atkins v. Atkins, 9 Neb. 200, 2 N. W. 466; Britton v. Larson, 23 Neb. 806, 37 N. W. 681; Slocum v. Slocum, 17 Wis. 150; Harris v. Claflin, 36 Kan. 543, 13 Pac. 830; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 730, 24 L. ed. 565, 571; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487, 38 Pac. 203; Little v. Chambers, 27 Iowa, 522; Marx v. Ebner, 180 U. S. 314, 45 L. ed. 547, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Kennedy v. New York Life Ins. & T. Co. 101 N. Y. 487, 5 N. E. 774; McDonald v. Cooper, 32 Fed. 745; Storm v. Adams, 56 Wis. 137, 14 N. W. 69; Pike v. Kennedy, 15 Or. 420, 15 Pac. 637; Martin v. Pond, 30 Fed. 18; Cohen v. Portland Lodge No. 142, B. P. O. E. 144 Fed. 266, 81 C. C. A. 483, 152 Fed. 357; Re Faulkner, 4 Hill, 598; Skinnion v. Kelley, 18 N. Y. 355; Belmont v. Cornen, 82 N. Y. 256; Long v. Fife, 45 Kan. 271, 23 Am. St. Rep. 724, 25 Pac. 594; Davis v. Cook, 9 S. D. 319, 69 N. W. 20; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; George v. Nowlan, 38 Or. 537, 64 Pac. 1; Colton v. Rupert, 60 Mich. 318, 27 N. W. 520; Horton v. Monroe, 98 Mich. 195, 57 N. W. 109; Crouter v. Crouter, 133 N. Y. 55, 30 N. E. 726; Bickerdike v. Allen, 157 Ill. 95, 29 L.R.A. 782, 41 N. E. 740; Salisbury v. McGibbon, 58 App. Div. 524, 69 N. Y. Supp. 258; Weis v. Cain, — Cal. —, 73 Pac. 980; Merchant Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444, 115 Pac. 58.

*Mr. Justice McKenna delivered [263 the opinion of the court:

The question involved is whether a judgment quieting title to a piece of land in California, against plaintiffs in error, upon substituted process of the publication of the summons under the statutes of that state, constitutes due process of law under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The judgment was rendered in 1897, and eight years afterwards the entry of judgment was set aside by the trial court upon petition of plaintiffs in error, on the ground that the facts set out in the affidavit for the order of publication did not show the due diligence required by § 412 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the state. The order was reversed by the supreme court of the state. 154 Cal. 307, 97 Pac. 671.

The action against plaintiffs in error was brought by defendant in error in the superior court in the county of San Diego, state of California, by verified complaint on March 25, 1897, upon which summons was issued and returned not served because defendants in the action (plaintiffs in error) could not be found. An amended complaint was filed April 3, 1897. It described the land as lots in the city of San Diego, of which it alleged that the plaintiffs, defendants in error here, were then and had been for a long time in possession, claiming title in fee. It also contained the usual allegations that the defendants, and each of them, claimed some estate or interest in the land, and that it was entirely without any right whatever. It was prayed that the defendants be required to set forth the nature of their or his claim, that it be determined by the decree of the court, and that they and each of them be forever enjoined from asserting any claim in and to the lands adverse to the plaintiffs. General relief was prayed.

Summons was issued and the sheriff's certificate of return recited that "after diligent search and inquiry" he was unable to find the "defendants or either or any of them in this, San Diego, county."

An affidavit for publication of summons was then presented to the court and filed. It recited the proceedings, including the issue of the summons and its return by the sheriff, as we have stated, and further set forth the following, among other matters:

"That the cause of action is fully set forth in his verified complaint on file herein; that said defendants, or either or any of them, after due diligence, cannot be found within this state, and this affiant, in support thereof, states the following facts and circumstances:

"That affiant, for the purpose of finding said defendants and ascertaining their place of residence, has made due and diligent inquiry of the old residents of the city of San Diego, the former neighbors of said defendants, and is informed by D. Choate, who has lived in the city of San Diego over twenty-five years, that he thinks the defendants are not within the state of California, and he does not know of their residence, and has not heard anything of them, or either of them, or of their residence or postoffice address, for more than twenty years; and this affiant is informed by George W. Hazard, who has lived in San Diego for over twenty-five years, that he has no knowledge as to the whereabouts of the said defendants, or either of them. Plaintiff also made inquiry of Ed. Dougherty, who is an old resident of San Diego, and said Ed. Dougherty informed plaintiff that he did not know the address or residence, or where the defendants, or either of them, could be found, and did not believe that they were in the state."

The affidavit also stated that inquiry was made of certain county and city officers, and that they all—

"stated to affiant that they did not know the residence of the defendants, or either of them, their postoffice address, or [265] where they could be found; and none of the above-named parties had heard of the postoffice address or residence of the defendants, or either of them, since they have resided in the said city of San Diego.

"The affiant has made other diligent inquiry to find said defendants, or either or any of them, and has not been able to find them or any of them within —. The affiant has no knowledge of the residence or postoffice address of the defendants or either of them, or where the defendants, or either of them, could be found. This affiant, therefore, says that personal service of said summons cannot be made on the defendants, Thomas E. Jacobs, Thomas Hobson, Edward Hobson, Jacob Hobson, and Frank Hobson, either or any of them."

An order of publication was duly made, and the summons duly published in accordance therewith. Judgment by default was subsequently duly entered.

The assignments of error all express the contention that the trial court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment against plaintiffs in error, and that hence their property has been taken without due process of law.

Undoubtedly, as contended by plaintiffs in error, the essential element of due process of law is an opportunity to be heard, and a necessary condition of such opportunity is notice. Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836. But personal notice is not in all cases necessary. There may be, and necessarily must be, some form of constructive service. Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 51 L. ed. 461, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261. Upon this, however, we do not enlarge, as we do not understand plaintiffs in error contest it. They recognize that substituted service of judicial process may be authorized, but they contend that it can only be authorized when "it is impossible or impractical to obtain actual service, and when so authorized, the substituted service provided for in the statute must be of such character that it will be reasonably probable that the party whose property is placed in jeopardy will be apprised of the pendency of the action and will be afforded a reasonable opportunity to appear therein and make his defenses." (The italics are ours.) We do not understand that plaintiffs in error attack the kind or time of publication, as not giving a reasonable probability of notice or opportunity to be heard, but attack the showing upon which it was made; in other words, that the showing was not sufficient to authorize the publication of notice, the showing not being legally sufficient to justify a resort to that form of notice. It is true plaintiffs in error say that "the designation of the newspaper and the length of time of publication must necessarily depend upon the residence of the defendant, or, at least, his probable whereabouts, unless it is disclosed by the affidavit that plaintiff has no knowledge on the subject, and that he has exercised due diligence to inform himself." These quotations from the argument of plaintiffs in error we make as exhibiting the elements of their contentions.

We make no reference to the statute of the state, as that, as written, is not attacked except, it may be, as it is applied by the supreme court of the state in this and prior decisions. We say "prior decisions," because the court puts its ruling explicitly on one of its prior decisions, and rejects the contention that it had overruled other decisions.

We now turn to what the papers in the case exhibit and what they explicitly or impliedly establish. The property involved were lots in the city of San Diego, of which the plaintiffs in the action, defendants in error here, were in possession at the time of commencing the action, and had been for a long time. The fact has some force. San Diego was of size and importance enough to make it worth while for those having interest in property to assert it. Plaintiffs in error, however, permitted defendants in error to be in possession of property which they now say was and is theirs. Why, they do not explain, 267] nor *where they were. They rest upon the face of the papers, and they having that right, we will consider the sufficiency of the papers under the statute.

We have set out the affidavit. It shows inquiry of the whereabouts of plaintiffs in error of their former neighbors and other residents of San Diego. One of them replied that he had not heard of them, of their residence or postoffice address, for over twenty-five years. Another also had not heard from them and did not believe they were in the state. Inquiry was also made of nineteen county officers and three state officers, sheriffs, county clerks, tax collectors, county and state; assessors, county and state; and of the postmasters of the state. Neighbors, residents, and officers who, in the intercourse and business of life would almost necessarily come in contact with plaintiffs in error or hear from them, had no knowledge of them. It may, however, be said, and indeed is said, that other parts of the state were not searched, and that this was necessary, as the process of the court could run to every county in the state. The requirement is extreme and we are cited to no cases in which it is decided to be necessary. The affidavit shows, besides, that defendant in error made diligent inquiry to find plaintiffs in error, and had no knowledge of their residence or postoffice address, or of either of them, or where they or either of them could be found.

We think plaintiffs in error were afforded due process.

Judgment affirmed.

*KER & COMPANY Plffs. in Err., [268
v.

ALBERT R. COUDEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 268-279.)

Waters — alluvion — seashore.

Land formed gradually in the Philippine Islands since 1811 by the action of the sea must be deemed to belong to the Sovereign, and not to the owner of the upland, in view of the declaration of the Spanish Law of Waters of 1866, effective in the Philippine Islands in 1871, that lands added to the shores by the accessions and accretions caused by the sea shall belong to the public domain unless the government shall declare otherwise, which must be regarded as expressing the understanding of the codifiers as to what the earlier law had been.

[For other cases, see Waters, 122-141, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 11.]

Argued April 27, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of NOTE.—On the law of accretion to shore lands—see note to De Lassus v. Faherty, 58 L.R.A. 193.

As to the law of alluvion, accretion, and reliction—see notes to Kennedy v. Hunt, 12 L. ed. U. S. 829; St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 L. ed. U. S. 59; Jefferies v. East Omaha Land Co. 33 L. ed. U. S. 872; and Kansas v. Meriwether, 106 C. C. A. 198.

First Instance of the Province of Cavite, in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 6 Philippine, 732.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Oscar Sutro argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. S. Pillsbury, Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The very language used in the Partidas is wholly inconsistent with the construction thereof adopted by the courts below, that land which is once seashore continues to be such even after, by reason of accretion, the high-water line has receded therefrom.

Having expressly mentioned the particular things which "belong in common to all creatures," the lawmakers have thereby impliedly said that no other things than those enumerated "belonging in common to all creatures." Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. ed. 547; Sturges v. The Collector (Sturges v. Draper) 12 Wall. 19, 20 L. ed. 255; Arthur v. Cumming, 91 U. S. 362, 23 L. ed. 438.

The "shore" at the civil law extended to that part of the land washed by the highest tides.

Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 399; Hall, Mexican Law, 448; United States v. Pacheco, 2 Wall. 587, 590, 17 L. ed. 865, 866.

The rule at common law, as under the Partidas, is that the "shore" of the sea belongs to the Crown, for the use of the public. But the rule at common law is that accretions from the sea belong to the riparian owner.

Rex v. Yarborough, 1 Dow. & C. 178, 2 Bligh, N. R. 147, 5 Bing. 163, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 458; 3 Kent, Com. 428; 2 Bl. Com. 262; New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 9 L. ed. 573; Saulet v. Shepherd, 4 Wall. 502, 18 L. ed. 442; Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. 57, 17 L. ed. 818; St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 23 L. ed. 59; Jefferies v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 33 L. ed. 872, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

Where it appears from a later statute in pari materia that a term is therein used in a particular sense, then it is to be presumed that, in the earlier statute, such term was used in the same sense.

Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1, 3 L. ed. 19; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 372, 13 L. ed. 179; Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. 80, 13 L. ed. 901; Farmers' & M. 56 L. ed.

Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196.

The appellate court below wholly misconceived the purpose and effect of the maxim expressio unius, etc., as a rule of interpretation.

Hare v. Horton, 5 Barn. & Ad. 715, 2 Nev. & M. 428, 3 L. J. K. B. N. S. 41, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 699.

Under the rule that statutes, if doubtful, must receive a reasonable construction, it follows that, under the Partidas, the title to land formed by accretion on the borders of the sea is not in the Crown, but is in the riparian proprietor.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 42 L. ed. 775, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176, 187, 29 L. ed. 121, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 813; New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 717, 9 L. ed. 573, 594; Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 192, 33 L. ed. 872, 877, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. 57, 67, 17 L. ed. 818, 821; Lamprey v. State, 52 Minn. 181, 18 L.R.A. 670, 38 Am. St. Rep. 541, 53 N. W. 1139.

The laws of Spain, as embodied in the Partidas, were drawn largely from the Institutes of Justinian.

Taylor, Science of Jurisprudence, p. 162.

The interpretation placed upon the provisions of the Roman law by the writers upon that subject ought to be followed in construing a statute of a country which has adopted such statute from the civil law.

Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707, 30 L. ed. 776, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Groves v. Sentell, 153 U. S. 465, 38 L. ed. 785, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 898; Meyer v. Richards, 163 U. S. 385, 41 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148.

The Roman law writers all agree that, under the provisions of the Justinian Code, accretions from the sea belong to the riparian owner.

Browne, Roman Law, 1802, 2d ed. p. 239; Hale, De Jure Maris; Lord Mackenzie, Roman Law, p. 177; Angell, Tide Waters, 2d ed. p. 249.

The doctrine of the Roman law is the same as that of the common law of England, that accretions from the sea belong to the riparian proprietor.

St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 67, 23 L. ed. 59, 63.

Under the Partidas, accretions formed by the action of the sea, when they become dry land by reason of the recession of the high-water mark, belong to the riparian owner.

2 Amandi, Civil Code, p. 95; 6 Scaevola, Commentary on Civil Code, p. 338; Escriche, Dictionary of Law, p. 449.

Under the civil law as well as under the common law, the right to future alluvion is considered a vested right, which, once existing, cannot be taken away by any act of the lawmaking body.

Municipality No. 2 v. Orleans Cotton Press, 18 La. 122, 36 Am. Dec. 624; St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 23 L. ed. 59; Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 369, 36 L. ed. 190, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Freeland v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 197 Pa. 529, 58 L.R.A. 206, 80 Am. St. Rep. 850, 47 Atl. 745; Knudsen v. Omanson, 10 Utah, 124, 37 Pac. 250.

In England what is gained to the land by gradual and imperceptible addition goes to the neighboring proprietor, while that which is gained to the shore by similar imperceptible change is added to the right of the Crown.

Bell, Law of Scotland, 10th ed. § 642.

The provisions of the Spanish Law of Ports of 1880 make it clear that art. 4 of the Law of Waters of 1866 does not have the effect of vesting title to accretions, which have become dry land, in the government.

Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1, 3 L. ed. 19.

If the lawmakers had intended that, under the Law of Waters, accretions from the sea should be a part of the public domain, even after they had become dry land, it would have been easy to say so; and it is hardly to be believed that this would not have been done, instead of leaving the question to be settled by the uncertain result of litigation and judicial decision.

Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 627, 25 L. ed. 188, 189; Carino v. Philippine Islands, 212 U. S. 449, 460, 53 L. ed. 594, 597, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334.

Accretions by the sea to the land adjoining the shore belong to the owner of the adjacent land.

Guyot, Repertoire Universelle, cited in 2 Hall, Am. L. J. p. 324; Lavasle, cited in 2 Hall, Am. L. J. p. 328; Desinart, cited in 2 Hall, Am. L. J. p. 329; Eseriche, Diccionario, title, "Aluvion."

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Spanish commentators upon the law of Spain support the position of the government.

2 Arrazola, Enciclopedia Española, Decreto y Administración, Madrid, 1849, pp. 580-583; 2 Fernandez, Codigos 6 Estudios Fundamentales, p. 86; 7 Alcubilla, Diccionario de la Administración Española, 1887, p. 108. See also 2 Marcadé, Explication du Code Napoleon, 5th ed. p. 439; Littré, French Dictionary, "lais," "alluvion;" Zeller v. Southern Yacht Club, 34 La. Ann. 839.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by Ker & Company to recover possession of land held by the defendant under a claim of title in the United States. The land is the present extremity of Sangley point, in the province of Cavite and island of Luzon, projecting into Manila bay. It has been formed gradually by action of the sea; all of it since 1811, about three-quarters since 1856, and a part since 1871. For a long time the property was used by the Spanish Navy, and it now is occupied by the present government as a naval station, works costing more than half a million dollars having been erected upon it. The plaintiffs claim title under conveyances from the owner of the upland. The Philippine courts held that under the Partidas, III., tit. 28, laws 3, 4, 6, 24, and 26, and the Law of Waters of 1866, the title to the accretions remained in the government, and the vexed question has been brought to this court.

That the question is a vexed one is shown not only by the different views of Spanish commentators, but by the contrary provisions of modern codes and by the occasional intimations of the doctors of the Roman law. Justinian's Institutes, 2, 1, 20 (Gaius, II. 70), followed by the Partidas, 3, 28, 26, give the alluvial increase of river banks to the owner of the bank. If this is to be taken as an example illustrating a general principle, there is an end of the matter. But the Roman law is not like a deed or a modern code prepared uno flatu. History plays too large a part to make it safe to generalize from a single passage in so easy a fashion. Alongside of the rule as to rivers we find that the right of alluvion is not recognized for lakes and ponds (D. 41, 1, 12),—a rule often repeated in the civil law codes; e. g., Philippine Civil Code of 1889, arts. 366, 367; Code Napoleon, art. 550; Italy, Civil Code 1865, art. 454; Mexico, art. 797. If we are to generalize, the analogy of lakes to the sea is closer than that of rivers. We find further that In agris limitatis jus alluvionis locum non habet. And the right of alluvion is denied for the agrum manu captum, which was limitatum in order that it might be known (exactly) what was granted. D. 41, 1, 16. The gloss of Accursius treats this as the reason for denying the jus alluvionis. If this reason again were generalized, it might lead to a contrary result from the passage in the Institutes. Grotius treats the whole matter as arbitrary, to be governed by local rules, and both the doctrine as to rivers and the distinction as to accurately bounded lands as rational enough. De J. B. & P. Lib. 2, cap. 8, 11, 12. A respectable modern writer thinks that it was a mistake to preserve the passage concerning definitely bounded grants in the Digest, 1 Demangeat, Droit Romain, 2d ed. 441 ("antiquit, Puchta, Pandekten, § 165), but, so far as we have observed, this is an exceptional view, and from the older commentators that we have examined down to the late brilliant and admirable work of Girard, Droit Romain, 4th ed. 324, this passage seems to be accepted as a part of the law. At all events, it shows that, as we have said, it is unsafe to go much beyond what we find in the books. And to illustrate a little further the uncertainty as to the Roman doctrine, we may add that Donellus mentions *the opinion that alluvion from the sea goes to the private owner, only to remark that the texts cited do not support it (De Jur. Civ. IV., c. 27, 1 Opera, 1828 ed. 839.n), and treats the rule of the Institutes as peculiar to rivers, as also Vin-nius, in his comment on the passage stating the rule, seems to do; while Huberus, on the other hand, thinks that rivers furnish the principle that ought to prevail. Praelectiones, II., tit. 1, 34.

The seashore flowed by the tides, unlike the banks of rivers, was public property; in Spain, belonging to the sovereign power. Inst. II. tit. 1, 3, 4, 5. D. 43, 8, 3. Partidas, III., tit. 28, 3, 4. And it is a somewhat different proposition from that laid down as to rivers, if it should be held that a vested title is withdrawn by accessions to what was owned before. Perhaps a stronger argument could be based on the rule that the title to the river bed changes as the river changes its place. Part. III. tit. 28. Law 31. Inst. 2. 2, 23. D. 41. 1. 7, 5. But we are less concerned with theory than with precedent in a matter like this, whether we agree with Grotius or not in his general view. The Spanish commentators do not help us, as they go little beyond a naked statement one way or the other. It seems to us that the best evidence of the view prevailing in Spain is to be found in the codification which presumably embodies it. The Law of Waters of 1866, which became effective in the Philippines in September, 1871, and the validity of which we see no reason to doubt, after declaring, like the Partidas, that the shores (playas), or spaces alternately covered and uncovered by the sea, are part of the national domain and for public use (arts. 1, 3), goes on thus: "Art. 4. The lands added to the shores by the accessions and accretions caused by the sea belong to the public domain. When they are not (longer) washed by the waters of the sea, and are not necessary for objects of public utility, nor for the establishment of special industries, nor for the *coast guard service, the[278 government shall [will?] declare them property of the adjacent estates, in increase of the same."

Notwithstanding the argument that this article is only a futile declaration concerning accessions to the shore while it remains such in a literal sense, that is, washed by the tide, we think it plain that it includes and principally means additions that turn the shore to dry land. These all remain subject to public ownership unless and until the government shall decide that they are not needed for the purposes mentioned, and shall declare them to belong to the adjacent estates. The later provision in article 9, that the public easement for salvage, etc., shall advance and recede as the sea recedes or advances, simply determines that neither public nor private ownership shall exclude the customary public use from the new place. The Spanish Law of Ports of 1880, like the Law of Waters, asserts the title of the state, although it confers private rights when there is no public need.

The presumption that the foregoing provisions of the Law of Waters express the understanding of the codifiers as to what the earlier law had been, becomes almost inexpugnable when we find that the other leading civil law countries have adopted the same doctrine. The Code Napoleon, after laying down the Roman rule for alluvion in rivers (arts. 556, 557), adds at the end of the latter article: "Ce droit n'a pas lieu à l'égard des relais des la mer," which seems to have been adopted without controversy at the conférence. See further, Marcadé, Explication, 5th ed. vol. 2, p. 439. And compare 2 Hall's Am. Law Journal, 307. 324, 329. 333. The Civil Code of Italy, 1865, art. 454, is to similar effect. See also Chile, Civil Code, art. 650. The supreme court of Louisiana in like manner confines the private acquisition of alluvion to rivers and running streams, and denies *the[279 private right in the case of lakes and the sea. Zeller v. Southern Yacht Club, 34 La. Ann. 837. And the provision of the Louisiana Code, art. 510, is like those of France, Italy, and Spain. The court of first instance below refers to judgments of the Supreme Court of Spain that seems to look in the same direction. We have neither heard nor found anything on the other side that seems to us to approach the foregoing considerations in weight, not to speak of the respect that we must feel for the concurrent opinion of both the courts below upon a matter of local law with which they are accustomed to deal. Of course, we are dealing with the law of the Philippines, not with that which prevails in this country, whether of mixed antecedents or the common law.

As the case was brought up on the single question that we have discussed, the judgment of the court below must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I cannot agree with the conclusion of the court. It seems to be conceded that it is not necessarily determined by the authorities which are cited. I think the better deduction from them is that they only declare the constant integrity of the shore, and the dominion of the government over it, whether it recede or advance. When it ceases to be washed by the tides or the seas, it becomes part of the upland, and belongs to the owner of the upland. And this is but the application of the principle, said to be of natural justice, that he who loses by the encroachments of the sea should gain by its recession. Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. 57, 67, 17 L. ed. 818, 821.

280]* ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

TIMOTHY O'CONNOR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 280-287.)

Foreign corporations — state taxation — excluding from doing local business — commerce — due process of law.

1. The tax imposed under Colo. Laws 1907, chap. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company, the greater part of whose property and business is outside the state, and whose business done within the state is principally interstate commerce, is invalid under the commerce and due process of law clauses of the Federal Constitution, even if the temporary forfeiture of the right to do business, declared by the statute in case of failure to pay the tax, can be confined by construction to business wholly within the state.

[For other cases, see Corporations, XII. b, 2; Commerce, 250-255; Constitutional Law, 536-540, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — payment under protest — recovery back.

2. Payment of the unconstitutional tax imposed under Colo. Laws 1907, chap. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company whose business is principally interstate commerce, cannot be deemed voluntary, so as to defeat an action to recover it back, where the company, failing to pay the tax, would incur the risk of having its contracts disputed and its business injured by reason of the forfeiture clause in such statute, and of finding the tax greatly increased in case it finally had to pay.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 608-612, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — recovering back — liability of officer to suit.

3. The secretary of state who collects and retains the unconstitutional tax imposed by Colo. Sess. Laws 1907, chap. 211, upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company engaged principally in interstate commerce, is liable to a suit to recover back the tax, as paid under duress and protest,—especially in view of the provisions of § 6, that, if it shall be judicially determined that any corporation has erroneously paid the tax, the auditor may draw a warrant for its refunding upon the filing of a certified copy of the judgment.

[Recovery back of taxes paid under protest, see Taxes, 608-612, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 162.]

Argued January 24 and 25, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in a suit to recover back a tax upon the capital stock of a foreign railway company. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert Dunlap argued the cause, and, with Messrs. H. T. Rogers and Gardiner Lathrop, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Payment of the tax by plaintiff was involuntary.

NOTE.—On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

On the recognition or exclusion of foreign corporations—see notes to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole, 24 L.R.A. 289, and McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13.

State licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A.

179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

As to when taxes illegally assessed may be recovered back—see note to Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 21 L. ed. U. S. 63.

223 U. S.

Swift & C. & B. Co. v. United States, 111 U. S. 22, 28 L. ed. 341, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 63; Robertson v. Frank Bros. Co. 132 U. S. 17, 23, 33 L. ed. 236, 238, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; United States v. Edmondston, 181 U. S. 505, 506, 45 L. ed. 974, 975, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Arkansas Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 44 L. ed. 159, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Philadelphia v. The Collector (Philadelphia v. Diehl) 5 Wall. 720, 18 L. ed. 614; Herold v. Kahn, 86 C. C. A. 598, 159 Fed. 608; Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Herriott, 109 Iowa, 606, 77 Am. St. Rep. 548, 80 N. W. 665; Steele v. Williams, 8 Exch. 625, 22 L. J. Exch. N. S. 225, 17 Jur. 464; Ratterman v. American Exp. Co. 49 Ohio St. 608, 32 N. E. 754; Catoir v. Watterson, 38 Ohio St. 319; United States v. Rothstein, 109 C. C. A. 521, 187 Fed. 268; Chicago v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 218 Ill. 40, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 770, 75 N. E. 803; State ex rel. McCarty v. Nelson, 41 Minn. 27, 4 L.R.A. 300, 42 N. W. 548; Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 153, 14 Revised Rep. 718; Dew v. Parsons, 2 Barn. & Ald. 562, 1 Chitty, 295, 21 Revised Rep. 404; Atkinson v. Denby, 6 Hurlst. & N. 778; Morgan v. Palmer, 2 Barn. & C. 734, 4 Dowl. & R. 283, 2 L. J. K. B. 145, 26 Revised Rep. 537; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 527; Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 538; Hendy v. Soule, 1 Deady, 400, Fed. Cas. No. 6,359; Harvey v. Olney, 42 Ill. 336.

The officer who, under color of office, exacts and receives an illegal fee or charge, is not protected by law, because he acts without the law, and is therefore personally liable, especially if notified at the time that suit will be brought to recover back the amount.

Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 63; Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Herriott, 109 Iowa, 606, 77 Am. St. Rep. 548, 80 N. W. 665; Steele v. Williams, 8 Exch. 625, 22 L. J. Exch. N. S. 225, 17 Jur. 464; Ripley v. Gelston, 9 Johns. 201, 6 Am. Dec. 271; First Nat. Bank v. Watkins, 21 Mich. 489; Ogden v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 10,458; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137, 9 L. ed. 373.

The action is properly maintainable against defendant individually, as he made the illegal demand and received the money with notice of protest. It is alleged he still retains the money, but that is not important. He could protect himself and will in fact be protected. He should be held liable because the state could not be sued and plaintiff would be remediless. This action under an unconstitutional statute is not that of the state. It is unlawful, and he cannot set up the statute, because, being void, it affords no lawful authority or protection.
56 L. ed.

Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 286-291, 29 L. ed. 185, 191-193, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962.

This court has held in two cases that injunction to restrain the collection of a license tax would not be maintainable because plaintiff might pay under protest and recover back at law.

Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. ed. 273, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Arkansas Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 44 L. ed. 159, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

Mr. Archibald A. Lee, Deputy Attorney General of Colorado, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Benjamin Griffith, Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The payment by plaintiff was voluntary and is not recoverable.

Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U. S. 210, 213, 24 L. ed. 409, 410; Union P. R. Co. v. Dodge County, 98 U. S. 541, 543, 25 L. ed. 196, 197; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. ed. 1016, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Chesebrough v. United States, 192 U. S. 253, 48 L. ed. 432, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; United States v. New York & C. Mail S. S. Co. 200 U. S. 488, 50 L. ed. 569, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Oceanic S. S. Co. v. Tappan, 16 Blatchf. 296, Fed. Cas. No. 10,405; Benson v. Monroe, 7 Cush. 131, 54 Am. Dec. 716; Wolfe v. Marshal, 52 Mo. 170; Baltimore v. Lefferman, 4 Gill, 425, 45 Am. Dec. 145; Johnson v. Crook County, 53 Or. 329, 133 Am. St. Rep. 834, 100 Pac. 294; San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. v. Dinwiddie, 8 Sawy. 312, 13 Fed. 789; 2 Cooley, Tax. 3d ed. pp. 1495-1501; 30 Cyc. 1311; Manning v. Poling, 114 Iowa, 24, 83 N. W. 895, 86 N. W. 30; Wessel v. D. S. B. Johnston Land & Mortg. Co. 3 N. D. 162, 44 Am. St. Rep. 529, 54 N. W. 922; DeGraff v. Ramsey County, 46 Minn. 319, 48 N. W. 1135; Maxwell v. San Luis Obispo County, 71 Cal. 466, 12 Pac. 484; Southern R. Co. v. Florence, 141 Ala. 493, 37 So. 844, 3 Ann. Cas. 106; Betts v. Reading, 93 Mich. 77, 52 N. W. 940; C. & J. Michel Brewing Co. v. State, 19 S. D. 302, 70 L.R.A. 911, 103 N. W. 40; Weber v. Kirkendall, 44 Neb. 770, 63 N. W. 35.

The plaintiff could have enjoined any effort to enforce the collection of the tax.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280.

Money paid to an official under compulsion cannot be recovered from him individually in an action for money had and received, for it was received, not to the use or for the benefit of the individual making the payment, but for the use and benefit of the state or other body or principal for whom the collection is made.

Davis v. Bader, 54 Mo. 169; Fish v. Higbee, 22 R. I. 223, 47 Atl. 212; King v. United States, 99 U. S. 229, 25 L. ed. 373; Loring v. Frue, 104 U. S. 223, 26 L. ed. 713; Waters v. State, 1 Gill, 308.

285] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover taxes paid under duress and protest, the plaintiff contending that the law under which the tax was levied is unconstitutional. A demurrer to the declaration was sustained by the circuit court. The tax is a tax of 2 cents upon each one thousand dollars of the plaintiff's capital stock. Session Laws of Colorado, 1907, chap. 211. The plaintiff is a Kansas corporation. The greater part of its property and business is outside of the state of Colorado, and of the business done within that state but a small proportion is local, the greater part being commerce among the states. Therefore it is obvious that the tax is of the kind decided by this court to be unconstitutional, since the decision below in the present case, even if the temporary forfeiture of the right to do business declared by the statute be confined by construction, as it seems to have been below, to business wholly within the state. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280. The defendant did not argue that the tax could be maintained, but contended only that the payment was voluntary, and that the defendant is not the proper person to be sued.

It is reasonable that a man who denies the legality of a tax should have a clear and certain remedy. The rule being established that, apart from special circumstances, he cannot interfere by injunction with the state's collection of its revenues, an action at law to recover back what he has paid is the alternative left. Of course, we are speaking of those cases where the state is not put to an action if the citizen refuses to pay. In these latter he can interpose his objections by way of defense; but when, as is common, the state has a [286] more summary remedy, such as *distress, and the party indicates by protest that he is yielding to what he cannot prevent, courts sometimes, perhaps, have been a little too slow to recognize the implied duress under which payment is made. But even if the state is driven to an action, if, at the same time, the citizen is put at a serious disadvantage in the assertion of his legal, in this case of his constitutional, rights, by defense in the suit, justice may require that he should be at liberty to avoid those disadvantages by paying promptly and bringing suit on his side. He is entitled to assert his supposed right on reasonably equal terms. See Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 146, 52 L. ed. 714, 723, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 764. If he should seek an injunction on the principle of that case and of Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286, he would run the same risk as if he waited to be sued.

In this case the law, besides giving an action of debt to the state, provides that every corporation that fails to pay the tax shall forfeit its right to do business within the state until the tax is paid, and also shall pay a penalty of 10 per cent for every six months or fractional part of six months of default after May 1 of each year. It may be that the forfeiture of the right to do business would not be authoritatively established except by a quo warranto provided for in a following section, but before or without the proceeding, the effect of the forfeiture clause upon the plaintiff's subsequent contracts and business might be serious (see Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280), and in any event the penalty would go on accruing during all the time that might be spent before the validity of the defense could be adjudged. As appears from the decision below, the plaintiff could have had no certainty of ultimate success, and we are of opinion that it was not called upon to take the risk of having its contracts disputed and its business injured, and of finding the tax more or less nearly doubled in case it finally had to pay. In other words, we are of opinion that the payment *was made under duress. See [287] Gaar, S. & Co. v. Shannon, decided this day. [223 U. S. 468, post, 510, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236.]

The other question is whether the defendant is liable to the suit. The defendant collected the money, and it is alleged that he still has it. He was notified when he received it that the plaintiff disputed his right. If he had no right, as he had not, to collect the money, his doing so in the name of the state cannot protect him. Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 63. See Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962. It is said that the money, as soon as collected, belonged to the state.

Very likely it would have but for the plaintiff's claim, assuming it to remain an identified trust fund; but the plaintiff's claim was paramount to that of the state, and even if the collector of the tax were authorized to appropriate the specific money and to make himself debtor for the amount, it would be inconceivable that the state should attempt to hold him after he had been required to repay the sum. Moreover, it would seem that the statute contemplated the course taken by the plaintiff, and provided against any difficulty in which the Secretary of State otherwise might find himself in case of a disputed tax. For it provides by § 6 that "if it shall be determined in any action at law or in equity that any corporation has erroneously paid said tax to the Secretary of State," upon the filing of a certified copy of the judgment the auditor may draw a warrant for the refunding of the tax, and the state treasurer may pay it. We must presume that a judgment in the present action would satisfy the law.

Judgment reversed.

288] *IRA W. COLLINS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 288-298.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — equal protection of the laws — licensing physicians — osteopaths.

1. The requirements of Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, with respect to licensing and

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954.

On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme 56 L. ed.

registering medical practitioners, which do not contemplate any inquiry into the applicant's knowledge of therapeutics or materia medica, do not infringe the rights, under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., of a person holding a diploma from a school of osteopathy, who has not presented this diploma to the board of medical examiners created by the statute, or attempted to secure a license in any form.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law. IV. a, 5, a; IV. b, 7, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may question validity.

2. An osteopath whose constitutional rights are not infringed by the requirements of Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, with respect to registering and licensing medical practitioners, cannot complain that the statute may be unconstitutional in other cases, or as to followers of Christian Science, or others.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — statutory construction.

3. The ruling of the state court that osteopaths are persons practising medicine, within the meaning of Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, providing for licensing and registering medical practitioners, will be followed by the Federal Supreme Court in determining the constitutionality of such statute on writ of error to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124-2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Physicians — licensing — osteopaths — scientific training.

4. The state may constitutionally require, as is done by Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, that osteopaths professing to help certain human ailments by scientific manipulation affecting the nerve centers shall have had a scientific training.

[For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

As to what constitutes practising medicine within the state—see note to Missouri v. Davis, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1023.

As to application of statutes regulating the practice of medicine to persons giving special kinds of treatment—see notes to State v. Smith, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 179; Witty v. State, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1297; State v. Bresee, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 103; and O'Neil v. State, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 763.

On determining character or standing of professional school or college for purpose of license statutes—see note to State ex rel. Mauldin v. Matthews, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 735.

Physicians — licensing — single treatment.

5. The state legislature, when prohibiting the general practice of medicine for money by persons not licensed or registered, under Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, could constitutionally attach the same condition to a single transaction of a kind not likely to occur otherwise than as an instance of a general practice, such as the treatment of a single patient for hay fever by osteopathy.

[For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Physicians — licensing — paid and gratuitous services.

6. The distinction between gratuitous medical services and those paid for, made by Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, providing for registering and licensing medical practitioners who charge a compensation for services, does not render the statute repugnant to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Physicians — licensing established business.

7. The prohibition against the practice of medicine by persons not licensed or registered, which is made by Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, is not invalid as to one who had an established business when the law was passed.

[For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — habeas corpus.

8. The Federal Supreme Court will review by writ of error a decision of a state court, refusing habeas corpus to a person in custody upon the charge of practising medicine without complying with the requirements of Tex. Laws 1907, chap. 123, with respect to licensing and registration, where, the facts being admitted, the question of the validity of that statute under the Federal Constitution appears as plainly as it ever will.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1143, 1144, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 165.]

Argued January 25 and 26, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Criminal Appeals of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the County Court of El Paso County in that state, refusing relief by habeas corpus to a person in custody upon the charge of practising osteopathy without a license. Affirmed.

See same case below, 57 Tex. Crim. Rep. 2, 121 S. W. 501.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Millard Patterson argued the cause, and, with Mr. John F. Woodson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Texas statute in question is unconstitutional.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114-128, 32 L. ed. 623-628, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Nelson v. State Bd. of Health, 108 Ky. 769, 50 L.R.A. 383, 57 S. W. 501; State v. Mylod, 20 R. I. 632, 41 L.R.A. 428, 40 Atl. 753, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 238; State v. Biggs, 133 N. C. 729, 64 L.R.A. 139, 98 Am. St. Rep. 731, 46 S. E. 401; Bennett v. Ware, 4 Ga. App. 293, 61 S. E. 546; State v. Liffing, 61 Ohio St. 39, 46 L.R.A. 334, 76 Am. St. Rep. 358, 55 N. E. 168, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 516; State v. McKnight, 131 N. C. 717, 59 L.R.A. 187, 42 S. E. 580; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

Mr. Jewell P. Lightfoot, Attorney General of Texas, argued the cause, and, with Mr. James D. Walthall, First Assistant Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power of a state to make reasonable provisions for determining the qualifications of those engaged in the practice of medicine, and punishing those who attempt to engage therein in defiance of such statutory provisions, is firmly settled.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 195, 42 L. ed. 1005, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Gray v. Connecticut, 159 U. S. 74, 40 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Foster v. Police Comrs. 102 Cal. 483, 41 Am. St. Rep. 194, 37 Pac. 763; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Meffert v. State Bd. of Medical Registration (Meffert v. Packer) 66 Kan. 710, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 811, 72 Pac. 247; State ex rel. Chapman v. State Medical Examiners, 34 Minn. 387, 26 N. W. 123; State ex rel. Feller v. State Medical Examiners, 34 Minn. 391, 26 N. W. 125.

There is no vested right to practise either the medical or legal profession, free from supervision and regulation by the state.

Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. 130, 21 L. ed. 442; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

The 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not prohibit the state, in the exercise of its police power, to pass and enforce such law as, in its judgment, will promote the health, morals, and general welfare of the people.

People v. King, 110 N. Y. 418, 1 L.R.A. 293, 6 Am. St. Rep. 389, 18 N. E. 245.

The constitutionality of statutes regulating the admission of members of the various branches of the medical profession has frequently been passed upon by the courts, and they have been uniformly upheld as a valid exercise of the police power of the state, infringing no provisions of either Federal or state Constitutions.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; People v. Phippin, 70 Mich. 6, 37 N. W. 888; People v. Reetz, 127 Mich. 87, 86 N. W. 396, affirmed in 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 780, 781; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Eastman v. State, 109 Ind. 281, 58 Am. Rep. 400, 10 N. E. 97; State v. Creditor, 44 Kan. 568, 21 Am. St. Rep. 306, 24 Pac. 346; Craig v. State Medical Examiners, 12 Mont. 211, 29 Pac. 532; State ex rel. Hygea Medical College v. Coleman, 64 Ohio St. 377, 55 L.R.A. 105, 60 N. E. 568; Allopathic State Medical Examiners v. Fowler, 50 La. Ann. 1358, 24 So. 809; People v. Moorman, 86 Mich. 433, 49 N. W. 263; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 616, 41 L.R.A. 212, 50 N. E. 750; Williams v. People, 121 Ill. 87, 11 N. E. 881; State ex rel. Powell v. State Medical Examining Board, 32 Minn. 325, 50 Am. Rep. 575, 20 N. W. 238; Thompson v. Staats, 15 Wend. 395; Hewitt v. Charier, 16 Pick. 353; State v. Hale, 15 Mo. 606; Bibber v. Simpson, 59 Me. 181; Dankworth v. State, — Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 136 S. W. 788.

The statute does not provide for an unreasonable and unjust classification.

Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 190, 64 N. E. 862.

One who practises what is known as osteopathy is a practitioner of medicine.

Little v. State, 60 Neb. 749, 51 L.R.A. 717, 84 N. W. 248, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 549; State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 55 L.R.A. 791, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 62 N. E. 325. See also State v. Edmunds, 127 Iowa, 333, 101 N. W. 431; State v. Wilhite, 132 Iowa, 226, 109 N. W. 730, 11 Ann. Cas. 180.

The giving of Christian Science treatment for a fee for the cure of disease is practising medicine within the meaning of the statutes regulating such practise in the state of Ohio.

State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 70 L.R.A. 835, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063, 2 Ann. Cas. 898; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 191, 64 N. E. 862.

56 L. ed.

Mr. C. E. Lane, Assistant Attorney General of Texas, with Messrs. James N. Wilkerson, Timothy J. Scofield, and Frank J. Loesch, also filed a brief for defendant in error:

The act under consideration does not violate that part of § 1 of the 14th Amendment which declares that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

A. This prohibition applies only to those privileges and immunities which are incident to citizenship of the United States, as distinguished from citizenship of the several states.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 74, 21 L. ed. 394, 408; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Hall v. Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 29 L. ed. 615, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

B. The right to practise medicine without regulation is not one of the privileges and immunities incident to citizenship of the United States.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 74, 21 L. ed. 394, 408; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231.

This act was passed under the police power of the state of Texas and is a proper exercise of that power in scope and purpose. The details of such legislation rest primarily within the discretion of the state legislature. This court can only interfere when fundamental rights guaranteed under the Federal Constitution are violated by such statutes.

Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Meffert v. Packer, 195 U. S. 625, 49 L. ed. 350, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; People v. Apfelbaum, 251 Ill. 18, 95 N. E. 995; State v. Smith, 233 Mo. 242, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 179, 135 S. W. 465; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 190, 64 N. E. 862; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 607, 41 L.R.A. 212, 50 N. E. 750; Bragg v. State, 134 Ala. 165, 58 L.R.A. 925, 32 So. 767; State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 24 L.R.A. 68, 58 N. W. 728; Little v. State, 60 Neb. 749, 51 L.R.A. 717, 84 N. W. 248, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 549; State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 55 L.R.A. 791, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 62 N. E. 325; State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 70 L.R.A. 835, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063, 2 Ann. Cas. 898; People v. Allcutt, 117 App. Div. 546, 102 N. Y. Supp. 678, affirmed in 189 N. Y. 517, 81 N. E. 1171; People v. Mulford, 140 App. Div. 716, 125 N. Y. Supp. 680, affirmed in 202 N. Y. 624, 96 N. E. 1125; People v. Reetz, 127 Mich. 87, 86 N. W. 396; People v. Phippin, 70 Mich. 6, 37 N. W. 888; State v. Miller, 146 Iowa, 521, 124 N. W. 167; State v. Adkins, 145 Iowa, 671, 124 N. W. 627; State v. Wilhite, 132 Iowa, 226, 109 N. W. 730, 11 Ann. Cas. 180; State v. Edmunds, 127 Iowa, 333, 101 N. W. 431; State v. Heath, 125 Iowa, 585, 101 N. W. 429; State v. Bair, 112 Iowa, 466, 51 L.R.A. 776, 84 N. W. 532; Scholle v. State, 90 Md. 729, 50 L.R.A. 411, 46 Atl. 326; State v. Yegge, 19 S. D. 234, 69 L.R.A. 504, 103 N. W. 17, 9 Ann. Cas. 202.

The provisions of this statute are not such as result in any arbitrary deprivation of plaintiff in error's liberty or property, or of his right to engage in a lawful calling.

1. The qualifications of learning, skill, and character required by such acts depend primarily upon the judgment of the state as to their necessity. They are in this case appropriate to the profession of healing, and are attainable by reasonable study and application, and no objection can be made to them merely on account of their stringency or difficulty.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 190, 64 N. E. 862; State v. Bair, 112 Iowa, 466, 51 L.R.A. 776, 84 N. W. 532; State v. Heath, 125 Iowa, 585, 101 N. W. 429; State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 70 L.R.A. 835, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063, 2 Ann. Cas. 898; People v. Apfelbaum, 251 Ill. 18, 95 N. E. 995; Com. v. Porn, 196 Mass. 326, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 94, 82 N. E. 31, 13 Ann. Cas. 569.

2. The statute is general in its operation upon the subjects to which it relates. The classification as to persons who shall be regarded as "practising medicine" thereunder, their qualification, etc., is reasonable, and not arbitrary or capricious. It has a logical relation to the ends sought to be attained by the statute, and applies equally to all persons similarly situated.

Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; State v. Smith, 233 Mo. 242, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 179, 135 S. W. 465; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 190, 64 N. E. 862.

3. The provisions and regulations of the statute are enforceable in the usual mode established in the administration of government with respect to kindred matters,—that is, by proceedings adapted to the nature of the case. Due process is not necessarily judicial process. The power reposed by the statute in the board of medical examiners is proper, and no point is raised as to any arbitrary, capricious, or unfair action of the board.

Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Meffert v. Packer, 195 U. S. 625, 49 L. ed. 350, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790, affirming 66 Kan. 710, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 811, 72 Pac. 247; People v. Apfelbaum, 251 Ill. 18, 95 N. E. 995; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 607, 41 L.R.A. 212, 50 N. E. 750; Bragg v. State, 134 Ala. 165, 58 L.R.A. 925, 32 So. 767; State v. Miller, 146 Iowa, 525, 124 N. W. 167; State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 24 L.R.A. 68, 58 N. W. 728; Re Bandel, 193 N. Y. 133, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 49, 85 N. E. 1067; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 52.

This court is not concerned with the wisdom or policy of the act, so long as the act fairly secures or tends to secure the objects sought to be attained by it, and is not patently unreasonable.

Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 608, 47 L. ed. 323, 327, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 197, 42 L. ed. 1002, 1006, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 607, 41 L.R.A. 216, 50 N. E. 750; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 195, 64 N. E. 862.

The state legislature has the power to make regulations of the character involved herein, and the details of such legislation rest primarily within the discretion of the state legislature.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 507, 47 L. ed. 563, 565, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 192, 42 L. ed. 1002, 1004, 18 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 573; Meffert v. Paeker, 195 U. S. 625, 49 L. ed. 350, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865.

The classification made in the statute is not arbitrary, unreasonable, or oppressive, and was within the legislative power of the state, as having a fair relation to the objects of the statute. Within the sphere of its operation it affects alike all persons similarly situated.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 607, 41 L.R.A. 212, 50 N. E. 750; Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211, 59 L.R.A. 190, 64 N. E. 862; People v. Allcutt, 117 App. Div. 546, 102 N. Y. Supp. 678, affirmed in 189 N. Y. 517, 81 N. E. 1171; Little v. State, 60 Neb. 749, 51 L.R.A. 717, 84 N. W. 248, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 549; Com. v. Jewelle, 199 Mass. 558, 85 N. E. 858; Scholle v. State, 90 Md. 729, 50 L.R.A. 411, 46 Atl. 326; Bragg v. State, 134 Ala. 165, 58 L.R.A. 925, 32 So. 767; State v. Bair, 112 Iowa, 466, 51 L.R.A. 776, 84 N. W. 532; State v. Marble, 72 Ohio St. 21, 70 L.R.A. 835, 106 Am. St. Rep. 570, 73 N. E. 1063, 2 Ann. Cas. 898; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Plaintiff in error does not and cannot, on the record in this case, contend that the board of medical examiners of Texas has been guilty of any unfair or unjust action toward him. His contentions are based upon fancied inequalities of the statute which arise only on his own theory of how the act would have been construed by the board had he in fact requested from it authority to practise, or the right to take an examination as provided by the act.

Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 509, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; State v. Miller, 146 Iowa, 521, 124 N. W. 167; People v. Apfelbaum, 251 Ill. 27, 95 N. E. 995; Meffert v. State Bd. of Medical Registration (Meffert v. Paeker) 66 Kan. 710, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 811, 72 Pac. 247, affirmed in 195 U. S. 625, 49 L. ed. 350, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790.

While the construction of the act by the court of criminal appeals of the state of Texas may not, perhaps, be in all respects conclusive upon this court, that construction is one toward which this court will lean.
56 L. ed.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 101, 43 L. ed. 909, 911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 175, 54 L. ed. 987, 989, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 385, 38 L. ed. 751, 754, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Baltimore Belt R. Co. 151 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 102, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 37, 30, 306, note 7.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Texas court of criminal appeals upon a judgment denying the plaintiff in error a release by habeas corpus. The plaintiff in error is held upon an information charging him with practising medicine for money by treating a named patient for hay fever by osteopathy, without having registered his authority, as required by a Texas statute of 1907, chap. 123. He denies the constitutionality of the act.

The statute establishes a board of medical examiners, and requires "all legal practitioners of medicine in this state, who, practising under the provisions of previous laws, or under diplomas of a reputable and legal college of medicine, have not already received license from a state medical examining board of this state," to prove their diplomas, or existing license, or exemption existing under any law; whereupon they are to receive a verification license. § 6. By § 7, applicants not licensed under § 6 must pass an examination; conditioned, among other things, on their being graduates of "bona fide reputable medical schools;" schools to be considered reputable "whose entrance requirements and courses of instruction are as high as those adopted by the better class of medical schools of the United States, whose course of instruction shall embrace not less than four terms of five months each." By § 9 the examinations are to be fair to every school of medicine, are to be conducted on the scientific branches of medicine only, and are to include anatomy, physiology, chemistry, histology, pathology, bacteriology, physical diagnosis, surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, hygiene, and *medical jurisprudence.[295] Those who pass are to be granted licenses to practise medicine. By § 10 nothing in the act is to be construed to discriminate against any particular system, and the act is not to apply to dentists legally registered and confining themselves to dentistry, nurses who practice only nursing, masseurs, or surgeons of the United States Army, Navy, etc., in the performance of their duties.

The only other material sections of the act are §§ 13 and 14, the former of which declares that "any person shall be regarded as practising medicine within the meaning of this act. . . . (2) Or who shall treat or offer to treat any disease or disorder, mental or physical, or any physical deformity or injury, by any system or method, or to effect cures thereof, and charge therefor, directly or indirectly, money or other compensation." By § 14 any person practising medicine in violation of the act is punished by fine and imprisonment, and is not to recover anything for the services rendered.

The facts charged against the plaintiff in error are admitted. It also is admitted that before the passage of the statute he had spent $5,000 in fitting up his place, and was deriving a net income from his calling of at least the same sum. He held a diploma from the chartered American School of Osteopathy, Kirksville, Missouri, after a full two years' course of study there, but it does not appear that he presented this diploma to the board of medical examiners, or attempted to secure either a verification license or license in any form. The board, in passing upon qualifications, does not examine in therapeutics or materia medica, which, it will be observed, are not mentioned in the act. On these facts we are of opinion that the plaintiff in error fails to show that the statute inflicts any wrong upon him, contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. If he has not suffered, we are not called upon to speculate upon other 296]cases, or *to decide whether the followers of Christian Science or other people might, in some event, have cause to complain.

We are far from agreeing with the plaintiff in error that the definition of practising medicine in § 13 is arbitrary or irrational, but it would be immaterial if it were, as its only object is to explain who fall within the purview of the act. That it does, and of course we follow the Texas court in its decision that the plaintiff in error is included. It is true that he does not administer drugs, but he practises what at least purports to be the healing art. The state constitutionally may prescribe conditions to such practice, considered by it to be necessary or useful to secure competence in those who follow it. We should presume, until the Texas courts say otherwise, that the reference in § 4 to the diploma of a reputable and legal college of medicine, and the confining in § 7 of examinations to graduates of reputable medical schools, use the words "medicine" and "medical" with the same broad sense as § 13, and that the diploma of the plaintiff in error would not be rejected merely because it came from a school of osteopathy. In short, the statute says that if you want to do what it calls practising medicine, you must have gone to a reputable school in that kind of practice. Whatever may be the osteopathic dislike of medicines, neither the school nor the plaintiff in error suffers a constitutional wrong if his place of tuition is called a medical school by the act for the purpose of showing that it satisfies the statutory requirements. He cannot say that it would not have been regarded as doing so, because he has not tried. Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 124, 32 L. ed. 623, 626, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231.

An osteopath professes—the plaintiff in error professes, as we understand it—to help certain ailments by scientific manipulation affecting the nerve centers. It is intelligible, therefore, that the state should require of him a scientific training. Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 54 L. ed. 987, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. He, like others, *must[297 begin by a diagnosis. It is no answer to say that in many instances the diagnosis is easy,—that a man knows it when he has a cold or a toothache. For a general practice science is needed. An osteopath undertakes to be something more than a nurse or a masseur, and the difference rests precisely in a claim to greater science, which the state requires him to prove. The same considerations that justify including him justify excluding the lower grades from the law. Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 179, 180, 54 L. ed. 987, 990, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. Again it is not an answer to say that the plaintiff in error is prosecuted for a single case. If the legislature may prohibit a general practice for money except on the condition stated, it may attach the same conditions to a single transaction of a kind not likely to occur otherwise than as an instance of a general practice. A distinction between gratuitous and paid-for services was made in the Maryland statute sustained in Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 178, 54 L. ed. 987, 990, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. Finally, the law is not made invalid as against the plaintiff in error by the fact that he had an established business when the law was passed. Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 510, 47 L. ed. 563, 567, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

The objections that prevailed against a writ of error like this in Bailey v. Alabama, 211 U. S. 452, 53 L. ed. 278, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, do not exist here. There, as here, it was attempted to interrupt the ordinary course of a trial by habeas corpus, and there, as here, the state allowed the attempt, and discharged the writ on the merits. But in that case it did not appear that the constitutional question relied upon had arisen or necessarily would arise, although afterwards it did. 219 U. S. 219, 55 L. ed. 191, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145. But here the facts are admitted, the question appears as plainly as it ever will, and is supposed to go to the jurisdiction of the court. Therefore we have discussed the case on the merits; perhaps more than it needed, in view of the decisions cited and others that establish the right of the state to adopt a policy 298]even upon *medical matters concerning which there is difference of opinion and dispute. Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Meffert v. Packer, 195 U. S. 625, 49 L. ed. 350, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765. See also Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 865.

Judgment affirmed.

LEO MEYER, as Auditor of the State of Oklahoma, Appt.,
v.

WELLS, FARGO, & COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 298-302.)

Taxation of nonresident express company — gross receipts — property in several states — commerce.

1. A nonresident express company whose receipts are largely derived from interstate commerce and from investments in bonds and land outside the state cannot validly be subjected to the "gross revenue tax" exacted by Okla. Laws 1910, chap. 44, from public-service corporations, "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon an ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation," equal to such proportion of a specified percentage of its gross receipts from every source whatsoever as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 227-241, 264-272; Taxes, 268-274, 536-548, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against illegal taxation — tender.

2. A tender of so much of the tax as would have fallen on the receipts from commerce wholly within the state is not a prerequisite to injunctive relief against the collection from a nonresident express company whose receipts are largely derived from interstate commerce and from investments outside the state of the "gross revenue tax" exacted by Okla. Laws 1910, chap. 44, from public-service corporations, "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon an ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation" equal to such proportion of a specified percentage of its gross receipts from every source whatsoever as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business.

[For other cases, see Injunction, 171-179, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — invalid in part.

3. The "gross revenue tax" exacted from a nonresident express company by Okla. Laws 1910, chap. 44, "which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon an ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation" equal to such proportion of a specified percentage of its gross receipts from every source whatsoever as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business, cannot be construed, for the purpose of saving its constitutionality, as referring only to the receipts from commerce wholly within the state.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 624.]

Argued January 16, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma to review a decree enjoining the collection of a tax upon the gross receipts of a nonresident express company. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

State licenses or taxing as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal 56 L. ed.

Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

As to the necessity for payment of tax due where injunction is sought against illegal taxation—see note to People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 48 L. ed. U. S. 180.

On statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A construction in conflict with the Federal Constitution will not be adopted if any other construction is possible.

Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 415, 13 L. ed. 478; Nashville v. Cooper, 6 Wall. 251, 18 L. ed. 852.

A plain tax on public-service property as a condition of taking tolls from the public for the service, in lieu of other excise, franchise, or income tax, will not be held an interference with interstate commerce, though the measure be laid on all commerce done by the company.

McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 652, 670, 42 L. ed. 615, 621, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

The substantial effect and intent, and whether in lieu of an excise tax, is the basis upon which all the decisions harmonize.

State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. ed. 164; Osborne v. Mobile, 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. ed. 470; Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 28 L. ed. 653, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 595; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. ed. 1043, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 670, 42 L. ed. 621, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Wisconsin & N. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

Does the act apply to interstate receipts? McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 670, 42 L. ed. 614, 621, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250.

Injunction should be refused where taxes due are not paid.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 616, 23 L. ed. 663, 674; Albuquerque Nat. Bank v. Perea, 147 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 91, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

Mr. S. T. Bledsoe argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. R. Cottingham and C. W. Stockton, filed a brief for appellee:

The Oklahoma gross revenue act taxes directly the receipts from interstate commerce as such, and is void for that reason.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Davidson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 93 S. W. 436; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1–24, 54 L. ed. 355–364, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. ed. 745; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

Upon the face of the act it does not purport to be either a privilege or occupation tax, nor does it have any of the earmarks of such tax. If it is in fact a privilege or occupation tax upon the right of the complainant to engage in transportation of interstate commerce in the state of Oklahoma, then it is void as a regulation of commerce.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. ed. 134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep.

190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill for an injunction against a tax alleged to be unconstitutional as a regulation of commerce among the states. Upon demurrer, three judges sitting in the circuit court granted the injunction, and the defendant appealed to this court. The statute in question is entitled, "An Act Providing for the Levy and Collection of a Gross Revenue Tax from Public-Service corporations in This State," and from persons engaged in certain mining and similar occupations. By § 2: "Every corporation hereinafter named shall pay the state a gross revenue tax . . . which shall be in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon an ad valorem basis upon the property and assets of such corporation equal to the per centum of the gross receipts hereinafter provided, if such public-service corporation operate wholly within the state, and if such public-service corporation operate partly within and partly without the state, it shall pay tax equal to such proportion of said per centum of its gross receipts as the portion of its business done within the state bears to the whole of its business;" with a proviso for fixing a different proportion if it "more fairly represents 300]the proportion which *the gross receipts of any such public-service corporation for any year within this state bear to its total gross receipts." By § 3 the per centum to be paid by express companies (such as the plaintiff is) is 3 per cent of the gross receipts, and, "for the purpose of determinating the amount of such tax," they are required to report under oath the gross receipts "from every source whatsoever."

The plaintiff's receipts are largely from commerce among the states, and it also receives large sums as income from investments in bonds and land all outside the state of Oklahoma. So that it is evident that if the tax is what it calls itself, it is bad on the former ground, and that whatever it is, it is bad on the latter. Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. ed. 761, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498. In that case the tax was proportioned to mileage, and it was held that it could not be sustained when, although purporting to be a tax on property, it took into account, in order to increase proportionately the value of the mileage within the state, valuable property outside of it. The same principle would apply to a property tax measuring the total property by the total gross receipts, increased by the special outside sources of income, and taxing a proportion of this total fixed by the ratio of business within the state to that outside. But we see no warrant for calling the tax a property tax. It is so similar to the Texas statute held bad in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638, as to show that, if one is not copied from the other, they have a common source. It would be possible only by some extraordinary turn of ingenuity to sustain this after condemning that.

It was argued in some detail that taking into account the rest of the act and other statutes passed later at the same session, this really was a property tax. But the scope and purport of the act, so far as it affects express companies, are too obvious to admit such a view. The tax is "in addition to the taxes levied and collected upon *an ad valorem basis." Even if we[301 read the words which follow without a comma, viz., "upon the property and assets of such corporation," as not qualifying those which immediately precede, but as attempting to characterize the "gross revenue tax" as a tax on such property and assets, nevertheless all the property and assets are the subject of the ad valorem taxes referred to. Therefore this tax cannot be an attempt to reach the value of what is by the law to be valued and taxed in a different way. It would be difficult to apply to a tax levied in these days the explanation of Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163, given in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 226, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 162-165, 55 L. ed. 389, 417-419, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, and to suppose it intended to reach only the additional value given by its being part of a going concern to property already taxed in its separate items. There is nothing sufficient to indicate such a limitation, and for the reasons given above, on the authority of Fargo v. Hart, supra, it is plain that the gross receipts from all sources could not have been used as a means for estimating the going value of the property in the state. We may add in this connection that this same requirement as to the total gross receipts shows that it is impossible to save the constitutionality of the act by construing it as referring only to the receipts from commerce wholly within the state.

We do not gather that the appellant has any objection to testing the validity of this tax in an equity suit, or that any such objection was made below. Brown, B. & Co. v. Lake Superior Iron Co. 134 U. S. 530, 33 L. ed. 1021, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

Therefore we do not consider whether there are any facts to take the case out of the general rule established by the cases collected in Boisé Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. v. Boisé City, 213 U. S. 276, 53 L. ed. 796, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426. See Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286. It was ob-302]jected, however, that "the bill cannot be maintained for want of a tender of so much of the tax as would have fallen on the receipts from commerce wholly within the state. But that requirement hardly can be made in this case, which is not like one where the law simply fails to allow certain proper deductions. People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 48 L. ed. 180, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68. Whether the statute could be construed as separable, of course, would be ultimately for the state court in any event. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067. But we see no possible construction on which it could be upheld without being so remodeled that it would be a mere speculation whether the legislature would have passed it in the new form. For, to recur to the statute, it is not simply a tax on all gross receipts within the state, which possibly might be read as intended to reach such receipts as it could, even if less than all (Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127); it is a tax on a proportion of total gross receipts a considerable part of which, as we have explained, the state has no right to tax. Neither the court below nor this court can reshape the statute simply because it embraces elements that it might have reached if it had been drawn with a different measure and intent.

Decree affirmed.

303]*JOHN POWERS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 303-316.)

Appeal — scope of review — objection not seasonably taken.

1. The objection that there was no venire

NOTE. — On constitutional protection against being forced to furnish evidence to be used against one's self in a criminal case—see note to Levy v. Superior Ct. 29 L.R.A. 811.

On statutory exemption from prosecution as a substitute for constitutional exemption from self-crimination—see notes to Re Buskett, 14 L.R.A. 407, and United States v. James, 26 L.R.A. 418.

facias summoning the grand jury is not available on a writ of error to review a conviction, where there is nothing in the record to show that this objection, if tenable at all, was taken before plea, or, indeed, at any time during the trial.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — in criminal case — review — objections to grand jury.

2. The recital in an indictment that the grand jury was selected, impaneled, sworn, and charged, and that they on their oaths present, etc., is enough, upon proceedings in error after conviction, to show the proper swearing of the grand jury.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. a; VIII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indictment — sufficiency to support conviction — one good count.

3. One good count in an indictment containing several counts will support a general conviction.

[For other cases, see Indictment, II. g; Trial, 861-867, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — in criminal case — review — objection to petit jury.

4. The record sufficiently discloses, upon proceedings in error after conviction, that the petit jury was duly sworn, where it recites that they were "called and impaneled," and "being selected and tried in the manner prescribed by law, the truth of and upon the premises to speak, and having heard the evidence, the arguments of counsel, and charge of the judge, retired to consider their verdict, and upon their oaths do say," etc.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. a; VIII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — self-crimination — voluntary testimony.

5. The admission in evidence at the trial of the testimony of the accused, voluntarily and understandingly given at the preliminary hearing, does not violate his privilege against self-crimination accorded by U. S. Const., 5th Amend., although he was not warned at the time that what he said might be used against him.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, III. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — cross-examination of accused.

6. An accused who voluntarily takes the stand in his own behalf, thereby waiving his privilege, may be subjected to cross-examination concerning his statement.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, 173-176, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — cross-examination of accused.

7. One accused of illegal conduct with reference to the distillation of spirits, who has

On incriminating evidence furnished by defendant, acting under compulsion—see note to State v. Turner, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 772.

On cross-examination of accused—see notes to People v. Tice, 15 L.R.A. 669, and Harrold v. Territory, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 604.

testified in chief that he was employed to beat apples near a still, with no interest in them, or in the product, or in the still, may be asked on cross-examination whether he had not previously worked with his alleged employer at a distillery and made brandy with him, as relevant to his claim that he was innocently occupied.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, 173-176, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — privilege — statutory.

8. Testimony of an accused, voluntarily given at the preliminary hearing, is not rendered inadmissible at the trial by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661, providing that no pleading nor any discovery or evidence obtained from a party by means of a judicial proceeding shall be used in evidence against him in a criminal proceeding.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 152.]

Argued January 22, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia to review a conviction under an indictment charging illegal conduct with reference to the distillation of spirits. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. H. Sutherland argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. A. Ayers, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There can be no grand jury for a United States court unless ordered by the judge, and the only method of summoning a grand jury is by venire facias.

United States v. Antz, 4 Woods, 174, 16 Fed. 119; United States v. Reed, 2 Blatchf. 435, Fed. Cas. No. 16,134.

A grand jury, to be legally organized, must be sworn.

Ridling v. State, 56 Ga. 601; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 849, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 122; Roe v. State, — Ala. —, 2 So. 459; Re Chance, 2 Sawy. 67, Fed. Cas. No. 18,255; Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 1357; Baker v. State, 39 Ark. 180; Lyman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 345; Foster v. State, 31 Miss. 421; Abram v. State, 25 Miss. 589; Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621; 4 Bl. Com. 302; 1 Chitty, Crim. Law, 178; Cooley, Const. Lim. 318.

A grand jury which is not inpaneled according to the statute has no power to find a valid indictment.

Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621; McQuillen v. State, 8 Smedes & M. 587.

Whatever is essential in a criminal proceeding to deprive a person of his liberty must appear of record, and nothing is taken by indictment or implication.

56 L. ed.

Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 35 L. ed. 377, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952; Barnes v. Com. 92 Va. 794, 23 S. E. 784; Jones v. Com. 87 Va. 63, 12 S. E. 226; Spurgeon v. Com. 86 Va. 652, 10 S. E. 979; Com. v. Cawood, 2 Va. Cas. 527.

It takes both impaneling and swearing to constitute a grand jury.

Rich v. State, 1 Tex. App. 206; Lyman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 345; Zapf v. State, 35 Fla. 210, 17 So. 225; State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166; Porter v. People, 7 How. Pr. 441.

The doctrine of waiver applies to all cases of objection to the qualification of jurors and to the mode of impaneling the jury; but does not apply to cases where the proceeding is wholly void by reason of some fundamental defect or vice.

United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Watson v. Com. 87 Va. 612, 13 S. E. 22; Curtis v. Com. 87 Va. 589, 13 S. E. 73.

The authority to find an indictment is found in the record as entered by the clerk, and not by the jurors themselves.

Abram v. State, 25 Miss. 589.

A jury must be selected and summoned as required by law, and it is indispensable that it should so appear.

Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Jones v. Com. 87 Va. 63, 12 S. E. 226; Jones v. Com. 100 Va. 843, 41 S. E. 951.

The petit jury was never sworn, and this is indispensable.

1 Bishop, Crim. Procc. § 1357; Johnson v. State, 47 Ala. 62; State v. Jones, 5 Ala. 666; State v. Rollins, 22 N. H. 528; Warren v. State, 1 G. Greene, 106; Harriman v. State, 2 G. Greene, 270.

The testimony of Colly should have been rejected or stricken out.

Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 44 L. ed. 1078, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 42 L. ed. 568, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 562, 35 L. ed. 1113, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; United States v. Bell, 81 Fed. 837; Cullen v. Com. 24 Gratt. 624; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 385; McKelvey, Ev. pp. 299, 303, 305; Reg. v. Garbett, 1 Den. C. C. 236, 2 Car. & K. 474, 2 Cox, C. C. 448; 1 Greenl. Ev. 16th ed. §§ 216, 254a, 469b.

The admission of Powers before the commissioner, Rush, was not such an admission as amounted to a judicial confession, and it is essential it be made of the free will of the party, and with full and perfect knowledge of the nature and consequences of the confession.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 216.

The question asked of the defendant before the commissioner was not cross-examination, and by going on the stand he only waived his constitutional privilege as to cross-examination; after that his constitutional privilege protected him.

Philadelphia & T. R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet. 448, 10 L. ed. 535; Miller v. Miller, 92 Va. 510, 23 S. E. 891; 1 Greenl. Ev. 445; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 384-386; State v. Lurch, 12 Or. 99, 6 Pac. 408; State v. Bacon, 13 Or. 143, 57 Am. Rep. 8, 9 Pac. 393; State v. Saunders, 14 Or. 300, 12 Pac. 441; State v. Gallo, 18 Or. 423, 23 Pac. 264.

John Powers, going on the stand before the commissioner and giving testimony, did not waive the constitutional privilege as to such testimony at a later stage.

Cullen v. Com. 24 Gratt. 624.

For this evidence was clearly extorted by compulsion, through fear of imprisonment.

1 Greenl. Ev. 16th ed. §§ 254a, 469d, p. 615.

The waiver of such a privilege must always be made understandingly and willingly, and generally after being fully warned by the court.

Cullen v. Com. 24 Gratt. 624; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 451.

This confession by the defendant was made under such circumstances that it was not admissible evidence, even had it been made out of court.

Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 42 L. ed. 568, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Rex v. Gilham, 1 Moody, C. C. 194, Car. Crim. Law, 51.

It is essential in judicial confessions that they be made of the free will of the party, and with full and perfect knowledge of the nature and consequences of the confession.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 216.

The constitutional guaranty against being forced to give incriminating testimony must have a broad and liberal construction in favor of the party and rights which it was intended to secure.

Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 562, 35 L. ed. 1113, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S. 361, 55 L. ed. 771, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

450

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Loring C. Christie, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The warning as to the privilege is not essential.

Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 623, 40 L. ed. 1090, 1096, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895; Wigmore, Ev. § 2269, pp. 3134, 3135.

Unless defendant's privilege was violated at the preliminary hearing, it was not violated at all, for Colly's quotation, at the final trial, of what defendant had previously said, was no new breach of the privilege.

Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 623, 40 L. ed. 1090, 1096, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895; Hardy v. United States, 186 U. S. 224, 228, 46 L. ed. 1137, 1139, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Moore v. Com. 2 Leigh, 701; State v. Branham, 13 S. C. 389; State v. Melton, 120 N. C. 591, 26 S. E. 933; Jackson v. State, 39 Ohio St. 37; Ortiz v. State, 30 Fla. 256, 11 So. 611; State v. Burrell, 27 Mont. 282, 70 Pac. 982; Wigmore, Ev. §§ 850, 852, 2276, pp. 971, 979, 3159, note 10.

The admissions of the defendant were not improperly obtained at the preliminary hearing before the commissioner, because they fell within his waiver of privilege.

Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 597, 40 L. ed. 821, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 243, 20 Am. Rep. 688; Guy v. State, 90 Md. 29, 44 Atl. 997; Lawrence v. State, 103 Md. 17, 63 Atl. 96; State v. Ober, 52 N. H. 459, 13 Am. Rep. 88; Rex v. D'Aoust, 3 Ont. L. Rep. 653; Norfolk v. Gaylord, 28 Conn. 309; State v. Klitzke, 46 Minn. 343, 49 N. W. 54; People v. Dupounce, 133 Mich. 1, 103 Am. St. Rep. 435, 94 N. W. 388, 2 Ann. Cas. 246; Connors v. People, 50 N. Y. 240; People v. Casey, 72 N. Y. 398; People v. Tice, 131 N. Y. 655, 15 L.R.A. 669, 30 N. E. 494; People v. Webster, 139 N. Y. 84, 34 N. E. 730; People v. Rozelle, 78 Cal. 84, 20 Pac. 36; People v. Meyer, 75 Cal. 383, 17 Pac. 431; People v. Gallagher, 100 Cal. 466, 35 Pac. 80; People v. Arnold, 116 Cal. 687, 48 Pac. 803; Smith v. State, 137 Ala. 22, 34 So. 396, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 410; People v. Dole, — Cal. —, 51 Pac. 945; State v. Green, 35 Conn. 207; Wigmore, Ev. § 2276, pp. 3153, 3154.

The controversy whether the waiver of privilege by a defendant extends to all things relevant to the issue, as held in Guy v. State, 90 Md. 29, 44 Atl. 997; Lawrence v. State, 103 Md. 17, 63 Atl. 96; Com. v. Nichols, 114 Mass. 287, 19 Am. Rep. 346; Spies v. People, 122 Ill. 255, 3 Am. St. Rep. 320, 12 N. E. 865, 17 N. E. 898, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 570; State v. Griswold, 67 Conn. 290, 33 L.R.A. 227, 34 Atl. 1046; Clark v. State,

223 U. S.

87 Ala. 71, 6 So. 368; State v. McGee, 55 S. C. 249, 74 Am. St. Rep. 741, 33 S. E. 353; People v. Conroy, 153 N. Y. 174, 47 N. E. 258; People v. Tice, 131 N. Y. 655, 15 L.R.A. 669, 30 N. E. 494; 8 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 147, note, 5, p. 151, note, 1; Wigmore, Ev. § 2276, pp. 3153, 3154, or is limited to the scope of proper cross-examination, as was perhaps intimated (though not decided) in Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 180, 31 L. ed. 80, 90, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 314-316, 44 L. ed. 1078, 1083, 1084, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Sawyer v. United States, 202 U. S. 150, 165-167, 50 L. ed. 972-979, 980, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, 6 Ann. Cas. 269; —is deemed immaterial here because the field of the direct examination was the whole fact of guilt or innocence, and any cross-examination that was relevant was necessarily within that field. Indeed, this is generally the case where the witness claiming the privilege is the defendant.

Wigmore, Ev. § 2276, p. 3155.

The error, if any, was harmless.

Holt v. United States, 218 U. S. 245, 45 L. ed. 1021, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 20 Ann. Cas. 1138; Rea v. Missouri, 17 Wall. 532, 21 L. ed. 707; Wills v. Russell, 100 U. S. 621, 625, 25 L. ed. 607, 608.

Any informalities in summoning or swearing the grand and petit juries were waived.

Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 41 L. ed. 624, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Melnerney v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 411, 147 Fed. 183.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

